

SENATE—Wednesday, July 10, 1991

(Legislative day of Monday, July 8, 1991)

The Senate met at 9:15 a.m., on the expiration of the recess, and was called to order by the Honorable J. ROBERT KERREY, a Senator from the State of Nebraska.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, the Reverend Richard C. Halverson, D.D., offered the following prayer:

Let us pray:

*Judge not, that ye be not judged. For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged * * *—Matthew 7:1,2.*

Gracious, patient Father in Heaven, we have become a nation of scapegoaters and self-justifiers. Most of us blame somebody else for what is wrong; rarely do any of us accept blame. We have become professionals at getting ourselves off the hook, much of the time finger-pointing at somebody else. Meanwhile our Nation suffers economic, political, social, moral, and ethical decay. Wrapping ourselves in a blanket of complacency we observe with apathy and indifference the decline of our culture, our society, our national hopes, while we accuse others of neglecting their responsibility.

Forgive us, merciful, living God, for our personal escapism, our self-justification. Renew us in our sense of the personal obligation of each of us in a true democracy. Help each of us accept our duty and exercise it when and where and how we ought.

In Jesus' name who commanded us to, "Judge not * * *." Amen.

APPOINTMENT OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will please read a communication to the Senate from the President pro tempore [Mr. BYRD].

The legislative clerk read the following letter:

U.S. SENATE,
PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE,
Washington, DC, July 10, 1991.

To the Senate:

Under the provisions of rule I, section 3, of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby appoint the Honorable J. ROBERT KERREY, a Senator from the State of Nebraska, to perform the duties of the Chair.

ROBERT C. BYRD,
President pro tempore.

Mr. KERREY thereupon assumed the chair as Acting President pro tempore.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

MORNING BUSINESS

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, there will now be a period for the transaction of morning business, for not to extend beyond the hour of 10 a.m., with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. LIEBERMAN] permitted to speak for up to 5 minutes, and with the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. BRADLEY] permitted to speak for up to 30 minutes.

The Senator from Connecticut is recognized.

CHINA

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, we have all been thinking a lot about China lately as our country considers the contours of our post-cold-war foreign policy, as we worry about our own economic competitiveness, and as we prepare in this Congress to decide now whether to continue customary trade relations with the People's Republic of China.

I rise today to offer the first of two statements on our relations with China. This one will focus on political and foreign policy concerns. On a later day, I hope to discuss economic and trade concerns with China.

Mr. President, the Tiananmen Square massacre left a scar on China's long history and on America's attitude toward China. How ironic that in the same year that Czechoslovakia was experiencing its final deliverance from communism, Beijing had its own Prague spring until that cruel night in early June.

Since then, Chinese leaders have cracked down on their country's nascent democratic movement. Approximately 1,400 people have been sentenced to prison terms or still await trial. Sentences, which range from a few years to more than a decade, lack logic, let alone justice. The Chinese press, which reported the events of the spring of 1989, is again shackled. Some Voice of America programs, which were broadcast without interference before Tiananmen, are now jammed. Church officials have been harassed. Fear is again palpable, particularly in Beijing.

To make matters worse, China may sell ballistic missiles to Syria and Pakistan, and will assist Algeria in constructing a nuclear powerplant. The missiles and facilities could, at some point, carry or produce weapons of mass destruction.

The frustration caused by these human rights abuses and arms sales is as deep as it is understandable. But as President Kennedy once advised: "The purpose of foreign policy is not to provide an outlet for our own sentiments of hope or indignation: it is to shape real events in a real world."

Shaping real events in a real world is the approach we must follow with China. We are engaged now in an important debate over whether we should stay engaged with China or turn our back on it until it behaves better. For better or worse, our role in the world and China's will continue to force us to remain engaged with this country of more than a billion people whose influence is felt everywhere in Asia and beyond.

China has helped to expel the Soviets from Afghanistan, protected Thailand from Vietnam, and urged a rapprochement between the two Koreas. China's cooperation will be essential if the Cambodian civil war is to end. China still serves as an important counterweight to a possible renewal of Soviet, Japanese, Vietnamese, and North Korean expansionism in Asia. China did not block the authorization to use force against Iraq or South Korea's membership at the United Nations. In these and countless other ways we are inevitably engaged with China in world events which the Chinese have shaped positively and negatively.

Shaping real events also forces us to work with China on environmental issues which are increasingly global. China's use of coal is already a major world environmental problem. As it modernizes and urbanizes, with one-fifth of the Earth's population, China's grim level of pollution will worsen, and that will affect the entire world, including the United States.

China is already one of the major producers of chlorofluorocarbons [CFCS], a major contributor to global warming and ozone depletion. China's consumption of CFCS is projected to rise 12 percent annually during much of the decade because of population growth and increased use of refrigeration. China just signed the Montreal protocol on chlorofluorocarbons [CFCS], but much work remains to be done.

If we remain directly engaged with China, we have the opportunity to influence the next generation of leaders, who offer the prospect of better Sino-American relations. By the end of this decade, China will no longer be ruled by its eight octogenarians led by Deng Xiaoping. These leaders, who still remember vividly the Chinese civil war and the cultural revolution, are obsessed with the fear of disorder. Deng, for example, apparently equates the student idealists of 1989 with the violent bands of young people who wrought havoc across China during the cultural revolution, forcing Deng to flee, and leaving his son paralyzed.

The next generation of Chinese leadership will almost certainly be less paranoid about the outside world and less sensitive to any perceived slight to Chinese sovereignty. For the present rulers, the carving out of Western and Japanese economic spheres in China and the stationing of military expeditionary forces there during the early 20th century were determinative events of their childhoods. The Japanese invasion, one of the cruelest of history, consumed their youth. Even as sophisticated a Chinese leader as former Premier Chou En-lai once told Henry Kissinger that Japan, the Soviet Union, and the United States still had as their ultimate aim the division of China.

Engagement with China will also enable us to support its burgeoning economic reforms, and thereby induce political reforms. The economic reforms, which were started in late 1978 by Deng, have resulted in the privatization of agriculture, the establishment of thousands of market-based industries, particularly in the southern coastal provinces, and the sending of tens of thousands of students to learn science and technology in the west. Nearly half of China's economy is now run along free market lines.

The hardest-line element of the Chinese leadership, led by Chen Yun, opposes these economic reforms. Following Tiananmen Square, this faction tried to roll back the reforms and increase the central government's economic authority and tax revenues. But it was blocked by a coalition of more moderate Beijing and provincial officials, who has vested interests in the reforms and knew they were necessary for China to feed and employ its ever-growing population—about 17 million additional people a year. They appear to have won the struggle over economic reforms. Even the hard-line Premier, Li Peng, promised at the last Peoples' Congress that the reforms would be extended to the poorer interior provinces.

If the interior provinces are being drawn toward the coast, the coastal provinces, China's economic and population heartland, are being drawn toward the outside world. The southern provinces of Guangdong, including the city of Guangzhou, better known in the West as Canton, are already tightly linked with the Hong Kong-Macao region. The province of Fujian is becoming enmeshed with Taiwan. South Korea's influence is beginning to extend to the Shandong Peninsula. The Japanese economy is also reaching into China's provinces. In all these areas, local leaders are becoming more assertive and less willing to accept Beijing's economic dictates.

As events in South Korea and Taiwan have shown, we should not underestimate the political changes that may evolve out of economic reforms. Cracks are already appearing in the totalitarian structure of Communist China. In contrast with Beijing, provincial leaders were relatively restrained in dealing with the unrest of 1989. Many Chinese dissidents were able to make their way to freedom in Hong Kong with the help of scores of their sympathetic countrymen. The Communist state's propaganda is increasingly ignored, even in the countryside. Western dress and goods are pervasive; a Western education is cherished. All of these changes are revolutionary and suggest that the old Communist China is slowing dying.

We must hope that China's hard-line leaders see that the currents of history are working against a totalitarian state. Unlike a rudimentary, industrial economy, a modern state is too complex to be run by a small group of central planners; it demands decentralization and individual initiative. A modern economy requires extensive outside contracts for educating its young, promoting trade, and obtaining information. A modern state needs a modicum of political support from its educated citizens if they are to work in a productive manner. A modern China needs reform.

Chen Yun and his hard-line faction are reportedly still opposed to economic reform and remain deeply suspicious of the current economic contracts with capitalist Asia and the West. They managed to overturn several plans to release Fang Lizhi, the Chinese astrophysicist and spokesman for political reform at Tiananmen Square, who was a refugee in the United States Embassy for months. The Chen Yun faction argued that China would still face a series of endless demands even if Fang were released, why give into the Americans at all. They believe that the West intends to smother the Communist regime in a web of friendly contacts. While our current policy may not be that coherent, its ultimate design is, indeed, to undermine the Communist regime in such a manner.

Mr. President, the extensive trade China now has with the United States gives us an important tool to use in fostering economic and political reform. The merchants and entrepreneurs of the coastal provinces, and the students and intellectuals of the cities are China's hope and ours. We must use our economic leverage to help them and to limit Chinese arms proliferation and increase Chinese human rights. We must continue to use that leverage until the Beijing spring that existed before the cruel night in Tiananmen Square returns fully and finally to China's capital.

RACE AND CIVIL RIGHTS

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, this is an open letter to President Bush. I hope he will hear it and I hope the American people will listen, too. I hope this letter will put the issue of race relations in a broader context than simply the Supreme Court nomination of Clarence Thomas. I offer this letter recognizing that when a black or white American speaks about race one necessarily speaks for someone else of a different race. That is awkward and subject to misinterpretation. But silence is worse.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: In 1988 you used the Willie Horton ad to divide white and black voters and appeal to fear. Now, based on your remarks about the 1991 Civil Rights Bill, you have begun to do the same thing again. Mr. President, we implore you—don't go down this path again. It's not good for the country. We can do better.

Racial tension is too dangerous to exploit and too important to ignore. America yearns for straight talk about race, but instead we get code words and a grasping after an early advantage in the 1992 election. Continued progress in race relations requires moral leadership and a clear sighted understanding of our national self-interest. And that must start with our President.

There is a place and a time for politics. The Willie Horton ad in your 1988 campaign will be played and analyzed by political pundits for years to come.

There is a place and time for leadership. The place for leadership is here—for our people, uncertain and divided once again on the issue of race. And the time for leadership is now.

So, Mr. President, tell us how you have worked through the issue of race in your own life. I don't mean speechwriter abstractions about equality or liberty but your own life experiences. When did you realize there was a difference between the lives of black people and the lives of white people in America? Where did you ever experience or see discrimination? How did you feel? What did you do? What images remain in your memory? Tell us more about how you grappled with the moral imperatives embodied in race relations and how you clarified the moral ambiguities that necessarily are a part of the attitude of every American who has given it any thought—any thought at all.

Do you believe silence will muffle the gunshots of rising racial violence in our cities? Do you believe that brotherhood will be destroyed by candor about the obstacles to its realization? Do you believe ignoring the division between the races will heal it? If you truly want it healed, why don't you spend some of the political capital represented by your 70 percent approval ratings and try to move our glacial collective humanity one inch forward.

Mr. President, you say you're against discrimination. Why not make a morally unambiguous statement and then back it up with action? At West Point you said you "will strike at discrimination wherever it exists." How will you do that and when? Why not try to change the racist attitudes of some Americans—even if they voted for you—so that all Americans can realize our ideals?

Mr. President, if these concerns are wrong, please dispel them. Please explain the following basis for our doubt.

DOUBT ONE—YOUR RECORD

Back in 1964 you ran for the U.S. Senate and you opposed the Civil Rights Act of that year. Why?

I remember that summer. I was a student intern in Washington, D.C., between my junior and senior years in college and I was in this Senate chamber that hot summer night when the bill passed. I remember that roll call. I remember thinking, "America is a better place because of this bill. All Americans—white or black—are better off." I remember the presidential election that summer too, when Senator Goldwater made the Civil Rights Act an issue in his campaign. I came to Washington that summer as a Republican. I left as a Democrat.

Why did you oppose that bill? Why did you say that the 1964 Civil Rights Act "violates the constitutional rights of all people?" Remember how America functioned in many parts of the country before it passed? Separate restrooms and drinking fountains for black and white, blacks turned away from hotels, restaurants, movies. Did you believe that black Americans should eat at the kitchen steps of restaurants, not in the dining room? Whose constitutional rights were being violated there?

Were you just opposing the Civil Rights Bill for political purposes? Were you just using race to get votes?

Did you ever change your mind and regret your opposition to the Civil Rights Act? If so, when? Did you ever express your regret publicly? What is your regret?

When you say today that you're against discrimination, I don't know what you mean because you have never repudiated or explained your past opposition to the most basic widening of opportunity for black Americans in the 20th century, the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

It sounds like you're trying to have it both ways—lip service to equality and political maneuvering against it.

What does your record mean? What have you stood for?

DOUBT TWO—ECONOMIC REALITY

Mr. President, over the last 11 years of Republican rule the poor and the middle class in America have not fared well. The average middle income family earned $31,000 in 1977 and $31,000 in 1990. No improvement. During the same time period, the richest 1% of American families went from earning $280,000 in 1977 to $549,000 in 1990. Now, how could that have happened? How could the majority of voters have supported governments whose primary achievement was to make the rich richer? The answer lies in the strategy and tactics of recent political campaigns.

Just as middle class America began to see their economic interests clearly and to come home to the Democratic party, Republicans interjected race into campaigns, to play on new fears and old prejudices, to drive a wedge through the middle class, to pry off a large enough portion to win.

Mr. President, most Americans recognize that in economic policy Republicans usually try to reward the rich, and Democrats usually do not. I accept that as part of the lore and debate and rhythm of American politics. What I cannot accept, because it eats at the core of our society, is inflaming racial tension to perpetuate power and then using that power to reward the rich and ignore the poor. It is a reasonable argument over means to say more for the wealthy is a price we pay to "lift all boats." It is a cynical manipulation to send messages to white working people that they have more in common with the wealthy than with the black worker next to them on the line, taking the same physical risks and struggling to make ends meet with the same pay.

Mr. President, I detest anyone who uses that tactic—whether it is a Democrat like George Wallace or a Republican like David Duke. The irony is that most of the people who voted for George Wallace or David Duke or George Bush because of race haven't benefited economically from the last decade. Many of them are worse off. Many have lost jobs, health insurance, pension benefits. Many more can't buy a house or pay property taxes or hope to send their child to college. The people who have benefited come from the wealthiest class in America. So, Mr. President, put bluntly, why shouldn't we doubt your commitment to racial justice and fair play when we see who has benefited most from the power that has been acquired through sowing the seeds of racial division?

DOUBT THREE—YOUR INCONSISTENT WORDS

We Americans hold a special trust on the issue of race. We fought one of the bloodiest wars in history over it—brother against brother, state against state, American against American. Our communities and our schools and our hearts have been torn by the issue. We have come too far, Mr. President. We do not need to be torn further. Most Americans who have absorbed our history know the wisdom of Zora Neale Hurston's words that, "Race is an explosive on the tongues of men." Race is most especially an explosive on the tongue of the President * * * or his men.

We have come too far. We need to be led not manipulated. We need leadership that will summon the best in us not the worst.

Yet you have tried to turn the Willie Horton code of 1988 into the quotas code of 1992. You have said that's not what you're doing but as you said at West Point, "You can't put a sign on a pig and say it's a horse."

Why do you say one thing with your statement against discrimination and another with your opposition to American businesses working with civil rights groups to get a civil rights bill most Americans could be proud of. Are you sending mixed signals or giving a big wink to a pocket of the electorate?

We measure our leader by what he says and by what he does. If both what he says and what he does are destructive of racial harmony, we must conclude that he wants to destroy racial harmony. If what he says and what he does are different, then what he does is more important. If he says different things at different times that are mutually contradictory, then we conclude he's trying to pull the wool over someone's eyes.

Mr. President, you need to be clearer, so that people on all sides understand where you are, what you believe and how you propose to make your beliefs a reality. Until then, you must understand that an increasing number of Americans will assume your convictions about issues of race and discrimination are no deeper than a water spider's footprint.

DOUBT FOUR—YOUR LEADERSHIP

Racial politics has an unseemly history in America. For only about five decades of the last 220 years have our politicians actively tried to heal racial wounds. Slavery blighted our ideals for nearly a century. Then a burst of hope from 1865 to 1876. Then nearly another century of exploitation and inhumanity including harsh and discriminatory treatment of Hispanics and many other immigrant groups. Then from 1945 to 1980, another burst of hope. Much was accomplished in this last period. But, all of us deep in our hearts know there's more to do.

Demagogues—both white and black—seek to deepen divisions. Misconceptions grow. Fears accelerate. Outlandish egos thrive on the misery of others.

Both races have to learn to speak candidly with each other. By the year 2000, only 57% of people entering the work force will be native born whites. White-Americans have to understand that their children's standard of living is inextricably bound to the future of millions of non-white children who will pour into the workforce in the next decades. To guide them toward achievement will make America a richer, more successful society. To allow them to self-destruct because of penny-pinching or timidity about straight talk will make America a second rate power. And Black Americans have to believe that acquisition of skills will serve as an entry into society not because they have acquired a veneer of whiteness but because they are able. Blackness doesn't compromise ability nor does ability compromise blackness. Both blacks and whites have to create and celebrate the common ground that binds us together as Americans and human beings.

To do that we must reach out in trust to each other. By ignoring the poverty in our cities, white Americans deny reality as much as black Americans whose sense of group identity often denies the individuality that they themselves know is God's gift to every baby. There is much to say to each other about rage and patience, about opportunity and obligation, about fear and courage, about guilt and honor. The more Americans can see beyond someone's skin to his heart and mind, the easier it will be for us to reveal our true feelings and to admit our failures as well as celebrate our strengths. The more Americans are honest about the level of distrust they hold for each other, the easier it will be to get beyond those feelings and forge a new relationship without racial overtones. Both black and white Americans need to recognize that what's important is not whether the commanding officer is black or white but how good a leader he or she is. That's true in war and it's equally true in peace.

Above all, we need to establish a social order in which individuals of all races assume personal responsibility. In a contest that's fair a chance is all someone needs. In a contest that's fair the gripes and excuses of losers don't carry much weight.

So individual responsibility is essential. And so is facing reality clearly. Crime often causes poverty. Racism exists, and so do horrible living conditions in our cities. To accept any of this as natural or necessary or unchangeable is to insure that it will continue.

The most important voice in that national dialogue is yours, Mr. President. You can set us against each other or you can bring us together. You can reason with us and help us overcome deep-rooted stereotypes or you can speak in mutually contradictory sound bites and leave us at each other's throats. You can risk being pilloried by demagogues and losing a few points in the polls, or you can simply ignore the issue, using it only for political purposes. You can push the buttons which you think give you an election or you can challenge a nation's moral conscience.

The irony here is that as a Democrat, I am urging the Republican President to do what will serve his own party's longterm political interests. Why do I do it? Because I believe that race-baiting should be banished from politics. Because I believe communicating in code words and symbols to deliver an old shameful message should cease. There should be no more Willie Horton ads. Mr. President, will you promise not to use race again as you so shamelessly did in 1988? If you will not promise your country this, why not?

DOUBT FIVE—YOUR CONVICTIONS

Mr. President, as Vice President to Ronald Reagan you were a loyal lieutenant. To my knowledge you never expressed public opposition to anything that happened in race relations in the Reagan years. You acquiesced in giving control of the civil rights agenda to elements of the Republican party whose strategy was to attract those voters who wanted to turn the clock back on race relations.

The Reagan Justice Department tried to give government tax subsidies to schools that practice racial discrimination as a matter of policy. And you went along. They were reluctant to push the Voting Rights Act renewal—and you went along. They vetoed the 1988 Civil Rights Restoration Act—and you went along. For eight years there was an assault on American civility and fair play and you went along. On what issue would you have spoken out? Was your role as Vice President more important than any conviction? Obviously, the issue of race wasn't one of them. Martin Luther King, Jr. wrote from his jail cell in Birmingham, "We will have to repent in this generation not merely for the vitriolic words and actions of bad people but for the appalling silence of good people."

Mr. President, you saw black America fall into a deeper and deeper decline during the Reagan years. From 1984 to 1988, the number of black children murdered in America increased by 50 percent. Today, 43 percent of black children are born in poverty. And since 1984 black life expectancy has declined—the first decline for any segment of America in our history. Yet in the face of these unprecedented developments, you said and did nothing. Why did you go along?

In 1989, when you took over you promised it would be different. But it hasn't been. The rhetoric has been softer at times, but the problem is the same. At Hampton College, a predominantly black school, you recently promised "adequate funding" for Head Start, but three out of four eligible children are still turned away. Do you believe what you say? What is more important than getting a generation of kids on the right education track? I'm all for the important work of the Thousand Points of Light Foundation but for it to really succeed a President and his government must be the beacon.

Maybe you have no idea what to do about kids killing kids in our cities and people sleeping on the streets. Maybe out of wedlock births are outside your experience and not of importance to you. Maybe you really have concluded that urban enterprise zones and the HOPE program are a sufficient urban poverty strategy. Maybe families to you don't include white and black families living in cities, struggling to make ends meet against the same high odds, which you refuse to reduce. Maybe you just don't understand. Maybe, maybe, maybe.

Who knows? We rarely hear your voice. At West Point, you exhorted America to be colorblind. But without doing something about inequity and poverty the call for colorblindness is denial and arrogance. Mr. President, you have to create a context in which a colorblind society might eventually evolve. Right now you are neither similar to the stern father administering bad news and discipline to his children, nor the wise father helping his children come to terms with emotions they don't understand or prejudices they can't conquer. And you are certainly not the leader laying out the plan and investing the political capital to change conditions.

So, Mr. President, my concern is not just the 1991 Civil Rights Act or the fate of Clarence Thomas. Your Civil Rights Bill, the Democrats' Civil Rights Bill, the Danforth Civil Rights Bill all say pretty much the same thing to business: Pay attention to your hiring practices; make an effort to find minorities who can do the job because it is in the national interest for pluralism to truly work. There is no reason we can't find language that 60 Senators can support.

But you, or those working for you—don't appear to want a compromise. Not yet. Businessmen wanted a compromise and your White House pressured them to back off talks. Senator Danforth wants a compromise—but he hasn't gotten much encouragement. Some Senators, Republicans, want to be responsible but they say you're not dealing in good faith. Your operatives apparently don't want to lose a political issue—not yet.

Mr. President, as you and your men dawdle in race politics consider these facts: We will never win the global economic race if we have to carry the burden of an increasingly larger unskilled population. We will never lead the world by the example of our living values if we can't eradicate the "reservation" mentality many whites hold about our cities. We will never understand the problems of our cities—the factories closed, the housing filled with rats, the hospitals losing doctors, the schools pock marked with bullet holes, the middle class moved away—until a white person can point out the epidemic of minority illegitimacy, drug addiction and homicides without being charged a racist. We will never solve the problem of our cities until we intervene massively and directly to change the physical conditions of poverty and deprivation. But you can still win elections by playing on the insecurities our people feel about their jobs, their homes, their children, and their future.

And so our greatest doubt about you is this: is winning elections more important to you than unifying the country to address the problems of race and poverty that beset us?

The important thing is not whether you veto a bill in the pitched battle of politics but whether you will veto or voice the desire we feel in our hearts to build a new trust in this country—trust in unity and opportunity, trust in ourselves, trust in one nation, indivisible with liberty and justice for all.

Mr. President, this is a cry from my heart, so don't charge me with playing politics. I'm asking you to take the issue of race out of partisan politics and put it on a moral plane where healing can take place.

I believe the only way it will happen is for you to look into yourself and tell all of us what you plan to do about the issues of race and poverty in this country. Tell us why our legitimate doubts about your convictions are wrong. Tell us how you propose to make us the example of a pluralist democracy whose economy and spirit takes everyone to the higher ground. Tell us what the plan of action is for us to realize our ideals.

Tell each of us what we can do. Tell us why you think we can do it.

Tell us why we must do it. Tell us, Mr. President, lead us, put yourself on the line. Now. Now.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, are we in morning business?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. We are in morning business until 10 o'clock.

Mr. COCHRAN. I thank the Chair. (The remarks of Mr. COCHRAN and Mr. BUMPERS pertaining to the introduction of S. 1441 are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

CHANGE TAX CODE, STOP HURTING FARMERS

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, recently, I joined as an original cosponsor of S. 1130, the Family Farm Tax Relief and Savings Act. This proposal would provide tax relief and a retirement savings program for farmers. Farmers would be permitted to defer capital gains tax on the sale of farm assets by rolling the sale profit into an individual retirement account.

The Tax Code is particularly unkind to farmers. A farmer who works his whole life on the farm and then sells part or all of it in order to retire, is subject to a 28-percent Federal capital gains tax and additional taxes at the State level. This does not leave much to retire on. Recently, my colleague, Senator KASTEN, the sponsor of S. 1130, outlined this problem and our proposed solution in an excellent article published in the Milwaukee Sentinel. I ask unanimous consent that it be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Milwaukee Sentinel]

CHANGE TAX CODE, STOP HURTING FARMERS
(By F. James Sensenbrenner, Jr., and Robert W. Kasten, Jr.)

With over 80,000 farmers, Wisconsin is one of the leading producers of agricultural products in America. But as Wisconsin farmers know, farming has become an increasingly difficult profession. And the federal government's tax policies haven't made it any easier.

If the current recession persists, it is estimated that up to 4,000 Wisconsin dairy farmers may go bankrupt. Farmers have enough problems without the added burden of a federal tax system that penalizes work, savings and investment.

A farmer who works his whole life on the farm and then sells part or all of it in order to retire, is subject to a 28% capital gains tax on his full profit. The farmer is then left to retire on what remains.

One of the major problems with the capital gains tax is that it is an unfair tax. Most of the accumulated gains on the value of the farm is due to inflation. But the federal tax system fails to take this into account. So farmers end up paying taxes on phantom gains.

In general, the capital gains tax is a tax on jobs, on upward mobility, and on entrepreneurship. In short, it's a tax on the "American Dream." And it hits farmers particularly hard because farming is one of the most capital intensive businesses. The farmer's land, the buildings, the machinery, the dairy herd and the crops are all capital assets.

The high capital gains tax is a double blow to farmers because they often depend on the sale of farm assets to finance a secure and dignified retirement. Family farmers don't have access to big corporate pension plans. Farmers are self-employed and must plan and provide for their own retirement.

In addition, farmers often receive lower Social Security benefits than workers in other kinds of businesses when they retire. This is because farmers need to re-invest much of their income into the farm to purchase and upgrade farm equipment, machinery and other assets. There is often little left to pay salaries.

Low salaries during working years translate into low Social Security benefits at retirement. Ironically, as self-employed workers, farmers actually pay twice as much in Social Security taxes than workers of other businesses. So farmers pay higher taxes and end up with lower benefits.

All of this adds up to an often difficult retirement for farmers who have spent their lives feeding America's families. We believe that Wisconsin farmers deserve better. That's why we have introduced the Family Farm Tax Relief and Savings Act of 1991.

Our legislation would provide tax relief and a retirement savings program for families actively engaged in the business of farming for at least five years. Farmers would be permitted to rollover the proceeds from the sale of farm assets to an Individual Retirement Account (IRA). Taxes on those assets would be deferred until the farmer or spouse begins withdrawing funds from the IRA in the years following retirement.

The farmer and his spouse each would be able to defer tax on up to $10,000 yearly and up to a maximum of $500,000 per farm couple. In addition, any gain that builds up on funds while they are kept in the IRA would compound tax free. Only when the farmer or spouse begins withdrawing IRA funds would the tax be due.

Our proposal would promote retirement security for our farmers and preserve family farming in America. That's important—because we all depend on the hard work that farmers do. Let's change the tax code so it stops being unfairly punished.

DEFENDER OF THE NATIONAL INTEREST AWARD

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, our distinguished colleague from North Carolina [Mr. HELMS] has often said with a chuckle that liberal media follow the axiom that if you cannot say something bad about HELMS or other conservatives, do not say anything.

I am not surprised that the media has kept secret the fact that Senator HELMS was awarded the first annual Defender of the National Interest Award from the U.S. Industrial Council Educational Foundation. The award was presented at a dinner at the Marriott Hotel in downtown Washington on June 5, 1991, and the proceedings were carried nationwide by C-SPAN.

In presenting the award, the President of the U.S. Industrial Council Educational Foundation, Mr. John P. Cregan, noted how Senator HELMS "works so hard and effectively to defend and conserve our American values apart from, but uniquely related to, the traditional values of our Western heritage of which the American experience is an indispensable part. What he seeks to conserve by defending is American sovereignty in all its major manifestations—political, economic and cultural. And what he tries to advance is an American foreign policy that does not dote on global democracy rather than the national interest, or a new world order based on United Nations consensus, but an American First agenda based on American pre-eminence."

Mr. President, this Senator could not have said it better. I ask unanimous consent that the full text of Mr. Cregan's remarks be printed at this point in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DEFENDER OF THE NATIONAL INTEREST AWARD PRESENTED TO SENATOR JESSE HELMS BY THE U.S. INDUSTRIAL COUNCIL EDUCATIONAL FOUNDATION, JUNE 5, 1991, WASHINGTON, DC (Remarks by John P. Cregan, Foundation President)

In the 1990 off-year elections there were 435 district races for the House of Representatives and U.S. Senate campaigns in 32 states. There was only one national election. It took place in North Carolina. It was much larger than a campaign which pitted incumbent Senator Jesse Helms against Democratic challenger Harvey Gantt, because the opposition faced by Senator Helms was decidedly and undeniably national in scope. A motley but powerful coalition coalesced nationally united by a common denominator of purpose: to oust Jesse Helms from the United States Senate. This coalition included: liberal elites, self-anointed minorities, multicultural commissars, Japanese lobbyists, and purveyors of the politically correct. And this was just the Los Angeles/Hollywood part of the coalition!

We all know well, however, that the breadth and ferocity of the opposition to Jesse Helms is not really national in the sense that it can be located in equal measure in places like Midland, Texas or Perrysburg, Ohio, or Huron, South Dakota, and the dozens of other locales and regions that are represented here this evening. It is, rather, national in the sense that the dozens of New York or Washington, or Los Angeles see themselves as residing in the power centers of the nation. And we know, moreover, that the intensity of that dislike is a most accurate calibration of Jesse's effectiveness in confronting their agenda over the last twenty years.

Furthermore, the race between Gantt and Helms in North Carolina was a national race from the standpoint that Senator Helms' victory was, in turn, a victory for the nation, for the genuine national interests that he will continue to defend in the world's greatest deliberative body for at least the next six years.

Senator Jesse Helms has been called the conscience of the Senate. But I, for one, am uncertain if I subscribe to such an appellation because it presupposes that there is an agreed-to definition of that which constitutes "conscience" in today's society. After all, Howard Metzbaum has likewise been called, "the conscience of the Senate." Jesse Helms has also been savaged as an anachronism in many ways, not the least of which is the manner in which he carries out his position. But in truth he is in the best tradition of the citizen legislator, in a republican (small "r") representative government. He cannot help it if he appears to be out of step with so many of his congressional colleagues—excepting those like Duncan Hunter—who are more concerned with filling positions and seats than in serving in the office.

Finally, Senator Helms has been called a practitioner of the politics of divisiveness. This is, perhaps, the most distorted of the aspersions. For it has been precisely his keen awareness and courageous defense of the national interest which shines a fierce light on the fragmentations and tears in the American fabric today.

To accurately describe Senator Jesse Helms is to begin by calling him a North Carolinian. As Professor Clyde Wilson, a North Carolinian, wrote recently in a book review of something called the Dictionary of North Carolina Biography:

"We North Carolinians have always made up our own minds, and always been American republicans. Not democrats, not progressives, not liberals, not conservative in your Wall Street sense, but American Republicans . . . Consider Sam Ervin or Jesse Helms. You will have a hard time fitting them into any categories devised by the newspapers or the Stanford political science department."

(Wilson goes on to regret that Senator Helms is not listed in the Dictionary of North Carolina Biography because the volume discriminates against the living, who are not listed).

Well, do not let it be said that we discriminate in the same sense in choosing recipients for this award. We're delighted to be going live with this inaugural award. However, we do take pride in the discrimination with which we have approached the inaugural presentation of the Defender of the National Interest award.

In addition to the good things about being a North Carolinian, we would also like to describe Senator Jesse Helms with the adjective, "courageous." James Burnham, a very wise conservative, wrote a book many years ago titled, "Congress and the American Tradition," in which he observed that: "Political courage is a quality very different and much rarer than physical courage. For Congress to survive politically means that it shall be prepared to say 'yes' or 'no' on its own finding and responsibility, in answer to the questions of major policy; and this it cannot do unless the individual members of Congress have the courage to say 'no' even against the tidal pressures from the Executive, the bureaucracy."

In the context Mr. Burnham so eloquently provides, when it comes to Jesse Helms, one man's "Senator No" is another man's "Captain Courageous."

But it must be remembered that political courage is a far different thing than political foolishness. A member of Congress cannot display the courage and independence of a Jesse Helms without the people's support. There must be something to Professor Wilson's characterization of North Carolinians who have defied the pundits repeatedly in the case of Senator Helms. There are few members of the Senate today who have been elected to that body four successive times. So, we must also affix the adjective, "politician" and recall its true historical meaning, in describing Senator Helms.

And we, more importantly, are happy to characterize Senator Helms accurately as an American conservative leader. What he works to hard and effectively to defend and conserve are American values apart from, but uniquely related to, the traditional values of our Western heritage of which the American experience is an indispensable part. What he seeks to conserve by defending is American sovereignty in all its major manifestations—political, economic and cultural. And what he tries to advance is an American foreign policy that does not dote on global democracy rather than the national interest, or a new world order based on United Nations consensus, but an American First agenda based on America pre-eminence.

For that reason, finally, we must also describe Senator Helms as virtuous. For as someone recently reminded, virtue used to be identified with patriotism because it required devotion to one's own country. So it is a virtuous thing that Jesse Helms questions why we go to war against one country that threatens its neighbors, incites instability, engages in nuclear proliferations and abuses its citizens, but we grant most-favored-nation trade privileges to another regime that is guilty—to an even greater degree—of those same offenses. It is virtuous to question why our government should select among artists those worthless enough to receive public funds. It is virtue which also demands that he use the constitutional powers given the legislative branch to prevent the confirmation of executive branch nominees—Republican or Democrat—who are not totally dedicated to the national interest.

SANCTIONS ON ANGOLA AND SOUTH AFRICA

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I rise today to discuss this Nation's policy toward southern Africa. I suspect that all of my colleagues have noticed the headline in Tuesday's Washington Post. Apparently, the President has decided to lift the economic sanctions which the Congress placed upon the Republic of South Africa under the terms of the Comprehensive Anti-Apartheid Act.

Broadly speaking, Mr. President, I support such an initiative. Our major allies—who also happen to be our chief trading competitors—have already raised their sanctions. Some never even imposed them. But this is not, I am sure, the chief consideration in the mind of the President.

The chief consideration before him as it must be before us, is that the Government of South Africa appears to be shortly about to fulfill all of the conditions laid down in the Comprehensive Anti-Apartheid Act for the raising of sanctions.

Mr. President, the situation in South Africa today is far from perfect. The nation is still suffering from widespread violence and a depressing legacy of interracial and intertribal distrust.

However, the Comprehensive Anti-Apartheid Act is a most specific document, Mr. President. It does not visualize a perfect South Africa as its end goal.

The act is merely a means toward that end, an end which, ultimately, can be gained only by South Africans, of all colors, themselves.

The act lays down very specific conditions which must be met on the road to an overall South African settlement.

When those conditions are met and it appears they will be met shortly, then neither the executive nor the legislative branch of Government has any business trying to change the terms of the debate in order to legitimize the continuance of sanctions.

We made very specific demands—when, and if, those demands are met, we have no choice but to raise sanctions on South Africa.

However, Mr. President, I have come to the floor today not merely to discuss South Africa but also southern Africa.

Specifically, Mr. President, I would like to lay before my colleagues the idea that if it is time to raise sanctions on South Africa, it is also time to raise sanctions on Angola.

As in South Africa, the situation in Angola is far from perfect. A democratic government has yet to come to power in Luanda. But, that said, the President of the People's Republic of Angola and his chief opponent, the President of the national union for the total independence of Angola have signed peace accords in Lisbon, Portugal on May 31, 1991.

Those accords are now being implemented and few seem to doubt that democratic elections will, in fact, be held and Angola will shortly have a government which has been democratically elected by all Angolans.

Mr. President, whoever forms the next Angolan government does not wish to preside over an economic disaster—and Angola is an economic disaster area, despite its huge oil and mineral resources. Angola needs development now.

Many U.S. businesses are eager to throw themselves into this process. U.S. oil companies, in particular, are eager to expand their drilling activities in Angola, benefiting both the people of Angola and the United States trade balance.

Once again, our competitors are pushing their way into this lucrative market while U.S. investors are burdened in the competition by U.S. legislation which places an unduly heavy tax burden on their shoulders. Let us waive these restrictions—they no longer have any political rationale—and yet our companies are back into the international competition on equal terms with their rivals.

I note with some satisfaction, Mr. President, that today's Federal Register contains a Presidential determination that progress is being made toward national reconciliation in Angola.

That determination has been sent to the Secretary of State, who is directed to inform the appropriate committees of the Congress of it.

I hope, Mr. President, that this determination heralds the lifting of all United States sanctions on Angola and, if so, that my colleagues in the Senate and the House of Representatives will support this process for the benefit both of Angola and the United States.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. SEYMOUR addressed the Chair.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from California.

EXTENSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. SEYMOUR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that morning business be extended for 5 minutes.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I do not want to say no to my colleagues. But we were here late last night, and I wanted to stay to get this done. I wonder if the Senator can make do with less than 5 minutes so we can get on the bill and get going. I may have to apologize later because we may be here in a quorum call. I am not going to object. Would he try to do it in less than 5 minutes?

Mr. SEYMOUR. Mr. President, I certainly understand the request of the distinguished Senator from Louisiana. I will finish in less than 5 minutes.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. DASCHLE). Morning business is closed.

ENERGY AND WATER DEVELOPMENT APPROPRIATIONS, FISCAL YEAR 1992

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will resume consideration of H.R. 2427, which the clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 2427) making appropriations for energy and water development for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1992, and for other purposes.

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill.

BUDGET COMMITTEE SCORING OF H.R. 2427

Mr. SASSER. Mr. President, the Senate Budget Committee has examined H.R. 2427, the energy and water appropriations bill and has found that the bill is under its 602(b) budget authority allocation by $518,000 and under its 602(b) outlay allocation by $40 million.

I compliment the distinguished manager of the bill, Senator JOHNSTON, and the distinguished ranking member of the Energy and Water Subcommittee, Senator HATFIELD on all their hard work.

Mr. President, I have a table prepared by the Budget Committee which shows the official scoring of the energy and water appropriations bill and I ask unanimous consent that it be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

AMENDMENT NOS. 631 THROUGH 634

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, as the Senators, I believe, are aware, last night we entered into a unanimous-consent agreement providing that only certain amendments would be in order. A number of those we have worked out, and I would like to submit on behalf of myself and the distinguished Senator from Oregon, en bloc, a series of amendments which I will describe as follows before I submit them to the desk:

An amendment on behalf of the distinguished Senators from Pennsylvania [Mr. SPECTER and Mr. WOFFORD] which provides that within available funds, $850,000 shall be available to the Wyoming Valley Levee raising project in Luzerne County, PA.

A Nickles-Boren amendment providing that the Secretary of Army is directed to use $450,000 of available funds to initiate a reconnaissance level study of proposed dams and related riverfront projects to be located along the northern Canadian River in Oklahoma.

An amendment on behalf of the Senators from Rhode Island [Mr. CHAFEE and Mr. FELL] providing that $500,000 of the funds appropriated to the Secretary of the Army through the Corps of Engineers is directed to initiate the definite project report for the Cranston, RI, waste water conveyance system, as authorized by section 117 of Public Law 101-640.

An amendment on behalf of Senator KENNEDY, for himself and Mr. KERRY, providing that $250,000 of funds appropriated to the Secretary of the Army shall undertake a reconnaissance level study to assist the water resource needs of the Muddy River in Massachusetts.

Mr. President, I now send those amendments to the desk and ask that they be considered en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there an objection?

Hearing no objection, the clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. JOHNSTON], for Mr. SPECTER (for himself and Mr. WOFFORD) proposes an amendment numbered 631, as follows:

Insert at the end of line 17, page 8, the following: "Provided further, That of the funds provided herein, the Secretary of the Army, acting through the Chief of Engineers, is directed to provide $850,000 to undertake planning of the Wyoming Valley Levee Raising project in Luzerne County, Pennsylvania."

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, the amendment I am offering this evening to the energy and water appropriations bill provides $850,000 for completion of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineer's study of phase II of the Wyoming Valley flood control project in Luzerne County, PA.

The Wyoming Valley flood control project has been an ongoing flood control project by the Corps of Engineers since the Tropical Storm Agnes of 1972. Although 19 years have passed since the flood in the Wyoming Valley, victims can still remember their personal tragedies and the $3 billion in damages incurred by the communities of the region.

Currently the levee structure in the valley protects the region from a flood of 232,000 cubic feet per second. The flood of 1972 caused flooding in the valley of 318,000 cubic feet per second. The intention of phase II of the flood control project is designed to increase the region's flood protection to cover future floods at the Agnes level.

Mr. President, the administration did not include this project in its budget request due to concerns that existed during the budget's preparation by the Army Audit Agency [AAA]. Subsequently, since the budget's submission to Congress, General Brown of the Army Corps of Engineers testified before the House Subcommittee on Energy and Water Appropriations that the AAA has concluded examination of the Wyoming Valley levee project and has reported favorable findings on the project.

I want to thank Senator JOHNSTON and Senator HATFIELD for agreeing to accept this amendment to provide $850,000 for the Wyoming Valley levee raising project in fiscal year 1992. With these funds, the Corps of Engineers should be able to significantly advance efforts to complete its design and planning efforts to allow for construction of a levee that will provide adequate flood protection to the citizens of Luzerne County, PA.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. JOHNSTON], for Mr. NICKLES, for himself, and Mr. BOREN, proposes an amendment numbered 632, as follows:

On page 8, line 17, add the following before the period: "Provided further, That the Secretary of the Army is directed to use $450,000 of available funds to initiate a reconnaissance level study of proposed dams and related riverfront development to be located along the North Canadian River in Oklahoma."

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. JOHNSTON], for Mr. CHAFEE, for himself, and Mr. PELL, proposes an amendment numbered 633, as follows:

On page 8, line 17, insert the following before the period: "": Provided further, That using $500,000 of funds appropriated herein, the Secretary of the Army, acting through the Chief of Engineers, is directed to initiate the Definite Project Report for the Cranston, Rhode Island, Wastewater Conveyance System as authorized by section 117 of Public Law 101-640".

CRANSTON, RI

Mr. CHAFEE. I would like to thank the chairman and ranking member for accepting the amendment sponsored by Senator PELL and myself regarding an environmental remediation project in Cranston, RI. The amendment appropriates $500,000 to initiate a project report as authorized by section 117 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1990. This report will encompass the second phase of an ongoing review by the New England Division of the Army Corps of Engineers.

Mr. HATFIELD. Yes, as I understand it, this appropriation will provide the moneys necessary to continue the project review. Senator CHAFEE has been a persistent advocate of this project, and I reviewed his original $5 million request. However, the project is not yet ready for construction. The committee is aware that construction funds are in fact authorized. Of course, I understand the Senators' concerns and interest in proceeding on a fast track. With this in mind, I assure the Senators that the committee will consider construction funding requests upon completion of the project review.

Mr. CHAFEE. I thank the ranking member, and look forward to working him to secure construction funds for this innovative project next year.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senators from Louisiana [Mr. JOHNSTON], for Mr. KENNEDY, for himself, and Mr. KERRY, proposes an amendment numbered 634, as follows:

AMENDMENT NO. 634

(Purpose: To fund a study of the water resource needs of the Muddy River in Massachusetts)

On page 8, line 7, before the period insert the following: "": Provided further, That with $250,000 of funds appropriated herein, the Secretary of the Army shall undertake a reconnaissance level study to assess the water resource needs of the Muddy River in Massachusetts".

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I would like to offer an amendment to the energy and water appropriations bill. This amendment directs the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to undertake a study to assess cleanup needs and options for the Muddy River watershed in Massachusetts.

This 3½-mile waterway is a popular urban natural resource that flows from the Jamaica Plains area to Boston, and empties into the Charles River. Along its course through several residential neighborhoods, the river is enjoyed by many for its scenery and wildlife. It also flows through Frederick Law Olmsted's "Emerald Necklace," one of the most carefully crafted parks systems in the country. And many of Boston's finest cultural, educational, and medical institutions are located in this watershed. Just a few examples are the Children's Hospital, Harvard Medical School and School of Public Health, Brigham and Women's Hospital, Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, Northeastern University, Boston University, Boston Symphony, New England Conservatory of Music, Museum of Fine Arts, and Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum.

Unfortunately, the Muddy River has fallen prey to contamination that seriously jeopardizes the beauty and safety of this important natural resource. There has been tremendous support in the affected communities for pursuing appropriate corrective measures. Dozens of local environmental and civil organizations along with the many institutions located in the watershed, are working together in a coalition to restore the Muddy River. The Massachusetts Office of Environmental Affairs has committed scarce State resources for a preliminary study that suggests several measures to alleviate the pollution problems.

The Army Corps study I am requesting will build on the information already available and will provide answers to the questions that remain about appropriate cleanup efforts. The amendment does not require an offset because it directs the Army Corps to do this $250,000 reconnaissance study out of available funds.

I urge Chairman JOHNSTON and the rest of my colleagues to support this amendment that will mean a great deal to the thousands of people who live and work near the Muddy River, who enjoy recreational opportunities on its banks, and who hope that this resource will be there for their children and grandchildren.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I rise in support of the amendment offered today by my senior colleague, Senator KENNEDY, and myself to appropriate $250,000 for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to undertake a feasibility study on the Muddy River improvement plan proposed by the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection.

Along its way from Jamaica Plain to the Charles River, the Muddy River weaves throughout many historic areas of Boston and surrounding communities. The river is the heart of the Emerald Necklace Park system designed by Frederick Law Olmsted in the late 1800's, a system that even today is seen as an exemplary model of urban park planning. The river offers invaluable scenic areas and parkland. Individuals may enjoy numerous fishing and recreation opportunities on the river's banks.

Unfortunately, the Muddy River has succumbed to the many environmental hazards associated with urban life; contamination of sediments, sewage discharge, stormwater runoff and industrial pollution have all resulted in a degraded river environment. Revitalization of this natural resource is crucial to the reemergence of the entire Emerald Necklace Park system as a national model. The funds that we are passing today will go toward the study of an improvement plan which contains provisions to dredge the river bottom to remove hazardous sediment, to improve sewer and storm drains and to prevent oil contamination. These improvements will clean up the river and allow it to flow freely through the Fens marshland and to the Charles River. Implementation of the Muddy River improvement plan will restore the luster to this jewel of Massachusetts.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? The question is on agreeing to the amendments offered en bloc by the Senator from Louisiana.

The amendments (Nos. 631, 632, 633 and 634) were agreed to, en bloc.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. HATFIELD. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, the state of play now is that the chief amendments that we are aware of are a Stevens amendment, two Wallop amendments, a Fowler amendment, and a Bumpers amendment on the super collider.

Mr. President, as I said last night, we are open for business. As far as I am concerned, we will wait a reasonable time, and if Senators do not show, they are not protected under the unanimous consent order, and I do not believe we should stay here all morning and wait to keep Senators up late at night again just because Senators do not want to offer their amendments.

This is an invitation to Senators to come now to the floor to offer their amendments, because most of those on that list have now gone away and have been negotiated. So we are ready to do business.

Mr. HATFIELD. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. JOHNSTON. Yes.

Mr. HATFIELD. The Senator has indicated the amendments that the managers are aware of. I assume that those are the amendments that we understand to be controversial amendments, because there are other amendments.

Mr. JOHNSTON. That is right. There are other amendments, and we would hope that these others would probably go away. For example, Senator D'AMATO, yesterday, proposed two amendments. We took one of his amendments, but the one on Onondaga Creek, we indicated that it is in the House bill and that we thought we could not take that amendment.

I believe that was suitable with Senator D'AMATO, not to speak for him, but I do not expect him to offer that amendment.

Some of the other amendments may or may not be offered. They are on the list. But the principal ones were those that I described.

Mr. HATFIELD. Will the Senator further yield?

Mr. JOHNSTON. Certainly.

Mr. HATFIELD. As the Senator recalls a colloquy last night that I raised with the majority leader, and I believe also entered into by the chairman of our committee, as to the possibility of lining these amendments up and putting them in a certain order, with the additional proviso that those amendments then would be broadly published and broadcast, and personal contact made to the individual authors, and that if that amendment then is not discussed when its turn on this schedule should arise, that the Senator would forfeit his right to offer that amendment within a reasonable period of time.

This was a procedure adopted by the majority leader sometime back, which seemed to add to the expeditious handling of legislation here on the floor, and I would hope would become a common practice. The majority leader did not feel that that was the time last night to adopt that, but provided—I believe the RECORD will show—that that would be a possible procedure that we might employ this morning.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I think the Senator makes a good point, and I would suggest that the Stevens amendment is first here on the list and that would be an appropriate one to consider, perhaps followed by the Wallop amendments, followed by the Fowler amendments. And, in effect, I believe that I am inclined to think that the order of listing of these amendments makes pretty good sense. We did not list them.

Mr. HATFIELD. It has already been published.

Mr. JOHNSTON. It has already been published and they have been listed on here not because we thought that was necessarily the best order, but it turns out to make some sense.

So, Mr. President, I would then, through this means—and we will also give him a call—ask Senator STEVENS to come to the Senate at this point.

And I might also add that the idea is to offer a unanimous-consent request to consider these amendments in the order stated, and if the Senator is not there when the time comes up, given some reasonable 3 or 4 minutes—I mean, we will not do it within seconds, but within minutes—if he does not show, then he would not be eligible to submit his amendment. We will ask for that unanimous consent later.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I would certainly heartily applaud the suggestion made by the chairman of our committee, Mr. JOHNSTON. I think that the record ought to indicate that, starting at 20 minutes after 10, we have had no one on the floor to offer an amendment. And yet, we have a listing of all of these amendments.

I would hope that the staff and others who may be involved, in the office of Senators who have these amendments and who are listening to the proceedings at this moment, will alert their Senators that we are—I would say to the Senator from Louisiana that perhaps that ought to be adopted somewhere in the neighborhood of 11 o'clock—giving ample notice for our staffs here on the floor and in the cloakroom to personally contact each office of a Senator who hopes to offer an amendment to give them reasonable time to understand that beginning at that hour, we will be taking these amendments up in due order as published by the calendar which is already in each office, and that if those Senators are not on the floor within a reasonable period of time, that those amendments then are going to be just cast into the wastepaper basket, always with the exception of unusual circumstances.

But would the Senator from Louisiana like to put any money on how long we are going to stand here this morning and wait for a Senator, without this kind of urging and this kind of leverage?

Mr. JOHNSTON. I would say to my friend from Oregon, if there is so little interest in these amendments that no one will come to offer them, then I do not think we are duty bound to put in a quorum.

Mr. HATFIELD. In other words, go to third reading.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Go to third reading.

Mr. HATFIELD. I fully agree with the floor manager of this bill, and stand ready to assist him in any way possible to carry out our responsibilities, to get this piece of legislation completed.

Will the Senator agree that perhaps at this moment we could start alerting Senators through the cloakrooms or other methods to make them fully aware that their amendments do have limited life, as this morning business proceeds?

Mr. JOHNSTON. There is indeed a limited shelf life of amendments and as the clock ticks away, that shelf life is getting shorter and shorter.

I see Senator BURNS coming in, and I believe he has an amendment. Yes, he has an amendment on the list.

Mr. BURNS. I have to visit with the managers.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I have just had a conversation with Senator BURNS, who has an amendment on the list. It relates to the Tongue River. In the Senate bill, we provide for $2 million for this project subject to authorization because it is not now an authorized project. It is a State dam on the Tongue River. We pointed out to Senator BURNS that, while we are for the project, it would be setting a precedent to strike the requirement of having it subject to authorization.

Senator BURNS, I think, understands that and will attempt to get this matter, and believes he can get it, authorized in the RCRA bill. We will certainly support him in his efforts to get it authorized. I know Senator INOUE is also strongly supporting that.

So Senator BURNS has authorized me to ask unanimous consent that the Burns amendment be deleted. We will make every effort to continue the $2 million subject to authorization in the conference committee and believe we can do that, and we will certainly help him later in his efforts to get this authorized.

With that understanding, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Burns amendment be stricken from the list.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, we are still waiting for Senator STEVENS.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, if the distinguished Senator from Louisiana and the distinguished floor manager will turn to page 40 of the report, I would like to engage them in a short colloquy and, for the edification of my other colleagues, point out that this is report language dealing with a subject that this committee dealt with last year on dredging, the small business setaside for dredging operations.

I would like to point out that the committee put similar language in its report last year.

I wrote General Hatch about that language, which was report language. As we know, General Hatch is head of the Corps of Engineers. He wrote back and, among other things, he said:

I agree with you that while the language in the Senate committee report contradicts the express terms of the statute, it does not alter the express terms of the statute. We will continue to follow the procedures specified in law and compute and report small business dredging goals as a percentage of the total annual dollar value of contracts for dredging.

In short, he was saying that the report language last year could not alter the statute which required the Corps of Engineers to go forward with a 4-year set-aside program in an effort to reach at least 40 percent; in other words, 40 percent of the dollars they spent for dredging and so on, would go to small business.

Mr. President, this has become a very controversial program with the large dredging operations in America. It became so controversial—as a matter of fact, we were getting so much mail from them—that I held a hearing recently in the Small Business Committee and allowed both the small and large dredgers to come and make their case. Staff corrects me; it is a 30-percent set-aside, not a 40 percent set-aside for small business dredgers.

But to proceed with what I was about to say, the large dredging operations had a study done by a firm called A.T. Kearney. A.T. Kearney's study showed the small business set-asides cost substantially more than other contracts because of allegedly less competition in small business procurement.

In that hearing, I say to the Senator from Louisiana, the small business dredgers responded by saying, yes, but we also have taken some of the more difficult contracts. They are smaller, they are out-of-the-way contracts and the costs would have been larger even if the big dredgers had been allowed to bid on it.

So I do not know who is right and who is wrong about this. But I want to make two points: No. 1, 1991 is the third year of the 4-year program. No. 2, because it is very difficult to get a handle on whether this is a beneficial program or not, I had written on June 20 to the Honorable Charles A. Bowsher, Comptroller General of the United States, and asked the GAO to do a study of this problem. I will offer this letter to make it a part of the Record in just a moment, Mr. President. But in the letter, I set out that the Corps of Engineers testified that costs of the small business procurement program are not unreasonable and, on the whole, less than their precontract estimates.

I am enclosing copies of the testimony from our hearing and will be glad to furnish a transcript as soon as it is printed. I would like for the GAO to evaluate the contention that the small business dredging program results in significantly increased Federal costs and particularly whether these costs are due to a lack of competition.

One of the allegations is that on occasion, the Corps of Engineers awards one of these small-business contracts when there is only one bidder. They do not do that unless the bid is reasonable and within what they thought it ought to cost. I might also point out that they also award contracts to big dredgers occasionally when there is only one bidder.

So, Mr. President, my point, I guess, is I hope the corps, frankly, will ignore this language next year as they have this year because the authorizing committee has not altered the statute and the law that set this up.

As I understand it, a point of order is not excluded in the unanimous-consent agreement this morning, but I do not think a point of order would lie against report language. If it were legislation in the bill, you could make a point of order that it is legislation on an appropriation bill.

Mr. President, while I appreciate the report language that says we will continue to work with the authorizing committees and especially the Small Business Administration—I appreciate that in the report language—I do take strong exception to this report language directing the corps to do something that files right in the face of the law. Obviously, I think if General Hatch is presented with this language, he would have no choice but to say, "Gentleman, this is fine language and I would not mind complying with it, but I have to comply with the law and not report language."

I will be happy to hear from the distinguished floor manager on this point.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, we did not understand our report language to be inconsistent with the law. The Senator is very correct when he points out that we mention that we intend to work closely with the authorizing committee.

Our concern is that, first, when you talk dredging and small business, you are almost talking a contradiction in terms because hopper dredges can cost up to $50 to $80 million. So we are talking about any mom and pop operation where some old country boy gets his motorboat out and is trying to dredge something. We are talking big business involving big Federal dollars and big Federal interest.

What we are concerned with is that the way this program has been run, this set-aside, this quota program, if you will, is costing the Federal Government a whole lot more than if you use the most efficient kind of equipment. And it is not only a question of it costing more, it means that we can do less because Federal funds being very limited, we cannot perform the work, or at least that is the information we have received.

So the pilot program which we request the corps to do is in order to determine what those relative costs are. We know that the Senator from Arkansas shares our same view that we want to get the biggest bang for the taxpayer buck; we want to get as much dredging work done in areas in Arkansas and Louisiana, which are two areas that require a lot of dredging; and we want to find out the answer as best we can as to how it can be most efficiently done at the lowest cost to the taxpayer.

That was the intent of our language. The set-aside program, we understand, provides for goals and objectives. I do not think—the Senator can correct me because I think the legislation came out of his committee—but I think these are goals and objectives rather than being strict quotas.

Mr. BUMPERS. The Senator is correct.

Mr. JOHNSTON. In that sense, we thought that the pilot program, as required in our report language, was not inconsistent with those goals and objectives. In general, everybody would like something smaller rather than something bigger. We like small farms rather than big farms.

We like mom and pop grocery stores better than supermarkets. That is part of the American ethic. When you are talking dredging—

Mr. BUMPERS. We do not like small science better than we like the superconducting super collider.

Mr. JOHNSTON. That will be coming up next, right. We also like bang for the taxpayers buck, and we like those waterways dredged and open for navigation. That was the sense of our language. I hope the Senator will see it in that spirit.

It is more or less experimental to find out what the facts are. If the facts turn out to be that small dredgers are taking on more difficult jobs and have special expertise and are doing a good job, I say that is great.

I will certainly support the Senator from Arkansas if those turn out to be the facts in giving further life to the set-aside program. And contrariwise, I am sure he would join me if this turns out to be an extraordinary cost to the taxpayers—simply giving some extra money to some people based on a quota—I am sure he would also join me. It is meant to be an experimental pilot project in that spirit.

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, I certainly appreciate the remarks of the distinguished Senator from Louisiana on this point. It is a very perplexing problem. Our hearings revealed that there is at least the possibility we are spending quite a bit more money than necessary in order to carry out this objective of 30 percent of the dredging money going to small business.

We oftentimes will give small business a little preference, which does in fact cost a little more. That is just trying to help people get up to the first rung of the ladder, just as we often give veterans preferences, and so on. There comes a point where you do not want to go beyond a helping hand to where it becomes a real burden on the taxpayers and you are spending more money than you need to spend.

I appreciate the Senator's remarks, and I concur heartily with that. But after a 2- or 3-hour hearing in my committee on this, I could not reach a conclusion, because the corps was itself testifying that this is not a burdensome program, that it is not necessarily more expensive. On the other hand, you have a study here, which incidentally was paid for by the big dredgers—and of course you always have a little suspicion of those kinds of things—but I think I have done what needs to be done and that is to ask the GAO to study this problem and report back to me: Is this program a burden on the taxpayers and, if so, how big a burden? I hope that corps and all parties interested in this will wait until we get something from the GAO. We always sort of hang our hat on what the GAO says. Let them report back to us.

If the corps comes back and says what the big dredgers have been saying, that this is a very burdensome program which is costing the taxpayers a lot of money, then we will torpedo it. But I want to make this point. The program automatically comes to an end in 1992 anyway, and the GAO report will probably tell us whether we want to renew it, cancel it, or possibly renew it with some alterations.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I thank the Senator for his comments. I think we are talking exactly the same language with the same goals. This pilot program is really not intended to supplant the set-aside program. To the contrary, it is designed to get the statistics upon which to make a further judgment about the set-aside program. I think it is designed to do that, and I hope the Senator will see that as not an attempt to throw out the set-aside program but, rather, to get the statistics for the purpose of either renewing it or expanding it, modifying it, or at least to be able to judge the effectiveness of it.

Mr. BUMPERS. I thank the Senator very much.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I ask the Senator from Arkansas, on the SSC amendment, I wonder if we could get a time limit for when that amendment is brought up of 2 hours equally divided?

Mr. BUMPERS. I say to the Senator if he will give me about 5 minutes, I will come back to the floor and see if we cannot agree to that. I think we can. But as I told the Senator a moment ago privately, I had a couple Senators I wanted to call. I have not had a chance to do that, but I will do that and get back to the Senator immediately.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 669

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I have an amendment at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Alaska [Mr. STEVENS], for himself and Mr. MURKOWSKI, proposes an amendment numbered 669:

Insert at the appropriate place: "Provided further, That with $12,225,000 of the funds appropriated herein, the Secretary of the Army, acting through the Chief of Engineers, is directed to initiate and continue until completion, construction of the Bethel, Alaska Bank Stabilization Project as authorized by Public Law 99-662: Provided further, That no fully allocated funding policy shall apply to construction of the Bethel Alaska Bank Stabilization Project."

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, this is a matter I raised in the committee and indicated that I would bring the subject to the floor. It deals with the very difficult problem of Bethel, AK, which is the center, really, of the northwestern part of Alaska that is on the Kuskokwim River, which deals with an area 50 to 60 small villages and cities of primarily Native people in our State.

At this location is the regional hospital for the Indian Health Service, a series of Federal installations, but it really is the logistic center. There on the riverbank is the only main tank farm for the storage of fuel for the whole region. The difficulty is this river is, like a lot of rivers in Alaska, raging. And the investment primarily made with Federal funds is now in severe jeopardy because of the changing of the river and the threatened erosion that may really destroy the stability of the whole city.

I am hopeful that the committee will consider this problem. I know it is a difficult problem for the committee. There is another project in this bill.

My State is one-fifth the size of the United States and has half the coastline of the United States. It is just not possible for us to limit the number of requests in this bill to one. As a matter of fact, this will make it two. But I understand that. I understand the terrible constraints that the chairman and ranking member and members of the committee have worked under on this bill.

But I again appeal to my friends who are the chairman and ranking member of the committee to help us deal with this project which is authorized. It is not an unauthorized project. It is an authorized project, but it is an emergency project. It is totally emergency, probably the major emergency in this portion of our State which is an area larger than Texas.

I ask the chairman if it is possible if we might move forward with this project now.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, we had long discussions in committee on this project and have had lengthy discussions since then. Senator HATFIELD and I are very aware of the emergency nature of this project. However, we had 14 new starts in the Senate bill and had to draw a line or felt that we had to draw a line at that arbitrary figure. We pointed out to Senator STEVENS that he had another new start, I believe at Homer, AK. We said we can take this project, put this project in, and take that one out. He said, well, the site at Homer is also an emergency and it was for him like trying to choose between his two children. We understand that. I believe this amendment calls for $12 million.

Mr. President, Senator HATFIELD and I have discussed this at some great length. What we are willing to do is to take care of the emergency parts of this project, and we will deal with other parts of it later if it becomes appropriate. But for this year, we think to go beyond dealing with the emergency would really be expanding this bill beyond where it is.

Mr. President, I am prepared to offer on behalf of Senator HATFIELD and myself a substitute for the Stevens amendment which would make available $5 million from the appropriated funds to the Corps of Engineers' money to undertake the emergency construction aspects of the Bethel stabilization project. And it describes what those emergency aspects are. Clearly, this will take care of this year's problem, and I think frankly that it is a realistic and generous solution to this considering the tremendous budget stringency that we have this year.

If the Senator is willing to accept that amendment, I am prepared to offer it at this time.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, if I might inquire, as I understand, the Senator's amendment will include protection of the petroleum dock, the tank farm, and the necessary installation of pipe piles that initiate this project. Is that correct?

Mr. JOHNSTON. The Senator is correct. The language says that the Secretary is authorized to undertake emergency construction including, but not limited to, toe protection at the petroleum dock and tank farm, steel whaler installation on the pipe piles, toe protection from the west end of First Avenue to the city dock, and toe protection at Mission Road bulk head and in other areas vulnerable to collapse.

That language is without limitation. So we direct the corps to take care of those things and any other emergency aspects of this project.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, understanding the constraints that I have mentioned before that this committee has, and also understanding the offer the chairman has made, I think it is a generous offer under the circumstances. I would be prepared to accept that as a substitute for the amendment that Senator MURKOWSKI and I have offered if that is the position of the chairman and ranking member of the committee.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, that is our position, and on behalf of Senator HATFIELD and myself—does the Senator from Alaska want to be a cosponsor?

Mr. STEVENS. Yes. I would be happy to be a cosponsor.

AMENDMENT NO. 670 TO AMENDMENT NO. 669

Mr. JOHNSTON. On behalf of myself and Senator STEVENS, I send the substitute to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. JOHNSTON], for himself, Mr. HATFIELD, Mr. STEVENS, and Mr. MURKOWSKI, proposes an amendment numbered 670 to amendment No. 669.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

In lieu of the language proposed to be inserted, insert the following: Provided further, That with $5,000,000 of the funds appropriated herein, the Secretary of the Army, acting through the Chief of Engineers, is directed to undertake emergency construction of aspects of the Bethel, Alaska Bank Stabilization Project as authorized by Public Law 99-662 including, but not limited to, toe protection at the petroleum dock and tank farm, steel whaler installation on pipe piles, toe protection from the West end of First Avenue to the city dock, and toe protection to Mission Road bulkhead and in other areas vulnerable to collapse: Provided further, That no fully allocated funding policy shall apply to construction of the Bethel, Alaska Bank Stabilization Project and to the greatest extent possible the work described herein should be compatible with the authorized project."

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask that my colleague, Senator MURKOWSKI, join as a cosponsor. I am sure he would agree with this compromise also.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that if there is any defect in this amendment as a substitute that it be considered as a substitute to completely strike the original Stevens amendment and put this language in lieu thereof.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I think this has been fully discussed. I therefore yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate?

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Louisiana and the Senator from Oregon for their courtesy. I am sure they understand the basic reason for my persistence. I am grateful to them for their accommodation on this issue.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment?

If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment (No. 670) of the Senator from Louisiana.

The amendment (No. 670) was agreed to.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HATFIELD. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ROBB). Is there additional debate? The question is on agreeing to amendment No. 669, as amended.

The amendment (No. 669), as amended, was agreed to.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. HATFIELD. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, there are two Dole amendments specified. I do not know whether he intends to put in two amendments. We have one worked out, and I wonder if we can find out from him if he has two amendments. The one that we are prepared to accept relates to Wilson Lake.

AMENDMENT NO. 671

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk on behalf of Mr. DOLE and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. JOHNSTON], for Mr. DOLE, proposes an amendment numbered 671.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 25, line 13, insert after the ":", "Provided further, That using $900,000 of the funds appropriated herein, the Secretary of the Army, acting through the Chief of Engineers, is directed to rehabilitate recreation facilities at Wilson Lake:".

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, this amendment provides for work on Wilson Lake from available funds. We have cleared the amendment.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, it is cleared on this side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Kansas.

The amendment (No. 671) was agreed to.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. HATFIELD. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, we are now ready to consider further amendments. I think that the Wallop amendment either on Shoshone or Buffalo Bill Dam would be next on the list.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, we have now worked out with Senators D'AMATO and MOYNIHAN the Onondaga Creek amendment which provides that the Secretary of the Army, acting through the Chief of Engineers, is directed to use $1 million appropriated herein to carry out the purposes of section 401 of Public Law 101-596.

AMENDMENT NO. 672

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. JOHNSTON], for Mr. D'AMATO (for himself and Mr. MOYNIHAN), proposes an amendment numbered 672.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 19 strike the proviso beginning on line 24 through line 3 on page 20.

On page 8, line 17, add the following before the period: "Provided further, That the Secretary of the Army, acting through the Chief of Engineers is directed to use $1,000,000 to carry out the purposes of section 401 of Public Law 101-596".

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, the amendment has been agreed to on both sides and has been explained.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate?

The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senators from New York.

The amendment (No. 672) was agreed to.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. HATFIELD. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I see Senator KASTEN on the floor. I wonder if he is ready with his amendment.

Mr. KASTEN. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, we are trying to work out some way that this amendment will be acceptable to the committee. Essentially, what happened here is that a project was started under one set of guidelines and rules. The local office of the Corps of Engineers in Minnesota was advising the city to do one thing; the Federal office was not aware of what the local office was doing. The city of LaCrosse proceeded under the local office's directions; halfway through, the rules changed, and we have what I think is an unique situation. I am not aware of it happening anywhere else in the country. But they ended up by exceeding the cap. Because the local office told the city they could appeal the cap, because it had started before the date change. We are trying to work out some kind of a way to help the city of LaCrosse on this particular project.

The amendment simply directs the corps to make this credit. I believe it is about $1.4 million.

I know your bill is tight, but my guess is that we can find that money, if we can find out a way to rationalize an amendment. If we are unable to accept the amendment, I am hoping we can work out some kind of a way to get the appeals process back underway, so that the corps will be directed to once more review the facts of this circumstance.

Unfortunately, the local office was not in touch with the office here in Washington. The city was getting one set of instructions, and they followed the instructions, thinking that the local office spoke with authority. Unfortunately, in this case, the local office could not speak for the national office, and the city got trapped.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I think that the Senator outlines a problem that clearly needs to be reviewed by the Corps of Engineers. I wonder if this colloquy that we are having, together with a letter which perhaps Senator HATFIELD and I could send to the Corps of Engineers urgently asking them to review this matter, would be suitable at this time for the Senator, and then based upon what we hear back from the corps, then further action as appropriate and warranted could be taken.

Mr. KASTEN. I would be happy to work with the Senator in this regard. I think that that would be an appropriate way to deal with this particular problem at this time. The unfortunate thing here is that the city found itself following the direction of one group of Government corps employees, thinking that they spoke for the system. And the city went ahead and accelerated the project based on one set of assumptions. After they had done the work, the local office went to the national office. The national office said: No, the local office should have told you to do this.

The result was, it seems to me, that the Government has a responsibility in this case. It is not the city that caused this problem, but the local office did not communicate adequately with the national office and the national office was not following the same rules as the local office.

It is our problem. It is not a huge problem for the Federal Government. It is a huge problem for this particular city. I am hopeful we can work with and deal with the problem.

I wish to do it, at the Senator's suggestion. The Senator and Senator HATFIELD, as ranking member of the committee, could work together with a request to the corps. And if the corps cannot work this out, we look toward the next appropriate legislative vehicle to try to, in fact, attach this amendment.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I am very grateful to the Senator from Wisconsin for going along with that suggestion, and we will work with him in sending that letter. And we will follow up on it later on.

So, at this point, if it is agreeable, I ask unanimous consent that, in view of our agreement, the Kasten amendment, made eligible under the unanimous consent request, be stricken from the request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I thank the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. KASTEN. I thank the chairman, and I thank the Republican Member.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. JOHNSTON. I yield.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I wish to note that we are approximately 1 hour from the time we last noted the clock, and in that period of time we have handled nine amendments, which I think is, with the cooperation of our colleagues, pretty fair speed.

I wish to see if my remaining amendments—could I have the chairman's attention a moment—that I have on my list are the same as my comanager's.

I have, beginning at this point, Mr. NICKLES, the Senator from Oklahoma, has an amendment relating to the Corps of Engineers fee increase; Mr. WALLOP has two amendments, the Shoshone and Buffalo Bill; and then Mr. BRADLEY has a second-degree amendment or a number of amendments; and Mr. DOLE, high-technology research; Mr. FOWLER, renewable energy, with two second-degree amendments by Mr. GARN; and Mr. BUMPERS has a super collider amendment, with Mr. GRAMM, a second-degree amendment; Mr. WIRTH, an enriched uranium amendment; and an unspecified amendment by the chairman. Is that the same list?

Mr. JOHNSTON. The Senator is correct. I understand that work is ongoing to work out the Wallop amendments.

Mr. HATFIELD. I believe that is true.

Mr. JOHNSTON. So I hope those will go away. The Nickles amendment I am not sure will be offered.

Mr. HATFIELD. I believe the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. NICKLES] is on his way to the floor at the moment, hopefully to dispose of that amendment one way or another.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I would think that really the amendments that ought to be considered at this time—and I would invite these Senators to come to the floor—are the Fowler amendment, if he intends to offer that; or the Bumpers amendment. These others, I hope that we will be able to work them out off stage. And so we are really ready to consider, I think, a Fowler or a Bumpers amendment, if they intend to offer those amendments.

Mr. HATFIELD. If the chairman will yield for a question, I agree that his analysis is correct according to my information, as well. Can we put a time factor as to how long we will be willing to entertain a Fowler amendment or a Bumpers amendment?

Mr. JOHNSTON. I understand with respect to the Bumpers amendment that the Senator from Texas [Mr. GRAMM] objects to a time limitation.

Mr. HATFIELD. He objects to a time limitation at this time, yes, because the Senator from Texas [Mr. GRAMM] is unacquainted with precisely the wording of the amendment that the Senator from Arkansas is expecting to offer.

Perhaps if the Senators who have the amendments were here on the floor quickly, we could dispose of those amendments faster than we might think.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I say to Senators that we may be down to really the Bumpers amendment. These others may not take the time, I am advised. They may be worked out. I will say the longer the clock ticks, the less we take seriously the intention of Senators to offer their amendments.

And I remind Senators that under the rules and under our repeated statements, and under this unanimous consent agreement, we are not required to hold this matter open for Senators who are not interested in offering their amendments.

We would like to have them considered at this point.

As a matter of fact, Mr. President, I see no reason why we could not finish this bill before the 2 o'clock cloture vote, if Senators will come over with their amendments and get them worked out.

So, Mr. President, once again I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, as all of us now know from our experience last night and, of course, this morning, with the urging of the chairman of this subcommittee, we are dealing with the appropriations bill for energy and water development. There are a variety of items in that bill. One that I discussed with the chairman and the ranking member last night, for the record, is the importance of language in this legislation that deals with the very important part of nuclear medicine and the capability of developing that for this country and for our citizens.

But let me also express my sincere thanks for the cooperation this committee has provided Idaho with some interests that are not necessarily unique to Idaho but some that are very important.

As many of us in the West know, the ability of the Bureau of Reclamation to conduct environmental compliance activities as it relates to allocating water resources for some of the native Americans has been a tough issue to handle out West over the last several years. Idaho has worked hard to accomplish that in a negotiated settlement way and, as a result, we have been able to do so.

The Fort Hall water settlement agreement, that I have to believe is precedent-setting in the fact that all parties were able to come together in a water-deficient, arid Western State and agree to the division of this resource and its proper utilization, was accomplished. And in accomplishing that, this legislation today includes $200,000 that is part of the implementation necessary that speaks to the environmental compliance necessary for this agreement to come about. And I am very, very appreciative that both of these Senators, my colleague from Oregon and my colleague from Louisiana, have worked to assure that this precedent-setting agreement go forward on schedule.

Another area that I have been very, very supportive of is language within this legislation and appropriation necessary to proceed with the new production reactor for producing tritium for our nuclear deterrent stockpile. Idaho and other national laboratories around the country will be the competitors for this most important part of our nuclear arsenal and the ability to produce tritium, and also an area I have strongly supported in the new technology developed, one that has not only defense capability but commercial application.

As we as a nation strive toward new technology that is safer and much more publicly acceptable in the area of nuclear energy, I think that we are headed in that direction now. Although we may be departing from the duality concept that drove this process over the last several years, I want to applaud the committee for recognizing the importance of this technology and moving in that direction.

There is another area that plagues us. It was discussed some last night. It will be discussed more today. And that, of course, is the question of how you handle nuclear waste. Clearly, I believe nuclear energy has a strong future in this country. Safe reactors, public acceptance of the handling of waste, knowing that it is being handled properly is critical to the future we speak of. Funding for the integral fast reactor, or Actinide Recycle Program, of $10 million that is in this appropriation is critical for that future. I believe we ought not create a time when we may be, in fact, providing a greater hazard by the stockpiling and the storage of waste. But we ought to move forward with the kind of technology of the type that I have just mentioned that, in fact, burns up, if you will, the bad waste, does not leave it around for the worry of future generations but takes care of it for all time. This type of research, of course, offers that type of opportunity.

Lastly, Mr. President, let me thank the chairman of the subcommittee and the ranking Republican member for inclusion of language that directs the Army Corps of Engineers to do the maintenance dredging to assure the operations of facilities along the Columbia-Snake River system. Many people who do not know my State of Idaho find it hard to believe that right in the middle of Idaho is a seaport community connected with the Columbia-Snake River water system that has major oceangoing barge traffic.

It is the constant work of maintaining the system of the Columbia and Snake Rivers that allow this kind of unique economic link with the Pacific rim and ocean to be viable in the State of Idaho. Language and the process of this legislation are key to assuring that the Pacific Northwest continues, to be the recipient of that very important economic link or maritime traffic. Those are issues that are embodied in the legislation.

I think it is important for the record that we discuss all of these in the positive, which they are meant to be. I certainly want to again express my thanks to the chairman, my colleague from Louisiana, and also the ranking member, my colleague from Oregon, for the fine work they have done in bringing this bill to the floor. I urge the Senate to operate with dispatch to move this toward final passage.

I yield back the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks recognition?

AMENDMENT NO. 673

(Purpose: To prohibit the implementation of increased dock construction and vegetation modification fees by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers)

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows: The Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. NICKLES] proposes an amendment numbered 673.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place in the bill, insert the following section:

SEC. . None of the funds in this Act shall be used to implement the final rule for the Army Corps of Engineers shoreline management regulation fee schedule which was published in the Federal Register, Vol. 56, No. 125, Friday, June 28, 1991.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, many of my colleagues are probably aware of the fact, if they have lakes that are managed by the Corps of Engineers, that the corps has been working on increasing fees for what they call vegetation modification. Vegetation modification is a synonym for cutting the grass. And they want to increase these fees rather dramatically.

Right now, if a person has a home on a lake that is managed by the Corps of Engineers, it costs them $30 to get a new permit for the privilege of cutting the grass and $10 a year. The Corps of Engineers now proposes to increase that to $200 for the one-time fee and $15 a year for the privilege of cutting this grass. Usually it is on the 200 feet between the home and the water's edge. So that is an increase from $30 to $275 on a 5-year basis.

The Corps of Engineers is also proposing increasing the fees for people who install docks on their land. Right now the fee—and this fee has been the same since 1976—if a person has a 5-year permit to construct a dock, it costs him $30. The corps in proposing increasing that to $400, a rather dramatic increase, 13 times as much as the current fee. They also plan on having a new periodic fee of $15 per year. So the 5-year cost under the current system for docks is $30 under the current system, and under the new fee schedule, it would be $475.

Mr. President, the net result of the Corps of Engineers's efforts would be to dramatically increase costs for anyone that happens to live around a corps lake for the privilege of cutting grass or the privilege of putting in a dock. They could be pricing many people out of the ability to even have a dock.

So they would greatly reduce recreation around the lakes. These fees for vegetation modification are ridiculous. Instead of looking at more ways just to increase money for assessing people for these permits, what the corps needs to do—and I want to thank the Senator from Louisiana because we have language in the bill that would allow this—would be to encourage lake management associations to come up with ways of monitoring both docks and the grass areas around the lakes. This makes a lot more sense without having Federal bureaucracy charging, for example, enormous fees and pricing a lot of people out of these docks.

Mr. President, the amendment that I have, would prohibit this fee increase schedule from going into effect. Again, I wish to thank my friend and colleague from Louisiana and also my friend and colleague, the Senator from Oregon [Mr. HATFIELD] for their cooperation on this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, the distinguished Senator from Oklahoma brought this matter up in committee. We are very sympathetic to it. We have not fully had a chance to analyze the budget impact, if any, of this amendment. It does not violate the budget agreement, but what effect it has on the ability of the corps to comply with this vegetation modification, that is, lawn mowing, we do not know yet, but we are willing to take this to conference and see if it will work. And if it will, we hope it will survive in conference.

So, Mr. President, for my side of the aisle, we are willing to accept this amendment.

Mr. NICKLES. If the Senator will yield, the fee increases are not a product of last year's budget agreement. They are nothing really but an effort by the Corps of Engineers to raise more money. We are going to encourage the corps through reorganization to cut back on the bureaucracy instead. I thank the Senator for his cooperation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further debate, the question is on agreeing to amendment No. 673.

The amendment (No. 673) was agreed to.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, we are now advised that the two Wallop amendments, as well as the Bradley unlimited second-degree amendments to the Wallop amendments, have now disappeared. They are going to be worked out. They have reached agreement. I do not know whether Senator DOLE is going to have an additional amendment or not. So we are now ripe for the Fowler amendment or the Bumpers amendment, if they intend to offer those, or a Wirth amendment, if he intends to offer that.

So, Mr. President, the clock continues to run. I wish those Senators would give us a further indication as to whether they intend to offer the amendments. We await their advice. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. PRESSLER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. PRESSLER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak as if in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, the Senator is recognized for up to 5 minutes as if in morning business.

Mr. PRESSLER. I thank the Chair. (The remarks of Mr. PRESSLER pertaining to the introduction of S. 1442 are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. (Mr. ROBB). The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, the distinguished chairman of the full committee, Senator BYRD, has brought a particular problem to our attention relating to Stonewall Jackson Lake in West Virginia regarding a recreational development there.

He proposes an amendment, and I could bring it up under my name here. It is agreeable on both sides of the aisle, because it does not involve the expenditure of any additional moneys. So I will ask unanimous consent, shortly, that it be in order to submit this amendment on behalf of Senator BYRD, which says in its entirety as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following: Provided further, That the April 1977 contract for recreational development at Stonewall Jackson Lake, West Virginia, is amended to include such element as proposed by the State on March 28, 1990, except the golf course.

All this does is expand, Mr. President, the authorized development at Stonewall Jackson Lake to include a recreational facility, which will be paid for in its entirety by the State of West Virginia, and the revenues, therefore, would be more than sufficient to pay off those bonds. That is all the amendment does; it has been cleared with Senator HATFIELD.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that it be in order to present this amendment on behalf of Senator BYRD at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. (Mr. GORE). Is there objection? Hearing none, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 676

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. JOHNSTON], for Mr. BYRD, proposes an amendment numbered 676.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 18 line 10, insert the following after "1991": "Provided further, That the April 1977 contract for Recreational Development at Stonewall Lake, West Virginia is amended to include such elements as proposed by the State on March 28, 1990, except a golf course".

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, my amendment would add no additional funding to this fiscal year 1992 energy and water development appropriation bill.

The purpose of this amendment is to permit the State to include a lodge and certain other facilities within the Federal-State cost-shared recreation development program for Stonewall Jackson Lake. The State of West Virginia would finance the cost of constructing the lodge but would receive cost-sharing credit for this construction project.

To date, the Corps of Engineers has spent approximately $30 million for recreation development which the State of West Virginia has agreed to cost share on a 50-50 basis at Stonewall Jackson. The corps has agreed to total cost-shared development amounting to $49.6 million at Stonewall Jackson Lake. The cost-sharing contribution would be approximately $25 million each from the State and Federal governments.

Unfortunately, the recreational elements of the existing plan are not expected to generate net revenues for the State. Furthermore, the State is not in a position to repay its debt on the prior development which the corps has financed.

The amendment would raise the Corps of Engineers' eventual contribution to $27.5 million for the total project while the State would contribute a total of $42 million. So, the State would cost-share 60 percent of the amended project plan, and the Corps of Engineers would provide only 40 percent of its cost. This is substantially greater than the 50-50 cost-sharing normally required from cooperating States.

The advantage of the lodge amendment is that it is expected to generate net income which the State will commit to repayment of its prior debt to the Corps of Engineers. I believe this is a beneficial resolution for both the American taxpayer and the people of West Virginia as it will allow the completion of the recreation plan and a realistic opportunity for the State to repay its obligations.

I urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 676) was agreed to.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote and move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 677

(Purpose: To provide funds for the rehabilitation and betterment of Shoshone Irrigation Project, Cody, WY)

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk on behalf of Senators WALLOP and SIMPSON relating to the Shoshone irrigation project and ask that it be immediately considered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. JOHNSTON], for Mr. WALLOP (for himself and Mr. SIMPSON), proposes an amendment numbered 677.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 37, line 22, insert the following: "Provided further, That within the funds appropriated under this head the Secretary is directed to make available $1,200,000 for the rehabilitation and betterment of the Shoshone Irrigation Project, Cody, Wyoming."

Mr. WALLOP. Mr. President, I want to bring to the Senate's attention the need to update and repair the Shoshone irrigation project in northwest Wyoming. This project embodies some of the West's finest qualities, both in terms of the hardy spirit that refused to bow to adversity in days gone by and the current ingenuity and tenacity that will ensure the West is a major provider of this Nation's future needs. It is very deserving of financial attention.

Since its inception during the early 1900's, Shoshone irrigation project has been a stabilizing force for a large part of Wyoming, particularly for the livestock industry in the Big Horn Basin. Though it now grows an abundance of feed crops, alfalfa, corn, oats, and pastureland—in addition to beans and sugar beets—the land was not always so richly productive. Prior to water delivery, those were very inhospitable sagebrush flats and if you could see the pictures of the land on which those early irrigators staked their existence,

Mr. Chairman, you would marvel at their incredible fortitude. And you would never want to reinstate the conditions that existed prior to irrigation.

It was Col. William F. "Buffalo Bill" Cody who first envisioned the possibilities in the area and it was his dream that the Bureau fulfilled by constructing Buffalo Bill Dam in a sheer walled canyon on the Shoshone River shortly after the turn of the century.

Today, irrigation water is delivered to 89,320 acres of land through a network of canals and laterals serving four irrigation districts—Deaver, Heart Mountain, Shoshone, and Willwood. Their facilities need to be updated since some of the structures, such as drops, head gates, and ditch linings, date back more than 80 years. Their worry, Mr. President, is that their project will fall down around their ears without planned attention, now.

As is typical of irrigators in the State of Wyoming, this project involves a very health share of the costs by the State and irrigators themselves. I strongly recommend that the Senate fund this very deserving project.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, this Shoshone amendment was an eligible amendment by Senator WALLOP and Senator SIMPSON. We worked out the problem between Senators WALLOP and Senator BRADLEY, who heads up the Water Subcommittee of the Energy and Natural Resources Committee, and this amendment reflects the fruits of that agreement.

What it does is provide that, within the funds appropriated, the Secretary is directed to make available $1.2 million for the rehabilitation and betterment of the Shoshone irrigation project.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 677) was agreed to.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote and to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I understand Senators FOWLER and GARN are attempting, offstage, to work out their amendment. So we wait Senator BUMPERS, if he still intends to offer his amendment.

I, again, extend the invitation to Senator BUMPERS to come to the floor, if that is his intention; otherwise, to signal the intention that he has thought better of an ill-conceived amendment. With that invitation, Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk (Kathleen G. Alvarez) proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ARIZONA CROSS DIVERSION CHANNEL

Mr. DECONCINI. Mr. President, I wonder if I may engage the distinguished chairman of the Energy and Water Appropriations Subcommittee in a colloquy concerning the Arizona Cross Diversion Channel [ACDC] flood control project in Arizona.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I would be happy to yield to the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. DECONCINI. Mr. President, as a result of the chairman's leadership, the committee bill includes $2 million to initiate the construction of covers for the ACDC in three areas. Two of the areas are in Phoenix, AZ. The first segment in Phoenix runs 1,760 feet west from 32d Street to the property line of the Arizona Biltmore. The second segment in Phoenix is part of the project in the vicinity of Central Avenue. The third area is the part of the ACDC in the town of Paradise Valley roughly 2,600 feet from 32d Street east to Cudia City Wash. As the distinguished chairman knows, the estimated cost of covering the ACDC in these three areas is $5.15 million. However, understanding the severe fiscal constraints the committee is operating under this year, I am grateful for the support that the chairman has given my request and his pledge to work with me next year to find the remaining amount needed to complete the covering of the ACDC in these two communities.

Mr. JOHNSTON. The Senator is to be commended for bringing this matter to our attention. However, we were at our 602(b) level and could not provide additional funds without impacting funding recommended for other activities.

Mr. DECONCINI. I understand and appreciate the difficult position the chairman is in. It is my understanding that with the funding included in the fiscal year 1992 bill, the corps and the local sponsor can proceed with preconstruction engineering and design work for the covers this fiscal year. In addition to this Senator, the chairman's efforts in this regard are certainly appreciated by many in Arizona whose lives are being affected by this flood control project.

MISSOURI RIVER LEVEE UNIT L-385

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I would like to speak briefly concerning an important water project. The project is known as Missouri River levee unit L-385 and is located in the Riverside-Quindaro Bend levee district near Kansas City, MO. The subcommittee provided $945,000 for preconstruction engineering and design for fiscal year 1992 and I thank them for doing so. As a followup to the subcommittee's action, I thought I would be useful to provide a brief background on the project.

Levee 385 is a flood control project authorized by Congress in 1944 for the Riverside-Quindaro Bend levee district, located north of Kansas City, MO. The total cost of the project is estimated to be $42,640,000, with a Federal share of $31,900,000 and a non-Federal share of $10,660,000.

This project is deserving of funding for several reasons. First, it is necessary to prevent continued flooding of a large area of land which is undergoing a great deal of development. Second, there is strong local support for the levee and the local sponsors are willing to provide their required share of the cost. Finally, the Corps of Engineers has already spent $2.5 million on preliminary planning and design of the project.

Levee 385 is important for my State and I thank the bill managers for giving me the opportunity to describe the background of the project.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I thank my colleague from Missouri and I will be pleased to include his statement as part of the record on H.R. 2427.

Mr. HATFIELD. I concur with the comments of the chairman and I assure the Senator that we will respond to his request.

RED RIVER CHLORIDE CONTROL PROJECT

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I would like to take this time to recognize the dedicated work of the Senator from Louisiana in preparing the Energy and Water Development appropriation bill. I express my thanks to Senator JOHNSTON and his subcommittee for their help on funding of the superconducting super collider, a very important project for my State and the country. Another project was in need of help as well, the Red River chloride control project. The project has already taken a cut from the needed amount this fiscal year to $3 billion in the House report.

This project is imperative in order to realize full utilization of surface water supplies in the States of Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, and Arkansas. Currently, more than 1,000 miles of streams in the river basin are severely contaminated by natural brines. Consequently, water in these streams is not suitable for municipal and most industrial and agricultural purposes.

Congress authorized construction of the entire Red River chloride project to control natural brine sources as a 100-percent Federal project in the 1960's. As part of this agreement, Texas and Oklahoma agreed to eliminate any manmade sources of salt pollution in the Red River Basin, and the Federal Government agreed to deal with naturally occurring pollution. The States have so far spent $92 million to reduce the amount of manmade salts. Federal expenditures remained at a level reached 5 years ago, until last year when $5 million was funded. I have worked tirelessly to keep this project a 100-percent federally funded project and it is essential that funding continues in order to meet the needs of this region.

The Red River is a natural resource that provides for a base of economic development and well-being for Texas as well as for the State of Louisiana. I believe an important part of keeping it a secure resource is to provide for the cleanup of the natural salt pollution.

I ask Senator JOHNSTON for his help in securing funding during conference committee for this very important project.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I commend the Senator for his interest in this project and he is correct that the Red River is an important natural resource for our region of the country. His efforts to provide usable water for economic development are important. We were faced with a difficult situation of balancing the water resource needs of the Nation in light of the severe budgetary limitations. However, I can assure the Senator that I will review this matter and see if funds can be found for this project in conference.

Mr. BENTSEN. I thank my distinguished colleague for his assurances to work in conference committee for the Red River chloride control project. His comments are very helpful and I appreciate his dedicated work.

GUADALUPE RIVER, CA

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I am pleased to note that the fiscal year 1992 Energy and Water Development appropriations bill as reported by the Senate Appropriations Committee includes $9,750,000 for the Corps of Engineers Guadalupe River project in California as requested by the President and approved by the House.

However, I am disappointed to note that the Senate committee has stricken language in the House passed bill directing the corps to proceed with construction of the Guadalupe River project in accordance with the general design memorandum of January 1991.

This project plan has been cleared by both the Sacramento district office and the South Pacific division office of the corps; it has the full support of the local community, the city of San Jose, and the Santa Clara Valley Water District; and it has received full approval by Federal environmental agencies.

It is my understanding that the corps headquarters agrees with the district and division that this GDM is a technically sound, well designed plan. But the corps headquarters is indicating that the corps does not intend to fulfill its full cost-sharing burden and instead intends to shift responsibility for environmental aspects of the project to the local community.

I believe that the Federal Government should share fully in the costs necessary to ensure that the Guadalupe River flood control project meets basic Federal environmental requirements, as the January 1991 GDM provides.

Further, I am concerned that the language in the Senate committee report on H.R. 2427 clouds the issue of whether the corps will proceed with construction of the Guadalupe River project as identified in the January 1991 GDM.

Again, this is the project that the local community supports, that has received full approval by Federal environmental agencies, and that meets all relevant criteria of the 1986 Water Resources Development Act, including cost sharing.

San Jose needs flood protection. We cannot afford a substantial delay which continues to leave 100 million dollars' worth of property at risk. It is critically important that the corps be able to proceed with construction of the Guadalupe River project with the funds provided in this bill.

Mr. President, I would like to ask the manager of the bill if he would review this situation and see if the committee could accept the House bill language in conference.

Mr. SEYMOUR. Mr. President, I also rise in support of the House language, stricken by the Senate Energy Committee, directing the Corps of Engineers to proceed with construction of the Guadalupe River project in accordance with the general design memorandum of January 1991.

It is my understanding that the project plan has the strong support of the city of San Jose, CA, the Santa Clara Valley Water District, and local and national environmental organizations. Further, as stated by California's senior Senator, Senator CRANSTON, this plan has been cleared by both the Army Corps of Engineers, Sacramento district office, as well as the South Pacific division office.

Mr. President, I respectfully request that the managers of this bill review this situation and see if the committee could accept the House bill language during conference.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I appreciate knowing of the interest of both California Senators in the Guadalupe River project. I would like to assure the Senators that I will revisit the issue when we go to conference with the House.

Mr. CRANSTON. I thank the manager of the bill for that assurance.

MNI WICONI PIPELINE

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I would like to enter into a colloquy with the distinguished chairman of the Energy and Water Appropriations Subcommittee for purposes of clarification.

Once again the subcommittee recognized the importance of funding the Mni Wiconi drinking water pipeline in western South Dakota, allocating $2.45 million for the project. This is $300,000 more than was appropriated by the House. It is my understanding that this additional $300,000 is for the Bureau of Reclamation to perform a needs assessment of the Rosebud Indian Reservation. Rosebud has severe water quality problems, and has officially requested to become a part of the Mni Wiconi project, which is designed to bring drinking water to the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation and other designated areas. While adding the construction of a spur pipeline to Rosebud to the project would require an amendment to the authorizing legislation, it is important that the Bureau first make a preliminary assessment to determine whether such an amendment is warranted.

Is my understanding correct that under the Senate bill, the Bureau of Reclamation is permitted to use up to $300,000 of its fiscal year 1992 appropriation for the Mni Wiconi pipeline to perform an assessment of water conditions on the Rosebud Indian Reservation to better determine the advisability of adding the reservation to the project?

Mr. JOHNSTON. The Senator from South Dakota is correct. There appears to be a need on the reservation for clean drinking water, and the Mni Wiconi pipeline may be a cost-effective means of addressing this need. The Bureau of Reclamation should use up to $300,000 of its fiscal year 1992 funds for Mni Wiconi to look into the Rosebud situation.

Mr. DASCHLE. I thank the chairman. There is a second issue that I feel also needs clarification. As the subcommittee is aware, there are many people in South Dakota who are concerned about the flooding situation in and around Watertown, SD. The Corps of Engineers is in the midst of performing a feasibility study of flood control options in the area. While the spring flooding again points out the fact that something needs to be done, many people are concerned about possible negative impacts of the proposed Mahoney Dam project.

These people are concerned that there will not be a chance to comment on the feasibility study, and that their concerns will not be heard by the corps. I appreciate the chairman's recognition of the importance of corps submissions of the feasibility study to full public scrutiny before any preconstruction or construction work can begin. I have learned that the feasibility study should be released for public review this summer.

It is my understanding that it is the intent of the chairman and the subcommittee that there should be complete and thorough public comment into the project before any funds are expended for preconstruction and construction activities. However, if, after the public comment period, it is determined that a given alternative is justified, then fiscal year 1992 funds can be used for preconstruction activities. Is this correct?

Mr. JOHNSTON. The Senator is again correct. Like all projects of this nature, public comment is essential.

Before the corps uses its appropriated funds for fiscal year 1992 for preconstruction activities, there must be an opportunity for extensive public comment on the proposal, including at least one public hearing, to make sure that the project is in the public interest. Once this requirement is met, the corps may proceed with preconstruction activities with its fiscal year 1992 appropriation, and nothing in the committee report is intended to imply otherwise.

Mr. DASCHLE. I thank the distinguished chairman for this clarification.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I wonder if we could discuss a few items that are related to the bill and are of interest to me and to the State of Washington?

Mr. JOHNSTON. I yield to the Senator.

WYNOOCHEE PROJECT

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I hope the Senator will accept my most sincere thanks for his assistance on the Wynoochee title transfer provisions included in this bill. Title transfer will provide important benefits to both the Federal Government and the cities of Aberdeen and Tacoma. I would also like to confirm with the Senator that the committee is in complete agreement with the House Energy and Water Subcommittee's Wynoochee bill and report language.

Mr. JOHNSTON. The committee is in complete agreement with the House on the Wynoochee bill and report language.

ABERDEEN SOUTHSIDE DIKE PROJECT

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, the residents of the city of Aberdeen in my home State have recently been suffering through some of the worst flooding Washington has ever seen. In an area already distressed economically because of the downturns in the fishing and timber industries, we have a serious public safety problem stemming from potential high-velocity flooding. The problem has been recognized since the 1940's and the Corps of Engineers has been working on a flood control levee system for Aberdeen. Unfortunately, money is scarce in Aberdeen, and a referendum to approve the local contribution failed to receive the super-majority required by law, so the corps stopped work on the project. The local government has now revised the referendum and is optimistic that it will receive the required vote this coming November. I worry, though, that there is no money in the corps' fiscal year 1992 budget for starting work up again, and I am very concerned about the impact of budgetary delays on the safety of my constituents.

Mr. President, I would like to thank the chairman for hearing me out on this problem, and I would like to ask him a question. If the city's financial share of the project is approved in the November referendum, would the Senator support the corps' reinstating work on the project using the funds which were programmed away from the project after the referendum?

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, the committee recognizes the need for flood control in the Senator's area, and I agree that the project should proceed when the local share is approved. I appreciate his concerns about the delays on the project and I expect that the corps will move expeditiously to renew work once the referendum is approved.

COLUMBIA RIVER STATE PARK

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, the Port of Camas-Washougal in my State seeks to purchase from the Corps of Engineers for recreational development, including development of a State park, approximately 45 acres of an 82-acre parcel of corps land adjacent to the port's industrial park and the Steigerwald National Wildlife Refuge. However, there has been some question about the corps' authority to convey the property for such purposes. The House of Representatives therefore included language in the House bill to clarify the corps' authority to make this conveyance.

Mr. President, is it the committee's intent that we will review this proposed language in conference to ensure that the conveyance can proceed?

Mr. JOHNSTON. I know of the Senator's interest in this matter and I can assure him that we will review this item and give it every consideration in conference.

NEW PRODUCTION REACTOR

Mr. GORTON. I rise to engage the Senator from Louisiana in a colloquy concerning the new production reactor funding in the Energy and Water Development appropriation bill. Several constituents have expressed to me the concern that the funding cut in the light water reactor tritium target program could compromise the NEPA process for selecting the best sites and technology for new production reactor capacity. Without restoration of this funding, DOE may lack sufficient authority to fund the critical technology for the light water option even if the record-of-decision chooses the light water technology or it is carried as a contingency. Given these potential concerns, can I have the chairman's assurance that he will review this issue during the conference with the House?

Mr. JOHNSTON. Yes, I can assure the Senator from Washington that the light water reactor tritium target issue will be carefully reviewed during conference. It was never the intent of the committee to compromise the integrity of the NEPA process. In fact, the committee recommendation was developed to ensure that adequate funds will be provided to complete the environmental impact statement and record of decision process. I assure the Senator that every effort will be taken in conference to avoid prejudicing the NEPA process.

THE DEEPENING OF THE ENTRANCE CHANNEL TO WILMINGTON HARBOR AND FOR A STUDY RELATING TO OREGON INLET

Mr. SANFORD. Mr. President, I would like to engage the distinguished manager of the bill, Senator JOHNSTON, in a discussion of two critical matters affecting the citizens and economy of my State.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I would be happy to discuss these matters with the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. SANFORD. I would like to mention the need to deepen the entrance channel to the Wilmington Harbor in southeastern North Carolina. This project was authorized and begun by the Federal Government in the 1960's but never completed to design depth. Some of today's larger vessels are unable to pass through the shallow channel safely, so Wilmington Harbor now finds itself at an extreme disadvantage as it competes with other ports along the Atlantic coast.

We in North Carolina are very proud of the recent completion of U.S. Interstate 40 to the city of Wilmington. This event has given the city, and our State's largest port, great hope for a bright economic future. However, in my discussion with North Carolina State Port Authority officials, the port at Wilmington stands to lose millions of dollars in business if the channel to Wilmington Harbor at the entrance to the Cape Fear River is not deepened. I have also received scores of letters and calls assuring me of the real threat that exists of this port losing a substantial amount of its international steamship service. Many North Carolina industries such as lumber, tobacco, furniture, and others depend upon this port for international shipping; of course, we hope to attract new clients as well.

Because port access is critical to many industries in the region, this is a very time sensitive project. Since the Federal Government has previously approved and worked on this project, I previously requested funding for the completion of this project, or for the rewarding of a contract by the Corps of Engineers. I do, however, realize the tough choices made by the subcommittee this year, and wish only to achieve the modest funding level of $1 million for project planning only, rather than the $400,000 that the subcommittee has recommended. This $1 million figure was agreed to by the relevant House appropriators.

This project represents a promise by the Government to the people of North Carolina that was never kept. I am hopeful that the conferees will give favorable consideration to my request.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I thank the Senator from North Carolina for his remarks and assure him that his request will receive full attention from the conferees. Does the distinguished Senator from North Carolina wish to discuss another matter?

Mr. SANFORD. I also wish to bring to your attention the need for an appropriation to complete the engineering design of a construction project for Manteo-Shallowbag Bay—also known as Oregon Inlet—that would keep this inlet open for the safe travel of commercial, recreational, and rescue vessels. $500,000 is needed to complete this critical study. The House has included the $500,000 in its energy and water appropriations bill, but the Senate has not. It is my hope that the Senate will agree to the House amount during conference committee discussions.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Would the Senator from North Carolina please explain the nature and purpose of this appropriations request?

Mr. SANFORD. This project was first authorized by Congress in 1970. Since that year, in excess of $7 million of the taxpayers' money has been spent in the successful completion of a model study by the Corps of Engineers, Vicksburg, MS Model Study Center, and it has been updated on a periodic basis. The engineering design is near completion. Numerous cost-benefit studies have been made—all of which are favorable. The environmental impact studies have been completed, updated, and amended.

One year ago, it was determined that the project should be subject to a joint review by the Department of the Interior and the Department of the Army. During this interim period, regular work sessions have been held between these two Departments, their subordinate agencies, the State of North Carolina, personnel representing the governor of North Carolina, and Dare County officials.

The normal procedure at this time will continue to involve the Department of the Interior and the Army Corps of Engineers and their subordinate agencies meeting regularly. With this participation, all requirements will be satisfied and the necessary permits will be issued on or before the end of 1991.

The funds requested will be sufficient to complete the engineering design of this project and move it forward to the construction phase.

We have tried for a number of years to maintain the Oregon Inlet channel by dredging. However, the current dredging effort is simply not working. Since 1960, the channel has been maintained at its recommended depth less than 25 percent of the time, and the recommended width of 400 feet has never even been approached. The inlet has been frequently closed in recent years, and it presents a serious safety hazard when open. Dozens of strandings have occurred, with several incidents resulting in the loss of vessels and the loss of lives.

The latest life-threatening situations in this inlet occurred in October of last year when a dredge brought down a significant portion of the Bonner Bridge during a period of high winds.

Also, severe erosion on the south side of Oregon Inlet is threatening both the Pea Island National Wildlife Refuge and the nearby Coast Guard station. The jetty project, with its state-of-the-art sand-bypass system, should greatly reduce this erosion.

The livelihoods of many fishermen in northeastern North Carolina depend upon their being able to safely reach our rich coastal fishing waters through this pass. Some of the world's most productive fishing grounds lie offshore from our outer banks, but these waters cannot presently be efficiently utilized. Fishermen operating offshore must frequently go far out of their way to Norfolk in order to process their catch. This situation adds greatly to our fishermen's costs, decreases the quality of their catch, and prevents the usage of North Carolina's own efficient processing facilities at Wanchese.

Unless these funds are made available for fiscal year 1992, this entire project will, of course, lie dormant for 1 year. Funding the completion of the study will represent a step forward in the effort to end the needless loss of life and vessels that has occurred in this inlet over the years. Additionally, without the funds, the loss of seafood landings—in the millions of dollars annually—will continue to adversely affect Dare County and the economy of northeastern North Carolina.

You can be certain that I do not intend to support a project that would be wasteful or that would cause severe environmental damage to our coastline. I would appreciate Senator JOHNSTON's careful attention to this matter when the House and Senate conferees meet to discuss this bill.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I realize that this is an important project for northeastern North Carolina and I will certainly give the Senator's request close review in conference deliberations.

Mr. SANFORD. I thank the distinguished Senator from Louisiana for his indulgence in these matters, and I believe that my colleague, the senior Senator from North Carolina, wishes to be recognized for additional remarks on the Oregon Inlet funding.

MANTEO-SHALLOWBAG BAY

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I thank my friend from Louisiana for his efforts to protect the Manteo-Shallowbag Bay project.

Senator SANFORD and I have been deeply concerned about the future of Oregon Inlet as a safe navigable channel for commercial and recreational boating as well as for law enforcement and search and rescue operations of the U.S. Coast Guard. Equally as important is the future of the people who live in and around Dare County, NC, and who depend on the local fishing industry for their livelihoods.

Mr. President, Oregon Inlet is located along the outer banks of North Carolina. It is the only navigable inlet between Cape Henry, VA, and Ocracoke Inlet, NC—a distance of more than 150 miles. This makes Oregon Inlet a potential haven for all kinds of ocean-going vessels in bad weather. In addition, this area contains the most important warm and cold water fishery on the east coast.

The problem arises because the inlet is exposed to the most severe wave climate along the U.S. Atlantic and gulf coasts. This intense wave action results in the development of massive shoals and severe land erosion along the adjacent barrier islands. Consequently, passage through Oregon Inlet can be extremely hazardous for commercial and sports fishing craft.

When the Inlet is unnavigable, captains must take their boats to other ports—many miles away. This costs them dearly in time and money, sometimes making their catch unprofitable. Often captains take great risks in attempting to navigate the inlet. Sometimes they make it—sometimes they do not. Ten people have died in Oregon Inlet since 1969. People attempting to navigate Oregon Inlet today are reminded of the tragic losses by the remains of the Lois Joyce, a trawler that went down in 1982.

Mr. President, some who are opposed to this project argue that they do not want to give up any of their valuable Federal lands for the project. Yet since 1974, without any stabilization project, we have lost more than 150 acres on the northern tip of Pea Island. In addition, we have lost approximately 120 acres along the shoreline south of the inlet.

Oregon Inlet claimed its most recent victim in April 1988, when a French national attempted to sail his 50-foot sailboat through the inlet to escape heavy seas. The Coast Guard had received an earlier indication that the vessel could be in trouble as it sailed south along Nags Head. From their observation tower at Oregon Inlet, Coast Guard personnel saw the boat start to enter the inlet. They immediately launched their 44-foot rescue vessel, even before the ship capsized.

Unfortunately because of the accelerated erosion that has occurred at the Coast Guard station at the inlet, they no longer keep their rescue vessels there. They have moved them to the Oregon Inlet fishing center. Consequently, the crew had to drive 10 to 15 minutes to the fishing center, then take another 45 minutes to steam back to the inlet. By that time, it was too late to save the Frenchman's life.

The accelerated rate of erosion to Pea Island has also created a severe threat to the stability of the Herbert C. Bonner Bridge. As Senator SANFORD stated, the Bonner Bridge collapsed last year. Although quickly repaired it is still in danger.

According to the North Carolina Department of Transportation, approximately 1.5 million cars crossed the Bonner Bridge in 1989. It is a vital link to Hatteras Island. How many more lives will have to be lost—how much more land will have to be lost—how much devastation will have to occur before Congress wakes up and carries through with the project authorized many years ago?

Mr. President, this situation should have been corrected long ago. On December 31, 1970, with the passage of the Rivers and Harbors Act, Congress authorized the stabilization of Oregon Inlet via a dual jetty system and also authorized the ocean bar channel to be deepened to 20 feet by 400 feet. During the 1970's, the Army Corps of Engineers undertook the necessary engineering, environmental and economic studies of the project. Also during this time, the State of North Carolina and Dare County fulfilled their part of the project as required by Congress. They expanded the harbor at Wanchese and provided an infrastructure for a seafood industrial park there. Approximately $10 million has been invested in the park from a combination of Federal, State, and private sources.

Despite congressional authorization and the efforts on the part of North Carolina State and local governments, the refusal of the Department of Interior to grant the necessary permits has stifled further progress on this project. Unfortunately, jetties have never been built, the inlet remains unstabilized, and the hard-working fishermen of Dare County continue to risk their lives in pursuit of an honest living. As I mentioned before, 10 people have died since 1969 due to what has been one of the most ridiculous and time-consuming hassles I have ever witnessed.

During this time, the corps has attempted to maintain the inlet through intensive dredging. However, dredging has been able to keep the inlet at a depth of 14 feet less than 25 percent of the time. The corps has never been able to maintain the authorized width of 400 feet or the authorized depth of 20 feet.

Mr. President, the study which Senator SANFORD mentioned earlier is a vital part of our effort to stabilize Oregon Inlet, without it the use of a significant portion of North Carolina's coastal waters will be lost.

I thank the distinguished Senator from Louisiana for his help in ensuring that this vital commercial and recreational resource is preserved for future generations.

LEWIS CREEK CHANNEL, VA

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I rise to request that, as the Senate considers the fiscal year 1992 energy and water development appropriations bill, to include either here on the Senate floor or in conference, a provision of the House energy and water development appropriations bill which would provide $550,000 for the Lewis Creek Channel, VA, dredging project.

The Lewis Creek Channel project is a very important project to not only the economic prosperity of the historic town of Chincoteague, VA, but also to the safety of its residents. I visited this lovely community last August and I was totally convinced of the necessity to dredge this channel as well as the adjacent Chincoteague Inlet Inner Channel.

Only recently did the Corps of Engineers obtain all of the necessary permits for the Lewis Creek Channel dredging project and, therefore, the corps is now requesting funding for the project. If funding is appropriated for fiscal year 1992, construction can begin in October 1992.

The Chincoteague Inlet Inner Channel provides a navigable waterway for the commercial fishing vessels which operate from the town of Chincoteague, VA, and also serves the U.S. Coast Guard Station at Chincoteague, VA. The Lewis Creek Channel segment of the waterway on the coast of Virginia provides access to the Chincoteague Bay for commercial fishing vessels.

Both the Chincoteague Inlet Inner Channel and the Lewis Creek Channel have severe shoaling and need maintenance dredging. The condition of the Chincoteague Inlet Inner Channel has resulted in frequent groundings and delays for the commercial fishing vessels and has caused the Coast Guard to relocate temporarily the 85-foot patrol vessel normally based at Chincoteague.

Access to Chincoteague Bay via the Lewis Creek Channel is limited to the smallest fishing vessels and even those are limited to transit at high water, thus inhibiting commercial fishing and crabbing.

The projects have not been maintained due to the lack of a suitable placement area for the dredged material. In 1991, a plan for the one-time use of an overboard placement site in Chincoteague Bay was developed and was successfully coordinated with the Virginia Marine Resources Commission in May. Because of the approval of overboard placement by the VMRC it became possible to schedule the maintenance dredging of these projects.

The construction phase of the dredging project can move forward beginning in October 1992 if Congress provides the appropriate funding.

I strongly urge my colleagues to allocate $550,000 for the Lewis Creek dredging project.

FREEPORT FLOOD PROJECT STUDY

Mr. DIXON. Mr. President, Mr. SIMON and I today state our support of the Freeport flood project study in Freeport, IL.

The Freeport project was authorized in the 1936 Flood Control Act, deauthorized in the 1986 Water Resources Development Act, and reauthorized in the 1990 Water Resources Development Act.

The studies that have been taken in the past are outdated and another study is needed before an actual flood control program can commence. The Freeport flood project study is important to this northwestern Illinois community. Recent flooding along the Pecatonica River and Yellow Creek has made this study even more imperative to reduce flood damage in this area of our State.

The local Corps of Engineers, the Rock Island District, has indicated this as a priority and has an approved study capability for fiscal year 1992 for $350,000 to initiate a general reevaluation report.

This program is well supported by the local officials in Freeport, as the flooding causes problems not only for homeowners but for the economic well-being of the community.

Our concern, Mr. President, is to provide adequate flood protection and prevention to the constituents in our State. Therefore, we ask our friend and colleague from Louisiana for his full consideration of this important program in directing the Corps of Engineers to provide within available funds for the Freeport flood project study.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I recognize the concerns of my Illinois friends and agree that the Freeport flood project study is important to an effective flood control plan in this Illinois community. I do, indeed, recommend that the Corps of Engineers provide, within available funds, for the project.

Mr. SIMON. Senator DIXON and I thank our friend from Louisiana for his recognition of this important program. As my Illinois colleague mentioned, this project, which would allow the Army Corps of Engineers to begin work on a flood control program in Freeport, IL, is vital to the economic health of the community.

Again, Mr. President, we appreciate the Senate's support.

BIOFUELS ENERGY SYSTEMS

Mr. SEYMOUR. Mr. President, I wonder if the distinguished floor manager of the bill would yield for a few questions?

Mr. JOHNSTON. I would be happy to yield to my colleague from California.

Mr. SEYMOUR. I thank the Senator. I have some questions about the Biofuels energy systems provisions detailed on pages 76 and 91 of the committee's report. I note that the committee recommends $36,800,000 for biofuels, which is the same level as the President's budget request, but $2,500,000 less than the House allowance.

Mr. JOHNSTON. The Senator's information is correct. Our committee's recommendation is the same as the budget request, but $3,673,000 above the level included for biofuels in the 1991 bill.

Mr. SEYMOUR. If the Senator would yield further, I see that the committee recommendation includes $6 million for the Short Rotation Woody Crops Program, which is $4 million more than the request; $4,500,000 for the Regional Biofuels Program, or $2,500,000 more than the request; and $1 million for the Hawaii Biofuels Program, whereas the request included no funds for this work. Is my understanding correct?

Mr. JOHNSTON. Yes; the Senator from California has correctly characterized our actions.

Mr. SEYMOUR. My final question, Mr. President, has to do with how the committee's actions will affect the Department of Energy's ability to fund promising new research and development that was neither contemplated in the President's request or mentioned in the House or Senate committee reports.

Specifically, I wonder what the effects will be on the proposal to scale-up the California biofuels process developed jointly by the University of California's Forest Products Laboratory and a private California-based company?

Mr. JOHNSTON. I would say to the Senator that the committee is very much aware of the progress which has been made to move the California system—which uses a weak nitric acid hydrolysis process—into the commercial marketplace.

We are also aware that the Department's Biofuels Program managers have tentatively concluded that the California process may dovetail very well with the enzyme process now in the early stages of development at the Solar Energy Research Institute.

I understand, further, that the proposed Federal share of the scaleup work alluded to by the Senator is estimated to cost approximately $700,000 in fiscal year 1992 and $1,500,000 in fiscal year 1993. With respect to the 1992 funding situation, I believe there should be sufficient funds available for DOE to start the scaleup work if they so desire.

The Biofuels Program has received substantial funding increases in the last 2 fiscal years, and the level contemplated in this bill should give the Energy Department a lot of latitude to fund promising new research and development needs.

Mr. SEYMOUR. I thank the distinguished floor manager for his assurances. The California biomass-to-ethanol conversion process is at an important juncture. Federal support for the scaleup work would accelerate its commercial deployment. That, in turn, will help lessen America's air pollution and solid waste disposal problems.

Mr. President, I thank the Senator for yielding.

ELECTROMAGNETIC FIELDS

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I would like to ask the manager of the bill, the chairman of the subcommittee, Senator JOHNSTON, if he would clarify a provision of the bill concerning electric and magnetic fields research, or EMF.

I understand there are funds in the bill now before us to continue research on the potential health effects of EMF. Some concerns have been brought to my attention regarding how this research will be carried out. The primary issue I have heard is that this federally funded research should draw not only on existing knowledge but should also identify new areas of sophisticated research opportunities that produce credible, reliable, and original data and results.

Scientific research surrounding electric and magnetic fields is an evolving and challenging responsibility for the scientific community and will have important environmental and economic implications over the next decade.

It is the chairman's intent that the EMF research funded in this bill be performed by credible, independent agencies—both public and private—and that it be coordinated with ongoing federally and privately funded EMF research?

Mr. JOHNSTON. The Senator is correct. It is the committee's intent that the Department of Energy will coordinate ongoing and future Federal and private programs to ensure that the maximum benefits are derived from all research efforts where duplication is minimized. Further, to ensure that any electric and magnetic field research is both reliable and credible, DOE is to seek out and support financially independent research institutions with proven records for conducting high quality research on health-related issues.

Mr. COCHRAN. I thank the Senator for that clarification.

ARTIFICIALLY IRRIGATED WETLANDS

Mr. WALLOP. I would like to ask my friend from Rhode Island a question about an issue which has great impact on western water as it deals with artificially irrigated wetlands under section 404 of the Clean Water Act.

In spite of agency rules which clarify that the term "water of the United States" does not include "artificially irrigated areas which would revert to upland if the irrigation ceased," there seems to be some questions on this when it comes to enforcement in the field.

I would like to ask the Senator, first of all, if it is his understanding that artificially irrigated wetlands which would revert to upland if the irrigation ceased are not jurisdictional wetlands. And that this is so even if the irrigation does not, in fact, cease.

Mr. CHAFFEE. Yes; my understanding of the regulation is that the artificially irrigated areas described by the Senator from Wyoming are generally not considered jurisdictional wetlands.

Mr. WALLOP. It was my original intention to offer an amendment to this bill, but if the Senator will assure me that he will work on this when the Committee on Environment and Public Works considers the Clean Water Act, then I will wait to work with him at that time.

Mr. CHAFEE. I can assure the Senator from Wyoming that we will work on this issue when we consider the Clean Water Act.

NEW PRODUCTION REACTOR PROGRAM

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I rise today to bring to the Senate's attention a provision in this energy and water appropriations bill that is of critical importance to national security. I am referring to the cut proposed in the Department of Energy's New Production Reactor Program.

In this bill, H.R. 2427, the Senate Appropriations Committee not only dropped the $36 million addition placed in this program by the House of Representatives but also cut the Bush administration's request by another $17 million. The Bush budget called for $500 million for the NPR Program in 1992. Because the House of Representatives saw a need to accelerate the procurement schedule for the NPR, they increased this budget to a level of $536 million. The Senate Appropriations Committee has only provided $483 million.

The committee's level of funding will not only abandon the urgent schedule of funding for NPR but also cuts the research work for light water reactor tritium production.

These are disturbing cuts. Of all the programs and projects that we are paying for in this bill, the most important ones are the ones related to maintaining our national security and our nuclear deterrent. I would urge the members of the Senate Appropriations Committee to carefully consider the impact on our nuclear deterrent by reducing the funding for this program as this bill is considered in the conference committee.

For example, we have already invested over $80 million in light water reactor research and now is not the time to abandon this program. Congress imposed the LWR research on DOE as a contingency to the modular high-temperature gas-cooled reactor and the heavy water reactor options. In response the Pacific Northwest Laboratory and the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory are working together on this research. The goal of this research program is simply to find out if light water reactors can be modified for the production of tritium and plutonium for nuclear weapons. If they can be, the technology will be put on the shelf and would only be used in the most dire national emergency.

Because these cuts only affect a contingency program and the schedule for deployment of whichever reactor is selected, the NPR Program is by no means killed by H.R. 2427. Yet, I would urge my colleagues appointed to the conference committee on this bill to recognize the importance of this program.

It also is apparent that a much higher dollar amount will be authorized in the Department of Defense bill to be considered by the Senate later this month. This tells me that there ought to be room to negotiate on the appropriations bill. I would much prefer a final bill that is much closer to the House of Representatives or administration level of funding.

I thank the managers of the bill for consideration of my views on this matter, and I want to join my colleague from Idaho, Senator CRAIG, in praising the managers for the cooperation they have shown us on this bill. The ongoing activities of the Federal agencies funded in this bill are very important to Idaho and other Pacific Northwest States.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, we understand Senator BUMPERS is on the way. So all interested in the superconducting super collider should report to the floor without further delay.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 686

(Purpose: To prohibit the use of funds for the superconducting super collider)

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BUMPERS] proposes an amendment numbered 686.

On page 49, strike line 6 and insert "$998,789,000, except that none of the funds appropriated in this Act may be used for the superconducting super collider."

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, normally when I offer an amendment, I try to offer an amendment that I have very strong feelings about from an emotional standpoint, or something that I think is great public policy or bad public policy.

My presentation on this is going to be purely clinical. I am not a scientist, and I am certainly not a physicist. So I cannot make all those arguments that the scientific community could make, but very few Senators would understand anyway.

It is with considerable reluctance that I even offer this amendment, because I know so many Senators, and especially my very good and dear friends who are seated on the floor right now, Senator JOHNSTON from Louisiana and Senator BENTSEN from Texas, whose States stand to benefit very handsomely from the superconducting super collider.

I would be less than candid if I did not say if they were building this in my State of Arkansas, I would be seated where they are seated and making precisely the same argument they will make in opposition to my amendment to kill the superconducting super collider.

There are 1,200 people involved in this project already in the State of Texas, and I am not sure what Louisiana's interest is; as I understand it, the magnets are going to be made there, but I know it is a big deal for Louisiana, too.

Having said that, Mr. President, I might also point out for those who want to look at this as a parochial matter, that there are three States: Illinois, New York, and California, two of which will almost certainly lose their accelerator laboratories because we cannot finance the superconducting super collider and still finance the Fermi Lab in Illinois, the Brookhaven National Laboratory in New York, and the Stanford linear accelerator in California.

We are prepared to have a $270 billion deficit this year, and the money involved in my amendment is peanuts compared to the magnitude of the deficit. But at the same time, not only are those States going to lose their laboratories because the superconducting super collider is going to slurp up at least 76 percent of all the particle accelerator research in this country, but there are going to be an awful lot of scientists in what we call small science that are simply not going to be funded.

And as a total aside, the National Institutes of Health is one of the things that I watch very carefully. I sit as ranking member on the Appropriations subcommittee that funds NIH, and every year the National Institutes of Health comes in and tell us that they can only fund 25 to 27 percent of all the good applications for medical research that they receive. It has been less than 20 years since NIH funded 60 percent of all the good applications for grants for medical research that they received.

I might just start off by saying that 30 percent of all the scientists in this country are involved in defense-making weapons. In Japan, the figure is 2 percent. In Germany, the figure is 3 percent. When it comes to the cost of the superconducting super collider, what you are going to get out of it for the money is one argument; what you are going to lose in the way of small science projects is probably as compelling an argument as any. There just simply is going to be a very short supply of money to fund small science if we go forward with this superconducting super collider.

The distinguished floor manager of this bill is the chairman of the Energy Committee, and I sit at his right hand as the ranking member on that committee. And I have sat with him through hearings on this since 1988. The first time I ever heard of it was in 1988, and it was President Reagan who wanted this project funded.

For the laymen in this audience who have never paid very much attention to this matter, the superconducting super collider is being designed in a 55-mile oval underground track, so to speak. And presumably, atomic particles will be fired around that track and smashed somehow or other. After we spend whatever it is going to take—Lord only knows—we possibly will discover the origin of matter, a highly desirable scientific fact that scientists have always been curious about.

I am not curious about it because I am a lawyer, a politician. And I want to make this point crystal clear. It would be nice to know the origin of matter. It would also be nice to have a balanced budget. It would be nice to know what is on Mars. It would be nice to be able to put the space station in space. All of these things would be nice. And this would be nice to know.

There is a laboratory being built in Switzerland right now that is only about 30 kilometers long, but that obviously is not long enough for our scientific community. We want ours to be, I forget how many kilometers, but it is 55 miles. It is only fitting that it go to Texas since it is going to be so much bigger than the one in Switzerland, and I do not mean that to castigate the great State of Texas.

But as I mentioned a moment ago, Mr. President, when this first came to my attention in the Energy Committee, in 1988, we were told categorically that the cost of this project would be $4 billion. Now, I had serious reservations about it when it was $4 billion. It could have been up to $5 billion, but it was somewhere between $4 and $5 billion. And now 3 short years later, even the Department of Energy says the cost will be $8.2 billion, about a 100-percent increase in 3 years. And even an internal group of auditors in the Department of Energy say that the total project cost in today's dollars is probably going to be between $11 billion and $12 billion. So what you have is almost a 300-percent increase in the cost in 3 years. I leave it to your imagination as to what the ultimate cost will be if it is, in fact, completed in the year 1999 as presently scheduled.

Now, what we have here in the making is the B-2 bomber for the scientific community.

Mr. President, we are told that we must honor our commitment, that foreigners are going to invest in this. It is now said that we are trying to entice the Soviets into participating in this. Well, the Soviets cannot buy beans to feed their own people. So they are not a very likely prospect for participating in the cost of constructing the SSC.

They say India and Korea are interested, and somebody has said Japan may make a sizable contribution toward the $1.7 billion for an investment that we are asking for. Of the $1.7 billion that we hope to get from foreigners, would you like to take a guess as to how much has been committed, or pledged, as we Methodists say? $50 million pledged from India. So far, that is the total commitment of all these foreign partners that everybody says we are going to offend if we do not go forward with this project.

Japan has never uttered one word about participating in the project. Somebody who favored the project said, well, we think Japan will help us, and everybody said, well, Japan is rich; if they say they will help, you can just put that money in the bank. Well, Japan has never said that, Japan has never showed the slightest interest in this project.

Mr. President, the State of Texas, who, to their credit, is trying to make a monumental effort to come up with the purchase of the land and an additional $875 million, the project coordinator of Texas, who was in charge of raising this money, resigned last week and said this project is not going to be funded and essentially said, I do not want to be a part of it.

So here we have a project that we know right now in today's dollars is going to cost well over $8 billion and when you add the other items that are not considered a part of the project costs but do represent a part of the total project costs, you are looking at $11.8 billion, a 300-percent increase in 3 years.

Mr. President, do you know why I know I am not going to get very many votes on my amendment? I will tell you why. Because the Energy Department has very thoughtfully contracted a piece of the superconducting super collider in 43 States: shades of the Pentagon, shades of the B-1, which I think covered all 50 States. That was about the best the Pentagon has ever been able to do. They got all 50 States involved in building the B-1 bomber. But I can tell you that lesson was not lost on the Energy Department when they contracted the superconducting super collider out to 43 States.

Mr. President, I also sit on another appropriations subcommittee. I found out this morning—I should have known it, but when you get involved with something you know you have to go through with, you start checking on things you were mildly curious about but that you have to know, and I know if I were successful in eliminating the $500 million plus dollars for the superconducting super collider in 1992, I cannot move that money to any other subcommittee. It has to stay under the 602(b) allocation, it has to stay in the Energy and Water Subcommittee. Now, it will effectively reduce the deficit by $500 million but, good Lord, who is going to get excited about a $½ billion deficit reduction when we are looking at a $270 billion deficit?

Do you want to know something interesting, just as an aside? Do you remember when the people in this country said enough is enough, Jimmy Carter, we do not want to see you any more; we want somebody that can balance that budget? This year, 1991, the budget deficit was $175 billion for the first 8 months, headed for $270 billion. But the point I want to make is, in the 8 months of this year, which includes April, when we had a $35 billion surplus when everybody paid their income tax, $175 billion for the first 8 months, and the cumulative budget deficit total in 4 years under Jimmy Carter was $159 billion.

That is all you could hear in 1980. Why do you not cut that spending? Why do you not balance the budget? Jimmy Carter, go back to Plains, and President Reagan saying on national television, and I remember it well when he looked into the camera and said, "Jimmy Carter, if you cannot balance the budget, scoot over and let me in because I can." It sounded pretty impressive to me, too.

Today, we exceed in the first 8 months of 1991 the total cumulative budgets for all of Jimmy Carter's 4 years in office.

My people are always saying, why do you not cut a lot of spending? When I run in 1992, or when I go home next weekend to make a speech, I am going to say, I got your message. I am going to vote to cut, and I am picking out the projects that may be meritorious but they are not urgent, they are not nearly as promising on the scientific side as the devastating being wreaked on this Nation by profligate deficit spending. We can take the superconducting super collider, the space station, the B-2 bomber and SDI, and even leave $1 billion in SDI, which I have always been willing to do, and you go home and tell the folks, "Folks, I did it; I voted to cut between $12 billion and $15 billion in spending just in these four projects."

As I started to say in the beginning, I am just making the argument and people will come in here and most will vote no on my amendment—I understand that; I know how this place operates—but let me tell my colleagues, before you vote no, I want you to think about a few things. If I should happen to prevail on this, we have to go to conference with the House and there will be some kind of compromise figure worked out between the House and the Senate to possibly keep this thing alive but not quite on the accelerated pace right now until technically and scientifically we know that we can do it and that the cost is not going to be quite as staggering as it looks now.

But I have always sort of led the Senate fight, along with my good friend from Pennsylvania, who is seated here, on childhood immunization. I am absolutely convinced, as seemingly was President Bush, that we must have an $80 million increase in childhood immunization if we intend to stop the measles outbreak in the country, 27,600 cases last year, which killed 89 children. That is not very many children, unless one of them is yours. Then it is a lot.

I went over to the White House in the Rose Garden the other morning and President Bush made a beautiful speech about what we are going to do about childhood immunizations. He said I have asked for a $40 million increase. He has, and I applaud him for it. He deserves credit for it. But that will not get the job done. It is going to require $80 million. Senator HARKIN, who is chairman of the subcommittee that deals with this, says I do not know where we are going to find the money. We do not have it in my subcommittee. We simply cannot find the other $40 million.

It is always just a question of priorities, is it not? Where do you want to spend your money? Do you want to spend it to save children? Or do you want to go forward with this project, the cost of which cannot even reasonably be anticipated at this point? Even the top corporate researchers in this country, of their five preferred scientific projects in this country, the SSC comes in dead last.

Back to immunizations, move on to the WIC program to help poor, pregnant women and poor infants get a decent diet. There is one thing that scientists do know already without spending $11.8 billion to find out, and that is, if you do not give a pregnant woman enough protein while she is carrying a child, that child is going to be defective because protein and other nutrients are essential for the proper development of the brain cells of that child. And if you do not give that baby once it is born a decent protein diet, he or she is not going to develop, and then you can pick up a million buck tab or a $2 million tab to institutionalize that child forever.

We have enough money in this budget to cover about one-half of the women in this country who are eligible for the Women, Infants, and Children Program. Why? Because things like this slurp up all the money.

Where do we think the crime in this country is coming from? It is not coming from people with college degrees. Look at the statistics. Drug use is dropping precipitously among college graduates. It is not coming from people who make over $40,000 or $50,000 a year. The statistics show otherwise. Why, it is coming from those children of those pregnant women who do not get a decent diet, who are living in the inner cities, who do not have any hope of ever getting a piece of the rock.

You ask any police chief in the country where is the crime rate coming from. It is true, 80 some percent of it is drug related, but that does not take away from the fact that people are selling drugs because a 14-year-old child can come home to a mother and say, "Mother, here is $1,000 I made last night. Go to the grocery store, get the lights turned on, pay the rent."

You could not get enough interest in this body on these issues to fill a thimble. They go right to the heart, right to the fabric of the future of this Republic. But you put out contracts in 43 States and you can get all the attention you need. Even DOE says that they are not likely to get this one-third contribution from foreign interests. I will wait for the Senators from Texas to tell me about this fellow resigning down there where Texas is on coming up with its commitment.

Mr. President, DOE put out a statement on where Western Europe is on the superconducting super collider. I will tell you where they are, and I will tell you why they are not participating in our superconducting super collider because they are committed to the one in Switzerland, the CERN project. The Germans, the Italians, the British, the French, every one of them are committed to the Swiss project. They are way ahead of us.

I will tell you what very well may happen. About the time we finish our project, this consortium in Switzerland will have the answer. Now, would that not be a hoot after we spend Lord only knows how much money.

If this thing keeps going up $4 billion a year, by 1999, you can get a cost of about $50 billion out of this thing. Would it not be beautiful if we wound up spending $50 billion on this project, and the folks in Switzerland say, "Tough, we've already got the answer. We know the origin of matter." And that is not said facetiously. That is a very distinct possibility.

Mr. President, when it comes to embellishing things, I have been known to tell a story. I think Senator BENTSEN told me not to tell this story in Texas because he has already told it all over Texas. The story is about the talking horse.

This guy's car broke down, and he heard somebody say, "Could I help you?" And the only thing he could see was this horse standing by the fence.

He said, "Did you just say something to me?"

And the horse said, "Yeah, I asked you if I could help you."

He said, "My gosh, are you a talking horse?"

He said, "I am and that ain't all. I won the Kentucky Derby 5 years ago." He says, "You did?"

He said, "Yeah, I'm quite a horse."

About that time the farmer showed up. He asked the farmer, he says, "Is this your horse?"

He said, "Yes, he's mine."

He said, "Would you sell him?"

He said, "Yeah, I will sell him."

He said, "What would you take for him?"

He said, "Well, a check for $50."

He said, "$50? Why I would be tickled to death to pay you $50 for that horse, but that horse is worth a fortune."

And the old farmer says, "Has he been giving you that junk about winning the Kentucky Derby?"

You read page 120 of this report and you will find that the superconducting super collider cures cancer, earaches, and gives you an appetite if you are not hungry.

I will read it to you. How many times have I heard this argument on the space station. You can take the language out of the space station report and put it on the super collider. As soon as my amendment is defeated, they will take this language out of this report and transfer it over to the space station argument. I do not know how we get all this science out of all these projects but I want you to listen to what is going to happen if we go forward with this superconducting super collider.

Industry will gain in providing the magnets and it will assist in expanding the commercial use of superconducting magnets in such areas as magnetic levitation—efficient electrical energy generation and storage and lifesaving medical diagnostics, using magnetic resonance energy and related technology. Superconductivity has been determined by the Departments of Commerce and Defense as being critical generic technology for the Nation.

Now, is it not interesting that we are going to learn about magnetic resonance imaging when magnetic resonance imaging has been on the market since 1982 and the follow-on to it is in the process of being developed right now and will probably be marketed before the end of this year—a follow-on to the original magnetic resonance imaging that doctors use for diagnostic purposes. The follow-on will be available probably later this year, and yet here you find this old talking horse in this report boasting about winning the Kentucky Derby.

Mr. President, one of the questions that I would like for my opponents on this to answer in their rebuttal to my arguments is this. Much is made of the foreign community picking up $1.75 billion of the tab for the SSC. I have already made the argument so I will not belabor it and make it again, but that is not going to happen. As I say, so far you have a $50 million pledge. All of you who have run for office know how you count those pledges of contributions to your campaign. You count them when they are received and deposited.

But I want to ask the opponents this question. The cost of this project has gone from between $4 billion and $5 billion to roughly $11.2 billion in 3 years, yet the $1.75 billion that our foreign friends are supposed to contribute has remained at $1.75 billion.

In the first hearing we had on this they said, well, look it is only a little over $4 billion. Texas is going to put up $1 billion; a foreign counterpart is going to put up $1.75 billion, and if you ever saw a bargain, here it is. But instead of a Federal cost of $2 billion, we are now up to a Federal cost—assuming everything goes smoothly—of about $9 billion. My question is, if it goes to $40 billion between now and 1999, does the foreign contribution go up or is that just something we talk about to try to get a few votes?

A House committee held a hearing on this—and this is a little bit technical, but I am going to read it. It is a letter to TOM BEVILL. TOM is chairman of the Subcommittee on Energy and Water Development, Committee on Appropriations, this subcommittee's counterpart over in the House and the people who held the hearing on the SSC. They wrote to him and item 6 says:

While some have doubted that foreign contributions would ever come in to offset the SSC's project cost, few have challenged DOE's promise that significant foreign contributions would come in support of the construction of the SSC's two large detectors. However, one of the two detector collaborations, that associated with the L* detector group, led by Nobel Prize winning physicist Sam Ting of MIT, has fallen apart. The Swiss and German teams withdrew from the L* in March and April in the face of detector management changes demanded by the SSC Lab.

Regardless of who is right and who is wrong in the situation, the result has been a perception among the Europeans and Soviet participants in the L* that there was an effort afoot by the SSC Lab to replace the international management of L* with American physicists. The perception revealed in letters that have gone to DOE from European and Soviet physicists has cost former L* participants to be reluctant to engage in further cooperation with the SSC Lab or DOE.

As a consequence and because of the length of time it takes to establish a consortium and settle on a detector design, it seems likely that the SSC will only have one large detector on line when the SSC accelerator is commissioned in 1999. This raises serious questions about whether the SSC will be able to deliver the fully range of science that has been promised to Congress and the American taxpayers.

Mr. President, I will close with this. When you ask DOE why the cost has escalated, the answer is because we changed the design. Shades of the B-2 bomber. It started out with a penetrating mission.

Then they said, no, it is not just to penetrate the Soviet Union, it is to find noble targets. And when that was shot down twice, they said that is not a good mission for the B-2 bomber. So they came up with another one. We are now on the fourth or fifth rationale for building the B-2 bomber.

When GAO says Brilliant Pebbles is a myth, we proceed headlong as though nobody ever said anything. And here you have scientific evidence from the scientific community that this thing is highly questionable and you know already that the cost is going out the window.

So I plead with my colleagues to vote for this and be able to go back home and tell your constituents you have not forgotten about the deficit, you have not forgotten that is why they sent you here to cut some spending that was not necessary and change your priorities to things which go to the fabric of this great Nation.

I yield the floor, Mr. President. Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, the Bible says that in the beginning God created the Heaven and Earth. The Bible did not say how He did it. It did not say what we were made of or what the Earth was made of.

It just said that in the beginning God created the Heaven and the Earth. Ever since that time, the history of science, the history of all the recorded inquiries of man have centered largely on trying to determine who we are, what we are made of, how we are composed, what the forces that guide the universe are. That is at the heart of what the superconducting super collider wants to do.

STAFF FLOOR PRIVILEGE

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Carol O'Connell of my staff be permitted on the floor during the debate on this issue.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GRAHAM). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, not long ago I was in Louisiana conducting a town meeting talking about the superconducting super collider. After I explained it, one old boy in the back of the room got up and said, "Senator, all I know is I started from dust and I will end up dust. That is all I know and all I care to know." He did not quite put it this way, but he said, in effect, you can take that superconducting super collider and cram it.

There are some people who feel that way, Mr. President. They do not know, they do not want to know, they have no curiosity about who they are, about what the universe is made up of and, moreover, they think it is valueless of mankind to have that kind of inquiry.

Mr. President, it has been basic with mankind to try to determine what we were made of and what we are. At the time of Aristotle it was thought that all matter was composed of four elements: fire, air, land, and water. It was not until the 18th century that they really discovered chemicals.

Probably, the real beginning of the age of enlightenment, Mr. President, began in 1608 when an optician from the Netherlands discovered by chance the telescope. He had two lenses and he happened to put the two together and found that they would magnify. The Government of the Netherlands at that time wanted to restrict that invention because they immediately recognized the military value of it. Nevertheless, history teaches that invention was widely distributed; that Galileo in fact came into possession of one of those telescopes; and that it opened up a whole new vista.

We originally thought the world was flat and that the stars all revolved around the Earth. Galileo, much to his argument later with the church at that time—this was still part of the Dark Ages. His teachings were greatly discouraged. But the rest is history. We know how that information about the heavens gathered through telescopes was also used to look inwards through microscopes, using the obverse of the telescope. So we began to find out that which was small and that which was large.

In 1911 a scientist called Geiger, best known for the Geiger counter, made one of the most incredible discoveries that—really by chance—that all of mankind has ever discovered. He discovered the nature of the atom. From that, bit by bit and piece by piece, we found that all the world was not composed of fire, air, land, and water or, in the next generation, that it was not just composed of chemicals or, in the next generation, that it was not just composed of atoms but that the atoms themselves, as we found out later, were composed of still smaller elements: protons, neutrons, electrons.

We thought for many years that those were the smallest elements of matter, protons, neutrons, and electrons, which in turn made up the atom and the atoms made up molecules and molecules made up chemicals, and that is what controlled all the Earth. But then, Mr. President, we began to make accelerators, and we discovered nuclear physics and high energy physics.

Ever schoolboy knows that Professor Einstein came up with the theory of relativity. We see it everywhere,  $E=mc^2$  which means that in effect energy is matter and matter is energy, and the two are translated into one another by this formula which says energy equals mass times the speed of light squared.

Using the teachings of Professor Einstein and many other professors, they were able actually to take that formula and translate it into nuclear energy, into nuclear bombs, and indeed that vast energy that is locked up within the atom has been both a curse and a great boon to mankind. It came initially because of findings with accelerators. What is an accelerator and why is it important?

Mr. President, an accelerator, in technical terms—they take hydrogen atoms, take over the electron, which leaves a proton, and they accelerate those through the use of magnets and electrical energy around the 54-mile racetrack. They have collisions between those two protons going at a force of 20 trillion electron volts apiece or a total of 40 trillion electron volts, and the collision of those two bits of matter can be in effect photographed in a very technical way. They can measure both the particles that result from that collision, and the energy level of those particles.

That is technically what the superconducting super collider is. And all accelerators are a version of that.

The difference here is that this one is many orders of magnitude larger than those others. The one at CERN, which Senator BUMPERS says is 7 miles around, is not good enough for America. We need 54 miles around.

Well, it so happens that you cannot do it within the case of CERN. For a collision at 14 trillion electron volts, you need, our scientists believe, a collision with an energy level of 40 trillion electron volts.

I will get into that in a moment.

But in effect an accelerator is a microscope which looks into the smallest bits of matter.

Senator BUMPERS says that, well, it would be nice to know about this, to know about the elements of matter, about the origins of our beginning. But he suggests in using the words "nice to know" that it is simply an item of curiosity, a matter that is not central to science, a matter that is not central to our being, and a matter that is not central to the whole future of technology, and indeed the future of scientific endeavor in the world.

I submit, Mr. President, that which we seek to discover with the superconducting super collider is the most profoundly important scientific endeavor in the world today because it will tell us what the whole thing is composed of; what is the state of knowledge today; what do we hope to find out from the superconducting super collider, and why is that important? Using accelerators from the past, we found that the atom—that is all matter—is not composed just of protons, neutrons, and electrons, but in turn, those protons and neutrons are composed of smaller bits of matter called quarks, and there are, in fact, three sets of squarks that make up protons and neutrons—at least three that have been discovered so far.

In turn, there are other particles of matter called electrons and neutrinos, which are much smaller, and which apparently do not have any mass. The theory is—and they can demonstrate that theory in some cases; it is only theory in other cases—that those small particles are what makes up the universe.

The problem is, Mr. President—two problems—in what we do not know. We do not know what all of those particles are. Some of them are only theoretical particles, because we have not been able to find them yet. The so-called Higgs Boson is the scientific particle that is most sought after. It is only theoretical now, because it has never been found.

We also do not know what, but there are still smaller particles that make up quarks and leptons. More importantly, perhaps, Mr. President, the four fundamental forces of nature have never been rationalized or proved.

Mr. President, those four fundamental forces of nature are the electromagnetic force, the so-called weak force, the strong force, and gravitation. It is thought that these four forces are related and that it can be demonstrated mathematically how the four forces relate.

Electromagnetism is important to us. It simply controls everything we do: All electronics, light, radio, telecommunications, electricity, the whole thing is controlled by the electromagnetic force. It, in turn, transmits its force by the photon. Most people have heard of the photon. Sometimes it acts like a particle, sometimes like a wave. But the electromagnetic force is fairly well understood.

The strong force also reacts in the area of the atom, across much smaller distances than the electromagnetic force. But its force is transmitted by what is called a "gluon," and that in turn acts like a particle sometimes, and sometimes like a wave. They have been able to demonstrate that the strong force and the electromagnetic force are similar.

The weak force is that which is transmitted in the decay of atoms, and it is noted by gamma rays and other radioactivity. It, in turn, has its own particle, which also acts sometimes like a particle and sometimes like a wave.

The fourth is gravitation, which is thought theoretically to have a particle called a graviton, which has never been proved and never been determined. But those four forces, which are fundamental to nature, are not fully understood by science.

So, in effect, Mr. President, we have that energy equals mass, and mass equals energy. We have some unknown particles and some unknown forces that react in ways that are not completely understood.

Why do you need 20 trillion electron volts; why do you need 54 miles? You need 54 miles in order to get the 20 trillion electron volts. The 20 trillion electron volts are doubled because the two particles collide with one another at a force of 40 trillion electron volts. You need that much power, because these forces do not react as they are supposed to, except at very high energy levels.

Our scientists say that you cannot prove the strong and weak force mathematically, except with these very strong forces. You cannot discover the Higgs Boson, this unknown particle, if it exists, unless you have these very high energy forces.

So, Mr. President, it is not simply a matter of curiosity; it is not simply a matter that is nice to know. It is fundamental to science. Is it important to know. What do we find when we find the Higgs Boson. What do we do when we make a mathematical model that tells us how electromagnetism relates to the strong force—that is, the power of the atom—which in turn relates to the power of radioactivity, which in turn relates to the power of gravity?

Mr. President, we do not know fully the significance of this. We can look back at what we have discovered and what it has meant, what accelerators have brought us in the past: CAT scanning; PET scanning; MRI, magnetic resonance imaging. And yes, I say to Senator BUMPERS, we have already discovered magnetic resonance imaging. But the scientists believe that a whole new generation of MRI comes from the discoveries to be made with the new magnets.

There is also coronary angiography, x-ray imaging of the arteries of the heart. I could go on and on with medical science that has come from high-energy physics.

We have environmental applications which are incredible. We have things like radar systems for defense purposes, for air traffic control. We have a tremendous number of other applications, such as inspection of steel pipes, curing of coatings for adhesives, surveying of rock formations.

The list goes on and on. What we think we will find, the scientists believe, with superconductivity is better electric generators, low-loss electric power transmission systems, magnetically propelled ships, torpedo launchers, high-speed levitated trains.

Senator BUMPERS spoke of the high-speed levitated train as if that was not important. Mr. President, there has already been a working model of a levitated train made in Japan. In effect, what it does is it allows the train to ride not on the tracks but on a magnetic field. When I took my last train ride and tried to put my head back to go to sleep, the train was going back and forth, rocking with the tracks, and you could not sleep. On a levitated train, you ride on a magnetic field which is smoother than glass because it is on the magnetic field.

The technology of these superconducting magnets are what we need in order to be able to build the high-speed train, magnetic energy storage systems, fuel conservation. We believe that through superconducting we can put a current in a coil in the ground, superconducting, and that the electric energy will stay there without loss almost forever so that you can store the electric energy better than you could in any known battery, a highly important thing for the generation and conduct of electricity. Now we have these peaks and valleys in the generation of electricity and you cannot store energy. You have to build this peaking power for electric generation so that at 5 p.m. when the weather is hot you have to have this tremendous capacity, but you cannot use that at night and you cannot store it. It is thought that through this we will be able to do that.

I could go on and on: pulse power, computing, medical applications. Suffice it to say, Mr. President, that most of science today is directly related to the four fundamental forces of nature, to the elements that make it up, and that the frontiers of technology are in this field to be discovered by the superconducting super collider. We know much, but there is so much more to know because we cannot prove what is called the standard model that relates it all to one another.

The breakthroughs to be made from the knowledge gained from the superconducting super collider could be as fundamental to science as that which Professor Geiger made back in 1911 when he first discovered that the atom had a nucleus. Does anybody care about that? You bet they do, Mr. President. You bet they do, because it is fundamental to all science, it is fundamental to our defense systems, it is fundamental to telecommunications, to radio, to everything, and to say that we do not care or that it would simply be nice to know what the standard model is, what the four fundamental forces of nature are, is to understate the importance of this in such a profound way that, Mr. President, I submit that it is like those who thought the Earth was flat and did not care to know otherwise and it is like those medieval church people who would burn people at the stake. They almost burned Galileo at the stake because he was looking up in the heavens and saying that the stars did not twirl around the Earth, that the Earth was not the center of the universe. Mr. President, it is fundamental knowledge.

Let me answer quickly the question given by the Senator from Arkansas, which was about the foreign community and whether their money will materialize.

Mr. President, our committee has examined that on two occasions, and we put in our report as follows:

It continues to be the consensus of the committee that construction of the SSC should not be dependent on the question of whether foreign participation will be forthcoming.

Similarly stated, if the SSC is a high-priority project and important for this Nation, which the committee believes it is, then we should be prepared to proceed.

Frankly, Mr. President, I know that Deputy Secretary Moore, for whom I have very high regard, has been talking to the Japanese and others about foreign participation. I hope we do not have foreign participation because I think the technology to be gained by this country, the manufacturing techniques, are so important to us that I do not want to share it. I would rather have the technology ourselves and learn how to do magnetic levitated trains, pulse power, improved radars, magnetic resonance imaging, and all the other things which I believe will flow from this. I think it is important to this Nation to do so. If they were willing to help us dig the 54-mile hole or pour the concrete or something, that would be different, but, really, foreign participation, I think, would be in the high technology and that would give others the cream of the crop of this technology. I think we ought to keep it for America. I think it has been the history of so much of this foreign participation that they do get the cream of the crop at a very low price. I would rather do it for America.

How about the cost? Mr. President, $8.2 billion is a lot of money. Really, the initial estimates were based not upon a final design, not upon a fixed cost, but it was sort of like the Hart Senate Office Building; they made a horseshoe estimate of what the cost would be. When they got a final design, the cost went up, and it is still a bargain. I think this is a great building. I think this is going to be a great project at $8.2 billion. I do believe it is clear it is not going to escalate beyond that, indeed, beyond the $8.2 billion. There is $1 billion on contingency funds just in case there is some unexpected delay. So with any luck we will be able to build this for less than $8.2 billion.

Mr. President, the distinguished Senator from Arkansas says, pass my amendment. We will get in conference, we will reduce the amount of money, we will keep it alive until two things, he said, first, that we know we can do it, and, second, that the cost will not be staggering.

Mr. President, we know we can build the machine now. I do not think there is any doubt in the scientific community that we can do this. We know it can be done now. The question of the cost not being staggering, we have a very firm cost estimate at $8.2 billion, which includes the $1 billion of contingency funds, and that is the best estimate we are going to get.

There is one thing that is sure. To the extent that we delay the project, that we reduce the team, that we fire some of these people, or that we keep them on the payroll and tell them not to do anything, it is clear that that delays and increases the cost of the project. So what the Senator from Arkansas says, in a vague way, is that, yes, we know this is important, but let us wait, let us delay, and therefore the cost will go down. In fact, the opposite is true; the cost would go up.

Mr. President, the importance of the superconducting super collider is so profoundly important to this country, it cannot be compared to the B-2 bomber or B-1 bomber or SDI or the space station, or anything else. I share a lot of the views of the Senator from Arkansas about everything he said about those projects. I share what he says about the WIC program, the vaccination program, the education program, and a lot of other things that he did not say which he might have said, things we need money for. But, Mr. President, this is, in fact, the age of enlightenment. This is a continuation of the age of enlightenment when man wants not only to satisfy his profound curiosity about that of which we and our universe is made, but how it works, and how in fact we might harness those forces and those tiny elements for the good of mankind and, yes, indeed, for the health of mankind, perhaps for the nutrition of mankind in the future. It is fundamental to what we know and what we need to know. I hope that the Senate will not cut this project, will not in effect eliminate this project as the Senator from Arkansas would wish to do.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, let me first congratulate my friend, the distinguished Senator from Louisiana. I think he has made an extraordinary presentation. He has gone into great depth concerning this project. When I think of the many other demands on his time as the senior Senator from that State, to spend the amount of time, to have the depth of knowledge of this highly technical, very important project is a real contribution to the Senate and to this debate. I am most appreciative of it.

Mr. President, I understand the objectives of my friend from Arkansas. I know that he wants to cut waste, unnecessary expenditures, at a time when we are having a tough time sorting out priorities in what we think is important to our country. I sit as the chairman of the Finance Committee looking at the health concerns in the country and the availability of it, the accessibility and cost containment of it, and doing what we can on prenatal, neonatal health care for children, the objectives of the Children's Commission; all of them terribly important to our country.

But we are talking about major, major scientific breakthroughs that we are seeking here; things that could well raise the standard of living of our people. And in this instance I think my friend has just chosen the wrong target at the wrong time when he talks about the superconducting super collider.

When you put a bunch of scientists together to try to develop a project, one of the most difficult things in the world is to put a limitation on the project, to say this is it, these are the parameters, stay within it. Here we have what they have done. The SSC is on target, within the time limitations and within the budget limitations. The risks are manageable and the potentials are enormous. But my friend's amendment, the Senator from Arkansas, would put all of that in jeopardy.

One of the most important things we are talking about here is the future competitiveness of our country. It is a project like this that can help us keep the leadership in sight. So I commend my friend from Louisiana for his wisdom and his foresight in getting the approval of the Appropriations Committee for this $508 million for the superconducting super collider.

That figure is 5 percent under what the President requested, but it does mark a major increase over last year's expenditures because it takes us on to the next most important phase of this project. If that amount can be sustained, then I think they will keep the project on schedule, and they will keep it within the limits of the amount of money we are talking about. But deeper cuts would inevitably delay the schedule and increase the costs.

I know that within some areas the SSC is looked on merely as a public works project, and that a good part of it happens to be located in Texas. That is utterly wrong. The SSC is science, and it is good science. It can help us find out answers to some of the fundamental questions about the nature of the atom. And in the process, it is already providing advances in technology that can help us in our everyday lives. It is a national science program to help scientists in high-energy physics unlock the secrets of the atom.

Yes, the basic facility is located in my State, but it involves people from all over America. In fact now we have companies in 43 States that have won contracts for the SSC. Forty-three States already involved. Over 90 universities and institutions in 30 States already have contracts for SSC-related research. And when that lab is completed, scientists at 77 universities in 31 States will be participating in the research.

Texas competed for the physical location of this project and won it. But how did they win it? Because they had the geological structure that was conducive to this kind of an experiment, and these kinds of tunnels, and gave the stability for it. But they did something much more.

Despite the fact that my State has been through the worst recession since the Great Depression, right in the middle of that, the Governor, the State legislature, and the people committed themselves to a billion-dollar obligation—over 10 percent of the cost of this project—to further the scientific research for our country. Texas already has spent over $197 million of its own money on the SSC. I think now it is incumbent on the Federal Government to live up to its part and its commitment.

Despite our Nation's historical tradition of scientific research and inventiveness, despite our trophy case of Nobel Prizes, despite the enormous improvements in our lives because of advances in technology, some people still question the value of basic research. They want a quick return for their buck.

Well that is not necessarily the view of some of our strongest economic competitors today.

Let us look at the case of Japan. Today in Japan they are spending twice as much percentage-wise of GNP in civilian R&D than we are in this country. Last year the Department of Commerce said that we were trailing in 11 of the 12 leading technologies.

The competition we face in this country today is not so much military competition. We proved that with Desert Storm and Desert Shield. Today there is only one superpower, and we are it.

But what we are looking at in the future is not so much the role of NATO or the Warsaw Pact, but we are looking at the competition from the Pacific Rim, from Japan, from Taiwan, from South Korea, and from Europe, where 12 countries are going together in EC-92 to develop economies of size, joining together in basic research, building their version of the SSC right now in competition with us.

But what we are saying is the research on the SSC is already beginning to pay off. We are just beginning the construction, but the careful planning of the program is already giving us some breakthroughs.

Consider these examples of research conducted for the SSC at laboratories and universities around the country. They could lead to advances with applications to such industries as electronics, computing, energy, communications, and medicine. I for one just had a PET scan. It is amazing what that kind of imaging is able to show to the doctors.

The University of California at Irvine is developing a high-speed data processor to sift through the trillions of particle collisions that will occur at the SSC.

Princeton University is developing a state-of-the-art computer system for measuring the subatomic particles created by the SSC's collisions, coast to coast.

Using the experience gained from their work on SSC magnets, the Fermilab in Illinois—and I heard my friend talking about its demise. To the contrary, you are seeing an increase in appropriations for it in this bill.

The Fermilab in Illinois and the Brookhaven Lab in New York, developed improved magnets for medical diagnostic machines, such as MRI's. The University of Florida, located in the State of the distinguished Presiding Officer of the Senate at the moment, applied for a patent for a new process with widespread commercial applications for the sterilizing of plastics for SSC detectors without the use of toxic gases.

Science education will benefit from the SSC. Already, teams of scientists and graduate students throughout America are planning experiments and designing and building components for the SSC. They are excited about the challenge, they recognize the opportunity for scientific progress which the SSC provides.

Mr. President, a few weeks ago I was at the SSC Lab looking at some of the ongoing work. I saw the Nobel Prize winners collected there, excited about the prospects of this kind of research. Turn that off? Disassemble that kind of process? What a loss to the country that would be.

Let me give a brief status report on this amazing program, on what has been achieved just in the past year.

Several successful tests of five centimeter design dipole magnets have been completed; production of the prototype magnets have begun.

General Dynamics and Westinghouse are completing contract negotiations to build the initial superconducting dipole magnets for the SSC at below estimated costs, below.

Construction of conventional facilities is underway at the SSC site with a magnet development laboratory nearing completion, and I can attest to that, having just been there.

The Department of Energy has signed a memorandum of understanding with the State of Texas regarding its $1 billion commitment to the SSC, and the State's land acquisition program is well ahead of schedule.

The funds contained in this bill will permit the SSC to move ahead, to continue the innovative research already underway.

It is a big project in physical size but even more so in potential benefits to the people of our country, and ultimately to the world. The costs are significant but the payoffs are already beginning.

I believe it has earned our support, and I hope the Senate will support it in its entirety.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I join my dear colleague from Texas and my dear colleague from Louisiana in support of the SSC. I think this is a critical year. I think when you look at the level of commitment made here with our decision to move ahead with the program this year means that the largest scientific project to be built anywhere in the world in the last quarter of the 20th century is going to be built in the United States of America by Americans, keeping us at the cutting edge of science and technology.

Our dear colleague from Arkansas has raised a fundamental point about choosing, and that is exactly what we are talking about. We are talking about priorities. At 2 o'clock we are going to meet at the appropriations subcommittee level to make a decision on another major project, the space station. And, again, the choice we are making there is really a choice as to whether we want to invest in the future, whether we want to invest in developing science and technology that will create jobs, growth, and opportunity in the future, that will extend the view that mankind has of nature and his ability to use nature to enhance our productive capacity and improve the quality of our life or whether we want to continue to invest in programs that represent consumption. That does not mean those consumption programs are not good programs. That does not mean they do not benefit. But fundamentally we are choosing between an investment for the future or consumption in the present.

Mr. President, basically, what we have come down to is a choice on the SSC and on the space station. It is a choice between investing in the next generation or spending the same money on programs that have big political constituencies and that represent investing in the next election.

I do not need to tell my colleagues it is often difficult—whether you are talking about a family or a business or whether you are talking about the greatest Government in the world—to make fundamental decisions about investing in the future. I believe we should invest in the future, and that is why I am opposed to this amendment.

I know it is easy to find people in science who say do not build SSC, build my project. We have a debate underway: Small science against big science. But that is not really the choice here. If this amendment is adopted, the money that is taken out of the SSC before the fiscal year begins will be spent on something else. It will not be spent on other science.

The choice here is not between the SSC and other scientific projects. The choice is between the SSC and spending money, basically, on programs that do not represent a fundamental investment in our future capacity to produce goods and services and to improve the quality of life of our people. This project is broad based. This project is being built in one location in terms of actual assembly and operation. That is true. But 43 States are involved, directly or indirectly, in the project.

The bottom line is not State involvement. The bottom line is not the location of the project. The bottom line is that no nation in history has ever been as blessed with high returns on investment in fundamental science and technology as the United States of America has been. If there is any nation that stands as a shining example of what primary research can do, it is the United States of America. And the bottom line is when you look at the amount of money we are spending this year and you look at how much of that represents an investment in the future that will make the American people more productive in the future and raise the quality of life in this country, that amount is too small, not too large.

We should not take this step. Cutting this country out of the SSC will deny us world leadership in the development of new technology. High-energy physics is vitally important. But the issue—while the science is complicated—is very simple. The issue is this: Do we want to invest in the future, in expanding science and technology so Americans can provide that leadership in the future and so we can benefit tangibly in terms of our ability to be competitive on the world market with new products and new technology, to expand our ability to do all these other things in the future that people talk about doing today?

It is a question of whether we want to invest the money sending our child to college or whether we want to buy the child an automobile today. I think it is an easy choice if you are looking at the future. I think it is a difficult choice if you are looking at the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November 1992.

I believe we should take the long view, and I believe we should invest in science and technology. I think we should fund the SSC. I think we should fund the space station. I think we should fully fund the National Science Foundation because that represents an investment in the future of America. We are not making enough investment. We need to make this investment.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BUMPERS. I will be happy to.

Mr. JOHNSTON. There are 10 minutes left until 2 o'clock. I wonder if we could divide that time equally and allow me to make a motion to table at 2 o'clock? Or 1 minute of?

Mr. BUMPERS. I always like to accommodate my good friend from Louisiana.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Then say, "yes."

Mr. BUMPERS. I will make this proposition. We have a cloture vote scheduled at 2 o'clock.

Mr. DOLE. Maybe.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Maybe.

Mr. BUMPERS. I suggest we divide 10 minutes equally following that vote, and then my colleague moves to table.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Bumpers amendment next comes up for consideration, that there be 20 minutes of debate equally divided, after which a vote will occur, without anything intervening, either on a motion to table or on the amendment itself.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, there has been a reference to what the Japanese are doing. I want to tell my colleagues something they are not doing. They are not investing in the SSC.

They are spending, as the senior Senator from Texas has correctly said, more money on civilian research as a percentage of their GNP than we are. Do you know what they are putting their money in? They are putting their money in projects that have civilian applications to make products to send to the United States and maintain their $40 billion to $50 billion trade balance against the United States.

Here is living proof in this little $11 billion jewel as to why the Japanese are eating our lunch. You take this $11 billion and put it into the kind of research the Japanese are doing or you put it directly into magnetic resonance imaging, and not in a 55-mile hole underground, and the benefits will be 10 times greater.

Just so my colleagues will at least understand this point before they vote, this $11 billion project, with the cost headed for God knows where, maybe as much as $40 billion, has no civilian application. None. This is a curiosity on the part of a lot of physicists in this country. I understand and I applaud their curiosity about the origin of matter.

But I want to point out again, Mr. President, it is a matter of priorities. What are we going to spend our money on that makes us a great Nation? You talk about putting this $11 billion under this project because we are the only superpower. I submit that if this country continues to run $270 billion annual deficits—as we are this year and will next year and as far as the eye can see—we will not be a superpower. The best way in the world to make sure of that is to continue to squander money on projects like this.

All science is not good. Do you remember the supersonic transport, the SST? It is a God's blessing that the U.S. Congress torpedoed that back in 1971. Do you remember the nuclear powered airplane in the 1960's? It is a God's blessing that we torpedoed that project. Of seven key elements that we started out with on SDI research, five have been discarded. So much for that science.

I recognize that science is, indeed, often a trial and error process. They tell me that Thomas Edison did everything in the world before he finally got the light bulb perfected. I am not suggesting that we do not have trial and error, but what I am suggesting is that the civilian benefits from this project simply do not exist.

I want to say again, I am not saying this project is not meritorious. In a perfect world, I would vote for it in a New York minute. We are facing a $750 billion deficit and we just continue to say we have to cut but not here, not here, not here, not here, anyplace but here. Let us assume the best case scenario, that this project is built and is performing according to plan. Take a guess at what the annual operating cost is going to be. As high as $600 million a year and as low as $380 million a year.

Mr. President, we have already put about $597 million into this. Not much of that has been spent. Put this $500 million-plus into it and next year the argument will be we have already spent so much money we cannot turn back.

How many times have you heard that argument on the floor of this body? Get your nose under the tent for a couple of years and then you cannot turn back.

When you talk about the Government keeping its word, let me tell you what the Government's word was to the Energy Committee on which I sit. Admiral Watkins said, and I quote, "If we cannot build this SSC for $5.9 billion, it will not be built." That is what the Secretary said. This morning, he sends a letter to every colleague and puts it on every desk saying the universe hinges on going forward with this project. As has already been said, he has now said we do not care whether we get foreign participation or not, we are going forward with it.

On those so-called civilian applications, Mr. President, the scientists from the Bell Laboratories and Cornell University say those who claim that the SSC is going to help us with imaging and transistors is hogwash. When it comes to magnetic levitation, it would not require a 55-mile track underground to develop a magnetic train.

I am just simply saying, if you want to put these moneys into these things talked about, put it into them directly. We do not have to do that particle acceleration which the Swiss consortium is already going to do. And they are going to do it for under $2 billion. Why do we not participate in that project, get the same answers for about one-fourth the cost?

As the Senator from Louisiana has said, we know we can do it. I take strong exception to that, and there are a lot of scientists in this country who take strong exception to it, too. There are those who say it is highly questionable that we can make these magnets and produce them en masse while we are still testing them.

We knew that the Hubble telescope would work, and we put $2 billion in it because we knew it would work, and it did not.

I will just close with what Freeman Dyson, professor of physics at the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton said:

Every new machine is a gamble. If we build the SSC, it might turn out to be a glorious success or it might turn out to be a flop. In either case, we will want to build other machines to carry on from where the SSC stops. Unfortunately, the SSC is an end rather than a beginning. It does not offer much hope of further development. It does not incorporate a new idea. I am afraid that it may be a trap, tying our particle physicists to an old technology and barring the way to newer and more powerful alternatives.

That is not DALE BUMPERS, lawyer, who does not know the first thing about physics; that is the man who is one of the most distinguished scientists in the United States.

Mr. President, I ask my colleagues to think long and hard about whether they think this is an appropriate way to spend their money. Consider the cost escalation, roughly, under the best case scenario, a 60-percent increase each year since 1988 and headed north. Ask yourself. Is this what you want to do with the money when you consider the fact that we cannot even immunize our children; we cannot provide Head Start for our children. One in every five children is in poverty, and we are going to spend money on this? Is that the priority the U.S. Senate wants to send across this Nation?

I submit, Mr. President, when it comes to saving money, we can cut a lot of spending, and there is not a better place to start than right here.

I yield the floor.

Mr. DOLE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The absence of a quorum having been suggested, the clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I may proceed for 2 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

VIOLENT CRIME CONTROL ACT

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I indicated last evening to the majority leader we would have a conference this morning on the crime package, a Republican conference, and I would like to state what I think the general consensus of the conference was, although there is no binding of any members who attended conference. There are still a few unresolved matters on this side that we would like to have resolved before cloture is invoked because, very frankly, once cloture is invoked, some of these matters would not be germane; amendments would not be in order.

Therefore, on this side of the aisle, it would be my suggestion that cloture not be invoked on the first cloture vote, and in the time interim between now and hopefully later today, if we could have a second cloture vote today—if not, it could occur after midnight or it could occur tomorrow morning—we could work out some of the differences.

I know that staff is already in the process of working out differences. I am talking about the staff of Senator THURMOND and the staff of Senator BIDEN and others who have been directly involved in the negotiations.

So I wanted the majority leader to understand it is not that we are opposed to the bill before us. Some are. Some will vote against this bill on final passage. But there are three or four or five areas we would like to clarify between now and the time cloture is invoked for the reasons that I have stated.

For that reason, I think the leader is going to find a number of my colleagues voting against the first cloture vote, and hopefully for cloture on the second cloture vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. REED). The majority leader.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be permitted to address the Senate for 2 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I appreciate the distinguished Republican leader's remarks. I regret them.

It was over 100 days ago that the President addressed the Congress, and repeatedly since then, to stress the importance of acting on the crime bill, originally within 100 days and now as soon as possible. The Senate has now been considering the bill for over 3 weeks, and every effort to obtain an agreement to expedite consideration of the bill has been objected to by the Republican Members of the Senate.

I know there are things to be worked out, but we have been at it 3 weeks, and I suspect we could be at it 3 months and there would still be things to work out.

I hope my colleagues will vote for cloture. I think a vote on cloture is a test on whether someone is for or against the crime bill. There is no greater gulf in human affairs than the gulf between words and deeds. We have heard the words. The votes are the deeds. The only way we are going to get a crime bill is to invoke cloture, and to proceed to disposition of this bill. Otherwise, there is not going to be cloture, and there is not going to be a crime bill. There will not be a crime bill for the next couple of years although there will be a lot of talk about it.

This is the time for action. A vote on cloture is a vote on whether a Senator is for a crime bill or against a crime bill. A vote for cloture is a vote for a crime bill. A vote against cloture is a vote against the crime bill. If we do not get cloture the first time, we will proceed a second time. I hope that we can get it today, if possible. I have discussed that with the distinguished Republican leader. I hope that we will be able to get it later today and not wait until tomorrow. We may be in session for a long time and end up doing it early in the morning hours tomorrow, something I hope very much we do not have to do. I hope we can proceed.

I recognize the concerns raised by the distinguished Republican leader. The managers have worked diligently, and I think quite well, together—Senators THURMOND and BIDEN—to try to compose their differences. We are very close on that. But I hope that we can get cloture now, and then proceed to finish this bill immediately thereafter. I thank the Chair.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I have just an observation. I want to make it clear that there are some real concerns. It is not that they are opposed to the crime bill. There are some who feel it is the gun bill, and they are opposed to that portion of it. But my view is there are a number on this side of the aisle whose concerns can still be resolved in the negotiations Senator BIDEN and Senator THURMOND are having.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I hope that will occur. I hope that we will get enough votes here for cloture. Obviously, if no Republicans vote for cloture, we are not going to get it. But we will see how it goes, and we will proceed from there.

Mr. BIDEN. Will the leader be willing to yield for 30 seconds?

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from Delaware be permitted to address the Senate for 1 minute.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I say to my Republican colleagues who will have amendments that will be shut out by cloture that I would be willing to vote on those amendments. The leader and the ranking Republican have been willing to vote on those amendments. But there has been an unwillingness on the part of at least one Republican—objecting to proceeding on every single amendment. So let us get it clear. Any of you who think you are being shut out and not having a chance to vote on your amendment and that is your rationale for not voting for cloture, it is not because we have been unwilling to have a vote on whatever your amendment is. It is because there has been a blanket opposition on the Republican side to any amendment beyond the ones that we have brought up being able to be even considered. The Senator from South Carolina and I have done everything but beg all of you, everyone, to bring your amendments to the floor and we will vote on them. There is a blanket objection. For those of us who are using the rationale to vote against cloture, who say that you are unwilling to vote for cloture because you did not get a shot at your amendment, understand why you did not get a shot at your amendment.

CLOTURE MOTION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, under the previous order, pursuant to rule XXII, the Chair lays before the Senate the pending cloture motion, which the clerk will state.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

CLOTURE MOTION

We, the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of Rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, hereby move to bring to a close debate on S. 1241, a bill to control and reduce violent crime.

Wyche Fowler, Jr., Quentin Burdick, J.R. Biden, Jr., B.A. Mikulski, Herb Kohl, Claiborne Pell, Edward Kennedy, Jeff Bingaman, Pat Leahy, Albert Gore, Jr., Joe Lieberman, Wendell Ford, Dennis DeConcini, Alan Cranston, Charles S. Robb, and Tom Daschle.

CALL OF THE ROLL

The PRESIDING OFFICER. By unanimous consent, the quorum call has been waived.

VOTE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Is it the sense of the Senate that debate on S. 1241, a bill to control and reduce violent crime, shall be brought to a close?

The yeas and nays are required. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. FORD. I announce that the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. PRYOR], is absent because of illness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber who desire to vote?

NOT VOTING—1

Pryor

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this vote, the yeas are 56, the nays are 43. Three-fifths of the Senators duly chosen and sworn not having voted in the affirmative, the motion is rejected.

The Senator from Delaware.

ENERGY AND WATER DEVELOPMENT APPROPRIATIONS, FISCAL YEAR 1992

Mr. BIDEN. Who controls the time now? What is the parliamentary situation?

AMENDMENT NO. 688

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending business before the Senate is the amendment by the Senator from Arkansas on which there is now 20 minutes of debate equally divided.

VIOLENT CRIME CONTROL ACT

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT AGREEMENT

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be able to proceed to speak on this cloture vote for just a few minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. How long does the Senator wish?

Mr. BIDEN. I do not know.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, and I do not want to object, will the Senator give us a number of minutes, and can we have assurance we do not open up a whole question of debate here for replies and rebuttal and surrebuttal?

Mr. BIDEN. Ten minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware has requested 10 minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I do not know what the Senator is going to say. I may want to say something, also.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there be 7½ minutes for the Senator from Delaware and 7½ minutes for the Senator from South Carolina.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The request of the Senator from Delaware is 15 minutes divided between the Senator from Delaware and the Senator from South Carolina. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I thank the manager of the bill for allowing that. I realize it is a bit unusual, but the way we are proceeding is a bit unusual.

Mr. President, 126 days ago, the President of the United States called on the Congress to pass a crime bill.

The Democratic leadership in the Senate has taken this challenge seriously. We have introduced a crime bill, we agreed to bring it directly to the floor, without any delay in committee—and to the majority leader's great credit, he agreed to make the crime bill the first order of business in the Senate after we disposed of the President's other 100-day challenge, the transportation bill.

After 3 weeks of debates, amendments, and votes—today, the Senate stands prepared to pass a crime bill that answers the President's challenge.

Now it is true that this crime bill more closely resembles the Democratic crime bill than the President's—it includes a version of the Brady bill in it, it includes the DeConcini assault weapon ban, it includes our exclusionary rule provision, it includes most of our death penalty procedures, and it includes the many, many important crime fighting programs we Democrats have proposed.

But to the President's credit—and I do want to give him credit for this—it is my understanding that he and the Justice Department have said, that notwithstanding these differences from the President's bill, the President supports Senate passage of this crime bill.

So here we are. The Senate has a crime bill that most Democrats are prepared to support, that the President is prepared to support—why can we not pass it?

We cannot pass this crime bill because some Senators are engaged in a filibuster of it.

Why? Why do these Senators want to block our adoption of this bill?

It cannot be because the Republicans have been denied their chance to offer anticrime amendments.

When my Republican colleagues wanted a vote on the President's crime bill, we agreed to their request.

And then, when they said, "No, actually, we want a vote on a revised crime bill"—a bill that dropped items from the President's bill and added most of our bill to it.—we agreed to that request. And the Senate voted, and rejected this hybrid proposal soundly.

The Republicans wanted a vote on exclusionary rule reform. So we said, OK let's vote on the President's package. And they said, "No thanks," and proposed a reform that was one-half of what the President proposed.

And still, we took an up-and-down vote on it. And again, we rejected it.

The Republicans said they did not want to have the first gun vote be on the Brady bill—they wanted to have a gun substitute, the Stevens bill. So we gave them a vote on the Stevens bill—and, again, we rejected it.

And on, and on, and on. Each time, we have been, in effect, dared to take up and vote on Republican amendments to this bill—and each time, we have voted on them, up-and-down, just as requested.

So we have had a full airing of the philosophical differences between the President's bill and our bill—the President has won on some, we have won on others, and whatever you want to say about the product, no one can be against cloture because there has not yet been a full airing of our respective views.

Now maybe the opponents of cloture will say that they are voting "no" because they have nongermane amendments they wish to offer to the bill.

We all have amendments we would like to put on this bill. There are dozens of Democratic Senators who have amendments—I have amendments.

But we recognize that there comes a time when each Senator's desire to have his amendments adopted must give way to the Senate's need to complete a bill. On this bill, the Senate has considered and disposed of 84 amendments—84 amendments.

So, it can hardly be said that the bill has been closed to amendment. And so I say to my Republican friends: if we Democratic Senators are prepared to forgo our amendments to pass this bill, why will you not do the same?

Now, perhaps we will hear that some people do not want cloture because they are afraid that the key provisions in the bill will be changed after cloture is invoked.

But yesterday, I stood here and proposed that we lock in the key provisions of the bill—an offer the distinguished ranking member accepted—only to have it rejected by other Republican Senators.

So much for that excuse for being against cloture.

Perhaps we will hear the opposite complaint: that cloture should not be invoked because the major provisions in the bill need to be changed.

But to this I say: many amendments that would change the major provisions in the bill would remain germane postcloture. So invoking cloture does not cut off all efforts to change the exclusionary rule or habeas corpus.

So much for that excuse.

Now I am sure that we will hear a host of other explanations as well. But let us lay the cards on the table. If cloture is not invoked today, it is for one simple reason, and it can be summarized in four letters: g-u-n-s, guns.

If cloture is not invoked, it will be because opponents of the firearms provisions in this bill vote to block further progress on the bill.

I respect the rights of any Senator to vote against cloture for any reason. If a Senator wants to oppose cloture because he does not want any crime bill if that bill includes the Brady bill or the DeConcini bill, that is his prerogative, and I respect that.

But I hope we do not hear that Senators are voting against cloture because, as one of my Republican colleagues claimed last week, this is a "gun bill, not a crime bill."

This is not a crime bill? With 60 death penalty offenses—more than even the President's bill contained? With 10,000 new local cops?

Not a crime bill? With unprecedented limits on habeas appeals? With 3,000 new Federal agents? With a rural crime plan?

Not a crime bill? With new mandatory penalties for every gun offense? With an antigang plan? With new prisons and boot camps?

Not a "crime bill?" Tell that to the police officers waiting out in the reception room—or to those walking the beat today in neighborhoods around the country.

They want this bill. And they want you to vote for cloture on it.

In closing, Mr. President, I want to make two observations.

First, I want to say to my colleagues, that we all make speeches about getting tough on crime. Boy, do we make speeches.

We make TV ads. We go to town meetings and tell our constituents how tough we are on crime. And we make more speeches.

Well today, we vote on whether we are going to have a crime bill. And it is high time to see whether our votes are going to match up to our raised voices. Are we going to just give speeches on crime, or are we going to have a crime bill—that's the question.

My second observation concerns the administration, and the politics of crime.

When this bill came to the floor, I called on the administration to take the politics out of this bill; to make it a bipartisan effort; to join us in working out a compromise crime bill.

It has not been easy, but here we are with a crime bill—not the way I wanted it, not the way the President wanted it—but basically, in a fashion that we are both prepared to accept it.

Simply put: I support this crime bill. The President supports this crime bill. That dispute is resolved.

I do want to say this: I have been reading over the past few weeks that the White House intends to make crime an issue in the upcoming elections.

And if that is true, I hope the President and the media will not forget today's vote. Because if cloture fails today, and the crime bill is blocked, it will not be because a majority of Democrats vote against cloture, it will be because a majority of the Members of the President's own party vote to block a crime bill.

So let us not hear about the Republicans being tougher on crime. I hope we will not hear any statements from the White House about congressional foot-dragging on crime—unless those statements also include an accurate report that the cause of the delay is Members of the President's own party. Crime is not a political issue, or at least it should not be. And before anyone tries to make it one, they should stop and reflect on today's vote, and what it means.

Mr. President, as I said, it was precisely 126 days ago that the President of the United States started what I suspect most would consider to be a drumbeat to make the case that he wanted his crime bill and he wanted a tough crime bill. And it was a challenge that, Mr. President, we took very seriously on this side and in this committee.

We took it so seriously, Mr. President, that we came to the floor with a bill, and from the outset we accommodated everything that the President said he wanted. He said he wanted an up or down vote on his bill as a substitute to the Biden bill. That vote was not delayed. That vote was allowed. That vote was defeated. We then went through the process of amendments to the Biden bill. With the full cooperation of the managers and, I might add, the leaders on both sides, we tried as best we could to bring this, what is always a contentious piece of legislation, to fruition and final passage.

All along, Mr. President, I might add, from the time the President indicated that he wanted a crime bill, I asked the Attorney General whether or not he was willing to meet with me to work out a crime bill, to save us the time to get by not only the 100 days but to get it well under 100 days, and there was a deafening silence from the administration in terms of the willingness to talk about any potential compromise on a crime bill.

But as usual, the senior Senator from South Carolina, the man who we still call the chairman of the Judiciary Committee, Senator THURMOND, was fully prepared to try to produce a tough crime bill by and through negotiation. We began that process. And on a number of issues, the Senator from Delaware and others on this side won. On a number of issues, we lost.

We ended up producing to this point a crime bill which at least the administrative spokespersons in the White House are saying the President is ready and willing to sign. But here we are. We are at a point now where the same President who was beating—to use the literal term—politically beating to death the chairman of the Judiciary Committee and every one on the Democratic side on this challenge of 100 days to pass a bill, we are 126 days down the road with a bill he says he would accept, as I understand it, but an unwillingness on the part of all but seven Republicans to allow it to come to a final vote.

Forty-nine Democrats on this floor today voted to bring debate to an end, to allow only 30 hours of debate, only 30 hours of debate from this point on, after 3 weeks, and allow germane amendments to be debated on, voted on, and finally vote on this bill. And only seven Republicans were willing to do the same.

Now I understand from the distinguished leader of the Republican party in the Senate that in a second cloture vote there is a likelihood that there may be some changed minds. I sincerely hope that is the case.

We have a tough crime bill. I would like very much to be able to finally let the Senate work its will on a bill that the President, the administration, and the Attorney General, as I understand it—not directly said to me, though—are willing to accept, think is a good, tough bill.

Let me conclude my short time here by suggesting that I want to thank the Senator from South Carolina, who has been as tough and as consistent and as thorough and as relentless as anyone could possibly be trying to bring this bill to a close. And I pledge to him that between now and the next vote I am willing to meet with him and anyone else to try to work out an accommodation that could allow this bill to be ultimately voted on.

I sincerely hope, if we have a second cloture vote, that we do not have to wait another 24 hours for that cloture vote. I hope that if what people say privately here, that there are enough votes to have cloture, why wait and drag this out so that we spend another whole week on this legislation.

From the time we get cloture, we still have filed—I do not know how many—scores of amendments that are still in order under cloture and are contentious. Why not bring this to an end, move to the House, move to conference, and get a tough crime bill?

Last, and I will cease and desist with this comment, I wish the President would be as articulate and as vocal publicly with his Republican colleagues who are in the process of killing a tough crime bill as he was with his Democratic friends who were trying to negotiate a crime bill with his administration which would not speak with the Democrats who were trying to put together a crime bill.

I call on the President to call publicly upon his friends in the Republican Party to allow this bill, which I understand he thinks is a good bill, to allow it to come to a vote so we can move on to do what everyone in this body says they want to do, come down much tougher on crime and enhance the possibility that American citizens will be a little bit safer tomorrow than they are today.

I yield the floor and I thank my friend from Louisiana for the opportunity to speak.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, we worked hard on this crime bill and I think we are going to get a crime bill. There are a few on this side that said they wanted to offer some amendments, and possibly we could have another cloture vote tonight. I suggest maybe we get off this bill and give them a chance to offer these amendments and get them out of the way and then vote cloture tonight, if that is agreeable with the majority leader.

The distinguished assistant Republican leader wanted to say a few words.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I have been very intrigued by the work of Senator BIDEN and Senator THURMOND. I really do commend them. They have done a splendid job and we are going to get a bill. We really should keep our eye on the rabbit here as to what is happening.

If those on the other side of the aisle had wished to invoke cloture, they had all the horses to do it. Because we had the votes and gave them the votes to do it, seven of them. So if their 57 had held tough, they would have had cloture. So I think perhaps we can skip this exercise in, you know, slapping it back and forth and up into the net and getting the puck down the ice. There were seven Democrats who decided to drag their feet, I guess, on that side.

So let us, instead of just babbling about it and beating the President to death—and I did not hear the Attorney General or the President ever ask to stall this, not once. In fact, if all could have heard the eloquence of the Attorney General this morning in our conference they would have been quite intrigued and moved by it. So if we can now dampen down a little of the old partisan scratching and stop whacking on the President in a feckless exercise which really does not have anything to do with anything here—this is the President's bill in many respects.

This is Senator BIDEN's bill in many respects; this is Senator THURMOND's bill in many respects. That is what this is. The only purpose here is on the part of a lot of people we are calling westerners, of both parties. Look at the rollcall vote and you will find there are not many westerners, maybe one or two, who are not deeply involved in this issue called gun control. It is a burning issue, and we cannot get away from it in our part of the country.

We have important amendments. People have been very forthcoming. If we have one person over here who continued to stall amendments, I know one person on the other side of the aisle who is always trying to do that. So let us get on with the action and see if we can do some amendments.

I rely on the good faith of the Senator from Delaware and the Senator from South Carolina to see what amendments they will process. We might get unanimous consent to do the cloture vote without waiting until 12:05 tonight, but I am ready to do that. But let the RECORD disclose very simply that any time the other side wished to have their cloture, they could have achieved it, because they knew exactly what the score was on this side of the aisle.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to use just a portion of my leader time to make one concluding comment on this subject, and I thank the distinguished Senator from Louisiana for his patience and courtesy.

Mr. President, under the rules of the Senate, the next cloture vote will occur, unless otherwise agreed to, 1 hour after the Senate convenes tomorrow. I am advised that that, therefore, could be any time from 1 a.m. tomorrow on.

I am extremely reluctant to pursue that course of action, but it is a course of action which I must consider under the circumstances. We have now been 3 weeks on this bill. There is no end in sight at this point. And I hope my colleagues will consider the request that I made earlier, which I have discussed with the distinguished Republican leader, to agree to permit the second cloture vote to occur today by consent at an earlier time. Because, although I am reluctant to proceed to have a vote on cloture at 1 a.m. tomorrow, that may be the only option available.

So I call upon my colleagues to consider that, and I hope they will be cooperative and that we can work this out, and that we can get cloture and proceed to complete action on this bill.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, will the majority leader yield for a question?

Mr. MITCHELL. Yes. Sure.

Mr. JOHNSTON. May I suggest it be scheduled immediately after the vote on final passage—which I understand has been requested—on the energy and water appropriations bill, so those can be back-to-back? I hope that will be early this afternoon.

Mr. MITCHELL. We have asked that it be as early as possible. We are awaiting the response from our colleagues. As the Senator knows, this requires unanimous consent, as so many things do in the Senate, and one Senator can prevent that from occurring.

But my point is that in so doing, that is, in preventing it from occurring, that Senator would in effect, or at least possibly, cause all Senators to be inconvenienced and to have to be in and have a cloture vote at 1 o'clock in the morning, which I think none of us want.

I thank my colleague. We will try to pursue that on a back-to-back basis.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, let me say, in 30 seconds, that we did hear the Attorney General in the Republican Caucus. We listened and we voted with him; and the Republican Caucus voted with the NRA.

I yield the floor.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I suggest, if the majority leader would see fit, to set a time tonight for another vote and then get off the bill. And between now and then act on a few amendments that some have, and have a second vote tonight.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, if I might respond. That is precisely my request, Mr. Chairman. I have asked exactly that of you and your colleagues.

I think Senator JOHNSTON's suggestion is an excellent one: That we simply have the cloture vote immediately following final passage on the energy and water appropriations bill, which we hope will come sometime later today.

Mr. THURMOND. How long will that take?

Mr. JOHNSTON. I hope we can dispose of it in a couple of hours.

Mr. THURMOND. A couple of hours? They may need those hours to get off a few of these amendments. If we can get off of it now and let these amendments be disposed of, then we can go and get the cloture vote, and then go back to finish that.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, why do we not proceed? Let us now take the time to permit yourself and Senator BIDEN to meet and try to work out these matters as they occur on this bill.

Mr. THURMOND. If the Senator could allow a reasonable time to permit several amendments to be offered here, I think we can get cloture then.

Mr. MITCHELL. We will do that. I again thank the Senator from Louisiana.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator from Delaware has been used. The Senator from Delaware has yielded back his time.

The Senator from Louisiana is now recognized.

ENERGY AND WATER DEVELOPMENT APPROPRIATIONS, FISCAL YEAR 1992

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, in not more than 20 minutes, and I think not less than that, we will vote on a motion to table the Bumpers amendment. The Bumpers amendment would take all the funding from the superconducting super collider and terminate the project.

Mr. President, I reviewed a little earlier, and I will do so very quickly right now, why we should have the superconducting super collider.

First, we have a very solid cost estimate at $8.2 billion which includes $1 billion of contingency funding.

We have a very solid cost estimate on this project. I reviewed earlier the incredible breakthroughs in science that can be expected from pursuing the superconducting super collider, from magnetic resonance imaging to magnetically powered ships to magnetic levitating trains to all kinds of PET scanning and CAT scanning and medical breakthroughs. And I listed those in great detail.

Suffice it to say that the scientific and technological breakthroughs that can be expected from this project are overwhelming and almost without limit. But more fundamentally, the superconducting super collider is expected to tell us the very secrets of the universe, the very secrets of matter.

I pointed out earlier we used to believe in science that the smallest part of matter was the atom. Then, in 1911, we found out that the atom itself was composed of protons, neutrons, and electrons.

And more recently, through use of accelerators, through use of machines like this, only less powerful; we have found that atoms, in turn, are composed of quarks and leptons. In turn, Mr. President, there are three pairs of quarks and three pairs of leptons.

Scientists believe that this pattern, based upon experience and based upon history, suggests that there is a basic structure to matter, the structure of which we do not yet fully understand and cannot prove mathematically. So the superconducting super collider is designed to discover that structure. It is designed to discover the particles as yet unknown, some of which exist only theoretically, that make up all of the parts of that structure.

The answers to that everlasting puzzle are likely to be surprising. They may be breathtaking. They will surely be fundamental in their scope and in their profundity. They are sure to be important for the future of the world in science, probably medicine, nutrition, technology, and clearly the understanding of the world.

We are also likely, with this research, Mr. President, to unlock the secrets of the four fundamental forces that control everything: Electromagnetism, the strong force that controls the atom, the weak force that deals with radio activity, and gravity, all of which we believe are related. They are related mathematically, and the mathematical formula through the superconducting super collider can be proved and verified. It is the grand design of the universe.

When we say the universe, we now know that in proving the smallest of things, we unlock the secrets of the whole universe. We think, for example, that the dark spots in the universe are probably composed of neutrinos, which, in turn, are one of the small leptons, the character of which we are likely to unlock in the superconducting super collider.

Why do we need a machine of such vast size, 54 miles in circumference with a collision which takes place at a force of 40 trillion electron volts? Because, the scientists tell us, it is only at those great energies that, for example, the strong force and the weak force behave in a characteristic way that allows us to determine the formula by which the four forces are connected.

Mr. President, this is the most important scientific endeavor in the world today—the most important in the world—because it tells us about the very nature of our universe and all that it is made of. I hope that the United States will continue its lead with the superconducting super collider.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LIEBERMAN). The Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, I hope that I will not use the 10 minutes that has been allotted to me. I think basically everything that can be said on this subject has been said. I want to say to my colleagues, finally, that this is the last chance you will have to stop this project. If we put the $500 plus million into the 1992 budget with the $597 million that has already been appropriated over the preceding years, the nose-under-the-tent argument next year will be irresistible. The argument will be that we have already spent $1 billion and we are going to lose it if we do not go forward with it. In my opinion, and based on 16 years in the Senate, I have never seen this body resist an argument where a billion dollars has already been spent. So this is your last opportunity, I say to my colleagues, to stop a project that may have some merit as a scientific curiosity, but as an economic or scientific payback project, it is a terrible waste.

The junior Senator from Texas says if we save this $500 million here, we will just spend it somewhere else. Why is that? Has this body become so irresponsible that if you save $500 million on something because it is a waste, you take it and try to find something else to waste it on? It depends on what happens with the conferees in the House. Surely, the U.S. Senate conferees will not go in there and say we saved this $500 million, but our instructions under the budget agreement are to find some other boondoggle to put this money in so we meet our 602(b) allocation. I thought the 602(b) allocation was supposed to be a cap, not a floor.

When it comes to the cost of this project, you want the U.S. Government to keep its word. Secretary Watkins told our committee that if this could not be built for $5.9 billion, it would not be built. Now the cost is up to $11 billion, and he is the biggest cheerleader in Washington for this project. He said it would not be built unless we got $1.75 billion from other countries. So far, we have a $50 million pledge from India. We do not have a dime in hand from them. Now he is saying we are going to go forward whether our foreign counterparts contribute or not.

I can tell you one thing. If I were any of those people who were considering participating in this, that would be enough to tell me not to. The Secretary said essentially do not worry about it, we are going forward with this whether you contribute or not.

How many times have you heard on the floor of the U.S. Senate in the past 5 or 10 years about how brilliant the Japanese are. I will tell you how brilliant they are. They have enough sense not to participate in this project. The suggestion has been made that the Japanese might put up $1 billion. That was made by the Department of Energy, not the Japanese. Why would they participate in it? They are busy building electronics and doing basic research to build products to send to the United States to continue eating our economic lunch while we squander $11 plus billion on a project that has gone up roughly $4 billion a year in costs ever since it was first conceived by President Reagan in 1987, and it is not off the drawing board. Senators can hardly wait to vote for it.

Do you want me to tell you something worthwhile? The human genome project where medical science wants to map every gene in the human body, now you talk about science that we know will work and would have an unbelievable benefit for mankind, it is the human genome project. Do you know what the chances are of our funding both this and the space station and the human genome project? You guessed it. Zip. Not a prayer.

I will warn those Senators from California and Illinois and New York that Brookhaven Laboratory in New York, the Fermi Labs in Illinois, and the Stanford Linear Accelerator in Stanford, every one of those projects are almost certainly going to close when this thing is fully funded.

One of the most devastating things about this, Mr. President, is that the Western European consortium called CERN is way ahead of us doing the same thing, at a cost of a fraction of what we are proposing to spend here, and are very likely to have this exotic answer to the origin of matter before we ever get our tunnel built.

I asked somebody on the other side to answer the question this morning: Assuming under the best case scenario that our foreign counterparts put up $1.75 billion, what if the cost of this project goes to $40 billion in 1999, and it almost certainly will, their contribution will still be $1.75 billion and old Uncle Sucker would have picked up the rest of the tab.

Mr. President, the GAO says this is not a sure thing; that there are plenty of significant technical risks in developing these dipole magnets.

I will just close by quoting President Reagan, who used to write to all of his constituents and say on television, because he came to power saying, "I am going to balance the budget," and when the budget went completely out of control—as I quoted this morning, the first 8 months of this year the deficit is more than the entire 4 years of Jimmy Carter, and one of the reasons is because this body cannot screw up its courage to cut anything—anything. These four projects, the SSC, the space station, SDI, and the B-2 bomber. George Bush wants the line-item veto. A line-item veto is not a drop in the bucket compared to what the U.S. Congress can do if we want to do it.

He could not save $2 billion with a line-item veto. We have a chance to stop $15 billion of waste. We might, incidentally, take $40 million of that, about one one-hundredth of this, and vaccinate our children against measles. We are so caught up in this stuff we cannot see the forest for the trees.

President Reagan, when the deficit went completely out of control, said, "I cannot spend any money that Congress does not appropriate." Well, technically that is right. The Constitution says that. He cannot spend any money that we do not appropriate. God knows, we have been plenty cooperative around here, too.

But it was President Reagan and President Bush who wanted even more for the super collider than we would appropriate, even more for SDI than we would appropriate, 75 B-2 bombers at $1 billion each, submitting us a grandiose education program at a total cost of $200 million less than the cost of one B-2 bomber. That is not what I call a commitment to education.

There is one thread that runs through every poll I have seen, and I believe this thread; I go home every weekend and I talk to my constituents. I will tell you what that thread is. Congress is not doing anything that is relevant in their lives. They are having a tough time. There are a lot of people in my State who do not believe this recession has bottomed out because they are still hurting. I know a couple who, wanting to buy a home so badly, just yesterday could not come up with the $24,000 downpayment. How many people in America do you think can? Maybe a U.S. Senator can. But the ordinary citizen cannot.

We do not do things relevant in their life. And you ask the ordinary citizen on the streets of America, what do you think about the superconducting super collider? Well, they will dial 911. They have never heard of it. They think it is profane. But I will tell you one thing, if you go home and you tell the American people you voted to cut $12 or $15 billion of utter wasteful spending, they will consider that relevant in their lives.

So, Mr. President, if we can do one thing which would renew their faith ever so slightly, this would be a very good beginning. I yield the floor.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I rise to oppose the Bumpers amendment to eliminate funding for the superconducting super collider. I appreciate the concerns of my colleague from Arkansas about developing clearer priorities for science research and development in this country. However, in my view, the SSC ought to be a priority program.

Whole new industries could be developed by the research to be done by the SSC. Past research in physics have helped develop the following technologies—radar, x rays, television, microwaves, semiconductors, computers, and lasers. Most of these originated in the United States.

Research is probably one of the most beneficial use of taxpayer dollars. The innovation to be inspired by a better understanding of atomic particles could revolutionize the U.S. economy. Such a revolution could dramatically improve living conditions throughout our society. That is a benefit worth pursuing.

Even though research and development on the SSC has barely begun, we already have our first spin-off. The University of Florida has discovered a new treatment for plastic materials with possible widespread commercial application. This new treatment allows certain plastics to withstand repeated sterilization, which will directly impact the manufacture of medical-grade plastics.

SSC technology has also helped to improve magnet technology. For example, the current-carrying capacity of superconducting cable has increased 50 percent since the start of SSC research and development. Similar improvements in magnet technology can be expected as industry increases production capabilities.

Often in this country, and indeed on this Senate floor, we hear statements lamenting America's economic woes and our loss of high-technology markets. Solutions to the problems that industry faces and our ability to produce better and more competitive products depend upon continued technological progress.

We must invest in our technological future. That means investing in the science that yields technology. Please join me in supporting the SSC—it is an investment that is sure to pay for itself many times over in the years to come.

In closing I would urge my colleagues to vote against this amendment or for a motion to table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. JOHNSTON addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I believe this matter has been adequately debated. The superconducting super collider is not just another project. It is not just a curiosity. It is fundamental. It is the most important research project in America today, in the world today, because it tells us the basic secrets of the universe, the basic secrets of energy and matter, and it must be pursued. I urge my colleagues to vote to table the Bumpers amendment.

I yield back the remainder of my time. I move to table the Bumpers amendment and ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is not a sufficient second.

Mr. BUMPERS. I suggest the absence of quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I move to table the Bumpers amendment and ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion to table the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. FORD. I announce that the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. PRYOR] is absent because of illness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber who desire to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 62, nays 37, as follows:

NOT VOTING—1

Pryor

So the motion to lay on the table the amendment (No. 686) was agreed to.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. HATFIELD. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, we have only two amendments remaining, because I understand that Senator DOLE will not have an amendment. So the only two amendments are the Fowler and Wirth amendments and any second-degree amendments which may be attached thereto. I hope we can work those out.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana retains the floor.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I yield to the distinguished Senator from Georgia. I believe we have the amendment worked out.

Mr. President, I would say to my colleagues that I think we have two amendments, both of which are worked out and can be quickly disposed of and we will go straight to final passage I hope within 10 minutes or so.

Mr. HATFIELD. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. JOHNSTON. I yield.

Mr. HATFIELD. On behalf of Senators WALLOP and DOLE I ask unanimous consent to withdraw two amendments, that they not be offered: The Wallop amendment on Buffalo Bill dam and the Dole amendment on high technology research.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has that right.

The amendments will be withdrawn. Mr. HATFIELD. I thank the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Georgia [Mr. FOWLER].

AMENDMENT NO. 709

(Purpose: To improve the funding of energy systems)

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. President, on behalf of the Senator from Vermont [Mr. JEFFORDS] and myself I send an amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Georgia [Mr. FOWLER] for himself and Mr. JEFFORDS proposes an amendment numbered 709.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 47, line 11, before the period, insert “; and of which $60,400,000 shall be for photovoltaic energy systems (of which $58,900,000 shall be for operating expenses and $1,500,000 shall be for capital equipment), $29,100,000 shall be for solar thermal energy systems (of which $28,650,000 shall be for operating expenses and $450,000 shall be for capital equipment), $39,300,000 shall be for biofuels energy systems (of which $35,000,000 shall be for operating expenses and $4,300,000 shall be for capital equipment), $21,400,000 shall be for wind energy systems (of which $21,200,000 shall be for operating expenses and $200,000 shall be for capital equipment)".

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. President, I want to yield to the cosponsor and author of this amendment, the Senator from Vermont [Mr. JEFFORDS] for his statement.

But before I do that I thank the chairman of the committee, my friend from Louisiana, and the ranking member, Mr. HATFIELD, who have helped us very much in expediting this matter, and also the Senator from Utah [Mr. GARN], the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. DOMENICI], and others, who have bent over backward to make sure that we had fair and thorough consideration of this matter, for all of which I am deeply appreciative.

Mr. President, I yield the floor to my friend from Vermont.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, this amendment reinforces the importance of developing a national energy strategy that places a priority on renewable energy technologies. It restores funding for renewable energy technologies to the levels passed by the House of Representatives.

I commend the Senator from Georgia [Mr. FOWLER] who, like myself, has long been a proponent of solar, wind, and biomass energy resources. I think it is clear that the American people are looking toward Congress to develop viable energy policy options, and there is a clear preference for low-polluting—or nonpollution—renewable technologies.

The amount of money effected by our amendment is $14.7 million. We propose to restore the Senate funding levels to that approved by the House of Representatives. This amounts to $2.5 million for biofuels, $3.6 million for photovoltaics, $3.5 million for solar thermal, and $3.5 million for wind energy.

Originally we had proposed that this money come from the nuclear space energy programs, but after consultation and working with the managers of the bill, we have agreed that it should come instead from the general research and development pot which is, I think, over $330 million.

Now, what does this amendment do and what areas are we talking about? There are basically four areas that we are looking at to provide just a little bit more, and what it does is essentially bring the funding levels up to the House levels.

The Fowler/Jeffords amendment reprograms a total of $14.7 million of the funds in the committee bill. It goes into four separate areas. One, which I think is a very, very important area is the biofuels research area. Last February, I had an opportunity to visit the Department of Energy's Solar Energy Research Institute in Boulder, CO. The work being done there, and in other DOE research labs across the country, is fascinating.

In the biofuels research area, great strides have been taken to move us closer to the commercial development of liquid fuels from biomass. The DOE has reduced the costs associated with biofuel conversion to the $1.20-per-gallon range, with a target of 60 cents per gallon by the year 2000. It has clearly defined the research efforts it needs to undertake to get from here to there, including the development of a commercial user facility with the flexibility to test various feedstocks and process steps. I think it is important that we fund these programs, without unnecessary strings attached, so that we can move more quickly to the commercialization of biomass resource potential of the United States.

The second general area is one which I have been watching very closely over the past decade or more, and was excited to find, in my visit to SERI this year, in which there have been substantial improvements, is photovoltaics. That is a direct conversion of Sun into electricity through various techniques.

The photovoltaics program would regain the $3.6 million as requested in the House bill. This would allow funding for important manufacturing and utility initiatives, including the photovoltaic utility scale application, the photovoltaic manufacturing technology initiative and the thin-film materials program. In other words, the additional money will assist in the commercial development of these promising technologies, moving the laboratory into the marketplace.

I must say, Mr. President, that what I learned out there is that we are fast approaching the time when these will be commercially viable and competitive and this would be an incredible step forward not only for this country but essentially for developing nations which have little or no fossil fuel sources but can utilize solar energy.

In the solar thermal program, the additional $5.1 million will be used to boost the dish/engine validation and the solar baseload powerplant joint venture. Another initiative involves the use of the newest solar concentrators to break down toxins in water using sunlight as a heat source. In Boulder this year, I saw solar units that could burn through steel. Again, we demonstrate our national commitment to the commercial development of these American technologies.

The $3.5 million restored to the wind program will be used to fund the small turbine initiative. This project is an effort to develop, in cooperation with private sector partners, a next generation wind turbine that would bring costs down to a nickle per kWh, making wind-generated electricity widely competitive with conventional technologies. Wind power is currently demonstrating its effectiveness in mountain passes in California and atop mountains in Vermont. Newer technologies will make wind power a viable option in more areas, both here and abroad.

Mr. President, the world faces an energy dilemma similar to our own. Conventional energy resources are becoming scarcer, both in terms of resource reserves and location. Additionally, there are growing environmental concerns about fossil fuel resources. Renewable energy offers benefits which overcome both of these problems. By definition, the sources are continuously available. By inference, the environmental impacts are minimal.

Now is not the time to cut back our efforts to further the commercial development of these technologies. Many of the initiative which will be funded under the Fowler-Jeffords amendment are cost-share opportunities with the private sector. In terms of absolute dollars, the benefits of this amendment are greater than the $14.7 reprogrammed under this amendment.

In terms of priorities; in terms of commercial readiness; in terms of clearly defined policy objectives; it simply makes sense to restore these renewable energy investment dollars to the levels approved by the House of Representatives.

Solar, wind, and biomass energy technologies are a fundamental part of our national energy strategy. In order to realize the widespread commercial development of these renewable energy resources, a continued Federal effort is required. This amendment provides the funds to keep us on track, and I urge its adoption.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. President, the amendment the Senator from Vermont and I have before the Chamber would increase the appropriations level for renewable energy research and development programs for fiscal year 1992.

For the first time in recent memory, the Senate Appropriations Committee has recommended to the full Chamber figures appreciably lower than the other body. While I commend the Senator from Louisiana for his support for an increase from the current fiscal year, I believe that the environment in which we find ourselves today merits a full-blown commitment to increased research and development for renewable energy. I believe that our amendment accomplishes that.

Specifically, our amendment would increase the line-item accounts for solar thermal, photovoltaics, wind, and biofuels by a total of $14.7 million, bringing the Senate figures in line with the recommendations made by the other body. As I mentioned previously, all of these programs received an increase in the Senate version over the previous fiscal year. But it is important to keep in context these increases. For example, our amendment would increase funding for the solar thermal program by $5.1 million, for a total of $29.1 million for the coming fiscal year. The last time we went through any sort of any energy crisis, that funding, the Congress reacted, finally gave this and other renewable energy sources a serious look, and funding was increased to $119.9 million.

Similarly, photovoltaics R&D would be increased to $60.4 million. In fiscal year 1981, it was funded at $153.2 million. Even without taking into account inflation over the last decade, you can see that these programs have suffered a decade of abuse and neglect. Each time this country encounters a situation where our energy supply is threatened, our collective eyes look toward renewable energy, and the Congress increases its support for research and development, or creates a small tax credit for some of the industries.

And shortly after our crisis is resolved, we continue on our merry way.

Mr. President, the Fowler-Jeffords amendment represents a very small increase in these four programs. But, even more importantly, I believe it sends a message to the renewable energy, and to the country, that this Congress is not going to fall back to the status quo. That this Congress understands the tremendous potential clean sources of renewable energy like solar and wind, that this Congress understands the importance of nonpolluting sources of energy and energy generated within our borders, and this time—we will not forget.

Even a cursory look at these technologies shows how far they have come, even with the neglect of the Federal Government. Wind-generated electricity, for example, cost 25 to 30 cents per kilowatt-hour only a decade ago. Today, that figure has been reduced to between 5 and 9 cents. Wind alone generates 2.5 billion kilowatt-hours per year in this country, enough to provide for the residential needs of a city of nearly a million people, or even the entire State of Vermont.

Solar thermal, steam-to-electric plants produce 8 cents per kilowatt-hour electricity, down from 24 cents just 5 years ago. Nearly 400 megawatts of solar electricity provides energy for a city of nearly 350,000 people.

Mr. President, these are not laboratory successes. These examples are proof positive that these technologies can play a significant role in our energy picture. But not without at least a fraction of the support that we heap upon conventional energy sources.

As we look around, we see growing public support for these technologies. Solar thermal, photovoltaics, wind, biomass—each of these renewable sources of electricity generation has decreased cost, increased reliability, and increased its share of the electricity market over the past decade. And, I want to stress again, we can look to the gentleman from Louisiana for a large share of the credit for these advances. Despite heavy pressure from the last two administrations, the gentleman has worked to ensure that the R&D programs continued to receive a reasonable share of the R&D funds spent by the DOE.

Mr. President, changing circumstances require changing approaches.

The lengthy debate in hearings on the national energy strategy conducted by the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, on which I am a member, served only to highlight the increased emphasis that is being placed on environmentally clean sources of energy generation.

And, of course, the gulf war served as an expensive reminder of this country's dangerous reliance on imported oil.

I do not think that there is a single one of my colleagues that does not believe that alternative energy sources can and should play a larger role in our energy supply mix. The Fowler-Jeffords amendment gives us all an opportunity to put in the RECORD our support. It is a message that needs to be heard, and I hope you will join me in sending it.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, last year we had $114 million for solar applications. The administration requested an increase to $122 million. In the bill as we reported it to the floor we included $137 million, which was an increase over the budget request of some $15 million, an increase over last year of some $23 million. What this amendment does is add an additional $14 million to the Solar Program so that it would then be $152 million.

I have long supported these programs. Although they do not produce at this time a great deal of energy, it is hoped that they will fill an important niche in the energy future of the country. And they are certainly widely supported across the country.

I think it is important in any comprehensive energy strategy to have renewables and solar as part of that strategy. It is not going to solve the problem. If we put $20 billion here, it is not going to solve the problem. But it will help. And for that reason we are willing to go along with the additional increase of $14 million.

I call the attention of my colleagues to the fact that this is a sizable increase over last year, almost $40 million, well, a $38 million increase over last year, and a tremendous increase, some $30 million over the budget request. So I think we are treating with this amendment solar energy very generously.

I congratulate my distinguished colleague from Georgia and my distinguished colleague from Vermont for their long-time leadership in this area. And with thanks to them, we on this side of the aisle accept the amendment.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I would like to put this proposal into a broader context. Back in the seventies, when we had the Arab boycott and under the Carter administration we were responding to the problem of a national energy policy, there were those of us on that committee at that time who were deeply committed and concerned about the failure to have addressed the possibilities and the potential of renewables, including solar.

Let this figure that is quoted now with the addition of this amendment seems staggering, we were considering the appropriations, considering the tax credits that were provided for renewables as incentives, we were up to almost a billion dollars in 1 year of expenditures and investments in renewables, including solar. So when we are talking about this figure, it is really an interesting contrast and comparison. Now my problem is that we cannot expect to get the results from the investments if we do not sustain our commitment over a reasonable period of time.

The billion dollars really was never given an opportunity to give us a return on our investments because it was dropped and gradually declined to the point where it was next to nothing. We have to not only get these sustained levels but we have to realize that these are long-term returns that do come back to us for the investments made initially.

I want to also make a second observation. In the Johnston-Wallop energy bill that has been tried and tested and debated and heard through many, many hours in the Energy Committee, which Senator JOHNSTON also chairs, this issue was carefully considered. And once again a commitment is found within that bill, the authorizing bill, in which the Senator from Georgia and others have been very much involved.

So lest there are those who think this is one of those floor amendments that pops up out of context of any kind of background, or testing, or discussion, or debate, I do not know of any amendment that really has more heritage of legislative involvement, legislative consideration, than this amendment.

I am very pleased that the Senator from Georgia and the Senator from Vermont have taken this initiative as far as this bill is concerned.

It has been cleared and is enthusiastically supported on this side of the aisle as well.

Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, I just want to take 2 minutes to commend my colleagues, Senator FOWLER and Senator JEFFORDS, as well as Senator JOHNSTON and Senator HATFIELD on this.

Just two little experiences. My wife and I 10 years ago built a home in deep southern Illinois. It tends to be pretty warm territory. But about 18 months ago we had an unusual period of weather, below zero weather. I did not want to build active solar because I am no tinkerer. I did not want a bunch of pipes to tinker around with. But we made a home that was a passive solar. During the daytime in below zero weather the furnace did not kick on. It works.

The second experience was back when Jimmy Carter was President. When Archbishop Makarios, President of Cyprus, died, President Carter picked a delegation to go over to Cyprus for the funeral events. One of those picked was our former colleague, Senator Mac Mathias from Maryland. We thought while we were there we would go and visit the refugee housing, built 55 percent with American taxpayers' funds.

Every refugee unit in Nicosia, Cyprus, has solar heating devices on them. Somehow, if we can use American taxpayers' funds to see that in Nicosia, Cyprus—there is solar heating units, solar heating that help the people conserve energy—we can do it here in the United States of America. And what this amendment does is nudges us a little more in the right direction.

I commend everyone who has been involved.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Senator DASCHLE be added as an original co-sponsor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Is there further debate? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 709) was agreed to.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HATFIELD. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 710

(Purpose: To transfer funds for the Department of Energy from space reactor power systems to the Reduced Enrichment in Research and Test Reactors Program)

Mr. WIRTH. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CONRAD). The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Colorado [Mr. WIRTH] proposes an amendment numbered 710.

Mr. WIRTH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 46, line 16, strike "$2,940,916,000" and insert "$2,940,516,000".

On page 57, line 23, strike "$415,976,000" and insert "$416,476,000".

On page 58, line 15, before the period, insert the following: "Provided further, That of the sum herein appropriated, $1,300,000 shall be used for the Reduced Enrichment in Research and Test Reactors Program under the Office of International Affairs and Energy Emergencies".

Mr. WIRTH. Mr. President, the recent events in Iraq, and the search for the highly enriched uranium weapons grade material in Iraq, brings to all of us the issue of nuclear proliferation around the world. Over the last 40 years, the United States has been the No. 1 exporter of nuclear technology around the world, and has been the No. 1 exporter of highly enriched uranium which leads to weapons grade material, which leads to proliferation of nuclear weapons around the world.

In the mid-1970's the United States began an effort to convert reactors, university reactors, research reactors, and others around the world to convert those away from use of the highly enriched uranium, HEU, to alternative fuels, to a lower grade uranium which was not of weapons grade, and that was a program called the Reduced Enrichment for Research and Test Reactors Program.

That program is now about 95 percent complete. About 100 reactors are converting or looking at conversion; 8 have converted completely; 11 are in the process of conversion today; and about 80 others are watching very carefully what is happening to that first group.

In addition, three reactors, one in Belgium and two in France, are very dependent upon the United States export of highly enriched uranium. If we are concerned about proliferation, we want to deal with the Belgian and the French reactors, and with other reactors around the world.

Initially, I had offered an amendment to do two things: One, to continue to provide—to increase the amount of technical assistance the United States gives to the 100 reactors that are looking at conversion or are in the process of converting; and second, to develop the highly enriched uranium for the Belgian and the two French reactors.

The latter part of the amendment causes us a variety of problems. That gets into foreign policy issues and gets into the foreign aid bill. I think we have worked out report language asking the Secretary to develop a report back to the committee, working with the Secretary of State on negotiations with the French and with the Belgians on the conversion process there.

What we are doing is increasing, in this amendment, the funding to the level right up to what the Department of Energy that they can use, $1.3 billion, to provide technical help to those nuclear reactors, the university research and other reactors, that are in the process of converting from highly enriched uranium, the weapons-grade material, to a lower level alternative fuel.

The purpose of this amendment, on which I appreciate the help of the distinguished chairman of the subcommittee, and which I believe the subcommittee has agreed to, is to provide the level of technical help which the Department of Energy says they can usefully provide around the world.

It would be my hope that this amendment will be accepted. This is another step forward in our attempts to lower the level of nuclear proliferation around the world.

To reiterate, Mr. President, this is an amendment to reallocate $3,500,000 in the Department of Energy budget for the purpose of restoring to full funding the so-called RERTR [Reduced Enrichment for Research and Test Reactors] Program. The additional funds would come from space reactor power systems, leaving that program with a still quite substantial $40,500,000 and permitting the RERTR appropriation to rise to $4,300,000 from the presently proposed level of only $800,000.

The purpose of this amendment is to complete a very important, yet remarkably inexpensive, piece of unfinished nuclear nonproliferation business—developing the substitute nuclear fuels that will permit the United States to end its dubious role as the world's principal exporter of bomb-grade uranium for peaceful research programs.

Since 1978, the Argonne National Laboratory has been highly successful in developing high-density, low-enriched uranium fuels that are unsuitable for use in nuclear weapons to replace most, but not all, of the highly enriched, bomb-grade fuels that have been supplied by the United States to more than 100 research reactors in 34 other countries. The problem is that the fuel-development portion of the RERTR Program was terminated by the Department of Energy in fiscal year 1990 before the job was finished, placing in jeopardy the other portion of the program—the actual conversion of foreign research reactors for which substitute, non-weapons-usable fuels have been developed. To make matters worse, proposed funding to facilitate these reactor conversions has been slashed for fiscal year 1992 from $1,300,000 to $800,000, a further sign to foreign reactor operators that the United States is no longer a strong supporter of its own program.

One result of the wrenching experience in Iraq is that we all have come to see how worrisome even a rather modest amount of bomb-grade, highly enriched uranium fuel for research reactors can be. Indeed, a key element of President Bush's ongoing Middle East arms control initiative—to seek a ban on further production or acquisition of bomb-grade nuclear materials in the region—was prompted in large measure by the realization that Saddam Hussein's known inventory of about 90 pounds of highly enriched uranium gave him enough nuclear explosives to build two Nagasaki-type atomic bombs.

Although Iraq's "peaceful" nuclear research program provides one of the few examples of non-United-States-supplied highly enriched uranium—Saddam's imported fuel was provided by France and the Soviet Union—we would be unwise to miss the object lesson for our own highly enriched uranium export program. The nuclear proliferation and terrorism risks associated with bomb-grade uranium transcend Iraq and the Middle East. The Iraqi example vividly illustrates the need to remove this dangerous material from civil nuclear research programs throughout the world.

Just how dangerous is highly enriched uranium was made clear in the recently published memoir of Luis J. Alvarez, a key figure in the Manhattan project. "With the modern weapon-grade uranium," he wrote, "terrorists, if they had such material, would have a good chance of setting off a high-yield explosion simply by dropping one-half of the material onto the other half. Most people seem unaware that if separated U-235 is at hand it is a trivial job to set off a nuclear explosion. * * * Even a high-school kid could make a bomb in short order."

Restoration of full funding for the RERTR Program—$1.3 million for reactor conversions and $3.5 million for fuel development—will make it possible to eliminate bomb-grade uranium from civil nuclear programs. We should support the President's Middle East arms control initiative by completing the RERTR Program and thereby demonstrate United States resolve to replace bomb-grade uranium in all foreign research reactors with lower-enriched fuels that cannot be used in bombs. As the Nation that has exported more than 9,000 pounds of bomb-grade uranium—compared with dozens of pounds exported by France and Britain and hundreds of pounds by the Soviet Union—the United States has a special responsibility to exercise the leadership necessary to see this program through.

Compared with the hundreds of billions of dollars spent annually on defense, the RERTR Program is a national security bargain—requiring just over $4 million in the coming fiscal year and in each of the next 4 years, according to the program managers at Argonne, to develop the substitute fuels and convert all overseas research reactors now using U.S.-supplied, bomb-grade uranium.

At this point, only 8 reactors—including 4 university reactors in the United States—of more than 100 eligible for conversion have switched to fuels that cannot be used in bombs. Another 11, including 2 in the United States, are in the process of converting, but the completion of this process and the conversion of others for which fuel has been developed may hinge on whether the RERTR Program completes its work to develop substitute fuels for 3 high-performance reactors—2 in France and 1 in Belgium—for which low-enriched fuel is not now available. Restoration of full funding for RERTR will make it possible to complete this work.

DOE has taken the position that continuation of the RERTR fuel-development effort does not make sense and is a waste of money because even assuming Argonne successfully develops the remaining high-performance fuels, the reactor operators will refuse to accept them. However, only one such operator in France has communicated to Argonne such outright opposition, and it is based primarily on the conclusion that it will prove technically impossible to develop the substitute fuel for this reactor—a conclusion with which experts at Argonne disagree.

A deeper problem for future conversion of the European high-performance reactors is DOE's apparent reluctance to convert its own reactors to low-enriched fuel—a matter that may have to be addressed in the future but should not be allowed now to interfere with development of the remaining fuels that would make possible the conversion of all foreign reactors now using United States-supplied, bomb-grade uranium. What is becoming clear is that some foreign reactor operators may refuse to accept the substitute fuels unless all other foreign operators do so. Indeed, this sentiment has been expressed at international RERTR meetings and may be the reason that a German-Dutch reactor located in the Netherlands is now seeking an additional export of some 85 pounds of highly enriched uranium, the equivalent of two bombs, even though low-enriched uranium is now available for it. This reactor, and the other three high-performance reactors for which substitute fuel must still be developed, require exports of a total of about 300 pounds of bomb-grade uranium a year.

I ask support of this amendment to make it possible to eliminate these and all other transfers of U.S. bomb-grade uranium to foreign research reactors. Iraq has taught us that the world will be far better off when commerce in such dangerous material has been eliminated.

I ask unanimous consent that a recent article from the Washington Post and two recent studies prepared for the Nuclear Control Institute on the RERTR Program and the bomb potential of highly enriched uranium be inserted at this point in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the articles were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Post, June 23, 1991]
POLITICIANS IN THE LAB * * * AND SCUTTILING
AN EASY WAY TO STOP NUCLEAR PROLIFERATION

(By Paul L. Leventhal and Deborah J. Holland)

President Bush's new arms control initiative for the Middle East calls for a ban on the production and acquisition of materials for nuclear weapons—highly enriched uranium and plutonium.

Motivating this proposal is deep concern over Iraq's possession of bomb-grade, highly enriched uranium, supplied by France and the Soviet Union for "peaceful" nuclear research. But the proliferation and terrorism risks associated with such fuel transcend the region. Almost 9,000 pounds of bomb-grade uranium is used in more than 100 research reactors in 35 countries—most of it supplied by the United States. The Iraqi example vividly illustrates the need to remove weapons-usable uranium from civil nuclear research programs.

A relatively simple and cheap solution is available—but the Bush administration seems interested only in scuttling this project as a budgetary economy. Such misguided economizing could have grim consequences for international security.

A key element of the nuclear proliferation problem is the difficulty of applying effective international safeguards to ensure that bomb-grade material is not diverted from peaceful research and converted quickly into weapons. Iraq's nearly 100 lbs. of safeguarded, highly enriched uranium is enough to build two bombs, each equal in yield to the U.S. bomb that destroyed Nagasaki.

Given ample warning of the start of the Gulf War, Iraq removed the contents of its two reactors and other nuclear plants to secret locations before the bombing began. Under the terms of the United Nations ceasefire resolution, Iraq must give up its bomb-grade uranium to the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) and allow IAEA inspectors to enter and destroy all nuclear-weapons plants.

Iraq at first denied having any weapons-usable materials or any weapons plants. After the IAEA rejected this, Baghdad provided a detailed inventory of nuclear materials but withheld most of the storage locations and disclosed the location of just one weapons plant. The inventory revealed that Iraq possessed twice the amount of safeguarded bomb-grade uranium that U.S. and IAEA officials had previously described in public statements—enough for two bombs rather than one. The situation has been further complicated by the recent disclosure that an Iraqi defector has told U.S. officials that Iraq on its own produced almost 90 lbs. of bomb-grade uranium in a secret enrichment plant—an allegation U.S. officials have not confirmed.

These revelations exposed two serious inadequacies of IAEA inspections in Iraq prior to the war. First, the inspections were limited to declared facilities because the IAEA does not look for clandestine plants. Second, according to its own goals, the agency should have inspected the safeguarded, highly enriched uranium fuel as frequently as once a month to ensure "timely detection" of a diversion of the material that can be converted into weapons in as little as one to three weeks. Instead, the IAEA inspected the bomb-grade fuel only once or twice a year.

PEACEFUL SECRETS

The secrecy surrounding "peaceful" nuclear programs is a big part of the safeguards problem. U.S. and IAEA officials now say they knew all along how much weapons-usable uranium was in Iraq. If the amounts of "peaceful" bomb-grade nuclear fuel and the particulars of inspecting it were a matter of public record, rather than being teated as a military secret, the French and Soviets might have been reluctant to export highly enriched uranium to Iraq in the first place.

The Iraqis agreed to cooperate with the IAEA only after being threatened with additional U.N. Security Council sanctions. According to the IAEA, its inspectors were recently shown and they accounted for all the known supplies of bomb-grade uranium in Iraq. The agency's plans for removing the bomb-grade fuel depend upon continued Iraqi cooperation.

Two sobering lessons emerge. The first makes starkly clear the limitation of the IAEA and the international nonproliferation regimen in coping with a nation that possesses bomb-grade materials and is determined to build and atomic bomb.

Iraq is a party in good standing to the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty (NPT). As recently as last summer the IAEA's safeguards director called Iraq's behavior "exemplary" and said the thought of Iraq making a bomb out of its fuel did not "make sense." As an NPT member, Iraq qualified to import bomb-grade nuclear fuel and other equipment suited to manufacturing weapons even though the components were not needed for peaceful research programs.

That the international community now insists upon removing Saddam's stock of highly enriched uranium—rather than simply renewing regular IAEA inspections in Iraq—reveals the inadequacy of the safeguards regimen on bomb-grade nuclear materials. Inspections as now conducted by the IAEA cannot provide "timely warning" of a diversion to a clandestine bomb program.

The second lesson is the significant danger posed by weapons-usable, highly enriched uranium—material that is no longer essential to civil nuclear research programs. Before Iraq reported it had about 100 lbs. of highly enriched uranium, J. Carson Mark, retired head of weapons design at Los Alamos National Laboratory, concluded in a report to our institute that using the 50 lbs. of bomb-grade material then thought to be in Iraq's possess, "a fairly large and competent staff," working intensively for at least a year, could design, fabricate and assemble a single implosion device weighing about a ton and yielding up to the equivalent of 20,000 tons of TNT. The larger amount Iraq is now known to possess under safeguard is enough for two bombs, Mark reported. If Iraq has nearly 90 lbs more of bomb-grade uranium that it produced in a secret plant, as the defector claims, then Iraq would have enough for another two nuclear weapons.

The late Luis J. Alvarez, a leading figure in the Manhattan Project, wrote in his memoirs that "terrorist . . . would have a good chance of setting off a high-yield explosion simply by dropping one half of the material [highly enriched uranium] on the other half. (Even a high school kid could make a bomb in short order.)"

SAFER SUBSTITUTES

Fortunately, the technology is now at hand to replace bomb-grade, highly enriched uranium in research reactors with higher-density, lower-enriched fuel that cannot be used on nuclear weapons. Unfortunately, global commerce in bomb-grade uranium is likely to continue, despite the object lesson of Iraq, because of the refusal of the Bush administration to support completion of a U.S.

technical program that is developing the replacement fuels.

This little-known program, begun in 1978, has become an orphan. It is shunted between U.S. agencies, and each year at this time gets caught in a "Perils of Pauline" struggle to survive administration attempts to slash or kill its budget. In past years, a few stalwarts in Congress managed to scrape together a million or so dollars to keep it limping along. This year, the survival of the RERTR (Reduced Enrichment for Research and Test Reactors) program is again in doubt.

Compared with the hundreds of billions of dollars spent annually on defense, this program is a national security bargain—requiring little more than $4 million a year for the next five years to develop the substitute fuels and convert all overseas research reactors now using U.S.-supplied, bomb-grade uranium. It already has developed the fuels to make it possible to convert 95 percent of these reactors. But only eight reactors of approximately 100 eligible for conversion have switched to fuels that cannot be used in bombs. The main reason is that the U.S. Government is no longer seen overseas as a strong supporter of its own program. The proof is in the administration's proposal to cut the program budget from $1.3 million to $800,000, and to leave no funds at all to finish the development of the substitute fuels.

Given the nuclear lessons of Iraq, it is time for the President and Congress to press ahead with removal of bomb-grade uranium, from all civil nuclear programs. This is a technically achievable goal, a non-proliferation approach that would work.

ELIMINATING BOMB-GRADE URANIUM FROM RESEARCH REACTORS

(By Milton M. Hoenig, Scientific Director, Nuclear Control Institute)

Over 100 nuclear research and test reactors throughout the world continue to be fueled on highly enriched uranium (HEU) supplied by the United States and other Western countries—despite the fact that this uranium is usable in nuclear bombs.<sup>1</sup> Most of the 4,000 kilograms of HEU in these reactors is 93-percent enriched, bomb-grade material from the United States. Thirty-six of the research reactors are in the U.S., and the remainder are in 34 other countries. Only eight research reactors that previously used HEU fuel have been converted to fuel fabricated from low-enriched uranium (LEU), which is not suitable for weapons use (see Table 1).

INTRODUCTION

The Carter Administration realized, more than a decade ago, that the HEU in research reactor fuel could be diverted and used directly by nations or terrorists in nuclear explosives. In 1978 it established the Reduced Enrichment for Research and Test Reactors (RERTR) program to develop "high-density," LEU fuels for replacing the HEU fuels and removing HEU from commerce. Argonne National Laboratory of the Department of Energy (DOE) directs the technical side of the RERTR program to oversee fuels development and ascertain that reactor conversions can be performed without significant penalties in performance, cost or safety.

Now, with only five years left to completion of the program, DOE has terminated

<sup>1</sup>Highly enriched uranium (HEU) is uranium enriched to 20% or more in the isotope uranium-235; uranium enriched to greater than 90% uranium-235 is bomb-grade; low-enriched uranium (LEU) is enriched to less than 20%. See appendix for discussion of research reactor fuel.

RERTR fuels development. By prematurely ending the fuels program at its present stage, DOE is signaling a halt to the development and testing of "advanced" LEU plate fuels needed to convert some 10 percent of foreign and domestic research reactors—high-power reactors that are among the world's principal nuclear research and test facilities (see Table 3). The result of early termination of the RERTR fuels program is to perpetuate the export of over 100-150 kilograms of HEU annually from the U.S. to foreign reactor operators.<sup>2</sup> Prompt action by the administration and Congress to reinstate and complete the RERTR fuels program would enable the conversion of all existing and planned research reactors.

WHY TERMINATE RERTR NOW?

U.S. Government funding for the RERTR program hovered at the $4-5 million level in the mid-1980s. The money was used for development of LEU research reactor fuels, as well as assistance to foreign reactor operators preparing for conversion. By FY 1990, RERTR funding dropped to $1.2 million, which the Bush administration designated as "final year funding" for the program.

Nevertheless, efforts in Congress, by Representatives Scheuer, Wolpe and Lloyd and by Senator Glenn, restored the funding to $1.3 million in FY 1991, but for conversion assistance to foreign reactors only. Energy Secretary Watkins has stated that DOE will continue the RERTR program at the $1.2 million level for another three years, through FY 1994, but will limit it to the conversion of reactors using high-density fuels already developed.

Thus, DOE no longer plans to fund the RERTR fuels development program, and, consequently, no further work is to be done to develop advanced LEU fuels of yet higher uranium density to finish the conversion task. This decision effectively exempts DOE's own research reactors from conversion to LEU fuels—a decision that could jeopardize the completion of the reactor conversion program worldwide. A number of foreign operators are reluctant to convert their reactors if DOE and other U.S. operators refuse to convert their reactors, as well.

HEU IS BOMB MATERIAL

A "first generation" nuclear implosion bomb of the type tested by the U.S. in 1942 would require no more than 15 to 25 kilograms of 93-percent enriched HEU metal—about one critical mass of material when it is surrounded by several inches of some neutron reflector. A more sophisticated implosion design may require even less HEU. A crude gun-type (Hiroshima-type) nuclear device would require the assembly of two or three reflected critical masses, or about 30 to 50 kilograms of 93-percent HEU, depending on the reflector, with nominal explosive yield equivalent to about fifteen thousand tons of TNT (15 kilotons).

As former Manhattan Project scientist Luis Alvarez said in his 1987 autobiography, Adventures of a Physicist, "With modern weapons-grade uranium the background neutron rate is so low that terrorists, if they had such material, would have a good chance of setting off a high-yield explosion simply by dropping one-half of the material on to the other half.<sup>3</sup> Even such a primitive mode of assembly likely would result in a nuclear explosive yield greater than 1 kiloton. Alvarez's statement calls attention to the unique risks associated with the civil use of HEU.

A nation or terrorist group would have little difficulty in recovering the HEU metal from fresh plate-type fuel that is seized in transit or from storage at the reactor site. Even if the fuel is lightly irradiated—for example, a few hours per week in a low-power (less than 100 kilowatt) university research reactor—the separation could be done despite the presence of some radioactive fission products, especially if the situation were urgent. Such an irradiated fuel assembly, whether taken from the reactor core or from storage, would not deliver a "self-protecting" external radiation dose because after a few days, or at most a few weeks, the dose would drop outside the fuel bundle below a level that would deter a dedicated group intent on acquiring bomb material.

For terrorists seeking to build a primitive nuclear weapon or rogue states preparing more sophisticated weapons, their only obstacle might be acquiring the HEU and fabricating weapon's nuclear components. Pakistan already has chosen the bomb-grade uranium route in its nuclear weapons program, and Iraq appears to be doing the same, through a concerted effort to initiate a gas centrifuge uranium enrichment program and to acquire electronic bomb components.

On hand in Iraq, but under International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) safeguards, are 12.3 kilograms of French-supplied 93-percent HEU, in fuel intended for the destroyed 40 MW Osirak reactor, and at least 10 kilograms of Soviet-supplied 80-percent HEU in fuel for the 5 MW IRT-5000 reactor. The French HEU fuel was lightly irradiated in the 800 kW Isis reactor as a condition of supply, but the current level of radiation likely would not be a barrier to recovering the uranium metal from the HEU-aluminum alloy fuel in the Italian-supplied hot cell.

Thus, HEU in commerce remains a tempting target for seizure, with possibly serious consequences. The same concern holds for the "lifetime" HEU cores in low-power research reactors that usually are irradiated so infrequently that removal of the fuel from the reactor core is possible without risk of serious exposure.

COSTS AND BENEFITS OF ADVANCED FUELS DEVELOPMENT

The feasibility of completing the advanced fuels design effort, given funding, is not in question. The major objections raised by opponents of the RERTR fuels program in DOE to continued work on advanced LEU fuels development go to the question of the costs involved relative to the small number of reactors overseas and in the U.S. for which the fuels are required. Also, DOE has no interest in converting its own research reactors and does not want to be placed in the uncomfortable position of developing fuels that it then might be forced to use in its own facilities.

In national security terms, the expenditure for the advanced fuels program is minuscule compared with other defense-related costs. Completing the RERTR fuels development program would take another five years at a cost of $3 million per year, according to Argonne estimates. The investment is minimal compared with the considerable payoff of completing the conversion of the world's premier, high-performance research and test reactors, ending HEU exports, and eliminating any justification for HEU fuel in future high-power, high-flux research facilities.

When available, the advanced fuels could become the standard for all research reactors. The use of advanced fuels in reactors presently convertible to high-density LEU fuels would offer several advantages to reactor operators in terms of lengthening refueling cycles and providing an opportunity for increasing power and flux. Wide use and commercial availability of the advanced fuels also would bring down fabrication costs.

STATUS OF FOREIGN REACTOR CONVERSIONS

Currently, 39 foreign research and test reactors having a power of 1 megawatt (MW) or more use plate fuel fabricated from HEU exported principally by the United States. Of these reactors, all but three are now convertible to high density LEU fuel that the RERTR program already had developed and tested and made available through commercial suppliers, such as CERCA in France and Babcock & Wilcox in the U.S.

Four other reactors have been fully converted to LEU—the OSIRIS reactor in France, the THOR reactor in Taiwan, the PRR-1 reactor in the Philippines and the RA-3 reactor in Argentina—and 32 of the 39 HEU-fueled reactors have developed conversion plans.

Nine foreign reactors are in the process of converting (see Table 2). For example, the 35 MW French SILOE plate-fuel reactor is scheduled to convert shortly, and the 125 MW rod-fuel Canadian NRU reactor is being fully converted to Canadian-fabricated fuel. After a decade of negotiations, the Canadian NRU reactor no longer is to receive HEU shipments for fuel from the U.S. Also, Japanese officials have announced a plan to operate the 50 MW JMTR research reactor with a full core of LEU plate fuel starting in 1993, breaking with a long-standing Japanese policy of not committing to less than 45-percent medium-enriched uranium (MEU) fuel.

In addition, General Atomics has available low-enriched Triga fuel to convert all 5 foreign and 6 domestic General Atomics Triga reactors that now use HEU fuel. Among them is the 14 MW SSR Triga in Romania, which nevertheless is still seeking export from the U.S. of a partial core of 93-percent enriched Triga fuel elements containing 17 kilograms of HEU that has been held in storage since the late 1970s at Oak Ridge.<sup>4</sup>

In the next few years as HEU fuel supplies on hand at reactor site run out, conversions made with Argonne assistance may be expected to multiply, unless foreign reactor operators manage to obtain approval from U.S. government agencies for additional exports of HEU.

At this time, the U.S. is not pressuring the operator of the convertible 45 MW HFR Petten test reactor in the Netherlands to make the changes to LEU fuel. Petten, which is a European Community facility, is scheduled to receive 38 kilograms of HEU from the U.S. in FY 1991. Even though the reactor is expected soon to complete a successful test irradiation of several LEU fuel elements of the type that could be used for a full conversion, Petten's operator steadfastly refuses to agree to conversion. The grounds for the refusal are that using the available LEU high-density fuel would require Petten to accept a cut in neutron flux that would place it at a disadvantage relative to other high performance European reactors as a center for test irradiation activities. However, Argonne's analysts show the Petten reactor is convertible with no significant operational penalty.

Research reactors with power less than 1 MW generally have lifetime cores that do not have to be replaced after the initial loading. Consequently, while all of the 35 foreign reactors in this category with HEU cores could convert with available LEU fuels, few may do so unless they are provided an incentive or compelled by national law. In the U.S., the Nuclear Regulatory Commission set a precedent with its 1986 ruling requiring NRC-licensed research reactors to convert to LEU, whether or not they have lifetime cores.

LINKING FOREIGN AND U.S. REACTOR CONVERSIONS

In addition to the 38 kilograms of HEU in FY 1991 for the Petten reactor, the U.S. is scheduled to export 96 kilograms of HEU to the three European research reactors for which advanced LEU fuels needed for conversion have not yet been developed: the 57 MW RHF Grenoble test reactor in France, the 14 MW Orphee reactor also in France, and the 80 MW BR-2 test reactor in Belgium.<sup>5</sup> The BR-2 has offered to convert together with its 0.5 kW critical assembly, BR-02, when the appropriate fuels are available. Grenoble and Orphee like Petten, have not agreed to the conversion option, although there would be no technical justification for not converting to the advanced LEU fuels. A Congressional move in 1981 to cut off all HEU exports was deferred, pending the completion of the RERTR advanced fuels development program. Now that the program has been suspended, exports of HEU fuel for these reactors are likely to continue indefinitely unless Congress acts to halt future exports.

In expressing their reluctance to convert, European reactor operators often cite a linkage between the conversion of U.S. and foreign reactors. The four European high-performance reactors, above, are often matched against a group of U.S. counterparts that are not convertible at present (see Table 3) but would be once advanced fuels from the RERTR program were developed: two DOE-owned research reactors—the 85 MW HFIR at Oak Ridge and the 60 MW HFBR at Brookhaven—and three NRC-licensed research reactors that are exempted from the 1986 rule because needed LEU fuels are not yet available—the 20 MW NIST at the National Bureau of Standards (NBS), the 10 MW reactor at the University of Missouri, and the 5 MW reactor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT).

Another DOE reactor, which is in a power class by itself, is the 250 MW Advanced Test Reactor (ATR) at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, DOE's principal materials test reactor. The ATR will be a prime conversion target if advanced LEU fuels become available. Until recently, DOE has argued that the ATR could not be converted <sup>4</sup>Triga fuel was developed for the General Atomics Triga reactor to have definite safety advantages over other research reactor fuel. Namely, the fuel has a very large negative prompt temperature coefficient of reactivity so that a very rapid rise in temperature due to the reactor going "prompt critical" stops the chain reaction immediately before the fuel can melt.

without changing the geometry of the core, but now very-high density LEU fuel concepts that have been under development at Argonne by the RERTR program would make it possible to convert the present core.

Clearly, if the RERTR LEU fuels program were allowed to proceed to completion, foreign reactor operators would be more likely to convert voluntarily if their high-power U.S. counterparts do also. The U.S. decision to terminate the RERTR fuels program is seen in the research-reactor community as a political act to save DOE from having to convert its own research reactors to LEU and to let several NRC-licensed reactors "off the hook" of the 1986 NRC conversion rule. With the completed development of advanced LEU fuels, DOE likely would be unable to justify opposing the conversion of its research reactors.

Aside from the high-power DOE reactors already noted, DOE owns four reactors with power greater than 1 MW that are convertible now to LEU fuels. Four of the seven less-than-1 MW DOE reactors, with lifetime cores, also could convert using available fuels (see Table 4).

STATUS OF U.S. REACTOR CONVERSIONS

HEU-to-LEU reactor conversion activity is still quite limited in the U.S., taking place at university reactors, in compliance with the 1986 NRC rule that mandates conversion of NRC-licensed research reactors.<sup>6</sup> The NRC rule affects 18 university research reactors. The universities are required to submit conversion plans to the NRC. Funds to support the conversions are to come from the Federal government.

Only three university reactors have converted under the rule, and two more have an order to convert from the NRC (see Table 5). Two others have submitted safety analyses to the NRC, and five more have DOE funds for preparing safety reports. Four convertible university Triga reactors have received no DOE funding as yet. Two high-power, NRC-licensed reactors—the University of Missouri and the non-university National Bureau of Standards reactors—have requested a "unique purpose exemption" to the 1986 rule because the advanced fuels required for conversion from HEU to LEU fuel are not available, and the same reason for not converting at the present time applies to the compact-core MIT reactor, although the university has not applied for an exemption to the NRC rule.

Funding for university conversions comes from a separate DOE budget for fabrication of university reactor fuel that remains the property of DOE, and for support of reactor operations. Currently, about $2 million is available annually for LEU conversion activities, which consist of preparation of reactor safety analysis reviews required for relicensing, and for LEU fuel fabrication and conversion. Argonne National Laboratory provides technical support to the universities.

Additional funding from Congress would accelerate the conversion to LEU fuel cores at universities and eliminate the potential for theft of bomb-grade uranium at some of these sites. At the present pace, it is not likely that conversions will be completed until well after 1995. The safety analyses, <sup>6</sup>In addition, the University of Michigan research reactor was full converted in 1981 as part of an early RERTR demonstration. Contracting out to Argonne would speed them up, but the universities want to keep the conversion work for graduate students, with the result that the process may take much longer and cost more.

which cost from $20,000 to $200,000, are the principal lagging factor.

U.S. HEU EXPORTS LIKELY TO GROW

If the RERTR advanced fuels development program remains unfunded and inactive, domestic use of HEU and U.S. exports of HEU are likely to increase as new research facilities come into operation. Two examples of such reactors are the 300 MW Advanced Neutron Source (ANS) under design at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory and the FRM-II in Germany. The construction of the ANS, which would use several hundred kilograms of HEU annually, and other compact-core high-flux research facilities, such as the FRM-II, will cause a dangerous rise in HEU demand and circulation in the U.S. and abroad. Congress could choose to ban HEU exports and HEU supply for domestic use and deny funding for any new DOE research reactors until the appropriate LEU fuels are developed.

CONCLUSION AND RECOMMENDATIONS

U.S. exports of bomb-grade, highly-enriched uranium will continue indefinitely at 150 kilograms per year or higher unless the Bush Administration or Congress take action to support and fund the RERTR advanced fuels development program. Completion of the fuels program will make it possible for all existing foreign and domestic research reactors to convert to low-enriched fuel. This would be a big national security dividend for a relatively small investment.

Congress should set a deadline for a complete halt in the supply of HEU for civil purposes. It should ban HEU exports and HEU supply for domestic use if appropriate LEU fuels already are available, and it should deny funding for any new DOE research reactors until the appropriate LEU fuels are developed.

To overcome the opposition of foreign reactor operators to LEU conversion and to reduce risks at DOE facilities, Congress should require DOE to submit a plan for development of advanced LEU fuels and for the conversion of its research reactors. New research facilities like the Advanced Neutron Source can be designed with cores not requiring HEU, and Argonne already has performed calculations on the feasibility of such an approach.

As the threat of nuclear war between the superpowers recedes and the nuclear arsenals are cut back, the civil use of the weapons materials—highly-enriched uranium and plutonium—should be banned universally. Meeting the objectives of the RERTR program is the means for achieving elimination of HEU.

APPENDIX: BASICS OF LEU FUEL DEVELOPMENT

The majority of research reactors use plate-type fuel. The fuel assemblies are made up of thin metal plates, 1 to 2 millimeters thick, with an inner layer containing a compound of uranium and two outer layers of aluminum clad. Other research reactors, specifically the General Atomics Triga, use assemblies made up of fuel rods rather than plates.

The technical goal of RERTR, simply stated, is to lower research reactor fuel enrichment from as high as 93-percent enriched HEU to less than 20-percent LEU, without decreasing the total amount of chain-reacting uranium-235 in the reactor core. This can be achieved safely, without obstructing the flow of coolant in the core, by fabricating fuel plates of the same dimensions and with the same amount of uranium-235 as before but with several times the amount of uranium-238 packed in, so as to reduce uranium enrichment but increase uranium density in the plate, several-fold.

When the RERTR program began, highly-enriched plate fuels made from uranium aluminate and uranium oxide compounds had uranium densities typically of less than 1.0g/cm<sup>3</sup> and up to 1.7 g/cm<sup>3</sup>. The RERTR program has developed several progressively higher-density, low-enriched plate fuels, starting with the original uranium compounds and eventually switching over to uranium silicide. Triga fuel consists of uranium dissolved in zirconium hydride.

Presently, high density, 4.8g/cm<sup>3</sup> uranium silicide LEU fuel, which had its first full-core test in 1987, is the standard plate fuel for reactor conversion. The NRC has issued a formal and generic approval for the use of silicide plate fuel with densities up to this value in research and test reactors. Also, in cooperation with the RERTR program, General Atomics has developed LEU Triga fuels with uranium densities up to 3.7g/cm<sup>3</sup> that can be used to convert all Triga reactors that are now using HEU fuel.

Work by the RERTR program on advanced LEU silicide fuels with densities as high 9.0 or 10.0g/cm<sup>3</sup> also has begun. Argonne has already fabricated and tested silicide fuel plates with uranium densities up to 7.1g/cm<sup>3</sup>. A new fuel concept using a composite of uranium silicide wires embedded in aluminum has an effective uranium density of 12.9g/cm<sup>3</sup>. Another concept uses a hot-isostatic press to fabricate silicide fuel plates with uranium density up to 10.2g/cm<sup>3</sup>. * * * developed using one of these new concepts, the advance fuels could be used to convert all plate fuel research reactor.

EXCERPT

[Nuclear Control Institute, Washington, DC]
SOME REMARKS ON IRAQ'S POSSIBLE NUCLEAR WEAPON CAPABILITY IN LIGHT OF SOME OF THE KNOWN FACTS CONCERNING NUCLEAR WEAPONS, MAY 16, 1991

(By J. Carson Mark)

J. Carson Mark is a consultant to the Nuclear Control Institute. Dr. Mark served as the head of the Theoretical Division of Los Alamos National Laboratory and has served on the Science Advisory Board of the U.S. Air Force and on the Advisory Committee on Reactor Safeguards of the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

SUMMARY

Before the Gulf War it was known that Iraq had a modest amount of weapon-usable, highly enriched uranium in the form of fuel elements for two research reactors. This material could have been dispersed or buried beneath rubble as a consequence of the bombing of their nuclear facilities, or it could have been moved to safe storage before the bombing; but nothing is publicly known about that. Iraq could hold additional amounts of weapon-usable material, obtained clandestinely, and undisclosed; but nothing is known about that, either.

To avoid embarking on an unduly speculative discussion the question addressed here is that of what could be done to manufacture one or more nuclear weapons with the material the Iraqis were known to have had available prior to the war. Since nothing is known—at least, nothing is known to the author—about the capabilities of indigenous Iraq technology in the various specialties required, the important question of whether the Iraqis were or are currently in a position to carry through without aid all the steps necessary to realize "what could be done" is necessarily left aside. In view of their devious efforts—recently unmasked—to import items of possible use in contravention of existing export controls, there has been some considerable speculation on this point. It can be stated generally, however, that for a new project to have a device in hand, a fairly large and competent staff, with diverse experience and capabilities, would have to work intensively for at least a year on design, fabrication and assembly of the device.

As to "what could be done" by such a group the following discussion suggests that with only 12.3 kg of highly enriched uranium on hand (this being one of the two batches known to have been available to Iraq) no damaging nuclear explosion would be possible using the (simpler) gun-type assembly method. With a commendably effective use of the implosion method it should be possible to realize a yield of the order of 10 kilotons in a device in which the nuclear components and HE weighted only a ton, or so, provided beryllium metal technology were available; or weighing several times more if the use of beryllium as a reflector were not feasible. With 22.3 kg of enriched uranium (the combined total of the two batches held by Iraq)<sup>1</sup> an explosion of the order of a kiloton might just be managed from a gun-type assembly with free use of beryllium; but not otherwise. By effective use of the implosion approach (and without beryllium) it should be possible to realize a yield of the general order of 20 kilotons in a total weight or a ton, or so—excepting components, such as protective packaging and electrical items, outside the HE. By dividing the total uranium supply into two units, and using implosion, it would seem marginally possible to produce two explosions having yields of the order of 100 tons.

With the possible exception of this last option there would not be enough material to allow for a proof test of the model to be used as a weapon. There are, of course, modes and aspects of what is frequently referred to as "sophistication" by which more favorable performance might be realized. However, inasmuch as a full yield proof test (or tests) would be necessary before there could be any assurance that a proper exercise of such approaches were in hand, such possibilities fall outside the range of the present discussion.

Excerpt from the appended endnote numbered 1 above:

We shall assume, then, that the total reserve is 11.6 kg at 93% plus 30.9 kg at 80%, for a total "worth" of 11.6+24.7=36.3 kg of 93% equivalent material. This most probably rather high worth estimate may be compared with the ~ 20 kg assumed in the detailed discussion already given. It changes the conclusions, though not quite by a factor of two. In particular, the prospects for a gun-assembled weapon would be considerably improved, though not to the extent of allowing for two such devices. Similarly, with respect to metal implosion systems, of which two objects in the kiloton range would probably be possible.

SUPPORT THE AMENDMENT TO RESTORE FULL FUNDING FOR THE RERTR PROGRAM

June 25, 1991.

DEAR COLLEAGUE: As you know, President Bush recently outlined an ambitious new arms control initiative for the Middle East highlighted by a proposed ban on the production and acquisition of materials usable in nuclear weapons, including highly enriched uranium. Yet the President is undercutting his own program—Reduced Enrichment in Research and Test Reactors (RERTR)—for eliminating bomb-grade uranium worldwide.

Concern about Iraq's possession of weapon-usable, highly enriched uranium, which was supplied by France and the Soviet Union for "peaceful" nuclear research, was a key factor behind the arms control proposal. But the proliferation and terrorism risks associated with such fuel transcend the region. Bomb-grade uranium—most of it supplied by the United States—is used in more than 100 other research reactors in 35 countries. The Iraqi example vividly illustrates the need to remove weapons-usable uranium from civil nuclear research programs.

We support restoration of full funding for the RERTR program to help make this objective possible. We should support the President's initiative by completing the RERTR program and thereby facilitate the replacement of bomb-grade uranium in foreign research reactors with lower-enriched fuels that cannot be used in bombs.

We urge your support of a floor amendment to the Energy and Water Appropriations bill to provide $4.3 million for RERTR ($3 million for fuel development and $1.3 million for reactor conversion). The proposed level of funding, $800,000, is barely enough to support conversion of foreign reactors for which RERTR already has developed substitute fuels; it provides no funding whatever to complete development of the remaining fuels that would permit all foreign reactors now using U.S.-supplied, bomb-grade fuel to convert to non-weapons-usable fuels within five years.

Sincerely,

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, this $1.3 million figure is an increase of $500,000 over what we had in the bill. It is the amount that Betty Smedley, who is the comptroller of the Department of Energy, says can be used in this area. This is a nonproliferation proposal and there are certain obstacles to getting it, certain impediments to getting all of the research reactors in the world on the project.

I believe it would serve a useful purpose for us to write a joint letter to the Secretary of Energy and the Secretary of State, having them outline what those obstacles are and what steps need to be taken in order to have low-enriched uranium substituted for highly enriched uranium around the world in research reactors.

I will certainly join with the Senator from Colorado in drafting and sending that letter.

Mr. WIRTH. If the Senator will yield, particularly for dealing with the French and Belgian Governments, which are the three remaining major reactors.

Mr. JOHNSTON. That is correct, particularly with the French and Belgian reactors—and regarding what other obstacles there are in other countries around the world I think it would be useful to have that information—but especially the French, the Belgians, as far as the fuel work is concerned.

So with that statement, I will be glad to join with the Senator from Colorado in sending that letter. We are glad to accept this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oregon.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I would not take a back seat to anybody, as far as my abhorrence of nuclear weaponry is concerned, and my lack of enthusiasm for anything nuclear. I consider the greatest single threat to our environment today is nuclear waste that is scattered all across the globe.

In the effort to amend this bill at this time by the Senator from Colorado, I recognize the reality that we are not going to dismantle those nuclear weapons tomorrow, or those reactors tomorrow. But I do think that this is a safety matter that we must at all times elevate the safety standards and the safety levels until we can abolish all these nuclear weapons.

I subscribe to the amendment from this side of the aisle, accepting this amendment on the basis that it is not only a nonproliferation action but it is a safety factor in the areas that it will address until the day that will come, hopefully sooner than later, that we can totally abolish globally all of this type of weaponry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? The Senator from Ohio.

SUPPORT THE RERTR PROGRAM

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, last January 16, the President announced that the United States had commenced military action to force Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait. In his announcement, the President stated that United States forces would “knock out” Iraq’s “nuclear bomb potential”—soon thereafter, the French- and Soviet-supplied research reactors were bombed along with the highly enriched uranium [HEU] fuel that was presumably present at the reactor sites.

This extraordinary action was taken to prevent Saddam Hussein from converting that research reactor fuel into components of a nuclear weapon; the presence of weapon-grade uranium in Iraq dramatically reduced the time needed to fabricate a nuclear explosive device. As Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney stated on CBS “Face the Nation” on November 25, 1990, “If he were to take that material, he could produce a crude device with it.”

Yet if the French and Soviets had followed the logic of America’s Reduced Enrichment for Research and Test Reactor [RERTR] Program—which until recently included both the conversion of HEU reactors to adopt low-enriched uranium [LEU] fuels and the development of new higher density fuels—we would never have had to face this particular diversion threat.

As our recent experience in Iraq indicates, it is difficult enough keeping track of clandestine production of enriched uranium around the world—it is clearly in our national interest to pursue what ever means are available to get this bomb-grade uranium out of the streams of international commerce, especially when this can be accomplished without jeopardizing legitimate scientific research.

Unfortunately, the budget process has a rationality of its own, one that does not always coincide with sound policy nor necessarily serve longer term national security interests. Last month’s fiscal year 1992 budget request from the Energy Department shows a 38-percent cut in this already undernourished program—from a $1.3 million base figure to only $800,000, a level that would limit America’s contribution to the international reactor conversion process to the labors of 4 full-time workers. This would leave only one person to perform each of the four program missions identified in the President’s last annual report to Congress on nuclear nonproliferation, including: development of LEU fuels which can replace current HEU fuels; assistance in developing qualified LEU fuel suppliers; encouraging suppliers to design and market only LEU-fueled reactors; and encourage HEU reactor operators to use LEU fuels.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at the end of my statement an extract on RERTR from the President’s last annual report to Congress on nuclear nonproliferation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit 1.)

Mr. GLENN. Last year, RERTR’s work in developing advanced LEU fuels was terminated outright, virtually guaranteeing that the United States will continue to export over 100 kilograms of HEU fuel each year. The administration claims we do not have to worry, since this material is going to “safe” countries. Well, in my opinion that argument just does not fly. It hardly serves our interest to promote the use of bomb-grade research reactor fuels in some selected nations while attempting to deny them elsewhere; also, everyone recognizes that the problem of international terrorism knows no borders—if a terrorist group hijacks a shipment of fresh bomb-grade nuclear fuel, the consequences could be catastrophic. This would be doubly tragic, given that we have the solution to this problem in our hands today.

In its “Budget Highlights” for fiscal year 1990, however, the Energy Department slated RERTR for final year funding, a prospect that was avoided thanks to some last-minute support from Energy Secretary Watkins. Indeed, on February 27, 1990, Secretary Watkins wrote me a letter discussing RERTR’s 1990 funding. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have Admiral Watkins’ letter printed at the end of my statement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GLENN. The letter stated that:

The fiscal year 1990 funding of $1.2 million is focused on this technology transfer and reactor conversion assistance component of the program. We feel it would be appropriate to continue this type of assistance for the period fiscal year 1991-94, and welcome your support for this effort.

Although the letter supported cancellation of funding for advanced fuel development work—a policy that today’s amendment would correct—it established a base-line funding level of $1.2 million to support our international efforts to encourage other nations to convert to the low-enriched fuels. Now the Department wants to cut the program further, to a shoe-string level of $800,000.

It is noteworthy that the Department’s own fiscal year 1991 budget request stated that:

A recent evaluation of the RERTR program recommends that the program be funded at a level between $1.1 million and $1.4 million per year through fiscal year 1993.

Indeed, the President himself praised the accomplishments of RERTR in his latest annual nuclear nonproliferation report to Congress—achievements that came about “despite,” in his words, “a substantial reduction in funding.”

Last month, the National Academy of Sciences completed a report on export controls called Finding Common Ground. With respect to the issue of U.S. exports of bomb-grade nuclear materials, here is what the study concluded: “* * * embargo is probably the correct solution for certain specific items, such as plutonium or highly enriched uranium.” I agree with this finding, but would only add that an embargo is not enough—we have got to offer the world safe and efficient substitutes for this potentially deadly bomb-grade fuel we continue to export.

Our goal must not be to halt legitimate scientific research; our goal must be to ensure that such research can take place without contributing to the global risks of nuclear terrorism and proliferation. That is precisely the job of the fuel development funds that are being sought in today's amendment proposed by Senator WIRTH.

The recent war in the Middle East has rekindled international interest in finding new ways to combat both nuclear weapon proliferation and terrorism. I urge my colleagues to support this amendment and to join us in pressing not just for a restoration of a respectable funding level for RERTR, but also in substantially raising the priority now being given to this valuable program. The world is turning once again to America for leadership in halting the global spread of nuclear weapons and terrorism.

When it comes to developing safe, bomb-proof fuels for research reactors, the RERTR Program is the only show in town. Let us ensure that RERTR has the resources it needs to complete its vital agenda.

To the Congress of the United States:

I have reviewed the activities of the United States Government departments and agencies during calendar year 1989 related to preventing nuclear proliferation, and I am pleased to submit my annual report pursuant to section 601(a) of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Act of 1978 (Public Law 95-242, 22 U.S.C. 3281(a)).

As the report demonstrates, the United States continued its efforts during 1989 to prevent the spread of nuclear explosives to additional countries. This is an important element of our overall national security policy, which seeks to reduce the risk of war and increase international stability. I want to build on the positive achievements cited in this report and to work with the Congress toward our common goal: a safer and more secure future for all mankind.

GEORGE BUSH.

THE WHITE HOUSE, July 13, 1990.

REDUCED ENRICHMENT FOR RESEARCH AND TEST REACTORS

The Reduced Enrichment for Research and Test Reactors (RERTR) program began in 1978 as a result of concern about the possibility of diversion of highly enriched uranium (HEU) to nuclear weapons by nations or terrorists. The objective of the program is the reduction of the need for HEU in international commerce through: (1) development of low enriched uranium (LEU) fuels for research reactors which can replace existing HEU fuels; (2) assistance in developing qualified LEU fuel suppliers; (3) encouraging suppliers of research and test reactors to design and market only LEU-fueled reactors; and, (4) encouraging research and test reactor operators to convert existing reactors to LEU fuel use. The RERTR program continued to produce successful results during 1989 despite a substantial reduction in funding. Analyses have continued of the feasibility of converting the many research reactors which are the subject of joint study agreements between the reactor operators and Argonne National Laboratory (ANL). Further research was performed which could lead to development of higher density LEU fuels needed for conversion of the higher-powered research and test reactors from HEU to LEU. Experimental studies have continued on the substitution of LEU for HEU in irradiation targets for the production of medical molybdenum-99.

THE SECRETARY OF ENERGY,
Washington, DC, February 27, 1990.

Hon. JOHN GLENN,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR GLENN: Thank you for the letter of November 17, 1989, signed by you and Representative Lloyd regarding funding requirements for the Reduced Enrichment for Research and Test Reactors (RERTR) program.

The RERTR program, now in its eleventh year, has been very successful. The fuels and methods developed in the program will allow conversion of almost all of the foreign research and test reactors that used to depend on the U.S. for their supplies of highly enriched uranium. Congressional support for the program has been important to its success.

Regarding future supply, there are some reactors abroad that in order to convert would require higher density low-enriched uranium fuels than those developed and demonstrated under the RERTR program. There are currently three such reactors and possibly a fourth that is being designed. While the combined annual requirements of highly enriched uranium for these reactors is significant (approximately 100 kilograms of uranium-235 per year), their number is small, and the countries in which they are located have excellent safeguards and security credentials. The low-enriched uranium fuel that has been developed by the RERTR program will allow conversion of the remaining research and test reactors, resulting in substantial reduction in the use of highly enriched uranium. The next major effort will be to see if the fuels will be widely accepted so that potential nonproliferation benefits can in fact be realized.

The fuels needed to convert the last three, or perhaps four, foreign test reactors to low-enriched uranium are highly developmental concepts. In our judgment, the funds actually required to develop and fully qualify these concepts are significantly in excess of the preliminary estimates by the Argonne National Laboratory. The task is made even more costly and difficult as a result of the permanent shutdown of the Oak Ridge Research Reactor in mid-1987 and the resultant requirement from a practical standpoint, to conduct irradiations and subsequent examinations in foreign facilities.

Further, there is no assurance these reactors would convert to the new fuels even if the concepts were successfully developed. The operators could claim that conversion could not be accomplished without unacceptable impact on test capability or safety performance of the reactor that are the key criteria built into the RERTR program conversion "ground rules."

For the above reasons, we believe that our future efforts to limit the use of high-enriched uranium do not require additional fuels development but, rather, should focus on the conversion of research reactors using low-enriched fuels technology already developed. The FY 1990 funding of $1.2 million is focused on this technology transfer and reactor conversion assistance component of the program. We feel it would be appropriate to continue this type of assistance for the period FY 1991-1994, and welcome your support for this effort.

Thank you for the opportunity to explain the Administration's position on concluding the research and development phase of the RERTR program and on future budget needs.

Sincerely,

JAMES D. WATKINS,
Admiral, U.S. Navy (Retired).

Mr. WIRTH. Mr. President, I will note we will be submitting to the committee, report language which we hope will be included in the final report of the conference after the House and Senate conferees get together—full report language on the report coming back from the Secretary.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate?

If there be no further debate, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Colorado.

The amendment (No. 710) was agreed to.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HATFIELD. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

GLYNN COUNTY/GOLDEN ISLES

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. President, I would like to bring to the chairman's attention a matter of great importance to the people of coastal Georgia.

The beaches of Glynn County/Golden Isles region of my State are eroding at an alarming rate. These beaches support tourism and related industries, which are the mainstay of the local economy, and serve as a protective barrier against the fury of coastal storms.

Since fiscal year 1990, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has been studying this critical situation. The Savannah district of the corps is now engaged in a full assessment of the problem and will be developing a comprehensive plan for protecting the coastal communities from further erosion and economic harm.

Last year, in the fiscal year 1991 energy and water development appropriations bill, $4 million was provided to the corps, in addition to funding for the feasibility study, to carry out an interim beach renourishment project on St. Simons Island. These funds were provided through the corps' operations and maintenance account.

In response to this action by Congress, the Savannah district of the corps and the Glynn County Commission worked diligently to develop the necessary cost-sharing arrangement for moving ahead with the St. Simons Island project. Corps headquarters in Washington has approved the final local cooperation agreement.

However, just recently, new concerns about the project have been raised by members of the local community. According to Glynn County officials, the resolution of these issues may delay launching of the renourishment effort until fiscal year 1992.

I would like to thank the distinguished chairman of the Subcommittee on Energy and Water Development for his support in securing the necessary funds for the corps' efforts on behalf of the Glynn County/Golden Isles community. I would at this time like to pose a question about the special appropriation for the St. Simons Island project.

Mr. President, am I correct in understanding that should work on this renourishment effort not commence before the end of fiscal year 1991 that the operations and maintenance fund will be available until expended for this purpose?

Mr. JOHNSTON. Yes. If situations arise on the local level which delay the commencement of a corps project such as the one the Senator has highlighted, once matters are resolved, we expect the corps to carry out the work as originally directed by Congress.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. President, I thank the chairman for this confirmation. I am committed to helping the people of Glynn County protect their priceless natural resources, and I greatly appreciate the chairman's assistance in ensuring the corps' proper participation in this important endeavor.

RENEWABLE ENERGY PROGRAMS

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, as the Senate debates the energy and water appropriations bill, I would like to draw my colleagues' attention to fiscal year 1992 funding for the renewable energy programs of the Department of Energy. Under recently passed legislation, Public Law 101-218, the Department of Energy would be required to solicit proposals for joint ventures with the private sector to commercialize renewable energy technologies. The joint venture provisions under the aforementioned statute would have three important goals: improving the coordination of technology development among firms within the renewable energy industry; facilitating technology transfer to the private sector; and enhancing the ability of domestic renewable energy firms to compete with foreign enterprises.

Is it the Senator's intention that funding vital for the continuation of these programs would be available under the energy and water appropriations bill?

Mr. JOHNSTON. I wish to reassure the distinguished senior Senator from Oregon that it is my intention that money in the energy and water appropriations bill could indeed be used for joint ventures under Public Law 101-218.

Furthermore, the Senator is absolutely correct in his assessment of the importance of joint ventures for financing renewable energy and energy efficiency technologies. Under the leveraging provisions in the statute, even a relatively small share of Federal funds will leverage at least twice as much in investment from other sources. For example, $2 million in Federal funds will leverage $4 million in matching funds from other sources.

Mr. HATFIELD. I would like to concur with my colleagues' comments as well as point out that program and administrative support from the Department of Energy as well as changes in the regulatory structure of the utility sector have already had a profound effect on the ability of the renewable energy and energy efficiency industries to commercialize their products and technologies. I believe that joint ventures provide a unique opportunity for the Federal Government to further accelerate the commercialization of renewable energy and energy efficiency technologies in this country.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I would like to add to the remarks of my distinguished colleague by stating that joint ventures, as established under Public Law 100-218, differ markedly from previous renewable energy demonstration programs because project success is greatly enhanced when the investment is split between industry and the Federal Government. It is for this reason, that I have included an expansion of this program in S. 1220, the National Energy Security Act, currently awaiting consideration on the floor.

Mr. HATFIELD. I thank the Senator for his support and reiterate my belief that these joint venture programs continue to receive full congressional backing.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I believe that concludes all the amendments on this bill. I have an amendment reserved which I will not offer. I believe that is all that is in order. I think all the rest have been disposed of.

I think there is a request for a roll-call vote on the minority side.

Mr. HATFIELD. There is.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I think we are, therefore, ready for third reading.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I rise in support of continued investment in the Department of Energy's Magnetic Fusion Program. I am pleased that the bill includes $337 million for this critical program. As a member of the Appropriations Committee, I worked hard in support of this important program.

These funds will include funding for critical projects at the Princeton Plasma Physics Laboratory, a world leader in fusion research and is the only national laboratory devoted exclusively to fusion development. The bill will fund three vital elements for the future of fusion energy research: continued funding for design and engineering work on the burning plasma experiment [BPX], which is planned for construction at Princeton; funding for international collaboration on the engineering design phase of the international thermonuclear experiment reactor [ITER]; and funding for the deuterium-tritium [D-T] experiments on the Tokamak fusion test reactor [TFTR] at Princeton. This funding will enable our Nation to sustain the scientific progress achieved in recent years and to move ahead with the three major program advancements.

The magnetic fusion energy program is a critical part of America's energy security strategy. Fusion energy holds the promise of safe, abundant, and environmentally benign source of energy. It is clear that we must find alternatives to the dwindling sources of fossil fuels, and to the environmentally harmful sources of energy.

The development of fusion energy, however, is not a simple task. Fusion involves complex technology. It requires a time, money, and a long-term commitment. This bill makes an important investment toward the realization of fusion power.

The National Fusion Program is on track and the $337 million in this appropriations bill will help our scientists move the program ahead. The program, however, will require further investments in the future. I am pleased that the distinguished chairman of the Energy and Water Subcommittee has provided full funding for this program and has the vision to address today the energy problems of tomorrow.

Mr. President, I also note that the report accompanying this bill also contains language that will allow the Center for Molecular Medicine and Immunology to proceed with the development of its new, state-of-the-art cancer research center. This new facility will be located in Essex County, NJ, and will house a first-class research team dedicated to research and clinical testing of cancer therapies. I appreciate the cooperation of the chairman of the subcommittee in including this language and enabling this important project to proceed.

NEW JERSEY WATER RESOURCES PROJECTS

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I want to note the inclusion in this bill of a number of important water resources projects of benefit to the State of New Jersey.

New Jersey's shoreline is one of its most precious resources. It plays a vital role in our economy because of tourism, and because of the tremendous business conducted at our port facilities. A number of the projects that would be funded in this bill would directly and positively impact the ability to move goods through our ports. That's good news for New Jersey's economy, its businesses, and its workers.

Among the port projects designated for funding under this bill are: $28.5 million for the Kill van Kull and Newark Bay Channel; $1.279 million for deepening of the Delaware River at the Beckett Street terminal, in Camden; $300,000 for the Arthur Kill channel extension, in the area of Carteret; $500,000 in planning funds for improvements to the New York Harbor and adjacent channels, in the area of the Claremont terminal.

Another important area of work by the Army Corps in my State is flood control. Among the flood control projects designated for funding in this bill are: $1.1 million for the Lower Saddle River; $177,000 for the Ramapo River at Oakland; $10 million for the Great Egg Harbor Inlet and Peck Beach; and $2.6 million for the Green Brook sub-basin. The bill includes $5.4 million for the Passaic River Mainstem project, which would control flooding throughout the northeastern portion of New Jersey. This flooding, has, over the years, taken a major toll on the region. The Army Corps estimates that each year, floods cause almost $100 million in damages. In 1984, the area suffered a 25-year flood. That flood killed 3 people. It forced the evacuation of 9,400 residents. And it resulted in $390 million in damages. It is estimated that a 100-year flood, like one that occurred in 1903, would cause $1.9 billion in damages.

The $5.4 million includes $400,000 to begin work on a streambank stabilization and beautification project in the City of Newark. This will complement efforts to develop an arts center in the city along the Passaic River.

Last year, I worked to have the construction of this project authorized. Now, we are awaiting a decision by the State of New Jersey on meeting the non-Federal match requirements. This funding will allow design and engineering work, necessary to commence construction, to proceed.

There are a number of other important projects included in this bill. They include $27 million for construction of a beach erosion control project from Sandy Hook to Barnegat Inlet, $3.8 million to improve navigation in Barnegat Inlet, and $300,000 for shore protection from Townsend's Inlet to Cape May Inlet.

An item of particular concern to the northern New Jersey/New York metropolitan area is the New York Harbor collection and removal of drift project. There are an estimated 2,320 sunken vessels and 149 rotting shore structures in the harbor. According to the corps, nearly 18,000 vessels collide with these obstructions each year, resulting in economic damages of about $53 million.

Unfortunately, the administration did not request funding for this important project this year. I am pleased to note that, at my request, the bill we are considering contains $2.5 million for this important project.

Mr. President, as a member of the Appropriations Committee, I worked with the distinguished chairman of the Energy and Water Development Subcommittee, Senator JOHNSTON, to see that funding for these and other important New Jersey projects were included in the fiscal year 1992 bill. I appreciate his efforts and look forward to his continued cooperation in addressing water resources needs in my State.

THE BUMPERS AMENDMENT ON THE SUPERCONDUCTING SUPER COLLIDER

Mr. WALLOP. Mr. President, today the Senate voted on the issue of whether to continue funding the superconducting super collider, the Nation's leading high energy physics project. I agree that the collider, a high energy subatomic particle accelerator that will be used in basic research to learn more about the fundamental nature of matter and energy, is a fascinating project that has the potential for the United States to remain on the frontier of high energy physics research well into the next century. I enthusiastically support efforts to advance our scientific and economic prowess. The vote to table the Bumpers amendment was a strong endorsement of the SSC. However, there are still some dark clouds which could eventually dampen our enthusiasm for the collider.

In brief, I have identified three areas of concern over the program. First is the issue of the ever-escalating cost of building the facility. Second is the matter of a lack of foreign contributions to the SSC. Last, we must keep in mind the impact this program may have on other worthy areas of scientific endeavor.

Let me take these areas one at a time. First, there is a continuing concern in the congress that the $8.2 billion price tag for the SSC is not a final figure. This budget estimate has changed five times since 1986. It was first estimated at $4.4 billion which did not account for detectors or technical contingencies. It changed to $5.3 billion after Congress gave its original approval to proceed with the construction of the SSC. It has changed once again to $5.9 billion when President Bush moved into the White House. This price tag supposedly included detectors and technical contingencies. The next increase to $7.8 billion occurred after the redesign of the magnets and injectors. The latest figure of $8.2 billion is a composition of four separate estimates ranging from $7.8 billion to $11.8 billion. The differences in the estimates are caused by contingencies, uncertainties, and questions over the costs of digging the 54 mile tunnel and the housing for the detectors. The Department of Energy has concluded that the $8.2 billion is the correct and final cost of the SSC. But, there are many members of Congress who are concerned that this final figure may turn out to be too low—subject to change once again over the life of this massive, complex, unique project.

A second concern lies with the fact that Congress has decided that Federal money should pay for no more than two thirds of the SSC, which would amount to $5.5 billion under the latest cost figure. The State of Texas has pledged about $1 billion leaving a shortfall of about $1.7 billion to be made up by foreign investments. To date, the Energy Department has failed to obtain any guarantees of contributions from foreign countries, except for a $50.0 million in-kind contribution from India. This arouses the fear in Congress that foreign funding may not materialize, resulting in the Congress having to ultimately appropriate even further moneys for the project. Further compounding this is the fact that Mr. Fred Buch, head of the Texas commission in charge of raising funds for the SSC, recently resigned. He indicated that the project may have serious funding problems because of the lack of firm foreign commitments.

While I supported the funding request in this year's appropriations, it will be much more difficult to support this project next year if there are no firm foreign commitments. Next year is decisive, because all funding commitments must be settled according to the project's schedule. It would be prudent for the Department of Energy to present Congress with a plan on how to proceed without foreign contributions.

My last concern, Mr. President, is that this large project can dilute other scientific endeavors. It is important that the SSC not be built at the expense of other scientific programs. The Federal research budget is quite limited because of the budget situation. We must be careful not to crowd out other worthwhile projects at the expense of the SSC. Indeed, even the scientific leaders supporting the SSC do not believe it should be built unless it can be done with funding that will not wither away "small science" projects. We must be careful that high energy physics research does not overwhelm the Department of Energy's other research program.

In conclusion, I intend to closely monitor this program, to review the management and financing of the project. I will request more detailed information from the Department of Energy regarding foreign participation. I will carefully evaluate the progress of the SSC and how it fits into a balanced Federal program in support of basic science research.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to further amendment. If there be no further amendment to be proposed, the question is on the engrossment of the amendments and the third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there any further debate?

Mr. JOHNSTON. No further debate, just to thank staff on our side, Proctor

Jones and David Gwaltney, and to thank the distinguished Senator from Oregon, Mr. HATFIELD. It is a terrific relationship and a joy to work with him. I have said it before and I will say it again, I hope many times over. But this year is especially good.

Mr. HATFIELD. I thank the Senator from Louisiana, Mr. President. I reciprocate by indicating that some of our colleagues on this side have suggested perhaps, that my colleague would like to take over some of the other controversial legislation and we might manage that out. I would defer that decision to my colleague.

Mr. President I want to thank also the staff who have so effectively expedited the handling of the amendments on this bill and once again comment on the important role that Senator BYRD, our full committee chairman, has played as well in expediting the appropriations process.

We expect to mark up four more appropriations bills tomorrow afternoon, the full committee. This is still July. We have three: one acted upon, now completed; two more ready to be acted upon, waiting on the calendar; and four more to be marked up tomorrow. I would think that would certainly establish some kind of a record.

It has been a great pleasure to work with Senator JOHNSTON and our respective staffers on this bill.

Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I neglected to say and should not have neglected to praise Mark Walker. Also Gloria Buttland, staff member on our side, who has almost as much seniority as Proctor Jones does and is really a lot more important to this committee than he is. I certainly should have mentioned her. In any event I thank her, as well as the majority and minority staff. It has been a very good working relationship. We are ready for the vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There being no further debate, the bill having been read the third time, the question is, Shall the bill pass?

The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. FORD. I announce that the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. PRYOR] is absent because of illness.

The result was announced, yeas 96, nays 3, as follows:

NOT VOTING—1

Pryor

So the bill (H.R. 2427), as amended, was passed.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the bill, as amended, was passed.

I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I move that the Senate insist on its amendments, request a conference with the House of Representatives on the disagreeing votes thereon, and that the chair be authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to, and the Presiding Officer [Mr. CONRAD] appointed Mr. JOHNSTON, Mr. BYRD, Mr. HOLLINGS, Mr. BURDICK, Mr. SASSER, Mr. DECONCINI, Mr. REID, Mr. HATFIELD, Mr. GARN, Mr. COCHRAN, Mr. DOMENICI, Mr. SPECTER, and Mr. NICKLES conferees on the part of the Senate.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there now be a period for morning business not to extend beyond the hour of 5 p.m. with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. KENNEDY addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts is recognized.

OPPOSING THE LIFTING OF SANCTIONS AGAINST SOUTH AFRICA

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, the administration's premature lifting of sanctions is a setback to the cause of progress in South Africa and an unfortunate blow to the opponents of apartheid. President Bush has acted irres-sponsibly in moving the goalpost and disobeying the law.

In a tilt toward the apartheid regime, the administration has concocted an erroneous and self-serving interpretation of the five conditions of the Comprehensive Anti-Apartheid Act of 1986.

As Nelson Mandela pointed out only a few days ago at the conference of the African National Congress, sanctions have been indispensable in the progress that has been made toward ending apartheid in South Africa. It is wrong for the Bush administration to undermine that progress by lifting the sanctions too quickly, in violation of both the letter and the spirit of the law.

In fact, four of the five conditions have not been fairly met. Political prisoners have not been released. Political freedom has not been achieved. Basic apartheid statutes have not been fully repealed. And good faith negotiations have not begun.

According to the South African Human Rights Commission, 900 political prisoners remain in jail. The South African Government itself admits that over 200 are political prisoners.

The South African Government is also making the preposterous claim that it has no responsibility for the 164 additional political prisoners in the homelands. By accepting this claim, the Bush administration is endorsing one of the worst aspects of apartheid—the banishment of black South Africans to so-called independent homelands.

The condition calling for political freedom in South Africa will also not be met until the 40,000 exiles are permitted to return without fear of imprisonment, and the security laws are amended to deny the South African Government the legal right to detain people incommunicado and intimidate political opponents. Particularly disturbing is the South African Government's continuing refusal to accept a standard agreement with the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to assist in the repatriation of the exiles.

Last summer, the South African Government agreed with the African National Congress that these issues must be resolved before negotiations can begin. It is wrong for the Bush administration to maintain that the South African Government has agreed to negotiations, when these recognized obstacles have obviously not been fairly resolved. In fact, the failure of the de Klerk government to live up to the commitments it made last year on these critical issues raises serious questions on whether it will move forward on good faith negotiations—particularly now that the pressure of U.S. sanctions is gone.

While the Population Registration Act and the Group Areas Act have been repealed, other measures have been instituted in their place to perpetuate the racial barriers in South Africa and can be used to bar blacks from certain areas. In addition, the population register, which classifies South Africans by race, will remain in place until at least 1994. So much for this condition.

By jumping the gun before these issues have been resolved, the Bush administration risks undermining the delicate process of negotiations between the ANC and the South African Government. Only time will tell whether the efforts to create a new South Africa will be set back without that engine of progress.

I do welcome one small aspect of today's action by the White House—the proposal to double the current level of $40 million in United States aid being channeled directly to South African blacks for assistance of victims of apartheid in areas such as housing and education. I proposed such an increase on June 18 to be directed through private voluntary agencies, and I am pleased that the administration recognizes the merit of this current program.

Finally, although the administration has acted too quickly to terminate the economic sanctions in the 1986 act, several other important sanctions will continue in effect under other laws barring assistance to the apartheid regime. The prohibition on U.S. support for IMF loans and the ban on Export-Import Bank support to the apartheid regime are still essential parts of our policy. I urge the Bush administration to hold the line on these measures. The United States must not return to business as usual with apartheid. We also must ensure that we maintain the ban on all exports to the South African military and on all arms trade or intelligence sharing with South Africa.

We all know what is going on here. American firms are eager to resume business as usual with the apartheid regime. Once again in the councils of the administration, private business profits have collided with basic human rights, and human rights have lost.

By its actions today, the administration is bestowing an undeserved benefit on the South African regime. Tilting toward apartheid is wrong. The United States should not be so easily giving up our most potent weapon in the long battle to end that brutal system of government.

Mr. DOLE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader.

Mr. DOLE. Is leader time reserved?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's leader time was reserved.

SOUTH AFRICAN SANCTIONS

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, several hours ago, President Bush announced that he has issued an Executive order ending economic sanctions against South Africa.

There has never been any debate in this country about the goals of our South Africa policy—ending apartheid, once and for all; establishing a true democracy; expanding economic opportunities for all South Africans. The only debate we have had is, how best to accomplish those goals.

In my view, historians will argue for a long time about whether sanctions were really a key factor in sparking the kind of fundamental change we have seen over the past months in South Africa; whether, on balance, they were a positive, or a negative force; whether, over time, they have harmed black South Africans, more than they have helped them.

But I think a fair look at the situation today yields a clearcut conclusion that, whatever their past effectiveness or results, sanctions no longer make any sense.

The South African Government has clearly undertaken a firm commitment to fundamental reform. They have demonstrated that commitment, over time, in word and—far more important—in one concrete act after another: ending the state of emergency; the release of Mandela and other political prisoners; the dismantling of the apartheid laws; the legalization of political parties; the beginning of sincere and serious talks with the black community, including the ANC, with the specific goal of establishing a new and democratic constitutional system.

Every condition laid down in our law for the end of sanctions has been accomplished.

And it has become increasingly clear that blacks continue to bear the brunt of the impact of the sanctions; and, even more important, that—whatever their new political structure—the people of South Africa, black and white, will never achieve a stable and vibrant democracy, unless democratization is accompanied by economic development which reaches all South Africans: That requires an end to the sanctions.

The European Economic Community, and others in the international community, had already reached the conclusion that sanctions had outlived their utility. Black African nations, the rhetoric of many of them to the contrary notwithstanding, had long engaged in extensive economic relations with South Africa. They had all concluded that the time has come to engage with South Africa, not disengage. And they were all right.

Mr. President, I am pleased that President Bush has accompanied his decision to end sanctions with a doubling of aid aimed at black South Africans. It underscores what our policy does, and ought to, aim at: Helping South Africa and its people find the future of democracy, stability, and prosperity that now seems possible.

I hope the Congress will not try to undo the sensible thing that President Bush has done—and I doubly hope that we can all avoid the temptation to turn this profoundly important political and moral issue into a partisan political issue.

South Africa and its people are, at long last, on the right road. Let us tear down the road blocks we have erected, and instead begin to help them find their way.

Mr. SYMMS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho.

Mr. SYMMS. What is the parliamentary situation on the floor?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate is in morning business until 5 p.m., and Senators are permitted to speak therein for up to 10 minutes.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I seek recognition for 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is recognized.

Mr. DOLE. Will the Senator yield for 30 seconds?

Mr. SYMMS. Yes.

AUTHORIZING THE USE OF THE CAPITOL ROTUNDA FOR A CEREMONY HONORING POW/MIA FAMILIES

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I have cleared this with the majority leader. I send a concurrent resolution to the desk for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The concurrent resolution will be stated by title.

The assistant legislation clerk read as follows:

A concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 51) authorizing the use of the rotunda of the Capitol by the National League of POW/MIA Families for a ceremony to honor the members of the Armed Services and civilians missing and unaccounted for as a result of the Vietnam conflict.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the concurrent resolution?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the concurrent resolution.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, in effect, the concurrent resolution provides for the use of the rotunda Saturday morning for a special ceremony honoring POW's and MIA's.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the concurrent resolution.

The concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 51) was agreed to.

The concurrent resolution reads as follows:

S. CON. RES. 51

Resolved by the Senate (The House of Representatives concurring), That the rotunda of the Capitol may be used by the National League of POW/MIA Families on July 13, 1991, from 11:00 o'clock ante meridan until 12:00 o'clock noon, for a ceremony to honor the members of the Armed Services and ci- vilians missing and unaccounted for as a result of the Vietnam conflict. Physical preparations for the ceremony shall be carried out in accordance with such conditions as the Architect of the Capitol may prescribe.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. SYMMS. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

SOUTH AFRICAN SANCTIONS

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I rise to praise President Bush for his action today in lifting the sanctions from South Africa.

With President De Klerk's recent repeal of statutory apartheid laws, four out of five conditions laid down by Congress in the Comprehensive Anti-Apartheid Act of 1986 were reached. Although the President was given the authority to lift sanctions after four or five conditions were satisfied, at question in some quarters is the remaining issue of the release of political prisoners—the fifth condition.

The De Klerk government says that it has released 1,000 political prisoners, but there are said to be several hundred remaining in prison who have committed violent crimes, such as rape, arson, and murder. I would question whether anyone in this Chamber believes that rape is a political crime.

I would also ask whether any members believe that someone who has committed rape, murder or arson, for whatever motivation, should be released onto the streets to commit additional violent crimes. Any government which would release criminals likely to commit more crimes against innocent people would not be fulfilling its most solemn obligation, to maintain law and order, and to protect the lives of its citizenry.

The African National Congress, or ANC, maintains the South African Government has some 1,000 political prisoners in their jails. Chief Minister Buthelezi, who just visited the United States last week as the head of the 2 million strong Inkatha Freedom Party, states that there are common criminals now claiming to be political prisoners, trying to capitalize on the provision of the "C Triple A" to spring themselves out of jail. Is the ANC advocating the release of every offender from jail? Would that suit its professed policy of making the country ungovernable, when crime is already rampant due to massive unemployment fueled by economic sanctions?

Frankly, I am far more inclined to believe the De Klerk government and Chief Minister Buthelezi are providing the truth, than the African National Congress, which has been unable to produce the names of the 1,000 prisoners it claims are still under detention. Some proponents of sanctions cite the South African Human Rights Commission on political prisoners, but this is hardly an impartial body and, in fact, reported to be an ANC front.

I have also heard complaints the De Klerk government is not permitting the return of exiles. But in this instance, there has been the problem of exiles simply not wishing to return to an unstable environment, without job prospects, and the refusal of members of the Pan African Congress, which because it is fundamentally antiwhite, to sign the indemnity form to permit their legal return to South Africa. Apparently, signing the form constitutes a form of recognition of the government that they reject. Proponents of continued sanctions lay every problem at the feet of the South African Government, which is simply not justified.

Sanctions should never have been passed. I voted against sanctions in 1986, because I believed strongly that they would deprive black South Africans of badly needed employment opportunities, especially those with American firms that offered them management training, educational benefits and other perquisites. The sanctions did adversely impact the South African economy, and escalated the political unrest. Sanctions played a role in the black-on-black violence which is now raging in South Africa and which inhibits an atmosphere conducive to peaceful political negotiations.

We have heard much in the news about the violence in the workers hostels. I am informed that ANC members are told that migrant workers from the Zulu tribe living in the hostels have taken their jobs. They are informed by ANC members whose intentions are to incite violence, that if they drive those migrant workers from the hostels, their jobs will then be given to ANC supporters. It is easy to see how sanctions and joblessness played into the strategy of the ANC to seize power in a country overcome by internal unrest and political chaos.

I am thankful that Chief Buthelezi addressed the issue of the causes of violence. There are also some who say sanctions should not be lifted because of continuing violence. Buthelezi knows that his members have been sucked into the violence, but frequently are reacting to ANC provocations. Chief Buthelezi successfully rebutted the canard of cultural weapons being carried by Zulus, which the ANC has demanded be banned. Buthelezi responded that the South African Institute of Race Relations, an impartial body, proved that most black deaths have been by AK-47's, not by so-called cultural weapons, and that the ANC is trying to camouflage the fact that it maintains hidden arms caches in the country, has not renounced violence, and is still training its private army.

The sanctions issue will shortly be a sad, but closed chapter of American history. Sanctions will be lifted in the near future, as President Bush assured Chief Buthelezi recently. It is simply a matter of time before the proper assurances will be given on the status of political prisoners.

The most fundamental issue facing the United States on South Africa is its transition from a country where whites, Indians and coloreds can vote, but not the black majority. What can the United States do to ensure that postapartheid South Africa does not become an ANC dictatorship, where elections serve only to empower tyranny?

The ANC has succeeded to a degree in its campaign of terror and intimidation. The armed struggle is being replaced by what it calls mass action. According to a recent survey, black intimidation is rampant in South Africa. Four out of five blacks surveyed said that they had been forced into work stay-aways and boycotts. Another third said they were too terrified to vote.

The ANC now advocates a constituent assembly; they are preparing to host a large conference in Capetown in August to demand a constituent assembly.

What do they want to do?

The ANC wants to create a mechanism for the seizure of power, using the leverage of terror and intimidation to force their radical agenda on the people of South Africa.

It is interesting to me to note that nearly a year and a half since their unbanning, the ANC has only signed, by their accounts, 500,000 members, only one-quarter the claimed membership of the Inkatha Freedom Party at 2 million. The IFP has signed 100,000 whites, which indicates its support has crossed racial lines, and that its political platform—of real democracy, non-violence, antisandals, and profree market—has massive popular appeal, and I hope the membership continues to expand.

I am pleased with the House amendment adopted recently which shows a new realization among Members of the other body in Congress in general about the nature of the ANC. I commend my House colleagues, Congressmen BOB WALKER and DAN BURTON, for disallowing any United States funding to the South African Communist Party or any affiliated or associated organizations. Their amendment passed overwhelmingly 279-134. The South African Communist Party alliance to the ANC is well known by anyone who is interested to read about it and find out about it.

Curiously, the South African Communist Party has refused to divulge its membership, despite its unbanning. It could be that the South African Communist Party overlap with the ANC would shock those who prefer to indulge the fantasy that the ANC is not dominated by Communists. For those in the world who believe the ANC's closet moderates dominate the organization, moderates would like to rid themselves of the taint of the South African Communist Party here is their opportunity. Let them reject the South African Communist Party members of the ANC, which dominated the ANC's national executive committee, and become eligible for United States support.

That is all they have to do. I do not think that is asking too much, and I again commend my two fine colleagues in the House for their efforts that got that vote in the House and I would urge those in South Africa, those moderates in ANC, if they are in power, to do this, to purge themselves from the Communists.

I would pose this question to my colleagues: what on Earth was the Congress thinking when it authorized money to "previously banned organizations" in South Africa? Did they realize that that would include the South African Communist Party, an unrepentant, Stalinist party? This vote on the House floor, thankfully, has clarified the United States position on this matter. The House has spoken loudly against funding any party with links to the South Africa's Communists.

It would be foolish to spend a fortune trying to rebuild Eastern Europe, devastated by 40 years of communism, and then give money to the ANC or its fronts, who want to impose a Stalinist-style regime on the poor people of South Africa. Even FRELIMO in Mozambique, the Marxist elite which has been fighting rebels for 16 years, has warned the ANC not to make the mistakes it made by pursuing rigid Socialist economic ideology, which has been proven a failure.

Chris Hani, the head of the military wing of the ANC, was just in the United States, a proud guest of the Communist Party USA. Hani was questioned about what Socialist model he would aspire to. He merely dismissed the failures of every present or past Socialist State in the world suggesting that the ANC somehow would apply Socialism correctly. Romania, Poland, East Germany, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, the Soviet Union—all these were simply, according to Hani, examples of bad economic management, poor planning; they could do a better job, be more efficient.

To the ANC, the Socialist utopia is still alive—and they intend to create it in South Africa. Hani suggested the remedy for South Africa was redistributing the white wealth. Chief Buthelezi knows better. He is enough of a statesman and economist to know that if the wealth of South Africa's great magnates, Anton Rupert and Harry Oppenheimer, were seized, there would only be 5 rands for each black—about enough to buy one day's meals. Buthelezi knows that confiscation of wealth and nationalization, which the ANC endorses, is not the answer—that expanding the productive capacity of the economy is the only solution to South Africa's growing population needs.

Chief Buthelezi deserves American support, as does President De Klerk for having the political courage and tenacity to implement politically costly reforms. These courageous and visionary leaders offer the best hope for a future democratic government in South Africa. The Inkatha Freedom Party offers a platform for prosperity, and has broad appeal to those of moderate political persuasion. Similarly, the National Party, with its reformist image and commitment to negotiations to achieve Democracy, is drawing in new nonwhite members and finding surprising new political allies.

The ANC embraces political extremes, intolerance and the failed socialist ideology of the past. The ANC wants the maintenance of sanctions to drag the country further into decline, exploiting joblessness, hunger, and violence in its ambition to seize power. I think today all people in the world who love liberty should thank President Bush for his courageous move to lift those sanctions. It is past time that the United States bolstered those in South Africa who share our values of inclusive, not exclusive politics, and who endorse nonviolent solutions not violent solutions. Lifting sanctions as was done today will serve that purpose.

I appreciate the fact that the President has done this, and I wish those people in South Africa of a moderate persuasion who understand that the mainspring of human progress is liberty will prevail and that that country shall have a better future and a better fortune than it has endured these last 5 years.

Mr. President, I thank the Chair for his indulgence, and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I am going to use in addition to whatever time remains in the morning hour the remainder of the leader time on this side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will advise the Senator that the time for morning business is set to expire at 5 p.m.

Mr. HELMS. If there is insistence that we abide by that I will of course yield the floor at that time, but I do not think the majority leader will move it.

UNITED STATES POLICY TOWARD SOUTH AFRICA

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, President Bush today has exercised his legal authority to terminate sanctions against the people of the Republic of South Africa. Among the provisions that will vanish are the Comprehensive Anti-Apartheid Act of 1986 and provisions of the so-called Rangel amendment, which imposed double taxation on United States companies doing business in South Africa.

President Bush has exercised extraordinary caution to determine that provisions of the 1986 sanctions act have in fact been met by the South African Government. He was right to be careful, but the law is the law. Once conditions have been met, the President has no flexibility to do less than ending sanctions.

It is rather widely known, Mr. President, that I have never supported sanctions against the people of South Africa. Now is not the time to replay the debate regarding the folly of sanctions.

Most Senators now realize that sanctions have had two unintended and negative consequences: First, sanctions have helped shrink the South African economy, thereby depriving the employed of their jobs as well as preventing the creation of new opportunities; and second, sanctions have encouraged South African radical movements and revolutionaries to press their hard-line demands for a transfer of power, rather than negotiating a new, nondiscriminatory constitution.

Mr. President, as one era in United States policy toward South Africa ends, new opportunities are possible. Lifting sanctions gives the United States an opportunity to play a more positive role than it has since 1985, after Congress demanded that President Reagan impose the first in the most recent generation of sanctions on South Africans.

These new opportunities are essentially political and economic. American institutions which are not funded by taxpayer funds may be able to play a limited, proper role in South Africa. I realize, however, that most of the speculation about future United States policy in South Africa is based on the notion that Federal funds are the first, best way for Americans to assist that country to promote a growing economy and a more representative political system.

Mr. President, I oppose "foreign aid," a position widely shared by the American people, particularly the American taxpayers. Except for providing relief after natural disasters, United States foreign aid—like aid from other countries—tends to make problems worse at an excessive cost. Mr. President, some Senators favor an increased foreign aid authorization for Africa to a total of $1 billion. If approved, it appears that the administration may request a doubling of United States foreign aid efforts in South Africa from $40 to $80 million. In his statement today, President Bush verified his intention to double South Africa funding.

Moreover, I have been reliably informed that the United States Ambassador to South Africa, William Swing, along with officials of the Agency for International Development and the State Department, are planning to remold American foreign efforts in the post-sanctions era.

The logic behind these possible policy changes is that America has moved from using foreign assistance to confront the government of South Africa to force it to drop apartheid laws and engage in good faith negotiations with political opponents.

South Africans—regardless of the outcome of negotiations—inheriting an economic climate poisoned by sanctions. Any new United States policy should aim to encourage economic growth—in other words, more jobs and a representative political system emphasizing individual rights and responsibilities.

Private American investment must be encouraged. The Foreign Commercial Service of the Department of Commerce and private investment-oriented organizations should make the latest information on opportunities in the South African economy available to potential investors. In this area, a very limited role for AID or the State Department may be helpful.

Mr. President, I serve on the Africa subcommittee of the Foreign Relations Committee, and I urge administration officials to begin early, frequent consultations with subcommittee members and committee staff. I want to avoid surprises regarding the size of focus of United States foreign aid in South Africa.

Regarding South Africa's political future, my position is also well-known. A richly endowed, taxpayer-funded bonanza for Washington area consultants and experts would be a serious misuse of funds, and abuse, programmed for South African democracy-building.

I also believe that direct or indirect taxpayer assistance to build political parties, or to fund party infrastructure activities at a national level in South Africa, would be a tragic mistake. South Africans do not need the United States to teach them how to build a pluralistic, free enterprise, fully representative political system.

If it becomes United States policy directly to assist political parties, the African National Congress, or ANC, absolutely does not qualify. Preliminary results from a week-long meeting of the ANC in Durban last week indicate that the ANC prefers to call itself a "liberation movement," not a political party. That designation, Mr. President, permits this group to excuse the existence of its private army and thereby claim a right to return to military action against constituted authority if the ANC does not get its way in negotiations with the government and other opponents of apartheid.

In that regard, Senators should bear in mind that, during the Durban conference, the ANC received accolades from the Chinese Communist Party, Fidel Castro, Mu'ammarr Qadhafi and, of course, Saddam Hussein—who received ANC support in the recent gulf war. These allies of the organization expose the bankruptcy of the ANC's self-proclaimed "devotion to democratic principles."

As the saying goes, bosh and nausea. For years, the unhealthy relationship between the African National Congress and the South African Communist Party [SACP] has been clear. Judged from afar, the two organizations appear to be little more than Siamese twins. The South African Communist Party is especially hardline, and its overwhelming influence on the ANC also undermines the ANC's glowing descriptions of itself.

In a recent article, "The Next South Africa" in National Interest magazine, Francis Fukuyama notes, "the SACP constitutes what one observer called the 'competent half' of the ANC, with the organizational ability and manpower to staff and control the ANC's central bureaucracy and executive."

He continued, "The main problem with the ANC as a governing party, however, is its own strong commitment to socialism," and "There is a strong current of Leninist thinking within the ANC, manifest in the desire to subordinate all aspects of civil society to ANC leadership. Much of the township violence in the past year has been due to the ANC's aggressive recruiting efforts."

Mr. President, the record of the South African Communist Party is well known to honest observers, as is its controlling directorship of the African National Congress. The House of Representatives adopted an amendment recently to restrict assistance to organizations with affiliations to the South African Communist Party. In a typical move, veteran Communist Mac Maharaj replied to this congressional action in an interview given on July 4, during the Durban conference. "He also conceded, as a possible option, that the SACP may consider its own dissolution at its December conference," the interviewer summarized.

Several administrations and a host of reporters have told of an apparent split in the ANC between militants and moderates. To this Senator's knowledge, no anti-Communist has ever been identified on the ANC's membership or leadership rolls. If it is the desire of this or future administrations to fund ANC institutions, great care should be taken to avoid funding Communist-controlled elements.

Providing United States taxpayer funds for political purposes in South Africa is, at best, a high political risk.

Moderate political parties, truly committed to negotiation and power-sharing seem to this Senator to be a better investment than groups looking backward into Leninist political models and insisting on socialist schemes in economics. Many such parties exist, and as real consultations begin with Congress about the shape and size of an American presence in South Africa, members of those organizations should receive first priority.

This Senator encourages a leadership role for the United States Information Agency, following consultation with Congress, if American institutions and constitutional history are to be a future focus of United States policy in South Africa. This is in contrast to two other government agencies or government-funded organizations which presume to be expert on teaching democracy to South Africa.

Mr. President, the decision by President Bush allows the United States to resume a positive role in South Africa. These remarks are an initial effort to engage the administration in a discussion of future policy toward that vital country. South Africa can still become the economic engine and political model for Africa. America needs to do what it can, cautiously and without grand schemes, to help positive developments occur.

EXTENSION OF TIME FOR MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that morning business be extended under the same terms and conditions until 5:30 p.m.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ADAMS). Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

UAE SALES LINKED TO INTERNATIONAL DRUG MONEY LAUNDERING?

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I rise once again to express my opposition to the administration's plan to sell $682 million in military hardware to the United Arab Emirates regime, a government ruled by a man who is the chief shareholder in an international drug money operation.

The New York Times this morning reported that UAE President Sheikh Zayed bin Sultan al-Nahayan is the principal shareholder of the Bank of Credit and Commerce International and that BCCI "is suspected of laundering drug money and engaging in widespread fraud."

Actually, the story is overly cautious. There is a growing body of evidence, collected by investigators from the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and elsewhere, that this bank—BCCI—is one of the world's most notorious launderers of narcotics money in the world. According to one report, the BCCI has 35 branch offices in Medellin, Colombia, alone.

The trail does not end there, however. It has already been established in the courts that this bank managed the transfer of millions of dollars for Panamanian narco-dictator Manuel Noriega through its global financial network.

Earlier this year, BCCI was also tied by a Peruvian parliamentary investigative commission to millions of dollars spirited out of the country by former President Alan Garcia, a fortune rumored to come from payoffs by drug traffickers.

And in Argentina, investigators are currently looking at the role played by the bank in the laundering of drug money through that country.

According to several investigative sources, the bank is also heavily involved in international arms trafficking, some of which involved Communist countries and supporters of terrorism, like North Korea.

This makes the administration's proposed sale of highly sophisticated attack helicopters and Hellfire missiles all the more dangerous.

Last week I rose to point out that, beyond the very solid arms control grounds for opposing this sale, there were also important human rights and potential war crimes issues that need to be addressed.

Now we find that the ruler of Abu Dhabi, the principal portion of the United Arab Emirates, is sitting upon a financial empire of sleaze, violence, and death.

Mr. President, I also would like to make a few other points about the man who is about to receive—unless we stop it—some of the most sophisticated and lethal weapons of their type in our arsenal.

It is true that the United Arab Emirates closed ranks with our other Persian Gulf allies in the wake of Saddam Hussein's brutal invasion of Kuwait. It is to be assumed that anyone sitting on that much oil wealth that close to Iraq would do so out of self-defense, if nothing else.

Let us remember that when Arab oil-producing nations cut off oil to the United States in 1973—in retribution for American support for Israel—Abu Dhabi was the first country to declare an embargo.

Sheik Zayed, the President of the United Arab Emirates, was, until last year, a major contributor—to the tune of hundreds of millions of dollars—to the PLO.

He is also a business partner of Libyan leader Mu'ammarr Qadhafi.

Mr. President, last week the British Government froze $20 billion in BCCI assets. Banking regulators in Britain and the United States are trying to assess the wreckage left behind by the collapse of the bank.

Before we go ahead with this lunacy, this sale, I think it is only fair to ask whether any money for this sale is coming from BCCI depositors who have been bankrupted by the bank's shady practices. Laundered drug profits may be used to pay us—pay the United States—for this $682 million arms sale to the United Arab Emirates. I want no part in such a deal. I want my country to have no part of such a deal.

Before the Bush administration presses ahead with the proposed sale, adding more muscle to still another nasty regime in the Middle East, it should demand an accounting from BCCI of whether drug profits are being used to finance this sale.

The administration also owes Congress an answer to questions about Sheik Zayed's personal culpability in this sordid tale of financial misdeed.

Shades of Noriega; shades of Saddam Hussein—and shame on us if we let this pass without a fight.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

EQUAL OPPORTUNITY

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, I have now been in the Senate a little over 2½ years. I really and sincerely felt lucky to be here. This morning, I happened to be presiding over the Senate and had the good fortune to listen to the distinguished Senator from New Jersey deliver a 30-minute speech on the issue of race relations in the United States. During that speech I found myself feeling lucky to be in the Senate. It was not just a speech, Mr. President, directed at some doubt that the Senator from New Jersey—and I must say myself—feel about President Bush's commitment trying to make this a Nation of equal opportunity for all, in particular, Mr. President, trying to open the door for black Americans. It was not just a speech expressing doubt about the President's commitment, it was a speech that described what we as a Nation must do if we are going to be a land of equal opportunity for all.

I have, as I said, a considerable amount of doubt about the President's commitment. I heard the press conference today wherein he announced he was going to stop the economic sanctions against South Africa, again words that increased my doubt. Those sanctions worked, Mr. President. I was not here when the vote occurred. I was asked my opinion when I campaigned, and I said I supported sanctions, but I never had the chance to vote. Indeed, I must confess I did not feel strongly one way or the other. But when I, as most Members of the Senate and the House did, sat and listened to Nelson Mandela say to us he was grateful for our willingness to sacrifice on behalf of his freedom, I had no doubt any longer.

Those sanctions worked, Mr. President. They moved the Government of South Africa in a direction where they are going to dismantle apartheid. But I fear the message that the President is sending to the Government of South Africa and the people of South Africa is that you have done enough. It may be that the President's timing is correct. My own internal fear is that the timing is not good, particularly since the President has made no secret of the fact that he opposed the sanctions being instituted in the first place. I find in fact the defense that, "Well, I am just doing what Congress tells me I should do," to be a bit weak and difficult to defend, Mr. President. The President has never been terribly respectful of what Congress thinks he should do in the area of foreign policy and has usually taken a strong and, I think, correct position that he is the one charged with the foreign policy of the United States, with guidance from Congress, advice of Congress, with at times, legislation directing him what to do.

We have the context of 1991 where it seems to me the President had at least the room to make a strong statement which said that the Government of South Africa and President de Klerk need to be congratulated for the progress that has been made, but they have not made a sufficient amount of progress where one can look at South Africa and say we are proud to have them as an ally. This is a nation where blacks still cannot vote; this is a nation where blacks still struggle to own property, where they have been deprived of educational opportunity. Clearly apartheid is being dismantled but it is still in effect.

I heard the Senator from New Jersey say that part of his doubt is as a consequence of the President's unwillingness to follow his words with action. As a member of the Appropriations Committee for NASA and VA and independent agencies, I am very much aware that the President is committed to the space station and watched him, I must say, with a great deal of respect, move quickly to the House of Representatives and get them to reverse a committee decision and reinstitute full funding for the space station. I have heard that he has threatened to veto that appropriations bill unless full funding for the space station is included.

That is the kind of commitment we need, Mr. President, if we are going to fully fund Head Start and the Women, Infant and Children Program and the Maternal and Health Care Block Grant Program, all of which would send a strong signal to Americans that we are willing to follow our words with action, so as to be able to provide all of our children the opportunity they deserve, if not for humanitarian reasons, as I believe they should be, for economic reasons, for good dollars and cents reasons.

So there is cause for us to doubt the President's commitment. We saw what he could do with the space station when he is committed, when he believes. He found $2 billion to make that expenditure. And this money, I must say, I believe could do the same thing for WIC and for Head Start if only the President believes strongly enough to come to us and say set aside some other things that are not quite as urgent, as the lives of young children in America.

If the President came to the American people and said I am appalled by the disparity in infant mortality and low birth weight babies of blacks and whites, I am disturbed by the dropout rates and the teenage pregnancy rates between blacks and whites, we must do something, it says we must follow our expressions of concern with action.

So I believe the concern of the distinguished Senator from New Jersey about the President's commitment is a legitimate concern.

There is another example, Mr. President. We fought a long and hard battle last year on an ABC bill, establishing a child care bill and much needed assistance to mothers and fathers as they try to find quality child care for their children while they work.

The President in the beginning was not very friendly to the notion that government should get involved in trying to assist families in taking care of their children and, in fact, he opposed it. After the bill was passed, he took credit for it and has talked about this bill as something that empowers parents and gives them choices and gives States flexibility.

Mr. President, the regulations that are being drafted by Health and Human Services do precisely the opposite. This is not a program of increasing flexibility to the States. The detail of this regulation takes away all flexibility and directs the States as to how they are to conduct the programs and leaves almost no room for States and parents to evaluate what needs to be done so as to establish good quality child care, which is a pressing issue, not just making sure that there is some place to take your child but that the child has a quality environment.

It is exceedingly difficult today; a child care center is faced with a rather difficult task of needing to pay enough to get good people to work but not being able to pay so much so as to drive up the cost of the child care for the mother and father. This child care bill is desperately needed. Mothers and fathers are hungry for it, Mr. President. My State will get no more than enough money to take care of 1,000 families and the demand is at least 50 times that.

There is an urgency to act, Mr. President. I believe the regulations being drafted by the administration in regard to child care reflect an ideological commitment, a desire to win a political argument, not a desire to say to Americans we have an urgent problem and we are going to solve it right here at home.

So I believe again the distinguished Senator from New Jersey is correct in saying that it appears the administration, the President of the United States will talk about racial justice but is not willing to follow it with action.

We recently saw a very impressive Rose Garden ceremony where the President of the United States announced a new initiative to bring immunization to more Americans since we now see an increasing number of Americans dying from common diseases like measles. But within a few days after he made the announcement, safely beyond the time the press had already called attention to it, the President announced that he was not going to do it after all, that he was going to check into it a little more and see exactly what needed to be done.

Again, Mr. President, there is no urgency there. There is no feeling that we must act. Otherwise, people are dying. They are not developing like they should.

There is something that we can collectively do other than to just talk. I call to all my colleagues' attention the words of the distinguished Senator from New Jersey.

They were eloquent not just about what the President must do but what we must do if we are going to be able to leave here and say we have done all we can for those who are least fortunate and who need health care.

I am not standing here and saying that I believe that the President's ideology and conservative approach is hostile to mine at all. Indeed, as I examine and look at the detail of aid to families with dependent children, and food stamps, and other welfare programs that we have established, I see many barriers to people getting back to work. I see many instances in fact where we tend to have institutionalized poverty by the very institutions that we create to try to help those who are poor.

There is much room for us to examine both from the left hand and from the right to try to decide what needs to be done, but there should be no disagreement. Look at the statistics and look at what is going around in our streets today. There should be no disagreement that action is needed, and that we will pay a heavy price if we do not act—a heavy economic price, Mr. President. I believe we will pay a heavy moral price as well.

The words of the distinguished Senator from New Jersey need to be heard by all of us, and we need to follow his words of action. I am grateful and fortunate that he delivered those words in my presence, and I hope that all of us have the courage to act upon them.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

ANTI-CORRUPTION ACT OF 1991

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I want to take a few moments here to discuss an amendment which will be approved later tonight en bloc with other amendments that has been essentially agreed to by both sides.

Mr. President, I have been interested for quite some time in the problem of public corruption, and in particular that component part of the public corruption problem typically referred to as election fraud.

Last year the amendment that I am going to discuss in a few moments which was cosponsored by the chairman of the Judiciary Committee, Senator BIDEN, was approved. It will be offered on my behalf later tonight. I would like to take a few moments of the Senate's time to explain what it is about.

This amendment, the Anti-Corruption Act of 1991, as I indicated, passed the Senate last year as a provision in S. 1970, last year's crime bill. It had the support of the Attorney General, the Criminal Division of the Justice Department, and the Senate Judiciary Committee.

I have worked to develop a comprehensive law enforcement response to the problems of election fraud and public corruption, especially in the wake of the Supreme Court decision in McNally against the United States.

Three years ago we passed an amendment to the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988 sponsored by Senator BIDEN and myself which restored much of what was lost in the McNally decision in terms of the jurisdictional authority needed to go after corrupt officials. But, Mr. President, a great deal more is needed to be done, and still needs to be done through this amendment.

When I initially focused on the public corruption issue I was primarily concerned with election fraud. The only way to clean up election fraud is to bring the Federal Government in, and give it the authority to prosecute offenders under Federal law in Federal court.

That is what Congress did in 1965 in enacting the Voting Rights Act. It used the Federal Government's power to protect people's voting rights from entrenched local discrimination.

I soon found that the efforts of Federal law enforcement officials against public corruption are not limited to election fraud. Moreover, I learned that the Federal Government's entire anticorruption enforcement effort had been placed at risk by the McNally decision.

At that point I joined forces with the Justice Department to develop a comprehensive answer to the McNally problem. When we had put together such a bill, I forged a coalition with members of the Senate Judiciary Committee who shared my view that Federal prosecutors ought to have every available resource to stop public corruption. We accomplished a great deal with the passage of legislation to reverse the McNally decision. That is already law.

When Senator BIDEN and I returned after the end of the 100th Congress, we felt there still was further to go. Despite our work in Congress, there still were reports of election fraud. And those who abuse the public trust and seek to defraud the Government are getting cleverer in evading the law.

Even in this day and age, and with all our past work, it still is not clear in the law whether the Federal Government can investigate and prosecute all acts of election fraud. This legislation will make every act of election fraud—at every level of government—a Federal offense. It raises the maximum penalty for both election fraud and public corruption to 10 years in the Federal Penitentiary and a $10,000 fine. This amendment also will greatly expand the jurisdictional basis for Federal prosecutors to investigate all forms of public corruption and punish the wrongdoers.

I cannot stress enough the importance of this legislation. In some parts of the country, if you are caught buying or selling votes, you go see your friend the judge and he gives you a slap on the wrist.

This amendment assures that anyone caught in election-day shenanigans will be facing a Federal grand jury and a ticket to Federal prison.

If we are going to make this Nation a better place to live, it is imperative that we take care of the basics. Two of these basics are a clean election process and a government free of corruption. This amendment goes a long way toward realizing these goals.

I want to particularly thank the chairman of the Judiciary Committee for his work on this legislation and his years of interest in these issues. As I indicated earlier, this is an amendment that will be approved en bloc later this evening on the crime bill.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

THE CRIME BILL

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, 3 weeks ago I spoke about this body's ritual of passing crime bills that have little to do with fighting crime and much to do with political gamesmanship. For the last four Congresses these crime debates have become forums for Senators to come forward and show how tough they can be on criminals. Because these debates have not focused on the causes of crime, each of these crime bills has been a failure. Crime rates have continued to rise. Murder rates have continued to rise. Our jails are filled, but crime continues unabated.

I also said 3 weeks ago that I would oppose any crime bill which was the product of such political gamesmanship. This is such a bill, and yet, I find myself in a difficult position.

My position is difficult because this bill now includes the Brady bill—a provision that will do something to stop crime in America. I have fought for over 4 years to see this Senate pass a waiting period for handgun purchases, and I am glad it was adopted overwhelmingly by the Senate as part of this crime bill.

The compromise Brady bill will make it harder for criminals to get guns. It requires a potential purchaser of a gun to wait 5 business days, in effect 1 week, before buying a handgun. It requires local police to conduct a background check during that time, to ensure that felons and other prohibited persons are not able just to walk into a gun store and walk out with a handgun. And within several years, it will require the implementation of an instant check system to replace the waiting period. Any State failing to meet the timetable for implementation must maintain the 5-business-day waiting period.

The provisions of the Brady bill—first, the waiting period, and later the instant check—will do more to fight crime than all the rest of this crime bill put together.

There are also some other useful provisions in this bill, such as assistance to police departments and other grant programs. I totally support these efforts to give added support to the law enforcement community. We in Congress need to give all the help we can to these officers who do a great job on the streets of America day in, day out.

But weighed against these useful provisions, and even weighed against the Brady bill, the rest of the bill is so misguided, or so dangerous, that I cannot in good conscience vote for it.

Unfortunately, this bill is the product of the same tough talk which has typified previous crime bills, only with far worse results. Unlike previous crime bills, I believe this crime bill virtually assures that we will execute innocent people; people whose only crime was to be caught in the crossfire of this legislative duel of who can be tougher on crime.

As a result of the scores of new death penalties and the evisceration of habeas corpus protections embodied in this bill, I predict that not long from now I or some other Senator will be standing in this well listing the names of innocent people accused and convicted of crimes they did not commit. These will be people, mostly black men, who have been sent to their death at the hands of our own Government. Years ago, I stood here and read the names of over 50 people who were erroneously convicted of crimes for which the penalty was death. We have sent 23 innocent people to their death in error, only to learn after the fact that they were innocent. I do not want this list of tragic mistakes to grow.

As much as I want to vote for the Brady bill, which I have so long fought to have enacted into law, I cannot support a bill which would wreak such harm.

Two Congresses ago, I supported the death penalty for drug kingpins who commit murder. The overwhelming evidence of involvement in extensive criminal activity in the case of drug kingpins provides greater certainty of the guilt of the defendant. For example, under the definition in the law, to be a drug kingpin, the murderer would have had to have been guilty of selling large amounts of illegal drugs and to have been the leader of a criminal enterprise of five or more individuals. Under these carefully circumscribed provisions, it is unlikely that an innocent person could be convicted of the crime.

In contrast to precautions inherent in the death penalty for drug kingpins law, this bill represents an unprecedented expansion of the death penalty and creates over 50 capital punishment offenses with little protection against executing innocent people.

We have tried so hard to appear tougher on crime that we have filled this bill with capital punishment provisions that are empty gestures and meaningless in the fight against crime.

For example, the bill provides for capital punishment for killing a poultry inspector, killing a horse inspector and killing a meat inspector. While any murder is a heinous and awful act which deserves to be dealt with severely, these crimes occur rarely and are hardly the cause of the crime epidemic we face today. The American public wants relief from crime run rampant, but they are not going to obtain that relief knowing that we have made the murder of Government inspectors a death penalty offense.

Now let me address another example that shows the absurdity of what the Senate has done in this crime bill. The Senate was so determined to look tough, it even created Federal death penalties for crimes with no relationship to a Federal interest. This bill would take over much of the State control over their own criminal laws.

What has happened to States' rights? Many Members of this body have spent their political careers on the floor, talking to constituents, and even running for President, defending the rights of States to enact their own laws free from interference from the Federal Government. Now, when faced with an unprecedented incursion of a fundamental State prerogative—the right to determine criminal penalties for crimes committed in the State—the defenders of States' rights have fallen silent.

Under this bill, all gun killings, even those involving domestic disputes or street robberies, would now be subject to a Federal death penalty. Fourteen States that have chosen not to adopt the death penalty, now face a Federal death penalty for over half of the homicides committed in their State.

In addition, this bill would impose Federal mandatory minimums on States for all crimes of violence or drug trafficking where someone involved in the crime uses or possesses a firearm. Mr. President, I do not believe that the Senate is aware of what is in this bill. If you get into a fistfight in a bar, and you have a gun in your pocket which you never even take out, you could go to jail for 10 years as a result of this new mandatory minimum. No matter what the State law, Congress is telling the States that for 60 percent of their murders; for 33 percent of their robberies; and for over 20 percent of their assaults, the Federal Government will be able to dictate what penalties will be assessed. That is what is in this bill.

This unprecedented incursion upon State sovereignty in the critical area of criminal law is all the more absurd because it is being done with the consent of ardent States' rights defenders. The Senator from South Carolina has stated in the past that the Congress needs "to reduce the intrusive interference by Federal courts in the State criminal justice system." Earlier this week, he railed against a proposal to implement literacy programs in State prisons as another example of the Federal Government "mandating that the States do things. Let the States choose," said Senator THURMOND.

The people in the States have just as much sense down there as we have here in Congress, and sometimes I think much more. * * * They understand the situation.

But when it comes to deciding whether or not to impose the ultimate criminal punishment—death—the Senator from South Carolina does not want to let the States choose. When it comes to capital punishment, he has no trouble encroaching upon the sovereignty of those States that do not have a death penalty. And when it came to the question of imposing a Federal mandatory minimum sentence in every single State in the Union for any crime involving a gun, concerns about States' rights melted away.

The Senator from Utah, my friend, another strong defender of federalism, invoked States' rights when he opposed a provision in the Biden bill that would outlaw racial discrimination in the application of the death penalty. He stated that the Racial Justice Act "is clearly not desired by the State legislators who, in 39 different States, have adopted death penalty statutes since 1976." But when it came to deciding whether or not the death penalty should be imposed in States which forbid capital punishment, the Senator from Utah [Mr. HATCH] was silent about the desires and wishes of those States.

The Senator from Iowa, my good friend Senator GRASSLEY, is another great defender of States rights. He opposed the Biden habeas corpus proposal in part because he believed it abandoned "well-settled law regarding deference to State procedural rules." But what about the deference that should be accorded those States which oppose capital punishment? What about the deference that should be accorded those States which want to set their own penalties for crimes involving a gun?

Do we trust the States so little that we want the Federal authorities and the Federal courts to take over the function of fighting local crime? Will the American people be comforted to know that the Federal Government will be policing their streets? Or will they begin to see how absurd Congress' posturing on the crime issue has become?

This crime bill also purports to fight crime by undercutting habeas corpus protections, but I fail to see how a single criminal act will be deterred by these changes.

While I did not agree with everything in the Powell commission report, which had addressed itself to the subject of habeas corpus, I support the goal of streamlining habeas corpus in order to prevent unnecessary delay and needlessly repetitive litigation. But what we have done in this bill goes too far, far beyond the Powell recommendations and far beyond what makes good sense. We have not reformed habeas corpus; we have, for all practical purposes, eliminated habeas corpus.

In fact, these provisions only make it more likely that we will mistakenly execute innocent people: A crime we think too little about as we prepare to pass this bill.

We are so concerned with haste, that we apparently no longer care if the courts are making correct determinations.

For example, this bill would prevent Federal courts from ruling on any constitutional issues which were fully and fairly adjudicated in State court, even if the State court's resolution of the issue was wrong.

In other words, this bill allows defendants to be put to death even when constitutional errors are made at their trial. It effectively bars defendants from ever having a chance at getting a new trial, free of constitutional error. How can we claim to be a nation which respects the Constitution and reveres due process, if we deny those sentenced to death the right to a trial which comports with the Constitution?

I am mindful of the tragic consequences of murder, but throwing away the Constitution and executing innocent people will not deter murders. Heaping wrong upon wrong is not a solution.

I am frank to say that as much as I want the Brady bill signed into law, I cannot support a bill which does so little to deter violent crime and which in the name of being tough on crime puts at risk the lives of innocent people. There is too much death penalty with too few protections. I am therefore compelled to vote against this crime bill.

EXTENSIONS OF TIME FOR MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the period for morning business be extended for 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ENERGY AND WATER DEVELOPMENT APPROPRIATIONS ACT

Mr. PRESSLER. Mr. President, I today voted for the fiscal year 1992 energy and water development appropriations bill, H.R. 2427. While it does not contain all that I had wanted for water projects in my State, it does appropriate $33,805,000 for the development of South Dakota's water resources. Therefore, I supported passage of this bill.

Due to the construction of the Missouri River mainstem dams, South Dakota possesses an abundance of water. However, that water is concentrated in the center of the State. We lack adequate distribution facilities to get the water to where it is needed.

The Federal Government has a long-standing obligation to the State of South Dakota to help develop the State's water resources. When construction of the mainstem dams flooded vast areas, my State lost more than a half million acres of its richest farmland. South Dakota has reaped some benefits from the presence of the dams, particularly in recreational areas, but these recreational benefits pale in comparison to the benefits reaped by downstream States from the taming of the Missouri River's historic propensity for ruinous flooding. The dams that now permanently flood land in South Dakota prevent the disastrous flooding of the downstream States.

Based on this set of facts, I always have supported the funding of vital and necessary water projects in South Dakota. I never have considered these appropriations porkbarrel spending, as water projects are derisively referred to by some political pundits and ivory tower academicians. Rather, these appropriations represent only a partial repayment on an obligation the Federal Government owes the State of South Dakota—a good faith effort to compensate the State for the sacrifices it made for the benefit of downstream States.

I voted for passage of this bill today. I will continue to work on behalf of my State to obtain additional future funding for the development of South Dakota's water resources.

CORRECTION

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, last year I submitted for the RECORD an important study on rising antisemitism in Eastern Europe. The study was drafted by the London-based Institute of Jewish Affairs in coordination with the Anti-Defamation League.

Since that time, it has come to my attention that a mistaken translation of an excerpt from a book by Dr. Franjo Tudjman, leader of the nationalist Croatia Democratic Union and now the President of the Yugoslavian Republic of Croatia, gave a misleading and inaccurate picture.

In discussing antisemitic incidents in Yugoslavia, the report stated that a 1989 book by Dr. Tudjman entitled "Wanderings of Historical Truth" included a blatantly antisemitic reference. The report described the antisemitic reference as a "particularly worrying incident."

It seems, however, that the antisemitic comment was not made by Dr. Tudjman. The statement was a quotation by a former Serbian prisoner in one of the Nazi death camps. Dr. Tudjman was quoting the prisoner, specifically identifying his statement as antisemitic.

Dr. Howard Spier, the author of this report, has apologized for the error. He was quoting from an article which appeared in the London Jewish Chronicle by Srdjan Matic, a leading official of the Zagreb Jewish community. Mr. Matic has since indicated that he was misinterpreted.

I am pleased to correct the RECORD at this time.

SOUTH AFRICA SANCTIONS

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, I rise today to support President Bush's decision to lift United States sanctions against South Africa. The President is acting in full accordance with the law passed by the Congress in 1986, and I believe his decision will help further our shared objectives of promoting continued and positive change in South Africa.

Although South Africa still has a long way to go before it can claim a fully functioning, majority-based democracy with equal rights for all its citizens, it is quite clear to this Senator that South Africa has made major progress toward eliminating the evils of apartheid. In fact, the progress now appears to be irreversible.

It is very important that this country recognize and acknowledge this progress and adapt our policies to new circumstances.

Furthermore, the United States sanctions law does not require South Africa to achieve a perfect democracy before sanctions can be lifted. The reality of the situation is such that the conditions of the 1986 law have been met, and the President is correct in lifting the sanctions.

In 1986, this country opted for the carrot and stick approach: imposing sanctions was the stick; the promise to remove them if reforms were made was the carrot. We have used the stick now for 5 years. It is time to use the carrot.

Historians will debate for all time the question of just how much influence the sanctions—the stick—had on South Africa. But it is clear that, whatever the impetus, South Africa has already made remarkable progress in abolishing the foundations of apartheid and that they have met the conditions in the United States law.

At this time, Mr. President, I believe we can better advance our shared objectives by reengaging with South Africa. The 1986 sanctions law has served its purposes, and now it is time to move forward, to adapt to new circumstances.

Let us move forward in our policy toward South Africa to encourage continued progress. Lifting the sanctions is the first step in a different and positive direction, and I look forward to this new era in United States-South Africa relations.

Thank you, Mr. President. I yield the floor.

THE CIVIL RIGHTS LEGISLATION

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, since the nomination of my good friend and longtime associate, Clarence Thomas, to the U.S. Supreme Court, some Senators have asked me my intention with respect to civil rights legislation, which of course has been the subject of intense discussion and negotiation not only for the last month or so, but for about the last 2 years.

And, therefore, I would like to take the floor briefly this evening to state for whomever happens to be listening what my views are on the course of civil rights legislation.

Obviously, a great deal of my own time is going to be spent voluntarily attempting to persuade my colleagues to support the nomination of Clarence Thomas to the U.S. Supreme Court. He is a person I have known for 17 years. I first hired him when he was a third-year law student out of Yale Law School, and he worked for me in the attorney general's office in Jefferson City, and again came to work for me here in Washington. I know him to be a first-rate person and as a person who is eminently well qualified to serve on the Supreme Court. I am going to be spending a lot of time working on that.

But I also want to make it clear that in no way is my determination to try to help pass the civil rights bill lessened by my commitment to spend a lot of time on the Thomas nomination. I believe that it is very important, Mr. President, for our country to resolve the issues that were created by the Supreme Court's various decisions on civil rights and to reestablish what I believe is the national consensus on civil rights in this country. And, therefore, in my view, the sooner we pass the legislation, the better off we are.

Mr. President, I have continued to have a variety of discussions since we returned from the recess with a variety of parties on the question of civil rights legislation. I think that the good that has been accomplished over the last few months is that we have succeeded in narrowing the issues so that a lot of the legalistic nature of the discussions that has gone on for the past couple of years is now, in my opinion, behind us.

We have succeeded in clearing away a lot of the underbrush and exposing the one issue which now has become the paramount issue on civil rights, and that issue is a policy issue; it is not a legalism. It is a policy issue which is pretty easy to explain and which now, in my opinion, is ripe for consideration both by the President of the United States and by Members of Congress.

In a nutshell, the policy issue that remains for consideration is this: Should it be lawful for an employer to create qualifications for employment which do not have anything to do with the ability of a person to do the job, and which qualifications serve to screen out women or to screen out minorities from employment? Should the employer be able to do that?

And that precise issue is the one that I think has now been presented because of the winnowing effect of what we have been doing over the last month in working on this legislation. We have exposed that precise policy issue.

Ways in which this policy issue could crop up might include, for example, whether an employer could establish a high school diploma as a requirement for employment for, say, a janitorial job, if the high school diploma, as a matter of fact, screened out a minority group from employment; or whether an employer could say that, as a matter of job qualification, single parents would no longer be employed by that particular business, even though that would obviously screen out women and would have no relationship to the ability of the employee to do the job.

Now, that is what we are down to. That is the most significant remaining issue in all of this debate on civil rights. And I think it is a fairly easy issue for people to come to grips with. Should an employer be able to say that janitors must have a high school diploma; yes or no? If the answer is yes, then the employer could use that qualification, unrelated to ability to do the job, as a way of keeping out perhaps some minorities from being able to have access to the workplace.

It is a very direct issue, a very fundamental issue, and an issue which was resolved by the U.S. Supreme Court back in 1971 in a case called Griggs versus Duke Power Co. In that case, the U.S. Supreme Court said that the employer could not use a high school diploma as a condition of employment for a job that did not require educational ability or educational background.

So the Supreme Court decided that in 1971. It remained the law until 1989, until the Supreme Court decided the Wards Cove case. And throughout all of these discussions over the last 2 years, most people have said that we should get back to the Griggs case. The administration has said repeatedly we should get back to the Griggs case. We should get back to the exact language that was used in the Griggs case.

Well, the holding of the Griggs case was that artificial qualifications unrelated to ability to perform the job could not be used as a screening device to screen out women or to screen out minorities. That was the holding of the case. That is the issue that is now before the policymakers.

Clearly, Mr. President, it would be a much better and easier and cleaner result for our country if we could decide that issue before it comes to the floor of the Senate. If the President of the United States would decide that the Griggs case should be the law, that these qualifications that have no relationship to job performance should not be used to screen minorities or women, if the President could decide that, then I believe we are very close to coming to an agreement which would be adequate in the eyes of the administration and the President, and which could become law.

I think we are very close to that. The President is going to be leaving for Europe. He is obviously going to be preoccupied by foreign policy matters for the next week and a half or so. But it is my hope that when he returns he could address this very fundamental policy question, hopefully to decide it in a way which would allow us to pass this bill very quickly.

In the event the President does not believe that the Griggs case is the last word on job qualifications, then it is my thought that the only available way to resolve the issue is the way that policy matters are normally resolved in our system, and that is that the legislation proceeds through the Senate and we see what happens to it in the normal course of affairs.

I think, again, just to wind up, that the best interests of the country would be served by reaching an agreement on this matter. I think that an agreement is very close. I think that we are down to one policy issue, and I think that policy issue is exactly the same one that the Supreme Court decided in the Griggs case in 1971.

I yield the floor.

CLOTURE VOTE ON S. 1241

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, I rise today to briefly explain my reasons for voting to limit debate on S. 1241, the Violent Crime Control Act of 1991.

On March 6, President Bush challenged the Congress to pass a highway bill and a crime bill within 100 days. The Senate missed that deadline with the highway bill by 5 days; 126 days have now passed since the President's challenge, and this body has still not completed action on a crime bill that we have been considering 3 weeks.

We have debated and settled several controversial issues on this bill. On the issue of gun control, we struggled to come up with a compromise on the Brady bill that will facilitate the development of a national criminal identification system that should make it more difficult for convicted felons and other dangerous individuals to obtain handguns through licensed gun dealers.

After days of debate, we adopted a bipartisan compromise that will create a 5-day waiting period before a handgun can be purchased. Although there was wide disagreement in this body on the usefulness of waiting periods, this Dole-Metzenbaum proposal was the best compromise we were able to reach that would move us toward the common goal of a national computerized instant background check. Further debate on this bill will not result in a better compromise on this controversial issue.

Mr. President, there will come a time when we will all be called on to cast our votes on passing this bill. I will vote no on final passage because I cannot support any measure that would allow for the imposition of the death penalty. I and many of my colleagues who also oppose the death penalty have had an opportunity on several occasions to make our views known on amendments expanding the death penalty.

We had our day on the Senate floor, and when it came to a vote, we lost. Further debate on S. 1241 will not change that outcome. Dragging out the debate on this bill will not make S. 1241 a better bill, nor will it serve our constituents.

Mr. President, we have all had an opportunity to debate the important issues related to crime. These issues have been argued and concluded. I ask now that we be able to vote on the merits of this bill. I have hopes that this bill will be improved in conference committee with the House of Representatives.

Mr. President, we owe it to President Bush and the American people not to stall on this legislation any longer. I intend to vote to invoke cloture on this bill so that this body can proceed with our Nation's pressing business, and I encourage my colleagues to do the same.

LIFTING SANCTIONS ON SOUTH AFRICA

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, we learned today that President Bush has decided to lift economic sanctions imposed on South Africa under the Comprehensive Anti-Apartheid Act. By so doing, the President is certifying that the five conditions set forth in the act have been met, including the release of all political prisoners.

Mr. President, the developments in South Africa since President F.W. de Klerk delivered his February 2, 1990, speech have been dramatic. The legal framework of the apartheid system has been repealed. Nelson Mandela has been released and has responded to the Government's initiatives with a grace that has been simply extraordinary. At long last there is hope.

But we must remember that for all of these positive steps, little has changed in the lives of South Africa's black citizens. They still live, for the most part, in wretched poverty which is largely the product of more than three decades of obscene, legally-enforced racist policies.

I am troubled by the administration's assertion that all political prisoners have been released. The fate of political prisoners in South Africa has long been a matter of concern to me. In 1975, at the time that I had the honor to serve as the U.S. Permanent Representative to the United Nations, President Ford directed that the United States support a General Assembly resolution entitled "Solidarity with the South African Political Prisoners." This resolution condemned "the ruthless repression by the racist South African regime," expressed "solidarity with all South Africans struggling against apartheid," and called upon the South African regime to grant an unconditional amnesty to all persons imprisoned or restricted for their opposition to apartheid or acts arising from such opposition. The United States delegation strongly supported the resolution in the Special Political Committee, presenting a lawyer-like case—in the tradition of a Brandeis brief—against apartheid and documenting by name the prisoners being held in South Africa for their beliefs, including, of course, Nelson Mandela.

Mr. Mandela and the others that we mentioned during that debate more than a decade and a half ago have finally been released, but two categories of prisoners still merit close scrutiny. First, there are those who are held by the nominally independent homelands created by the South African Government for the purpose of disenfranchising South Africa's black citizens. The United States has quite rightly never accepted the fiction that these "homelands" were beyond the control of the South African Government. It is troubling, therefore, that the administration now seems to have accepted the proposition that the South African Government has no responsibility for these prisoners.

Second, there are those prisoners who are held for so-called unrest-related offenses which occurred during the recent period of emergency. Mr. President, this emergency was brought about by the struggle of the black majority in South Africa against apartheid. The means adopted by the Government to stop these protests were brutal and some 4,000 persons still languish in prison as a result. While I can well imagine that some of these persons do not meet the definition of a political prisoner, I am surprised that the administration is willing to vouch that none do. I note that the African National Congress, at its recently completed National Conference, requested that the international community maintain sanctions and argued that many political prisoners are still being held by the Government. Amnesty International has stated that "it may be too early for President Bush to contend that all political prisoners in South Africa have been freed" and notes that 1,500 people were detained incommunicado without charge or trial in South Africa as recently as last year.

Mr. President, the reality of apartheid remains and we must not permit the South African Government to believe that it has done enough, that the international community is satisfied. The truth is very different. The South African Government has only just begun to correct the injustice of apartheid and the United States Congress will be monitoring its continued progress closely.

TERRY ANDERSON

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I rise to inform my colleagues that today marks the 2,307th day that Terry Anderson has been held captive in Lebanon.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time for morning business has expired. The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I suggest that absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

VIOLENT CRIME CONTROL ACT

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill.

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT AGREEMENT

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the following amendments which are at the desk be the only amendments in order to the crime bill prior to the next cloture vote; that they be considered and agreed to en bloc; that the motions to reconsider be tabled en bloc; that no motions to recommit be in order prior to the next cloture vote. The amendments are as follows:

An amendment by Senator RUDMAN on prisons/drug czar; an amendment by Senator D'AMATO technical; an amendment by Senator DOLE, technical on guns; an amendment by Senator SEYMOUR on alien exploitation; and amendment by Senator MCCONNELL on public corruption; an amendment by Senators THURMOND and BIDEN that is technical; an amendment by Senator BINGAMAN that is technical; an amendment by Senator RIEGLE on violent crime; an amendment by Senator DeCONCINI, commission on law enforcement; and an amendment by Senator GRAMM of Texas on prisons.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report the amendments.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Maine [Mr. MITCHELL] proposes amendments en bloc numbered 722, 723, 724, 725, 726, 727, 728, 729, 730, and 731.

The amendments agreed to en bloc are as follows:

AMENDMENT No. 722

(Purpose: To provide that the Director of the Bureau of Prisons shall select locations for regional prisons and boot camps)

On page 160, line 5, strike the words "National Drug Control Policy" and insert in lieu thereof "the Bureau of Prisons".

On page 160, line 6, strike the words "the Bureau of Prisons" and insert in lieu thereof "National Drug Control Policy".

On page 162, line 20 and 21, strike the words "National Drug Control Policy" and insert in lieu thereof "the Bureau of Prisons".

On page 162, line 22, strike the words "the Bureau of Prisons" and insert in lieu thereof "National Drug Control Policy".

AMENDMENT No. 723

(Purpose: Technical amendment to previous D'Amato amendment)

Strike amendment No. 387 and insert in lieu thereof:

"SEC. . MANDATORY PRISON TERMS FOR USE, POSSESSION, OR CARRYING OF A FIREARM OR DESTRUCTIVE DEVICE DURING A STATE CRIME OF VIOLENCE OR STATE DRUG TRAFFICKING CRIME.

Section 924(c) of title 18 of the United States Code is amended by adding the following:

"(4)(A) Whoever, during and in relation to any crime of violence or drug trafficking crime (including a crime of violence or drug trafficking crime which provides for an enhanced punishment if committed by the use of a deadly or dangerous weapon or device) for which he may be prosecuted in a court of any State,

"(i) knowingly possesses a firearm, shall, in addition to the punishment provided for such crime of violence or drug trafficking crime, be sentenced to imprisonment for not less than 10 years without release;

"(ii) discharges a firearm with intent to injure another person, shall, in addition to the punishment provided for such crime of violence or drug trafficking crime, be sentenced to imprisonment for not less than 20 years without release; or

"(iii) knowingly possesses a firearm that is a machinegun or destructive device, or is equipped with a firearm silencer or firearm muffler shall, in addition to the punishment provided for such crime of violence or drug trafficking crime, be sentenced to imprisonment for 30 years without release.

"In the case of a second conviction under this paragraph, a person shall, in addition to the punishment provided for such crime of violence or drug trafficking crime, be sentenced to imprisonment for not less than 20 years without release for possession or not less than 30 years without release for discharge of a firearm, and if the firearm is a machinegun or a destructive device, or is equipped with a firearm silencer or firearm muffler, to life imprisonment without release. In the case of a third or subsequent conviction under this paragraph, a person shall be sentenced to life imprisonment without release. Notwithstanding any other law, a court shall not place on probation or suspend the sentence of any person convicted of a violation of this paragraph, nor shall the term of imprisonment imposed under this paragraph run concurrently with any other term of imprisonment including that imposed for the crime of violence or drug trafficking crime in which the firearm was used. No person sentenced under this paragraph shall be eligible for parole, nor shall such person be released for any reason whatsoever, during a term of imprisonment imposed under this paragraph.

"(B) For the purposes of paragraph (A), a person shall be considered to be in possession of a firearm if the person has a firearm readily available at the scene of the crime during the commission of the crime.

"(C) Except in the case of a person who engaged in or participated in criminal conduct that gave rise to the occasion for the person's use of a firearm, this paragraph has no application to a person who may be found to have committed a criminal act while acting in defense of person or property during the course of a crime being committed by another person (including the arrest or attempted arrest of the offender during or immediately after the commission of the crime)."

"(D) For purpose of this paragraph, the term "drug trafficking crime" means any crime punishable by imprisonment for more than one year involving the manufacture, distribution, possession, cultivation, sale, or transfer of a controlled substance, controlled substance analogue, immediate precursor, or listed chemical (as those terms are defined in section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 802)), or an attempt or conspiracy to commit such a crime.

"(E) For purposes of this paragraph the term "crime to violence" means an offense that is punishable by imprisonment for more than one year and—

(1) has as an element the use, attempted use, or threatened use of physical force against the person or property of another, or

(2) that by its nature, involves a substantial risk that physical force against the person or property of another may be used in the cause of committing the offense.

"(F) In accordance with Section 927, it is the intent of Congress that this paragraph shall be used to supplement but not supplant the efforts of state and local prosecutors in prosecuting crimes of violence and drug trafficking crimes that could be prosecuted under state law. It is also the intent of Congress that the Attorney General shall give due deference to the interest that a state or local prosecutor has in prosecuting the defendant under state law. This subparagraph shall not create any rights, substantive or procedural, enforceable at law by any party in any manner, civil or criminal, nor does it place any limitations on otherwise lawful prerogatives of the Department of Justice."

"(G) JURISDICTION.—There is federal jurisdiction over an offense under this paragraph if a firearm involved in the offense has moved at any time in interstate or foreign commerce."

AMENDMENT No. 724

(Purpose: To make a technical change)

Section 922(u) of title 18, United States Code, as added by section 2701 of the amendment, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1) by—

(A) redesignating subparagraphs (D) and (E) as subparagraphs (E) and (F), respectively; and

(B) adding after subparagraph (C) the following:

"(D) the law of the State requires that, before any licensed importer, licensed manufacturer, or licensed dealer completes the transfer of a handgun to an individual who is not licensed under section 923, an authorized government official verify that the information available to such official does not indicate that possession of a handgun by the transferee would be in violation of law, except that this subparagraph shall not apply to a State that, on the date of certification pursuant to section 2702(d) of the Violent Crime Control Act of 1991, is not in compliance with the timetable established pursuant to section 2702(c) of such Act;

(2) in paragraph (7)(B)(1) by striking "destroy and record" and inserting "destroy the statement and any record";

Section 922(v)(1)(A) of title 18, United States Code, as added by section 2701 of the amendment, is amended by striking "Felon Firearm Purchase Prevention Act of 1991" and inserting "Violent Crime Control Act of 1991" and section 922(v)(5) of such title is amended by inserting "or a political subdivision of a state of employee thereof" after the word "employee".

Section 2702(d)(1)(B) of the amendment is amended by striking "(C)" and inserting "(c)".

Section 509(b)(4) of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968, as added by section 2703(a)(1) of the amendment, is amended by striking "Felon Firearm Purchase Prevention Act of 1991" both places it appears and inserting "Violent Crime Control Act of 1991".

AMENDMENT No. 725

(Purpose: To impose civil fines in cases of inducement of illegal aliens to commit aggravated felonies)

At the end of the bill, insert the following:

TITLE —EXPLOITATION OF ALIENS

SEC. 01. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Exploitation of Aliens Act of 1991".

SEC. 02. EXPLOITATION OF ALIENS.

(a) INDUCEMENT OF ALIENS.—A person who is 18 years of age or older who voluntarily solicits, counsels, encourages, commands, intimidates, or procures any alien with the intent that the alien commit an aggravated felony, as defined in section 101(a)(43) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1101(a)(43)), shall be subject to a civil fine of not more than $100,000.

(b) COMMISSION OF CRIME BY ALIEN.—An alien who is induced by another person to commit and subsequently commits an aggravated felony, as defined in section 101(43) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1101(a)(43)), shall be subject to a civil fine of not more than $100,000.

(c) CONSIDERATIONS.—In imposing a fine under subsection (a) or (b), the court shall consider the severity of the offense sought or committed by the offender as a circumstance in aggravation.

(d) ENFORCEMENT.—(1) A proceeding for assessment of a civil fine under subsection (a) or (b) may be brought in a civil action before a United States district court.

(2) A person affected by a final order under this subsection may, not later than 45 days after the date on which the final order is issued, file a petition in the Court of Appeals for the appropriate circuit for review of the order.

(3)(A) If a person found in violation of subsection (a) or (b) fails to comply with a final order issued by a circuit court or administrative law judge, the Attorney General may bring a civil action to seek compliance with the order in any appropriate district court of the United States.

(B) In a civil action under subparagraph (A), the validity and appropriateness of the final order shall not be subject to review.

SEC. 63. CRIMINAL ALIEN IDENTIFICATION AND REMOVAL FUND.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—(1) There is established in the Treasury of the United States the Criminal Alien Identification and Removal Fund (referred to as the "Fund").

(2) All fines collected pursuant to section 02 shall be covered into the Fund and shall be used for the purposes of this section.

§ 03(b)(1) to read as follows:

"(b) DISTRIBUTION OF MONIES IN THE FUND.—(1) Ninety percent of the monies covered into the fund in any fiscal year may be used by the Attorney General—

"(A) to assist the Immigration and Naturalization Service to identify, investigate, apprehend, detain, and deport aliens who have committed an aggravated felony, and

"(B) to fund any of the 20 additional immigration judge positions authorized by section 512 of the Immigration Act of 1990 which have not been funded."

(2) Ten percent of the monies covered into the fund in any fiscal year may be distributed in the form of grants to the States by the Attorney General for the purposes of—

(A) assisting the States in implementing section 503(a)(11) of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3753(a)(11));

(B) expanding section 503(a)(11) of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3753(a)(11)) to identify aliens—

(i) as they are processed for admission into State prisons; and

(ii) when they enter probation programs.

(c) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—Section 280(b)(1) of the Immigration and Nationality Act is amended—

(1) by striking subparagraph (A); and

(2) by redesignating subparagraphs (B) and (C) as subparagraphs (A) and (B), respectively.

Mr. SEYMOUR. Mr. President, the amendment I offer is the latest chapter in our efforts to address the growing burden that criminal aliens place on our Federal, and State prisons, as well as local jails.

We have spent a week now on legislation that represents our commitment to stopping violent crime. Most importantly, this legislation symbolizes that we can't fight this war alone. We need the full cooperation, the best effort of the men and women who represent our State and local law enforcement agencies.

Their participation, Mr. President, is crucial, because they are the ones on the front lines in the war against violent crime.

But our participation is equally crucial, especially in those areas of the law that are clearly Federal responsibilities.

For most Californians and other citizens of the Southwest United States, the primary Federal law enforcement responsibility lies at the border: To stop the importation of illegal drugs, illegal weapons, and the illegal criminal aliens that come with them. People who cross the border to prey upon an innocent society, to become involved in gang activity, violence, and other serious crimes.

State and local law enforcement is doing the job. State prisons and local jails are overflowing with alien felons, their very crimes making them deportable, and deporting them once they've done their time in jail or prison is our—the Federal Government's—responsibility.

Now, I admit, Mr. President, this is a tough and difficult responsibility. But the degree of difficulty should not be an excuse for not fully upholding that responsibility.

As my colleagues know, just last year, Congress passed and the President signed into law the Immigration Act of 1990. Under this law, we reaffirmed our commitment that our first priority must be to deport alien felons the very minute they're released from prison.

We must not retreat from this goal. The very first step that a criminal alien takes out of prison must be into a waiting vehicle, its destination beyond the borders of the United States.

Mr. President, this important goal is not new to me. In fact, as a State senator, I introduced legislation to create a statewide program that attempts to speed up the process of identifying these alien felons. Once identified, the process of deportation can begin.

That program was based on a system instituted by Orange County Superior Court Judge David Carter. Under this system, 35 percent of the defendants brought before his court were found to be undocumented aliens, allowing the INS to begin deportation proceedings.

But despite efforts at the State level, meeting our goal depends on what we do here in Washington.

Last year's immigration act moves us a step closer: It call for the creation of 20 new immigration judges, and calls on the Attorney General to report to the Congress this December with a plan that will move us to that goal.

I look forward to reading the Attorney General's recommendations. But in the meantime, we can do more to speed up the process and get these alien felons out of our communities and our country.

That's what this amendment is about. My proposal calls for fines of up to $100,000 for those using an alien to commit an aggravated felony. Those in violation of my amendment will literally have to pay dearly for using aliens as their criminal foot soldiers.

But more importantly, my amendment proposes we use the money collected under this new penalty to meet our ultimate goal, that day when released alien convicts will breathe their first breath of freedom—outside of America.

All fines collected will be deposited into a criminal alien identification and removal fund, where the attorney general will have the discretion to use 90 percent of these funds to assist the INS to identify and deport alien felons and fund any of the 20 additional immigration judge positions created last year.

The remaining funds can be used by the States to implement systems like the one so effectively used by Judge Carter.

Mr. President, this amendment is a modest attempt to meet the goal I've described, but it won't be my last. I intend to revisit this issue, Mr. President, because these alien thugs are the responsibility of the Federal Government, regardless of where they are being housed, whether in a State prison or a local jail. Once they crossed that border, and once they committed a crime, they have violated Federal law, and therefore, it is up to us to deal with them.

Finally, I would like to express my thanks to my good friend from Wyoming and the Senior Senator from Massachusetts for their expertise and counsel in the development of this amendment.

AMENDMENT No. 726

(Purpose: To amend title 18 of the United States Code to add criminal offenses for public corruption and narcotics related public corruption)

At the end of the bill, add the following:

TITLE —PUBLIC CORRUPTION

SEC. 01. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Anti-Corruption Act of 1991".

SEC. 02. OFFENSE.

Chapter 11 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"§ 226. Public corruption

"(a) Whoever, in a circumstance described in subsection (d), deprives or defrauds, or endeavors to deprive or to defraud, by any scheme or artifice, the inhabitants of a State or political subdivision of a State of the honest services of an official or employee of such State, or political subdivision of a State, shall be fined under this title, or imprisoned for not more than 10 years, or both.

"(b) Whoever, in a circumstance described in subsection (d), deprives or defrauds, or endeavors to deprive or to defraud, by any scheme or artifice, the inhabitants of a State or political subdivision of a State of a fair and impartially conducted election process in any primary, runoff, special, or general election—

"(1) through the procurement, casting, or tabulator of ballots that are materially false, fictitious, or fraudulent or that are invalid, under the laws of the State in which the election is held;

"(2) through paying or offering to pay any person for voting;

"(3) through the procurement or submission of voter registrations that contain false material information, or omit material information; or

"(4) through the filing of any report required to be filed under State law regarding an election campaign that contains false material information or omits material information, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned for not more than ten years, or both.

"(c) Whoever, being a public official or an official or employee of a State, or political subdivision of a State, in a circumstance described in subsection (d), deprives or defrauds, or endeavors to deprive or to defraud, by any scheme or artifice, the inhabitants of a State or political subdivision of a State or the right to have the affairs of the State or political subdivision conducted on the basis of complete, true, and accurate material information, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned for not more than 10 years, or both.

"(d) The circumstances referred to in subsections (a), (b), and (c) are that—

"(1) for the purpose of executing or concealing such scheme or artifice or attempting to do so, the person so doing—

"(A) places in any post office or authorized depository for mail matter, any matter or thing whatever to be sent or delivered by the Postal Service, or takes or receives therefrom, any such matter or thing, or knowingly causes to be delivered by mail according to the direction thereon, or at the place at which it is directed to be delivered by the person to whom it is addressed, any such matter or thing;

"(2) the scheme or artifice affects or constitutes an attempt to affect in any manner or degree, or would if executed or concealed so affect, interstate or foreign commerce; or

"(3) as applied to an offense under subsection (b), an objective of the scheme or artifice is to secure the election of an official who, if elected, would have some authority over the administration of funds derived from an Act of Congress totaling $10,000 or more during the 12-month period immediately preceding or following the election or date of the offense.

"(e) Whoever deprives or defrauds, or endeavors to deprive or to defraud, by any scheme or artifice, the inhabitants of the United States of the honest services of a public official or person who has been selected to be a public official shall be fined under this title or imprisoned for not more than 10 years, or both.

"(f) Whoever being an official, or public official, or person who has been selected to be a public official, directly or indirectly, discharged, demotes, suspends, threatens, harasses, or, in any manner, discriminates against any employee or official of the United States or any State or political subdivision of such State, or endeavors to do so, in order to carry out or to conceal any scheme or artifice described in this section, shall be fined under this title or subject to imprisonment of up to 5 years or both.

"(g)(1) Any employee or official of the United States or any State or political subdivision of such State who is discharged, demoted, suspended, threatened, harassed, or in any other manner discriminated against because of lawful acts done by the employee as a result of a violation of subsection (e) or because of any actions by the employee on behalf of himself or others in furtherance of a prosecution under this section (including investigation for, initiation of, testimony for, or assistance in such a prosecution) may in a civil action, obtain all relief necessary to make such individual whole. Such relief shall include reinstatement with the same seniority status such individual would have had but for the discrimination, 3 times the amount of back pay, interest on the back pay, and compensation for any special damages sustained as a result of the discrimination, including reasonable litigation costs and reasonable attorney's fees.

"(2) An individual is not eligible for such relief if that individual participated in the violation of this section with respect to which such relief would be awarded.

"(3) A civil action or proceeding authorized by this subsection shall be stayed by a court upon the certification of an attorney for the Government, stating that such action or proceeding may adversely affect the interests of the Government in an ongoing criminal investigation or proceeding. The attorney for the Government shall promptly notify the court when the stay may be lifted without such adverse effects.

"(h) For purposes of this section—

"(1) the term 'State' means a State of the United States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and any other commonwealth, territory, or possession of the United States;

"(2) the terms 'public official' and 'person who has been selected to be a public official' have the meaning set forth in section 201 of this title; the terms 'public official' and 'person who has been selected to be a public official' shall also include any person acting or pretending to act under color of official authority;

"(3) the term 'official' includes—

"(A) any person employed by, exercising any authority derived from, or holding any position in the government of a State or any subdivision of the executive, legislative, judicial, or other branch of government thereof, including a department, independent establishment, commission, administration, authority, board, and bureau, and a corporation or other legal entity establishing and subject to control by a government or governments for the execution of a governmental or intergovernmental program;

"(B) any person acting or pretending to act under color of official authority; and

Section 422 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 863) is amended by adding the following new subsection (g):

"(g) Civil Enforcement.

"The Attorney General may bring a civil action against any person who violates the provisions of this section. The action may be brought in any district court of the United States or the United States courts of any territory in which the violation is taking or has taken place. The court in which such action is brought shall determine the existence of any violation by a preponderance of the evidence, and shall have the power to assess a civil penalty of up to $100,000 and to grant such other relief, including injunctions, as may be appropriate. Such remedies shall be in addition to any other remedy available under statutory or common law."

SEC. 237. CORRECTION OF RESENTENCING SANCTION FOR REVOCATION OF PROBATION FOR POSSESSION OF A CONTROLLED SUBSTANCE.

Section 3565(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking "sentence the defendant to not less than one-third of the original sentence" and inserting in lieu thereof "resentence the defendant under subchapter A to a sentence that includes a term of imprisonment".

SEC. 238. CONFORMING AMENDMENTS CONCERNING MARIHUANA.

(a) Section 401(b)(1)(D) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 841(b)(1)(D)) and section 1010(b)(4) of the Controlled Substances Import and Export Act (21 U.S.C. 960(b)(4)) are each amended by striking out "with respect to less than 50 kilograms of marihuana" and inserting in lieu thereof "with respect to less than 50 kilograms of a mixture or substance containing a detectable amount of marihuana";

(b) Section 1010(b)(4) of the Controlled Substances Import and Export Act (21 U.S.C. 960(b)(4)) is amended by striking out "except in the case of 100 or more marihuana plants" and inserting in lieu thereof "except in the case of 50 or more marihuana plants".

SEC. 241. CONFORMING AMENDMENT ADDING CERTAIN DRUG OFFENSES AS REQUIRING FINGERPRINTING AND RECORDS FOR RECIDIVIST JUVENILES.

Sections 5038 (d) and (f) of title 18, United States Code, are each amended by striking "or an offense described in sections 841, 952(a), 955, or 959, of title 21," and inserting in lieu thereof "or an offense described in section 401 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 841) or section 1002(a), 1003, 1005, 1009, or 1010(b) (1), (2), or (3) of the Controlled Substances Import and Export Act (21 U.S.C. 952(a), 953, 955, 959, or 960(b) (1), (2), or (3))."

SEC. 242. CLARIFICATION OF NARCOTIC OR OTHER DANGEROUS DRUGS UNDER THE RICO STATUTE.

Section 1961(1) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking "narcotic or other dangerous drugs" each place those words appear and inserting in lieu thereof "a controlled substance or listed chemical, as defined in section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 802)".

SEC. 243. CONFORMING AMENDMENTS TO RECIDIVIST PENALTY PROVISIONS OF THE CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES ACT AND THE CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES IMPORT AND EXPORT ACT.

(1) Sections 401(b)(1) (B), (C), and (D) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 841(b)(1) (B), (C), and (D) and sections 1010(b) (1), (2), and (3) of the Controlled Substances Import and Export Act (21 U.S.C. 960(b) (1), (2), and (3)) are each amended in the sentence or sentences beginning "If any person commits" by striking "one or more prior convictions" through "have become final" and inserting in lieu thereof "a prior conviction for a felony drug offense has become final";

(2) Section 1012(b) of the Controlled Substances Import and Export Act (21 U.S.C. 962(b)) is amended by striking "one or more prior convictions of him for a felony under any provision of this subchapter or subchapter I of this chapter or other law of a State, the United States, or a foreign country relating to narcotic drugs, marijuana, or depressant or stimulant drugs, have become final" and inserting in lieu thereof "one or more prior convictions of such person for a felony for a felony drug offense have become final"

(3) Section 401(b)(1)(A) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 841(b)(1)(A)) is amended by striking the sentence beginning "For purposes of this subparagraph, the term 'felony drug offense' means";

(4) Section 401 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 841) and section 1010 of the Controlled Substances Import and Export Act (21 U.S.C. 960) are each amended by adding a new subsection (c), as follows:

"(c) For purposes of this title, the term 'felony drug offense' means an offense that is punishable by imprisonment for more than one year under any law of the United States or of a State of foreign country that prohibits or restricts conduct relating to narcotic drugs, marijuana, or depressant or stimulant substances."; and

SEC. 244. ELIMINATION OF OUTMODED LANGUAGE RELATING TO PAROLE.

(a) Sections 401(b)(1) (A) and (B) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 841(b)(1) (A) and (B)) are each amended by striking "No person sentenced under this subparagraph shall be eligible for parole during the term of imprisonment imposed therein.";

(b) Sections 1010(b) (1) and (2) of the Controlled Substances Import and Export Act (21 U.S.C. 960(b) (1) and (2)) are each amended by striking "No person sentenced under this paragraph shall be eligible for parole during the term of imprisonment imposed therein.";

(c) Section 419(c) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 860(c)) is amended by striking " ; parole" in the heading of such section and by striking "An individual convicted under this section shall not be eligible for parole until the individual has served the mandatory minimum term of imprisonment as provided by this section.";

(d) Section 420(e) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 861(a)) is amended by striking " ; parole" in the heading of such section and by striking "An individual convicted under this section of an offense for which a mandatory minimum term of imprisonment is applicable shall not be eligible for parole under section 4202 of title 18 until the individual has served the mandatory term of imprisonment as enhanced by this section."

SEC. 245. CONFORMING AMENDMENT TO PROVISION PUNISHING A SECOND OFFENSE OF DISTRIBUTING DRUGS TO A MINOR.

Section 418(b) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 859(b)) is amended by striking "one year" and inserting in lieu thereof "three years".

SENATE AMENDMENT NO. 728

(Purpose: To establish a discretionary grant program for life skills training in State and local prisons, jails, and detention centers)

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

(f) LIFE SKILLS TRAINING GRANTS.—(1) The Attorney General is authorized to make grants to State and local correctional agencies to assist them in establishing and operating programs designed to reduce recidivism through the development and improvement of life skills necessary for re-integration into society.

(2) To be eligible to receive a grant under this subsection, a State or local correctional agency shall—

(A) submit an application to the Attorney General or his designee at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Attorney General shall require; and

(B) agree to report annually to the Attorney General on the participation rate, cost, and effectiveness of the program and any other aspect of the program upon which the Attorney General may request information.

(3) In awarding grants under this section, the Attorney General shall give priority to programs that have the greatest potential for innovation, effectiveness, and replication in other systems, jails, and detention centers.

(4) Grants awarded under this subsection shall be for a period not to exceed 3 years, except that the Attorney General may establish a procedure for renewal of the grants under paragraph (1).

(5) For the purposes of this section the term "life skills" shall include, but not be limited to, self-development, communication skills, job and financial skills development, education, inter-personal and family relationships, and stress and anger management.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the following amendment, which I now send to the desk, be in order notwithstanding the Senate's adoption of the Thurmond amendment, No. 518, and that this amendment be placed in the bill at the end of the language that was added by the Bingaman amendment, No. 517.

I am pleased that the Senate has agreed to accept this amendment, which will restore to S. 1241 an important provision of an amendment I offered Tuesday on State prison literacy training programs. As my colleagues may recall, my earlier amendment was modified by a second-degree amendment offered by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. THURMOND]. He has graciously, and wisely, I believe, agreed that this provision is worthy of reintroduction.

This amendment establishes a new discretionary grant program, to be administered by the Department of Justice in conjunction with the now-discretionary literacy training grant program. It will assist State and local prisons in their efforts to reduce crime and recidivism. Under this provision, State and local correctional agencies will be eligible to apply for Federal assistance to help them establish and operate programs aimed at developing and improving the life skills incarcerated individuals will need to successfully reintegrate into society. Important life skills include self-development, communication skills, job and financial skills development, education, interpersonal and family relationship skills, and stress and anger management.

My amendment authorizes the Attorney General to award life skill development grants to correctional agencies that show the most promise for establishing low-cost, innovative, and effective programs capable of being replicated in other systems, prisons, jails, and detention centers. In exchange for accepting the grants, the chief officer of the prison, jail, or detention center will report annually to the Attorney General on the institution's life skill training program and its cost.

I believe an excellent example of the type of program this amendment envisions is the Comienzos Program at the Bernalillo County Detention Center in Albuquerque, NM. I had the pleasure of touring this facility and sitting in on a session of Comienzos last month. This program is a novel and innovative approach to jail education, conceived and developed by Sisters Mary Jo Boland and Natalie Rossi in Albuquerque. Comienzos, which operates in conjunction with the center's nationally and internationally renown literacy program, focuses on issues important to inmates who will one day return to society. The issues—or life skills—include self-development, communication, job and financial skills development, enhancement of educational skills, interpersonal and family relationship development, behavior modification, and stress and anger management. Over an 8-week period, Comienzos helps inmates develop these skills through lectures by staff, special guest speakers, and residents; group interactions and discussions; interactive videos and tapes and written material; and artistic expression.

This program is not only a humane approach to incarceration; it is also a positive strategy for combating the rising rate of recidivism in our Nation's jails. Its goal is simple and profound: To provide individuals with the basic tools needed to cope in a complex society. This is exactly the type of program we should encourage if we are serious about our commitment to reducing crime in the United States; and this amendment is a real step toward that encouragement.

Mr. President, through this amendment, more New Mexicans and individuals across the country will benefit from the devotion and hard work of the dedicated people at the Bernalillo County Detention Center. I wish to personally acknowledge and thank Sisters Mary Jo Boland and Natalie Rossi, Mr. Ralph Ruiz, director of corrections at the Bernalillo Center, Mr. Gordon Bernell, the center's education director, and the center's many volunteers, who have given countless hours to helping people in need gain self-esteem and achieve more than they ever thought possible. I am offering this amendment on behalf of these individuals and the people they serve. I am grateful that my colleagues are willing to support it.

AMENDMENT No. 729

(Purpose: To provide additional Federal assistance to States for the purposes of enhancing law enforcement and criminal justice systems in regions that suffer from high rates of violent crime or face particular violent crime problems that warrant Federal assistance and developing and implementing multijurisdictional strategies to respond to and prevent violent crime)

At the appropriate place in the bill, insert the following:

SEC. REGIONAL VIOLENT CRIME ASSISTANCE.

(a) AUTHORIZATION OF GRANTS.—The Attorney General, in consultation with the Director of National Drug Control Policy, may make a grant to a State for the purposes of—

(1) implementing a plan to enhance law enforcement and criminal justice systems in a region of the State that suffers from high rates of violent crime or faces particular violent crime problems that warrant Federal assistance; and

(2) developing and implementing multijurisdictional strategies to respond to and prevent violent crime in such a region.

(b) CONSIDERATIONS IN AWARDING GRANTS.—(1) In awarding grants under subsection (a), the Attorney General may give priority to—

(A) States that develop and implement plans to assist law enforcement and criminal justice authorities in or near jurisdictions with high rates of violent crime or particular violent crime problems; and

(B) States that propose to develop a multijurisdictional or regional approach to respond to or prevent violent crime.

(2) The Attorney General shall not limit grants under subsection (a) to highly populated centers of violent crime, but shall give due consideration to applications from less populated regions where the magnitude and severity of violent crime warrants Federal assistance.

(3) The Attorney General shall not limit grants under subsection (a) to the enhancement of law enforcement capabilities, but shall give due consideration to applications that propose to use funds for the improvement of the criminal justice system in general.

(c) AMOUNT OF GRANTS.—(1) The amount of a grant that may be made with respect to an application relating to any region of a State described in subsection (a) shall not exceed $10,000,000.

(2) The Federal share of assistance under subsection (a) shall not be greater than 75 percent of the costs necessary to implement a plan or develop and implement a strategy relating to a region described in subsection (a).

(d) NONMONETARY ASSISTANCE.—In order to assist a State in dealing with crime problems in a region described in subsection (a), the Attorney General may—

(1) direct any Federal agency, with or without reimbursement, to utilize its authorities and the resources granted to it under Federal law (including personnel, equipment, supplies, facilities, and managerial, technical, and advisory services) in support of State and local law enforcement efforts; and

(2) provide technical and advisory assistance, including communications support and law enforcement-related intelligence information.

(e) ISSUANCE OF IMPLEMENTING REGULATIONS.—Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall issue regulations to implement this section, including such regulations as are necessary relating to applications for Federal assistance and the provision of Federal monetary and nonmonetary assistance.

(f) AUDIT BY COMPTROLLER GENERAL.—The Comptroller General shall conduct an audit of any Federal assistance (both monetary and nonmonetary) of an amount greater than $100,000 provided to a State under this subsection relating to a region described in subsection (a), including an evaluation of the effectiveness of the assistance in achieving the goals stated in the application for assistance.

(g) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $50,000,000 for each of fiscal years 1992, 1993, 1994, 1995, and 1996.

AMENDMENT NO. 730

(Purpose: To establish the National Commission to Support Law Enforcement, and for other purposes)

On page 245, add after line 15 the following:
TITLE XXVIII—NATIONAL COMMISSION TO SUPPORT LAW ENFORCEMENT

SEC. 2801. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "National Commission to Support Law Enforcement Act".

SEC. 2802. CONGRESSIONAL FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) law enforcement officers risk their lives daily to protect citizens, for modest rewards and too little recognition;

(2) a significant shift has occurred in the problems that law enforcement officers face without a corresponding change in the support from the Federal Government;

(3) law enforcement officers are on the front line in the war against drugs and crime;

(4) the rate of violent crime continues to increase along with the increase in drug use;

(5) a large percentage of individuals arrested test positive for drug usage;

(6) the Presidential Commission on Law Enforcement and the Administration of Justice of 1965 focused attention on many issues affecting law enforcement, and a review twenty-five years later would help to evaluate current problems, including drug-related crime, violence, racial conflict, and decreased funding; and

(7) a comprehensive study of law enforcement issues, including the role of the Federal Government in supporting law enforcement officers, working conditions, and responsibility for crime control would assist in redefining the relationships between the Federal Government, the public, and law enforcement officials.

SEC. 2803. ESTABLISHMENT

There is established a national commission to be known as the "National Commission to Support Law Enforcement" (referred to in this title as the "Commission").

SEC. 2804. DUTIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Commission shall study and recommend changes regarding law enforcement agencies and law enforcement issues on the Federal, State, and local levels, including the following:

(1) FUNDING.—The sufficiency of funding, including a review of grant programs at the Federal level.

(2) EMPLOYMENT.—The conditions of law enforcement employment.

(3) INFORMATION.—The effectiveness of information-sharing systems, intelligence, infrastructure, and procedures among law enforcement agencies of Federal, State, and local governments.

(4) RESEARCH AND TRAINING.—The status of law enforcement research and education and training.

(5) EQUIPMENT AND RESOURCES.—The adequacy of equipment, physical resources, and human resources.

(6) COOPERATION.—The cooperation among Federal, State, and local law enforcement agencies.

(7) RESPONSIBILITY.—The responsibility of governments and law enforcement agencies in solving the crime problem.

(8) IMPACT.—The impact of the criminal justice system, including court schedules and prison overcrowding, on law enforcement.

(b) CONSULTATION.—The Commission shall conduct surveys and consult with focus groups of law enforcement officers, local officials, and community leaders across the Nation to obtain information and seek advice on important law enforcement issues.

SEC. 2805. MEMBERSHIP.

(a) NUMBER AND APPOINTMENT.—The Commission shall be composed of 23 members as follows:

(1) Seven individuals from national law enforcement organizations representing law enforcement officers, of whom—

(A) 2 shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives;

(B) 2 shall be appointed by the Majority Leader of the Senate;

(C) 1 shall be appointed by the Minority Leader of the House;

(D) 1 shall be appointed by the Minority Leader of the Senate; and

(E) 1 shall be appointed by the President.

(2) Seven individuals from national law enforcement organizations representing law enforcement management, of whom—

(A) 2 shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives;

(B) 2 shall be appointed by the Majority Leader of the Senate;

(C) 1 shall be appointed by the Minority Leader of the House;

(D) 1 shall be appointed by the Minority Leader of the Senate; and

(E) 1 shall be appointed by the President.

(3) Two individuals with academic expertise regarding law enforcement issues, of whom—

(A) 1 shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the Senate Majority Leader; and

(B) 1 shall be appointed by the Minority Leader of the Senate and the Minority Leader of the House.

(4) Two Members of the House of Representatives, appointed by the Speaker and the Minority Leader of the House of Representatives.

(5) Two Members of the Senate, appointed by the Majority Leader and the Minority Leader of the Senate.

(6) One individual involved in Federal law enforcement from the Department of the Treasury, appointed by the President.

(7) One individual from the Department of Justice, appointed by the President.

(8) The Comptroller General of the United States, who shall serve as the chairperson of the Commission.

(b) COMPENSATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Members of the Commission shall receive no additional pay, allowance, or benefit by reason of service on the Commission.

(2) TRAVEL EXPENSES.—Each member of the Commission shall receive travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, in accordance with sections 5702 and 5703 of title 5, United States Code.

(c) APPOINTMENT DATES.—Members of the Commission shall be appointed no later than 90 days after the enactment of this title.

SEC. 2806. EXPERTS AND CONSULTANTS.

(a) EXPERTS AND CONSULTANTS.—The Commission may procure temporary and intermittent services under section 3109(b) of title 5, United States Code.

(b) STAFF OF FEDERAL AGENCIES.—Upon request of the Commission, the head of any Federal agency is authorized to detail, on a reimbursable basis, any of the personnel of that agency to the Commission to assist the Commission in carrying out its duties under this title.

(c) ADMINISTRATIVE SUPPORT.—The Administrator of General Services shall provide to the Commission, on a reimbursable basis, administrative support services as the Commission may request.

SEC. 2807. POWERS OF COMMISSION.

(a) HEARINGS.—The Commission may, for purposes of this title, hold hearings, sit and act at the times and places, take testimony, and receive evidence, as the Commission considers appropriate.

(b) DELEGATION OF AUTHORITY.—Any member or agent of the Commission may, if authorized by the Commission, take any action the Commission is authorized to take by this section.

(c) INFORMATION.—The Commission may secure directly from any Federal agency information necessary to enable it to carry out this title. Upon request of the chairperson of the Commission, the head of an agency shall furnish the information to the Commission to the extent permitted by law.

(d) GIFTS AND DONATIONS.—The Commission may accept, use, and dispose of gifts or donations of services or property.

(e) MAILS.—The Commission may use the United States mails in the same manner and under the same conditions as other Federal agencies.

SEC. 2808. REPORT.

Not later than the expiration of the eighteen-month period beginning on the date of the appointment of the members of the Commission, a report containing the findings of the Commission and specific proposals for legislation and administrative actions that the Commission has determined to be appropriate shall be submitted to Congress.

SEC. 2809. TERMINATION.

The Commission shall cease to exist upon the expiration of the sixty-day period beginning on the date on which the Commission submits its report under section 2808.

SEC. 2810. REPEALS.

Title XXXIV of the Crime Control Act of 1990 (Public Law 101-647; 104 Stat. 4918) and Title II, Section 211B of the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1991 (Public Law 101-515; 104 Stat. 2122) is repealed.

AMENDMENT NO. 731

(Purpose: To reduce the distribution and use of illegal drugs in Federal prisons by imposing minimum, mandatory sentences for offenses and to withhold prisoners' Federal benefits to offset costs of incarceration)

On page 226, between lines 11 and 12, insert the following:

SEC. 2402. MANDATORY PENALTIES FOR ILLEGAL DRUG USE IN FEDERAL PRISONS.

(a) DECLARATION OF POLICY.—It is the policy of the Federal Government that the use or distribution of illegal drugs in the Nation's Federal prisons will not be tolerated and that such crimes shall be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law.

(b) AMENDMENT.—Section 401(b) of the Controlled Substances Act 21 (21 U.S.C. 841(b)) is amended by adding the following new paragraph at the end thereof:

"(7)(A) In a case under section 404 involving simple possession of a controlled substance within a Federal prison or other Federal detention facility, such person shall be sentenced to a term of imprisonment of not less than 1 year without release, to be served consecutively to any other sentence imposed for the simple possession itself.

"(B) In a case under this section involving the smuggling of a controlled substance into a Federal prison or other Federal detention facility or the distribution or intended distribution of a controlled substance within a Federal prison or other Federal detention facility, such person shall be sentenced to a term of imprisonment of not less than 10 years without release, to be served consecutively to any other sentence imposed for the possession with intent to distribute or the distribution itself.

"(C) Notwithstanding any other law, the court shall not place on probation or suspend the sentence of a person sentenced under this paragraph. No person sentenced under this paragraph shall be eligible for parole during the term of imprisonment imposed under this paragraph."

Mr. MITCHELL. I further ask unanimous consent that the cloture vote now scheduled to occur tomorrow instead occur tonight at 8:30 p.m., with the mandatory live quorum being waived, and that in the 30 minutes between now and the cloture vote Senator HELMS be recognized to address the Senate for 20 minutes, and then Senator BIDEN be recognized to address the Senate for 5 minutes, and Senator THURMOND be recognized to address the Senate for 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I thank my colleagues.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. HELMS. I thank the Chair.

Let me review quickly. There are certain amendments on which certain Members of the Senate do not want to vote. We experienced that the other day when I offered an amendment relating to quotas. The press said that Helms tied up the Senate. Helms did not tie up the Senate. Helms was ready to vote after he offered the amendment. But they put in a quorum call and 10 hours elapsed and the Senate did not do another thing.

So let us have an understanding of one thing, that there are certain amendments on which certain Senators do not want to have a vote.

Now, I have two amendments which I offered to the negotiators that I would accept a 30-minute time limitation on each of them equally divided so that we could have a vote. Oh, no. Helms is not going to have a chance on that. Well, Helms is going to have a chance to get a vote one way or another. It will be a vote to indicate how Senators feel.

Now, let me read you the first amendment and see if anybody who may be watching on C-SPAN could possibly disagree with it, let alone Senators.

At the end of the amendment, add the following: "Title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the appropriate place the following new section:

"SEC. . DELIBERATE TRANSMISSION OF THE AIDS VIRUS

"(a) Whoever, being a registered physician, dentist, nurse, or other health care provider, knowing that he is infected with the Human Immunodeficiency Virus, intentionally provides medical or dental treatment to another person, without prior notification to such person of such infection, shall be fined not more than $10,000, or imprisoned not less than ten years, or both.

"(b) The provisions of this section shall not be applicable in the case of a medical emergency in which alternative medical treatment is not reasonably available."

(c) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section—
(1) the term "treatment" means the performance of any medical diagnosis or procedure that involves an invasive physical contact between the patient being treated and the physician or health professional administering the procedure."

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I have in my hand a series of articles taken from the Raleigh News and Observer, the Washington Times, and Newsweek. Each article describes, sometimes in graphic detail, the physical and emotional suffering of hundreds of Americans who have been unknowingly exposed to AIDS by doctors, dentists, and health care workers, who are carriers of this deadly virus.

I have become aware of the case of Kimberly Bergalis a 23-year-old Florida woman who is now in the last stages of AIDS-related tuberculosis, a condition which is slowly destroying her brain and body. As the July 1 edition of Newsweek states, "sometime in the next few days, Bergalis will probably become the first American to die of AIDS, after being infected by her dentist * * *"

For the last few months, Kimberly has taken her struggle to the American people, demanding that HIV-infected doctors, dentists, and health care workers be required to disclose their condition to their patients. You see, Kimberly's dentist had AIDS. He knew he had AIDS, but he refused to notify his patients of his condition. Now Kimberly Bergalis is about to die, and four others who were treated by this man have tested positive for the virus.

On Tuesday, our former colleague and the current Governor of Florida, Lawton Chiles, visited Kimberly. Governor Chiles put it very plainly:

It's a lot like being in the presence of a saint. I told her how much I admired her, I told her I thought she'd already protected many lives that wouldn't have been protected before.

Mr. President, a June 20, 1991 Gallup poll found that 95 percent of the American people believe that surgeons who know that they have AIDS should be required to tell patients if they are infected with the AIDS virus. The same poll found that 94 percent of Americans believe that all physicians and dentists should be required to tell their patients that they have AIDS if they know they are infected.

The American people, as always, are ahead of the politicians and professional activists in this country who have, for too long, treated AIDS as a civil rights issue rather than the public health threat it really is.

The story of the brave woman in Florida is not isolated. In the State of Minnesota, a pediatric surgeon continued to perform deliveries, and rectal, and vaginal examinations months after he found out he had AIDS. In the most shocking part of this story, a Minnesota television station broadcast pictures of this doctor delivering a baby while his bare arm was covered with sores.

When asked about the sores by the mother of the child he was about to deliver, the doctor said that the sores were just an allergic reaction. This man knew he had the AIDS virus well before he delivered that baby. As one of his patients told Newsweek, "he takes an oath to save lives not give a death sentence."

In my own State of North Carolina, a health care trainee at a major hospital in eastern North Carolina worked with patients for more than a year after finding out he had the AIDS virus. Residents of the Fayetteville and Raleigh areas have begun receiving letters from military and county health officials saying that they might have been exposed to AIDS because their dentists had the disease.

Mr. President I have read the newspapers recently and discovered that the AMA and the American Dental Association have rejected calls for mandatory AIDS testing. The AMA says it is up to the doctors to determine if they should be tested. Responding to the position of the professional medical establishment, former Surgeon General C. Everett Koop told doctors that they face a loss of credibility if they refuse to be tested. He warned, "be certain that the public knows that you are just as concerned about them as you are about yourselves."

As usual the medical establishment and the AIDS lobby have been silent.

The Helms amendment does not require that health care professionals undergo mandatory AIDS testing. We will visit that issue at another time.

The Helms amendment does say that if the doctor, dentist, nurse, or health care worker, performs or is involved with invasive medical techniques—that is a surgeon, obstetrician, or surgical nurse—and knows he has AIDS and fails to notify his patients of that fact he is subject to a fine and jail term of not less than 10 years. This Senator feels that is an adequate response to the rogues in the medical community who have knowingly and callously exposed hundreds of innocent people to the AIDS virus.

Let me say it again, for the record. The Helms amendment does not require mandatory testing. It does not require that the psychiatrist or the podiatrist undergo any testing nor does it compel them to disclose to their patients that they have AIDS. Using language provided by the distinguished Republican leader, the Helms amendment says that if you perform invasive medical procedures you must notify your patients if you know you have AIDS.

We are not talking about hundreds of medical professionals with this amendment. The vast majority have honorably abided by the opening sentence of the Hippocratic Oath: "I shall first do no harm." However, there are a few people in the medical establishment who have thrown away their oath and duty to others. The doctor in Minnesota, and the dentist in Florida should be treated no better than the criminal who guns down a helpless victim on the street, the effect is the same.

Before I conclude, Mr. President, I want to read to the Senate, a letter Kimberly Bergalis wrote to the Florida Board of Health. Let me warn those listening that parts of this letter are graphic. But remember that this is the cry of a young woman whose life was ruined by a so-called healer who did not have the decency to tell this beautiful young lady that he was putting her life at risk.

I ask unanimous consent that Kimberly's letter published in the July 1 edition of Newsweek and an article from the July 13 edition of Human Events be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From Newsweek, July 1, 1991]

I BLAME EVERY ONE OF YOU BASTARDS

Kimberly Bergalis, the first patient to contract AIDS from her dentist, wrote this letter to Florida health officials April 6. Last week, as she neared death, her family released it for publication.

When I was diagnosed with AIDS in December of '89, I was only 21 years old. It was the shock of my life and my family's as well. I have lived to see my hair fall out, my body lose over 40 pounds, blisters on my sides. I've lived to go through nausea and vomiting, continual night sweats, chronic fevers of 103-104 that don't go away anymore. I have cramping and diarrhea. I now have confusion and forgetfulness. I have lived through the torturous acne that infested my face and neck—brought on by AZT. I have endured trips twice a week to Miami for 3 months only to receive painful IV injections. I've had blood transfusions. I've had a bone marrow biopsy. I cried my heart out from the pain of the biopsy.

I lived through the fear of whether or not my liver has been completely destroyed by DDI and other drugs. It may very well be. I lived to see white fungus grow all over the inside of my mouth, the back of my throat, my gums, and now my lips. It looks like white fur and it gives you atrocious breath. Isn't that nice? I have tiny blisters on my lips. It may be the first stages of herpes.

I was infected by Dr. Acer in 1987. My life has been sheer hell except for the good times and closeness with my family and my enjoyment for life and nature. AIDS has slowly destroyed me. Unless a cure is found, I will be another one of your statistics soon.

"Who do I blame? Do I blame myself? I sure don't. I never used IV drugs, never slept with anyone and never had a blood transfusion. I blame Dr. Acer and every single one of you bastards. Anyone that knew Dr. Acer was infected and had full-blown AIDS and stood by not doing a damn thing about it. You are all just as guilty as he was. You've ruined my life and my family's. I forgive Dr. Acer because I believe the disease affected his mind. He wasn't able to think properly and he continued to practice.

"Do you know my family will be emotionally scarred by this forever? Do you know my mother lost her mother, father, grandfather and dog in a car accident when she was a teenager—and now she's going to lose her first born child?

"Have you ever awakened in the middle of the night soaking wet from a night sweat—only to have it happen again an hour later. Can you imagine what it's like to realize you're losing weight in your fingers and that your body may be using its muscles to try to survive. Or do you know what it's like to look at yourself in a full-length mirror before you shower—and you only see a skeleton? Do you know what I did? I slid to the floor and I cried. Now I shower with a blanket over the mirror.

"Well—I think I've said enough. Like I said—all is forgiven by me—there's no hard feelings anymore. But I will never forget.

"P.S. If laws are not formed to provide protection, then my suffering and death was in vain.

"I'm dying guys. Goodbye."

INNOCENT GIRL'S BLOOD ON POLITICIANS' HANDS

(By Ray Kerrison)

In what may have been her last public communication before she dies, Kimberly Bergalis indicted the American public health service in terms that haunt her soul. Her blood, she said, was on their hands.

You bet it is, Kimberly Bergalis was a beautiful, healthy University of Florida student, as innocent as the sun in the sky, when she contracted AIDS from her dentist, Dr. David Acer. Now at 23, she's a 70-pound skeleton, bedridden, wracked by pain, burning with fever, begging God to release her from her agony.

She is dying because the political and public-health systems are more interested in protecting the wayward, the deviant and the promiscuous than the upright.

She understands it so clearly that she wrote a letter to a health investigator that should sear the conscience of every politician, doctor and health worker in the country.

"Whom do I blame?" Kimberly wrote. "Do I blame myself?" I sure don't. I never used drugs, never slept with anyone and never had a blood transfusion.

"I blame Dr. Acer and every single one of you bastards. Anyone who knew Dr. Acer was infected and had full-blown AIDS and stood by not doing a damn thing about it. You're all just as guilty as he was. You've ruined my life and my family's."

The unforgivable fact of Kimberly's impending death is that it is so unnecessary. She was infected when she had two teeth extracted in December 1987—three months after Dr. Acer, a bisexual, was diagnosed as having AIDS.

She was like a lamb led to the slaughter. The whole political, medical and public-health system of Florida, as they do in so many states, including New York, joined in a conspiracy of silence to shield Dr. Acer's deadly disease and allow hundreds of patients to be exposed to his infection. If this is not cold-blooded, deliberate dereliction of duty on a massive scale, I don't know what is.

After contracting AIDS, Dr. Acer treated 1,700 unsuspecting patients before he died last September. He is believed to have infected four others in addition to Kimberly.

Kimberly concluded her letter, "If laws are not formed to provide protection, then my suffering and death was in vain. I'm dying, guys. Goodbye."

You'd think Kimberly's plight would trigger universal dismay and anguish. Not in New York. Our state officials studied her tragedy and shrugged it off.

A hundred Kimberly Bergalises could be sacrificed and New York's so-called public-health officials would not be moved. Why? Because they are political and medical cowards.

The nation's leading health groups—the American Medical Association and the American Dental Association—have both taken the unequivocal position that doctors and dentists infected with the AIDS virus should warn their patients or give up surgery.

That's just common sense, but the New York State Health Department trashes it. Its policy is that health-care workers infected with the AIDS virus need not tell patients and certainly they may continue to operate or perform other invasive procedures. The department holds that patients don't have a legal right to know the health status of doctors or dentists giving them care.

Dr. David Axelrod, as the state commissioner of health, made this policy in the winter, shortly before he was stricken with a stroke. He claimed the chance of being infected by a doctor or dentists was one in 100,000 or one in a million. He apparently liked those odds. They are so great if your name is Kimberly Bergalis.

Dr. Axelrod was not alone. Gov. Cuomo, Mayor Dinkins, the city's health commissioners and most politicians have consistently opposed mandatory reporting of the AIDS virus, even though it is the law for all other sexually transmitted diseases such as herpes and syphilis.

Why is AIDS, the deadliest of all such disease, the lone exception? Because New York's politicians, especially Cuomo and Dinkins and their government departments, are prisoners of the radical homosexual lobby. They place the public's health at risk rather than offend the militants in ACT-UP.

The day may come when New York will have its own Kimberly Bergalis. If it does, watch out. That's when the politicians and health authorities will be held accountable.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I tell you one thing. If they could vote, they would vote unanimously with JESSE HELMS on this.

That is the first amendment that some Senators did not want HELMS to present.

Let me go to the second amendment. How much time do I have remaining, Mr. President?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WELLSTONE). The Senator has 13 minutes 30 seconds.

Mr. HELMS. Let me read you the second amendment which I tried to offer on numerous occasions. And again some Senators said, "No, HELMS can't offer his amendment. We will not do this amendment, we will do that amendment, but Helms is not going to get a vote." We will see about that.

I do not want to appear to be belligerent about this thing but I am sick and tired of reasonable amendments being foreclosed.

Let me read you the second amendment.

At the appropriate place in the bill, add the following new section:

SEC.

(1) Pursuant to its authority under section 994 of title 28, United States code, the Sentencing Commission shall promulgate guidelines, or amend existing or proposed guidelines as follows:

(a) guideline 2G2.2 to provide a base offense level of not less than 15 and to provide at least a 5 level increase for offenders who have engaged in a pattern of activity involving the sexual abuse or exploitation of a minor.

(b) guideline 2G2.4 to provide that such guideline shall apply only to offense conduct that involves the simple possession of materials proscribed by chapter 110 of title 18, United States Code and guideline 2G2.2 to provide that such guideline shall apply to offense conduct that involves receipt or trafficking (including, but not limit to transportation, distribution, or shipping);

(c) guideline 2G2.4 to provide a base offense level of not less than 13, and to provide at least a 2 level increase for possessing 10 or more books, magazines, periodicals, films, video tapes or other items containing a visual depiction involving the sexual exploitation of a minor;

(d) section 2G3.1 to provide a base offense level of not less than 10;

(2)(a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Sentencing Commission shall promulgate the amendments mandated in subsection (1) by November 1, 1991, or within 30 days after enactment, whichever is later. The amendments to the guidelines promulgated under subsection (1) shall take effect November 1, 1991, or 30 days after enactment, and shall supersede any amendment to the contrary contained in the amendments to the sentencing guidelines submitted to the Congress by the Sentencing Commission on or about May 1, 1991.

(b) The provisions of section 944(x) of title 28, United States Code, shall not apply to the promulgation or amendment of guidelines under this section.

Mr. President, here is why this amendment is necessary. It involves a crime. If this is not a crime, please tell me what is a crime. If we are not going to do something to protect the children from the bums who distribute pornography, what has this Senate come to? I tried in every way I knew how to say just let me have a vote. Some Senators said, "No, HELMS won't get a vote."

For some absurd reason the Sentencing Commission has decided to reduce the sentences for the receipt and transportation of child pornography. Can you believe that? That is why Senator THURMOND and I prepared this amendment.

Oh, they want to get cloture so it will not be germane, and they may succeed. But we are going to have a vote on this amendment: I will show you how in just a little while.

The sentences have been reduced so low that most convicted smut peddlers and pedophiles will receive at most probation. Is this what this Senate wants to tolerate? I do not think so. This was not the intent of Congress when it passed child pornography bills in 1988 and 1990.

So, in effect, Mr. President, the Sentencing Commission has emasculated Congress' attempt to assure severe punishment for dealing in child pornography. The Helms-Thurmond amendment ensures that criminals will receive serious punishment for child pornography offenses, not a mere slap on the wrist.

What does this amendment do? It instructs the Sentencing Commission to increase the penalty for child pornography offenses so that offenders will serve some time in jail.

How can the Senate be against this amendment? How can the Senate say we will not even vote on it? Well, we are going to vote on it.

Mr. President, this amendment has the support of all manner of antipornography groups, including the National Coalition Against Pornography, the National Women's Leadership Task Force, the Religious Alliance Against Pornography, the Children's Legal Foundation, and Morality in Media, among others.

I can already hear the outcry from liberals at the ACLU. They will say, "What is the big deal with pornography? It does not hurt anybody." The hell it does not. It hurts the children, and it strikes at the fundamental base of the family in this country, Mr. President. That is the reason I am on this floor.

I wanted to get this amendment voted on. We could have already gone into cloture and finished this up. "No," they said. "HELMS is not going to get a vote on his amendments"

I am here at 8:12 p.m. on this Senate floor, because pornography—and especially child pornography—causes enormous damage. It destroys young lives and eats away at the very moral foundation of this country. But, no, the Senate does not want to vote.

Mr. President, in 1986, the Senate Subcommittee on Investigations found that child pornography was directly connected to child molestation. The experts testified that users of child pornography are very often pedophiles. For example, a Los Angeles police detective estimated that among the 700 child molesters he helped arrest, more than half of them possessed child pornography.

Is this the kind of thing the Senate wants to tolerate? Is this not a crime? Do we want to let the Sentencing Commission get by with reducing the penalty? This Senator says "no."

Child molesters testified, Mr. President, that they used child pornography to convince children to engage in sexual acts, or to pose for photographs; and the Senate report—this is a report of our own Senate—concluded that:

Child pornography plays a central role in child molestations by pedophiles, serving to justify their conduct and assist them in seducing their victims.

Not only that, there have been dozens of studies by respected experts that have come to the same conclusion: Child pornography is indeed a cause of child molestation.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a compilation of the research on child pornography, a 1986 Senate report, along with a number of letters, be included in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, the question is this: Why would the Sentencing Commission lower the penalty for child pornography? Why? To be honest, I am at a loss to explain their reasoning, but here is what happened.

The 1990 crime bill created a new offense for possession of child pornography. There is an existing offense for receipt, transportation, or trafficking in child porn, which has a base level of 13. Well, the Commission decided to put receipt down with possession and give it a base level of 10, which means these criminals can get off with a sentence of mere probation. My amendment ensures that these criminals will at least do some time in jail.

Here is what I am going to do. When I can get the floor after cloture is voted on, I am going to offer each of these amendments. Over on the other side, they can get up and say: "We have been trying to get the President's crime bill through, and the Republicans will not do it."

Well, they are the ones who have held up this crime bill. They held it up for 10 hours because of one amendment I offered that they did not want to vote on. They went in a huddle and said, "We have to beat HELMS somehow. Do not give him a vote."

I got one Democrat—FRITZ HOLLINGS of South Carolina—to vote with me. But do you know something, I have had six or eight Democrats come to me privately and say, "They twisted my arm, and I just could not support you. You are going to lose anyhow." Et cetera, et cetera, et cetera.

What are we doing here, Mr. President, when we engage in antics like this? This is not only with my amendment; it has happened to others as well.

What I am going to do is offer the amendments. Then the point of order is going to be raised that it is not germane. Of course, it will not be germane under the technical rules of germaneness, postcloture. And then, Mr. President, I am going to appeal the ruling of the Chair. We will have an automatic vote on it. No debate. That is the reason I am talking now. We will have a vote on my appeal of the ruling of the Chair, and people who vote to uphold the Chair will be voting against my amendment. And I am going to do my best to make certain that the American people know how each Senator voted on each of these amendments. This is the only way I can get a vote. But I am going to get a vote.

It will not be like an up-or-down vote, but Senators will demonstrate how they feel about the amendment when they vote on the question of upholding the Chair.

I do not like to appeal a ruling of the Chair, particularly when I know the Chair is correct. But this is the only alternative I have, because the old game of PMF has been played in this Senate for several weeks now. PMF means "protect my fanny." They do not want to vote on this amendment, so I am following the only alternative available to me.

I am saying to you that if you have any sympathy for Kimberly Bergalis, or for the children who are molested every day in this country, by the worst burns imaginable, then think about it when the roll is called up yonder.

The Chair is going to be ruling correctly, no question about that. But I say again that I tried and tried and tried to persuade some Senators to let me have a vote on these two amendments. They said, "No, we cannot do that. We do not want to vote on it."

Mr. President, that is about the size of it.

RESEARCH ON PORNOGRAPHY: THE EVIDENCE OF HARM

(From the National Coalition Against Pornography, M. Douglas Reed, Vice President)

THE PROBLEM

The National Coalition for Children's Justice (Ken Wooden).—

Between 1981 and 1985, child sexual abuse (including having pictures taken pornographically) rose by 175%.

The National Obscenity Enforcement Unit (Testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee, June 1988).—

Review of recent law enforcement statistics and studies, as well as scientific research, reveals the devastating effect obscenity and child pornography are having on our nation.

Ann Burgess, Professor at the University of Pennsylvania (Federal grant to study child pornography).—

Pornography depicting children is used by child molesters to convince children that deviant sex acts (which all child sex abuse is) are normal—thereby breaking down their resistance. Her later study (1987) found that victims of child sexual abuse have symptoms of chronic or delayed posttraumatic stress. It causes multiple psychological problems which may take years to resolve.

Pierce (1984).—
Sexually exploited children involved in the pornography industry are usually recruited among runaways, although some may use neighborhood children or their own children.

THE NATURE AND THE EXTENT OF THE PROBLEM
Report of the U.S. Congress Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations on Child Pornography and Pedophilia (1986).—

"No single characteristic of pedophilia is more pervasive than the obsession with child pornography. The fascination of pedophiles with child pornography and child abuse has been documented in many studies and has been established by hundreds of sexually explicit materials involving children.

"Detective William Dworin of the Los Angeles Police Department estimates that of the 700 child molesters in whose arrest he has participated during the last ten years, more than half had child pornography in their possession. About 80% owned either child or adult pornography.

"Each convicted child molester interviewed by the Subcommittee either collected or produced child pornography, or both. Most said they had used the material to lower the inhibitions of children or to coach them into posing for photographs.

"It is not unusual for pedophiles to possess collections containing several thousand photographs, slides, films, videotapes and magazines depicting nude children and children engaged in a variety of sexual activities.

"The maintenance and growth of [the pedophile's] collection [of items related to children] becomes one of the most important things in their life. Child pornography exists primarily for the consumption of pedophiles—adults whose sexual preference and attraction is to prepubescent children. If there were no pedophiles, there would be little child pornography other than that involving adolescent children." (Special Agent Kenneth Lanning, FBI)

"Based on the information obtained during its investigation, the Subcommittee has reached the following general conclusions:

Child pornography plays a central role in child molestations by pedophiles, serving to justify their conduct, assist them in seducing their victims, and provide a means to blackmail the children they have molested in order to prevent exposure.

The vast majority of child pornography in the United States constitutes a small portion of the overall pornography market and is deeply underground. Unlike the adult pornography industry, it is not significantly influenced by organized crime.

It is extremely difficult, if not impossible in some cities, to purchase true child pornography at adult bookstores. The overwhelming majority of child pornography seized in arrests made in the U.S. has not been produced or distributed for profit.

The seizure by the U.S. Customs Service of imported child pornography, especially from Denmark and the Netherlands, has declined dramatically since late 1984 due to increased diplomatic and law enforcement pressure, American news media reports and increased caution shown by American child pornography customers.

The membership of known pedophile-support groups in the United States is probably less than 2,000. While many of the groups' members have been convicted for child sex crimes, the groups themselves are not involved actively in large-scale criminal conspiracies, such as commercial child pornography rings.

The Child Protection Act of 1984, which made illegal all distribution of sexually explicit material involving children, has been highly successful, leading to a substantial increase in federal prosecutions and the placing of higher priorities on such investigations. Since passage of the law two years ago, the Department of Justice has won 164 convictions on child pornography violations; in the previous six and one-half years, there were only 64.

While the awareness of many police agencies about child sexual exploitation has improved greatly, many still do not have the training, staff or inclination to recognize promptly and investigate potential leads to crimes involving child pornography or child sexual abuse."

Southern California Child Exploitation Task Force.—

It is "dangerously inaccurate" to presume that "because there is not widespread commercial distribution of child pornography in the U.S.," that therefore "significant law-enforcement effort in the area of child exploitation is not warranted. The threat imposed on our children has little to do with [that] aspect of the child pornography business."

Burgess (1984) (A study in Jefferson County, Kentucky).—

"37% of the prostitute group admitted to having been involved in pornography; only 18% of the non prostitute group reported involvement in pornography. 38% of the runaways were involved in prostitution, and 15% of the runaways were involved in pornography.

"Identifying and tracking missing children is vital to curbing the victimization of children. Over 86% of Jefferson County children involved in child prostitution and pornography were, at the time of those activities, runaways or missing.

John Rabun, Exploited and Missing Children Unit, Louisville, Kentucky.—

"The Police/Social work team of the Exploited and Missing Child Unit (EMCU) of Louisville, KY investigated 1,400 cases of children suspected of being victims of sexual exploitation. Over 40 major cases involved the successful prosecution of adults involved with over 12 children each. One case involved 320 children. At the time of the arrest and/or service of search warrants, all 40 of these adult predators were found with various forms of adult pornography, and in most cases child nudes and/or child pornography were also found.

The National Obscenity Enforcement Unit.—

"It has been most successful in its efforts. Prosecutions for child pornography are up by 80% in the last fiscal year (1987) and obscenity prosecutions are up by 800%."

David Duncan (1988) Southern Illinois University.—

"He did a content analysis of twenty-five years of homosexual pornographic magazines sold in adult bookstores of two major US cities. Dr. Duncan found the frequency with which clearly underage models appeared in such legally available magazines has declined to zero, due to the recent legislation prohibiting child pornography. Suggestions of child pornography remained, however, in the frequent use in porno magazine titles of such words as 'boy,' 'young' and 'teen' although the models were no longer adolescents. Youthful appearing models achieved star billing in what the Attorney General's Commission on Pornography has named "pseudo-child pornography".

"The final decline (of child pornography) in the late seventies may have been in response to the pressures building against child pornography which led eventually to that legislation. To a large extent it probably reflects the impact of child abuse programs emerging in the seventies, since most of the child models appearing in such pornography are likely to be incest victims being exploited by their parents or other adults."

But the fact that there is a demand for such material is clearly indicated by the continued presence of the new pseudo-child pornography.

PSEUDO-CHILD PORNOGRAPHY

Judith Reisman (1987).—

"A content analysis of Playboy, Penthouse, and Hustler magazines, December 1953 to December 1984, yielded 6,004 child images. Newsstand available child imagery in the context of erotica/pornography increased nearly 2,600% from 1954-1984. 80% of the children were actively involved in all scenes; and each magazine portrayed children as unharmed and/or benefited by adult-child sex."

David A. Scott (In Pornography; A Human Tragedy, 1987).—

"Judith Reisman (1985) found that from the first issue of Playboy in 1954, children in cartoons (or photographs of adults dressed to suggest children) have appeared in sexual contact with adults, and the frequency and intensity of these contacts has increased through the years. The dominant impression was that child/adult sex is glamorous, thereby enhancing the impression that these activities are harmless. Magazines can escape the letter of child pornography laws while still implying that sex with children is desirable and readily available. And these magazines, of course, are sold in the open."

Don Feder (Boston Herald, 10/27/88).—

"The October issue of Playboy contains a five-page rebuttal to the so-called Reisman report. Odd that a publication with a circulation of 3.5 million would devote so much space to answering what it assures us is preposterous stuff. Some experts believe [pseudo-child pornography] encourages sexual abuse, both by exciting perverted passions and fostering the belief that the child actually is an eager participant in the act."

"Pornographers protest their innocence, while facilitating the victimization of our children."

DOES PORNOGRAPHY PROMOTE ABUSE?

The National Obscenity Enforcement Unit.—

They now teach their investigators at all of their seminars "to look for pornography at the scene of sexual crimes involving children."

"It is beyond debate that molestation of children is, in part, caused by consumption of pornography."

John Rabun, Exploited and Missing Children Unit.—

"Over 4 years, the EMCU team learned to expect to always find adult pornography since it was used for the offender's own arousal;

self-validation of their own sex deviations;
extortion of child victims or other adults;
and deliberate and planned lowering of inhibitions of child victims."

The Badgley Report (1984).—

The report found that almost 60% of both male and female juvenile prostitutes had been asked to be the subject of sexually explicit films or photographs; 12% of the girls and 20% of the boys had actually been used in making pornography; juvenile prostitutes are a high-risk group in regard to being exploited by pornographers.

Two smaller American studies emphatically confirm this finding (Burgess: 75% of youth hustlers had participated in pornography; John Rabun: 37% had participated).

The 1982 URSA Study: concluded that there exists a "slight" relationship between juvenile prostitution and pornography. There, 27% of the young male prostitutes had been photographed by a "john"; of the 54 young male hustlers for whom information was available, 9 had been photographed for commercial pornographic magazines. In the face of that evidence it seems impossible to deny the existence of a significant link between the exploitation of minors in prostitution and in pornography.

Extant studies of juvenile prostitutes showed less incidence of participation in pornography than is the real case because by its very nature one item of pornography can be viewed contemporaneously by many patrons and for repeated sittings. The demand for pornographic performers will always be a tiny fraction of the demand for prostitutes.

Surgeon General's Workshop on Pornography (June 24, 1986).—

Nineteen nationally and internationally recognized clinicians and researchers achieved consensus on the statement that "children and adolescents who participate in the production of pornography experience adverse enduring effects."

Southern California Child Exploitation Task Force (1988).—

It is the longest existing task force in the U.S. and has prosecuted all the child pornography and Federal child abuse cases in the Central District of California during the past 10 years.

"According to the U.S. Customs Service, a conservative estimate of the number of pedophiles in the U.S. is 15,000. It is impossible to determine accurately the number, because pedophiles do everything possible to avoid detection."

"We have frequently gone into homes with search warrants for child pornography and discovered children living in the home who have been molested by the person who is the target of our child-pornography investigation."

"We have discovered photographs of the pedophiles molesting children."

"We have found convicted child molesters as well as individuals who were providing children to molesters."

"One of the men we prosecuted had 50,000 photographs of noncommercial child pornography in a storage locker. He admitted molesting several hundred children following his release from a state hospital for a child molestation conviction. He even maintained a ledger listing those molestations. He taught swimming and tennis to youngsters, some of whom became his victims."

"A convicted child molester who was the subject of one of our investigations was found, after he had ordered materials, to have homemade child pornography in his house—including a video tape depicting him molesting a child who was clearly under the influence of drugs or alcohol."

Some articles written in pornographic magazines call attention to a few cases in which individuals (who claimed neither to be sexually active with children nor to possess child pornography) were the subjects of search warrants after they ordered child pornography from undercover Government agents. While Government operations occasionally identify individuals who are not suitable for prosecution, those cases are the exception, not the rule.

SENATE REPORT 99-537 ON CHILD PORNOGRAPHY AND PEDOPHILIA, OCTOBER 9, 1986

I. INTRODUCTION

A decade ago, the sexual abuse of children was a subject that came to the attention of most Americans infrequently, if at all. Assault cases often were quietly kept out of the courts, and many police departments viewed such cases as little more than time-consuming social work. Child molesters were more often the target of jokes than investigations. For millions of Americans, child sexual abuse was a problem that was out of sight and out of mind.

During the late 1970s, however, reports of child sexual abuse slowly began to increase, and so did public awareness of the problem. The American Association for Protecting Children, a subsidiary of the American Humane Association, noted a ten-fold increase in the number of children reported to be sexual abuse victims from 1976 to 1983,<sup>1</sup> but it was not until the following year that the problem was presented to the general public as a "crisis." Beginning in 1984 and throughout 1985, child sexual abuse was almost constantly in the national focus. Networks and local TV stations devoted scores of prime-time hours to its exposure; hundreds of newspapers and magazines ran lengthy accounts of child sexual assaults and pornography rings; grocery bags and milk cartons began to carry the faces of missing children; citizen awareness groups sprang up around the country; police agencies that once paid scant attention to the problem began establishing special training programs for their officers and setting up child sex crime units; the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children was established in Washington, D.C.; in Congress, from 1983 to mid-1986 a total of 194 bills and 13 hearings focused specifically on some aspect of child abuse or child sexual exploitation.<sup>2</sup>

With this unprecedented attention came an exponential increase in the reporting of child sexual abuse, believed by some to be the most underreported major crime in America.

Reports increased dramatically throughout the United States—in Farm Belt states and in the nation's largest cities, in West Coast beach towns and East Coast industrial centers, in the neighborhoods of the affluent, the middle class and the poor. "A 1985 report by the New York-based Child Welfare League of America said child sexual abuse reports rose 59 percent from 1983 to 1984.<sup>3</sup> In Delaware and Idaho reports nearly doubled from 1983 to 1984; in Oregon they rose 129 percent; and in Wisconsin, they went up by 132 percent.<sup>4</sup> In Houston, police received 1,600 reports of child sexual assaults in 1985, more than double the total in 1983.<sup>5</sup> In virtually all cases the extraordinary rise in sexual abuse statistics reflected a state's or city's increased efforts to discover and investigate such crimes, rather than a sudden increase in molested children over years past. And yet there is wide agreement that even these are conservative figures.<sup>6</sup>"

The following are just a few of the many cases that attracted national attention during 1984 and 1985:

In Manhattan Beach, California, in the Spring of 1984, seven employees of a day care center were charged with 207 counts of rape, sodomy and other abuses, involving at least 41 children over a six-year period. Doctors confirmed that 37 of the children showed physical signs of molestation. After a grueling pre-trial hearing lasting several months, many parents withdrew their children as witnesses after watching other children undergo lengthy cross-examination by defense attorneys. Later the Los Angeles County District Attorney dropped all charges against five of the seven defendants, citing a lack of evidence.<sup>7</sup>

In 1985 a Roman Catholic priest was convicted of molesting over a period of years at least 37 boys, among them altar boys and members of the parish Boy Scout troop in Henry, Louisiana. Depositions in the case disclosed that the priest's supervisors had confronted him with such allegations as far back as 1974 and had received similar complaints from parents in 1977. Yet the supervisors did not alert police and still allowed the priest to work with children. More than a dozen civil suits were filed against the diocese by the families and $4.2 million in damages already has been awarded.<sup>8</sup>

In Tampa, Florida, Eric Cross, who had been convicted of molesting young girls in four counties, was indicted for allegedly distributing child pornography while in prison on a molestation charge. He was convicted on 19 counts of distributing child pornography and other charges and sentenced to a 95-year prison term.<sup>9</sup>

As a large number of cases illustrate, child molesters come from virtually every type of background in society. In the past two years those convicted on such charges have included police officers, politicians, judges, physicians, lawyers, journalists, grandmothers, teachers and military officers, among others. To their neighbors and co-workers they were often respected, responsible members of the community, remembered by some acquaintances as being "great with kids." Many were active in church, school and sports organizations. The stereotype of the child molester as a menacing deviate lurking in public places obviously does not apply to many of them.

With these events as a backdrop, the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations in early 1984 began an investigation of child pornography and pedophilia—the abnormal sexual desire of an adult for pre-pubescent children. Subcommittee investigators interviewed more than 200 people in more than 30 states, including convicted child molesters, pornographers, pedophilia activists, molestation victims, investigators, judges, prosecutors, psychiatrists and child protection workers. The Subcommittee also reviewed thousands of documents, including arrest reports, victim statements, pedophile correspondence, newsletters, child pornography catalogs, films, videotapes and magazines. Finally, the Subcommittee held three days of public hearings—on Nov. 29 and 30, 1984 and Feb. 21, 1985—for further exploration of the issues and questions raised during the investigation.<sup>10</sup>

The investigation's primary focus was on child pornography and pedophile activities in the United States, but because of the importance of The Netherlands, Denmark and Sweden in the international distribution of child pornography, the Subcommittee also examined efforts to combat child pornography in those countries.<sup>11</sup>

The Subcommittee found that while the growth in the number of reports of abuse and sexual exploitation of children is cause for continuing concern, recent Federal laws—notably the Child Protection Act of 1984—are beginning to show significant results in the battle against these evils. The public perception of an "epidemic" of child abuse and child pornography reports and arrests, which has led to demands for even tougher laws, may actually be testimony to the effectiveness of the existing laws in providing authorities with the tools to arrest and convict child abusers and pornographers. In addition, the economic impact of the child pornography industry often tends to be overstated. The most significant impact to society from this practice cannot be measured in economic terms; instead, it must be measured in terms of the extent of physical and psychic damage to innocent children brought about by the production and use of child pornography.

II. ORGANIZED CRIME

Because of the Subcommittee's historic interest in the activities of organized crime, an effort was made to obtain any information that might show a direct link between organized crime and the distribution of child pornography in the United States. The Subcommittee interviewed former child pornography distributors, federal informants, pedophiles, prosecutors and law enforcement officials from the United States, Canada and Europe. No one produced definitive evidence that traditional organized crime groups, such as La Cosa Nostra, have any appreciable influence on the production or distribution of true pedophile-oriented child pornography. Nor was evidence found of any widespread involvement, much less control, of child pornography distribution by other ethnic crime organizations or criminal groups, such as motorcycle gangs.

There is evidence that La Cosa Nostra crime families are involved in the production and distribution of commercial adult pornography.<sup>12</sup> A small portion of this market may include underaged models, usually 16 or 17, and some material appears to show legal-aged models who are dressed and made up to look like minors. While any sexually explicit material involving persons of this age is usually harmful, if not illegal, for purposes of this report child pornography refers to material involving children under 13.

After extensive inquiries, the Subcommittee has concluded that the distribution of child pornography in the United States is largely carried out by individual pedophiles, who produce this material and trade it among themselves or order it through the mail from other countries. In the few instances when police have uncovered commercial child pornography operations, they paled in comparison to the sophistication and profits of adult pornography distributors, and were not controlled by traditional organized crime. One such organization was run by Cathy Wilson, who at the time of her arrest in California in 1983 was believed to control about 80 percent of the commercial child pornography trade in the United States.<sup>13</sup> Wilson told Subcommittee investigators in August 1984 that "the Mafia" had not been involved in her operation or that of any other child pornographer with whom she dealt during the 1970s and early 1980s.<sup>14</sup> Richard Trolie, once a business partner of Wilson's who later became a federal informant against her, told the Subcommittee he agreed with Wilson's assessment.<sup>15</sup>

Economics probably plays a major part in organized crime's lack of interest in child pornography. The adult sex industry (magazines, videotapes, X-rated movie theaters, nightclubs, massage parlors, "dial-a-porn" and "escort" services, etc.) operates legally in much of the country and grosses several billion dollars annually.<sup>16</sup> Conversely, the commercial child pornography industry has declined substantially in recent years.<sup>17</sup>

Perhaps equally discouraging to organized crime is the aggressive enforcement of the 1984 federal child pornography statutes,<sup>18</sup> which carry 10-year prison terms for production, importation or distribution of the material. In comparison, violations involving adult pornography are often treated as misdemeanor obscenity cases, when they are prosecuted at all.

III. PROSECUTIONS BY THE DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

On February 6, 1978, Congress enacted Public Law 95-225, the Protection of Children Against Sexual Exploitation Act of 1977. This legislation added sections 2251 through 2253 to Title 18 of the United States Code to deal specifically for the first time with the problem of child pornography. Efforts by prosecutors to obtain convictions under these statutes, however, were hampered by a provision in the law that the pornographic material in question had to be produced or distributed for "commercial" purposes in order to warrant prosecution. Since most child pornographers in the United States tend to trade child pornography among themselves rather than sell it, the Department of Justice was forced to rely primarily upon sections 1461-1465, Title 18 of the U.S. Code, the federal obscenity statutes, to prosecute child pornographers.

Congress moved to close this loophole on May 21, 1984, by amending the child pornography statutes to delete the "commerciality" requirement and a requirement that the disseminated material be legally obscene.<sup>19</sup> The amendments, which also added civil and criminal forfeiture provisions to the statutes, now appear as sections 2251-2255, Title 18, U.S. Code. The effect of these amendments on the Department of Justice's ability to prosecute child pornography cases has been dramatic: from 1978 to April 1984, the Department obtained 64 convictions; between May 1984, and June 1986, at least 164 convictions were obtained.<sup>20</sup>

IV. PEDOPHILIA

The terms pedophile and pedophilia have been so widely used in the news media in recent years that their clinical definitions sometimes are overlooked. Many references to "pedophiles" seem to indicate the term is applied to any adult who is sexually attracted to a legal minor. That is not the case, and the distinction is worth noting.

Pedophilia, literally "love of a child," as used in this report refers to the condition in which an adult's primary sexual attraction is to prepubescent children—roughly between six and twelve years of age.<sup>21</sup> While many cases exist in which true pedophiles have been involved with children below and above those age boundaries, the vast majority fall between them. (A less-commonly used term, hebephilia, describes an adult's sexual attraction to adolescents. This more accurately defines the offenders involved in teenage prostitution, for example, than does the often-misused label, pedophile.) Pedophiles normally have little interest in adolescents who are beginning to reach sexual maturity; it is, in fact, the very lack of sexual development, the childish innocence, that arouses most true pedophiles. The term pedophile is often misused when applied to all child sex crime offenders. Experts agree that many children are assaulted simply because they are available and, of course, more easily overpowered than an adult. The true pedophile, as a rule, does not commit violent acts against his victim.

Pedophiles often are attracted to children within a specific age range—boys from 8 to 10, girls under 9, etc.—and there is some evidence to show this preference may develop because it was the same age at which the molester was also first molested as a child.<sup>22</sup> Many studies have shown a large percentage of convicted child molesters were themselves molested as children.<sup>23</sup>

While pedophiles come from virtually all social, racial, ethnic and age groups, therapists and investigators have been able to arrive at some common characteristics many of them seem to share. Pedophiles normally are divided into two categories—regressed and fixated. An authoritative psychiatric profile described them in this way:<sup>24</sup>

"The [fixated] often has never developed emotionally or intellectually. He feels comfortable around children and uncomfortable around adults. He sees the child as an adequate sexual partner who will enjoy the experience. He shows no guilt of shame afterwards. This offender will be passive, dependent, immature, lonely, inadequate, with low self-esteem. He knows right from wrong and will be law abiding apart from child molestation. He will have dated little and rarely be married. His immaturity will mean that his work, social and personal adjustment will be poor. He will often be employed in menial jobs and prefer to work around children. He seeks children out as companions and in his jobs, so he may be found working with children in his job or as a recreation.

"The [regressed offender] is reasonably well adjusted. He will have no criminal record (apart from child molestation) and will have a good job, social and personal adjustment. He will have dated and typically be married. However, under stress, especially threats to his masculinity, he regresses to immature behavior. So if he is fired, or criticized at work, or if his wife has an affair or criticizes him, he may begin to drink alcohol and impulsively choose a non-threatening female sexual partner (a child). After the experience, he will realize what he has done and feel guilt and shame. He deals with this guilt by attributing his behavior to alcohol."

V. MEETING AND SEDUCING CHILDREN

"I used all the normal techniques used by pedophiles. I bribed my victims, I pleaded with them, but I also showed them affection and attention they thought they were not getting anywhere else. Almost without exception every child I molested was lonely and longing for attention"—Joseph Henry<sup>25</sup>

A determined pedophile quickly masters the art of meeting and engaging the trust of children. Pedophiles are constantly seeking out new ways of drawing children into their confidence without raising suspicions.

Those who seek frequent contact with children, and either have no criminal record or believe it would not be discovered, may find employment as day care center workers, recreation directors, video arcade managers, Little League coaches, scout leaders, Big Brothers, schoolteachers or in a host of other occupations where children are present. In a study of 40 pedophile cases by FBI Special Agent Kenneth Lanning and Dr. Ann Burgess, almost half of the offenders used their occupations to encounter children.<sup>26</sup>

Other pedophiles have located children through babysitting, neighborhood contacts and volunteer organizations. Many have met their eventual victims through adult relationships with parents, as friends, co-workers, counselors, etc.

A number of cases have involved people in positions of authority—people to whom even careful parents often entrust their children, such as priests, teachers and police officers. These cases are cited not to undermine faith in these professions, but to emphasize that a pedophile's all-consuming desire for children will often outweigh his position of trust in the community.

Some pedophiles expose themselves to children or attempt to lure them into their cars or homes with presents, promises and deception, but these cases represent a small minority of the molestation incidents investigated by police officials in the United States. Fortunately, the stereotype of the child molester as a dirty, leering stranger on a park bench is disappearing as awareness of the true nature of pedophilia grows.

The words of a pedophile provide the best description of the thought process involved in attempting to meet and seduce children. Following is an anonymously-written excerpt from How To Have Sex With Kids, a booklet published by David Sonenschein, an Austin, Texas, author who has written extensively about pedophilia:

"The important thing about meeting kids is that it happens best when you meet in places or in doing things that interest both of you. Like in video game arcades, kids can tell if you're just in their cruising for sex, or are there because you like playing the games. The same with sports and sporting events. You can meet kids anywhere you go that you're interested in going, and what's important about this is you've got a right to be where you are. Like your own neighborhood. We have a right to walk around, talk to people there, and get to know who's who.

"It's also a good idea to get to know parents. Sometimes you can get babysitting tasks or you can just take the kids places when they know you and know that the kids like being with you. Sometimes parents can introduce you to other kids too."<sup>27</sup>

Once the pedophile has gained private access to the child, he then must convince the child to cooperate. According to Nicholas Groth, a psychiatrist who has worked with many pedophiles in the Connecticut prison system, "The most commonly used technique of luring the child into . . . sexual activity is by capitalizing on the child's need for attention, approval, and human contact."<sup>28</sup>

Convicted child molester Joseph Henry, who molested 22 girls aged six to fourteen over a period of nearly 30 years, testified before the Subcommittee about the techniques he used to manipulate children:

" . . . I would take my victims to movies and to amusement parks. When I babysat them, I would let them stay up past their bedtime if they let me fondle them. One little 8-year-old girl I was babysitting came over to my house one day soaking wet from a rainstorm. I told her I'd pay her $1 if she would stay undressed for an hour. This incident opened the door for three years of molestation."<sup>29</sup>

VI. USE OF CHILD PORNOGRAPHY

No single characteristic of pedophilia is more pervasive than the obsession with child pornography. The fascination of pedophiles with child pornography and child erotica has been documented in many studies and has been established by hundreds of arrests of pedophiles who are found to possess a large amount of sexually explicit material involving children.

Detective William Dworin of the Los Angeles Police Department estimates that of the 700 child molesters in whose arrest he has participated during the last ten years, more than half had child pornography in their possession. About 80 percent owned either child or adult pornography.<sup>30</sup>

Each convicted child molester interviewed by the Subcommittee either collected or produced child pornography, or both. Most said they had used the material to lower the inhibitions of children or to coach them into posing for photographs.

It is not unusual for pedophiles to possess collections containing several thousand photographs, slides, films, videotapes and magazines depicting nude children and children engaged in a variety of sexual activities—alone, with other children, with adults, and even with animals. In some child pornography, the children depicted are infants and toddlers, some as young as 18 months.<sup>31</sup>

Rainer Hernandez, a California college student who testified before the Subcommittee about his experience as a molestation victim, reported that when Los Angeles Police officers searched the home of his uncle, who has molested Mr. Hernandez for four years when he was a teenager, they found thousands of sexually explicit photos of children.<sup>32</sup> In many other cases police have discovered extensive collections carefully indexed, often on home computers, by age of the children, origin of the material and type of sexual activities performed. A man in Austin, Texas analyzed an entire collection of child pornography magazines by the emotions shown on the children's faces—boredom, pleasure, pain, etc.<sup>33</sup>

In testimony before the U.S. Senate Subcommittee on Juvenile Justice on August 8, 1984, Special Agent Kenneth Lanning of the FBI's Behavioral Science Unit, a recognized expert on pedophilia, elaborated on the pedophile's fascination with child pornography:

"They (pedophiles) typically collect books, magazines, articles, newspapers, photographs, negatives, slides, movies, albums, drawings, audio tapes, videotapes, personal letters, diaries, sexual aids, souvenirs, toys, games, lists, paintings, ledgers, etc., all relating to children in either a sexual, scientific or social way. Not all pedophiles collect all these items. Their collections vary in size and scope. However, the maintenance and growth of their collections becomes one of the most important things in their life. . . . They may hide their collections, move them, or even give them to another pedophile, but they almost never destroy them."<sup>34</sup>

Experts cite seven primary reasons that pedophiles collect child pornography:

1. Justification.—A pedophile needs to know or to convince himself that his obsession is not "abnormal" and dirty, but is shared by thousands of other intelligent, sensitive people. The collection and trading of child pornography, along with scientific and academic articles justifying pedophilia, accomplishes this goal. Pornography also provides pedophiles with a common currency, a mutually desired possession which can be bought, sold and traded in order to develop trust and camaraderie with fellow pedophiles.<sup>45</sup>

The pedophile's collection includes lists of names, addresses and phone numbers of other pedophiles, and correspondence received from such persons. These lists are guarded like gold, often kept in safe deposit boxes or secretly hidden in the pedophile's residence. They not only provide contacts for the pedophile, but they further reinforce the belief that because so many others engage in the same activity, it must not be as "wrong" as society believes. This constant need for validation and support from other pedophiles, however, often overcomes the instinct for caution. Enticed by fantasy letters about child sex or promises of exchanging child pornography, many pedophiles have been trapped by police through the simple exchange of letters.

2. Arousal.—In the same way others use adult pornography, pedophiles use child pornography to stimulate their sexual drive and to aid in masturbation. While some pedophiles may only fantasize about the material, Lanning suggests that "the arousal and fantasy fueled by the pornography is only a prelude to actual sexual activity with children."<sup>38</sup>

3. To lower a child's inhibitions.—Many pedophiles firmly believe children enjoy sex with adults and that pictures of this activity will convince reluctant children to more freely participate. "Peer pressure has a tremendous effect on children," Lanning testified. "If other children are involved, maybe it is all right, the child thinks. In the pornography used to lower inhibitions, the child portrayed will appear to be having a good time."<sup>37</sup>

In two cases examined extensively by Subcommittee investigators, convicted molesters Joseph Henry and Donald Woodward acknowledged that they showed their victims child pornography in an effort to lower their inhibitions and even to suggest specific sex acts. In letters written by Woodward to other pedophiles, he explained specifically what he had in mind for the child pornography he was sending or receiving:

"I've just mailed you, in a separate envelope, a bunch of material on (the two children he was convicted of molesting). I need this material back before 7/23 for use as "bait" in a plan I'll tell you all about if it comes off. Maybe bait is the wrong word; they (the photos) are intended to be emulated by prospective participants . . ."<sup>38</sup>

"The photos of [his 10-year-old victim], of course, are to be samples of poses that I want them [other children] in, from mild and sweet, to hot and lewd . . ."<sup>39</sup>

Woodward and his friends also found that a Polaroid camera came in handy during photo sessions with children. "I may just pick up a Polaroid . . . since kids always enjoy seeing how they look in pictures right away," Woodward wrote to another pedophile, "and I think it helps persuade them to go 'just a little farther' in the next shot . . ."<sup>40</sup>

4. Preservation of the child's youth.—Another principal reason for the collection of child pornography by pedophiles is to insure there will always be an image of the child at the age of sexual preference. "No matter how attractive any one child sexual partner is," Lanning testified, "there can be no long-term sexual relationship. All child victims will grow up and become sexually unattractive to the pedophile. However, in a photograph, a 9-year-old boy stays young forever."<sup>41</sup> Nor are the photographs always sexually explicit. Many pedophiles avidly collect photos of clothed children. Pederasts, or "boy-lovers" as they call themselves, quite often collect photos of young boys in sports outfits. William Thorne, a detective in the Bergen County, New Jersey, prosecutor's office, testified before the Subcommittee that in the arrest of James Cooper on molestation charges, officers found several hundred 35mm photographs of teenage boys at parks, swimming pools, ice rinks, video arcades, baseball games, even newspaper boys on their routes—all clothed, but usually wearing shorts (see pp. 20, 21).<sup>42</sup> Other pedophiles have collected department store catalog photos of young children in underwear.

5. Blackmail.—A child molester is consumed with the prospect of being caught. When he has taken sexually explicit photos of his victims, he not only has preserved the object of his desire for posterity, but he also has created an effective tool for keeping the child from revealing his abuse. If a child should threaten to tell his parents or authorities, the molester will remind him of the photos and tell him he will be punished or lose the affection of parents and siblings if the photos are revealed.<sup>43</sup>

6. A medium of exchange.—Agent Lanning testified that some pedophiles exchange photographs in order to gain access to other children. The quality and theme of the material (boy-boy, boy-girl, adult-child, etc.) determines its value. Because of this system of exchange, copying machines, slide enlargers and photo duplicating equipment are often used to produce duplicate copies of material which can be offered to other pedophiles.<sup>44</sup>

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
OFFICE OF LEGISLATIVE AFFAIRS,
Washington, DC, June 26, 1991.

Hon. JESSE HELMS,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR HELMS: This letter is in response to your request for the views of the Department of Justice on your proposed amendment relating to various sentencing guidelines for child pornography offenses. My comments are directed to section (1)(b) of your amendment which would modify the Sentencing Commission's proposed changes to the penalties for the receipt of child pornography (sections 2G2.2 and 2G2.4 of the guidelines).

Your proposed legislation is consistent with the position the Department recently advocated to the Sentencing Commission. The Department strongly believes that receipt of child pornography should be grouped with trafficking violations and not with the new possession offense. Reducing sanctions for receiving child pornography would send the wrong message to those who may consider violating the law.

Therefore, the Department supports your effort to reinstate previously established penalties for receiving child pornography which has travelled in interstate or foreign commerce, or through the mail.

The Office of Management and Budget has advised that there is no objection to the submission of this position from the standpoint of the Administration's program.

Sincerely,

W. LEE RAWLS,
Assistant Attorney General.

RELIGIOUS ALLIANCE AGAINST PORNOGRAPHY,
Cincinnati, OH, June 24, 1991.

Hon. JESSE HELMS,
U.S. Senator,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR HELMS: We are writing you on behalf of the National Coalition Against Pornography, Religious Alliance Against Pornography (RAAP) and the National Women's Leadership Task Force (NWLTF) to express our strong support for your introducing legislation that would strengthen the sentencing requirements for child pornography offenses.

Our concern that new legislation be introduced stems from the proposed guidelines that will take effect on November 1, 1991 unless both houses of Congress take affirmative action before that date. We were profoundly disappointed to discover that the proposed guidelines recommended reduced sentencing levels for transporting, receiving and possessing child pornography.

The reduction in sentencing requirements will have a devastating effect on law enforcement efforts in this area. We have made progress over these last few years because federal law enforcement authorities have been able to convict child molesters on child pornography charges. Those men could then count on spending some substantial time in jail. Sadly, every picture of child pornography displays a child molestation taking place.

With the new guidelines, receipt or possession of child pornography is only a base level 10 offense. For a defendant receiving child pornography (who accepts responsibility), the recommended sentence has dropped from 8-14 months to 2-4 months, with probation now being a distinct possibility! Having worked on behalf of thousands of victims of this material, it is our strong belief that the sentencing requirements for these offenses need to be strengthened significantly, rather than lessened.

It also seems inconceivable that these proposed guidelines reflect the seriousness with which we know you and the Congress view this heinous offense. It would be tragic if the guidelines proposed for last session's child pornography legislation (which was meant to strengthen the offense) were to result in a decrease in child victimization prosecutions.

We believe the pending Crime Bill offers an appropriate and opportune time to make some vital adjustments consistent with the seriousness of the crime.

Each of our united networks is a mainstream alliance of concerned leaders and citizens. The Religious Alliance Against Pornography membership includes the top leaders of nearly 50 denominations, faith groups and interfaith organizations, serving over 100 million citizens. The National Women's Leadership Task Force was formed with the same objective as RAAP: reducing sexual victimization by eliminating illegal and child pornography. We would be strongly supportive of any action taken in this area.

We look forward to the opportunity to continue working with you and your staff on making this vital correction in the immediate future. Thank you for your continued leadership and concern. We are deeply grateful.

Sincerely yours,

DR. JERRY R. KIRK,

Chairman, Religious Alliance Against Pornography;
President, National Coalition Against Pornography.

DEEN KAPLAN,

Vice President, Public Policy.

RELIGIOUS ALLIANCE AGAINST PORNOGRAPHY

As religious leaders, we believe in the inherent dignity of each human being. Created in God's image and likeness, the human person is the clearest reflection of God's presence among us. Because human life is sacred, we all have a duty to develop the kind of societal environment that protects and fosters its development. This is why we address a broad range of life threatening and life diminishing issues. These assaults on human life and dignity are all distinct, each requiring its own moral analysis and solution. But they must be confronted as elements of a larger picture.

The purpose of RAAP is to bring into clear focus a major factor in the assault on human dignity and the consequent dehumanization that it promotes: hardcore and child pornography. This concern brought us together following the release of the Report of the Attorney General's Commission on Pornography. We are in unanimous agreement that hard-core and child pornography, which are not protected by the Constitution, are evils which must be eliminated.

As religious leaders, our primary responsibility is to teach and to motivate. We can and must help people understand the moral dimensions of the problem of hard-core and child pornography and what their responsibility is in this regard, while fully respecting freedom of expression guaranteed by the First Amendment. In particular, we wish to make it clear that we do not and will not advocate 'censorship'. Our understanding of censorship implies actions being taken against materials which are protected by the First Amendment.

As teachers, we will do all in our power to proclaim the truth of human dignity and freedom, and to promote the God-given human values needed for the moral health of our society. Given the information and motivation, people will do what is necessary to affect public policy.

The membership of RAAP, representing a broad spectrum of America's religious community, is an indication of the seriousness of the problem and our commitment to addressing it. This represents the beginning of an ongoing process which will facilitate greater cooperation on this vital issue among religious bodies.

NATIONAL WOMEN'S LEADERSHIP TASK FORCE

The National Women's Leadership Task Force, in partnership with the National Coalition Against Pornography and the Religious Alliance Against Pornography, mobilizes and equips women to eliminate child pornography and to remove illegal pornography from the open market.

SUPPORTIVE CONCEPTS

We are women of faith who have prayerfully come together to commit ourselves to the preservation and enhancement of human dignity.

We are women united in commitment to the task of eradicating child pornography and illegal pornography from our nation and our world.

We are concerned citizens who serve as business executives, church leaders, community leaders, educators, and government officials living in a society where illegal pornography degrades and dehumanizes women, destroys children, and corrupts men, those caught up in addiction and those exploited.

We are women focused on the goals of protecting ourselves, our families, our neighborhoods, and our communities by raising awareness that child pornography and other illegal pornography promotes sexual violence and victimization of children, women, men and families; developing regional and community task forces across America called WIN groups; and working with the Religious Alliance Against Pornography and National Coalition Against Pornography to influence local, state and federal governments. We encourage networking and/or joining with other decency organizations wherever feasible.

We are women who care and will encourage other women of diverse religious persuasions and philosophical motivations to join us in the challenge of freeing our nation from sexual abuse and degrading sexual attitudes.

CHILDREN'S LEGAL FOUNDATION,

Phoenix, AZ, June 20, 1991.

Hon. JESSE HELMS,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR HELMS: As you well know, Children's Legal Foundation, founded in 1957, is dedicated to ridding the Nation of illegal child pornography and obscenity.

Child abuse and sexual assaults on children are occurring in epidemic numbers in the United States today. The Attorney General's Commission on Pornography in 1986 found that the primary vehicle for the production and distribution of child pornography involved trade in materials created by child abusers and distributed informally to other child abusers. If we, as a Nation, are to ever slow down this ever escalating exploitation of children, then we must treat the marketing—distributing, receipt, and possession—of child pornography as the serious crime that it is.

For the above reasons, and many more that are too numerous to list in this short letter, Children's Legal Foundation strongly endorses the legislation you are proposing which would strengthen the child pornography penalties as reflected in the Federal Sentencing Guidelines.

I know I speak not only for my organization, but also the more than 100,000 members of CLF when I thank you for your leadership in this area.

Sincerely,

JAMES P. MUELLER,
General Counsel.

MORALITY IN MEDIA, INC.,

New York, NY, June 19, 1991.

Hon. JESSE HELMS,
United States Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR HELMS: Morality in Media was greatly distressed to learn of new sentencing guidelines which will result in reduced sentences for those convicted of violating the Federal Laws pertaining to child pornography.

Child pornography is among the most heinous of crimes, and if anything, the penalties should be made stricter, not weaker. We are therefore strongly in favor of legislation which will "put teeth" back into the sentencing guidelines for those who violate the child pornography laws.

The best and only way to close the distribution network for child pornography is to severely punish those who create, distribute, procure, and possess this vile material.

Sincerely,

JOSEPHY J. REILLY, Jr.,
President.

GAMMON & GRANGE,

Washington, DC, June 26, 1991.

Hon. JESSE HELMS,
U.S. Senator, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR HELMS: I am writing you to express the strongest possible support for your introducing legislation that would strengthen the sentencing requirements for child pornography offenses. I have spent the last 9 years combatting child exploitation and child pornography, as the Chief Assistant U.S. Attorney in North Carolina, then as the first Executive Director of the U.S. Department of Justice Child Exploitation and Obscenity Section during the Reagan Administration, and now as the President of the National Law Center for Children and Families.

Corrective legislation is essential if we are to prevent hundreds of pedophiles from receiving token sentences which put them back on the streets to victimize children.

The clinical and law enforcement evidence in this area is overwhelming. Child pornography is produced, distributed, and consumed almost exclusively by pedophiles (adults expressing a sexual preference for children) or molesters. In hundreds of cases we have found it used to reduce the child's resistance to molestation, to blackmail the child against describing to authorities what has happened, to teach the child exactly what the molester wants done, and finally, as a form of stimulation for the molester. There is no such thing as a minor child pornography offense. The possession of one child pornography picture has directly contributed to the molestation of at least one young child.

The vast majority of these offenders are men. Their clandestine networks have proven extremely difficult for law enforcement agents to penetrate. We have used "reverse-stings" and a number of other innovative approaches to attempt to get beyond the veil of secrecy, to rescue these children. Two examples are particularly illustrative of the role of child pornography prosecutions in helping destroy molester networks.

In Los Angeles, The LAPD Sexually Exploited Child Unit has found pornography used in the commission of extrafamilial sex crimes against children in almost two-thirds of their cases over the past 10 years. In an enormous investigation (involving 40 major cases with 12 or more child victims per offender) by the Louisville Exploited and Missing Children Unit, they found all 40 of the adult predators with various forms of adult pornography. The vast majority also possessed child pornography. One can begin to understand the scope of this problem when you consider that one of the Louisville cases involved 320 children.

Without the strictest sentencing guidelines, pedophile networks will continue to grow and flourish, free from the fear of prison, where molesters can find no children to satisfy their urges. Law enforcement efforts in this area will be emasculated, as few U.S. Attorneys will devote either time or resources to an offense that in all likelihood, will produce probation as the final outcome. The tremendous progress we have made over the past five years through inter-agency cooperation, reverse-stings and new stricter laws, which have closed gaping loopholes, will be significantly eroded if the new sentencing guidelines mandate a level 10 offense for receiving child pornography. It seems almost inconceivable—hundreds of children will pay the price.

In almost every instance where we have investigated a child pornography offense, we have found some evidence of child molestation. I urge you to strengthen the old child pornography guidelines by at least two levels. A reduction in the sentencing requirements will tell the law enforcement community that these offenses are no longer considered serious by our policymakers. The strongest laws on the books are meaningless if an offender who is convicted of such a horrendous crime goes home an hour later.

Lastly, having worked both within the federal government and as an attorney in the private sector to help Congress draft effective laws dealing with child exploitation, I am confident that there is no possibility that these proposed guidelines reflect the seriousness with which the Congress views this life destroying offense. It would be tragic if the guidelines proposed for last session's child pornography legislation (which was meant to significantly strengthen the offense) were to result in a decrease in child victimization prosecutions. I urge you to prevent that from happening.

Sincerely,

H. ROBERT SHOWERS, Esq.,
President, National Law Center for Children and Families, Partner, Gammon & Grange.

Mr. HELMS. How much time do I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina has 14 seconds.

Mr. HELMS. I will use those 14 seconds to thank the Chair for his courtesy to me, and to thank the Senate for listening to me to the extent that the Senate has listened to me.

I yield back the last 6 seconds of my time.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I will vote against cloture and urge my colleagues to do the same.

One hundred thirty days ago, the President asked Congress to send him a crime bill. The problem is that what the President had in mind was an anticrime bill, not a procrime bill.

The bill we have in front of us has the word "crime" in the title. But that is about the only sense in which it is a "crime" bill. This bill is, in most respects, a travesty which seeks to promote the liberal agenda, but would do little to stop crime on our Nation's streets.

As originally introduced, this bill would have outlawed the death penalty and expanded the rights of prisoners and criminal defendants. Some, but not all, of these aspects have been eliminated from the bill.

In its current form, this bill would override Federal and State Hatch Acts for the purpose of politicizing our Nation's law enforcement officers. Neither the police chiefs nor the law enforcement officers themselves can conceivably view this as a salutary development.

At the same time as it takes this country within one step of national firearms registration, this bill would do nothing to impose mandatory minimum sentences for nongun related offenses such as rape, kidnapping, or first degree murder.

Mr. President, the Senate can do better—and it should do better. This bill is not the final step in crime reform legislation during the 102d Congress. We will have plenty of opportunities to revisit the crime issue, ranging from the motor voter bill to the title X bill to the Kennedy quota bill, all of which are slated for Senate consideration this month.

So, Mr. President, let us have a crime bill. But let it be an anticrime bill, rather than the gun control bill which is before us today.

I ask unanimous consent that a letter sent to every Senator from the National Rifle Association that sets out that it is not a crime bill but a gun control bill, along with a letter sent to me from Neal Knox Associates, The Firearms Coalition, explaining the weak parts of this bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letters were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NATIONAL RIFLE ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA,

Washington, DC, July 9, 1991.

DEAR SENATOR: The NRA strongly opposes any attempt to limit debate on S. 1241 and asks you to oppose cloture when it is offered. Despite the addition of several positive anti-crime elements to this legislation long with the modification and deletion of several of the more onerous antigun sections, it contains provisions amounting to nothing less than an unmitigated attack on the rights of law-abiding gun owners. The continued inclusion of the unwarranted federal waiting period, the extension of criminal background checks for all firearms including long guns, and the ban and registration of semi-automatic firearms place this bill in diametric opposition to the protections guaranteed by the second amendment.

If the above listed provisions remain, S. 1241 will stand as a watershed for anti-gun forces. By tacitly accepting the flawed logic that controlling the rights of the law-abiding offers a check on the activities of the lawless, you make citizens less secure and criminals more so. This is antithetical to the spirit and the letter of the protections guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution, but more importantly, if opens the door to further diminishment.

Any law which diminishes the ability of citizens to secure the firearms necessary for self-protection is not only wrong, it is counter productive. Rape, robbery, assault, homicides, and other crimes of violence against individuals are at an all time high. However, an average of more than 600,000 of potential crimes such as these are thwarted by armed citizens each year. The vote you cast for S. 1241 may serve to deny present or future constituents the means to acquire the firearms they need to protect themselves or their family. Before you vote to diminish this right you should demand proof that it will serve a purpose other than that of political expediency. S. 1241 does not meet this burden of proof. That such actions are being justified in the name of crime control is a travesty.

S. 1241 is not a crime bill, it is a gun control bill. It does not deserve your support, and we urge you to vote against final passage.

Sincerely,

PATRICK J. RAFFANIELLE, Director

THE FIREARMS COALITION,
Silver Spring, MD, July 8, 1991.

Senator STEVE SYMMS,
Hart Senate Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR STEVE: I truly appreciate your statement that S. 1241 is no longer an anti-crime bill; it is now an anti-gun bill. Amen. And it must be voted upon accordingly. We will not eat a rotten steak no matter how much ketchup is on it.

The present language changes the "Brady Bill" section from a 7 day waiting period on handgun purchases to "five business days"—which is a distinction without a difference.

Further, after 30 to 60 months, probably, the "waiting period" will give way to an unwritten "instant check" on all firearms buyers—which few owners and buyers of rifles and shotguns, even few Senators, presently realize.

Finally, S. 1241 contains an outright ban on—initially—14 mainly semi-automatic firearms, with stringent and unrealistic requirements on present owners. Owners would have to register each gun with a licensed dealer, obtain a Federal form from anyone to whom they sold the gun, then keep that records forever. Considering that 70 percent wouldn't tell the Census Bureau how many bathrooms they have, and considering that even IRS requires tax records be kept only for 3 years, this is a prescription for turning countless law-abiding citizens into criminals.

Our friends in the Senate are now faced with the prospect of casting a single vote "for guns and against the death penalty" or "against guns and for the death penalty." Politically, they must not cast a vote on S. 1241, for it is a "Lose-Lose" situation.

To the five million readers of my columns in Guns & Ammo, Handloader, Rifle, and Shotgun News, S. 1241 will be the key vote of the 102d Congress. Frankly, most of my readers regard the "death penalty" as a farce and "habeas corpus" as a variety of mosquito. But they understand "gun control"—they recognize it in S. 1241—and they don't want it.

Please do your best to block S. 1241.

Yours for the Second Amendment,
NEAL KNOX.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware and the Senator from South Carolina each have 5 minutes.

The Senator from Delaware is recognized.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I will try to do this as quickly and succinctly as I can. No. 1, the reason there is not a vote on the Helms amendment, notwithstanding its merit or lack thereof, is because there is a refusal to allow votes on other amendments like the Wirth amendment on the other side. And it is clear that if we get into some of these incredibly contentious votes, the bill that my friend from Idaho calls not a crime bill will come down.

Mr. President, 126 days ago, the President of the United States called on the Congress to pass a crime bill.

The Democratic leadership in the Senate has taken this challenge seriously. We have introduced a crime bill, we agreed to bring it directly to the floor, without any delay in committee—and to the majority leader's great credit, he agreed to make the crime bill the first order of business in the Senate after we disposed of the President's other 100-day challenge, the transportation bill.

After 3 weeks of debates, amendments, and votes—today, the Senate stands prepared to pass a crime bill that answers the President's challenge.

Now it is true that this crime bill more closely resembles the Democratic crime bill than the President's—it includes a version of the Brady bill in it; it includes the DeConcini assault weapons ban; it includes our exclusionary rule provision; it includes most of our death penalty procedures, and it includes the many, many important crime fighting programs we Democrats have proposed.

But to the President's credit—and I do want to give him credit for this—it is my understanding that he and the Justice Department have said, that notwithstanding these differences from the President's bill, the President supports Senate passage of this crime bill.

So here we are. The Senate has a crime bill that most Democrats are prepared to support, that the President is prepared to support. Why can we not pass it?

We cannot pass this crime bill because some Senators are engaged in a filibuster of it.

Why? Why do these Senators want to block our adoption of this bill?

It cannot be because the Republicans have been denied their chance to offer anticrime amendments.

When my Republican colleagues wanted a vote on the President's crime bill, we agreed to their request.

And then, when they said, "No, actually, we want to vote on a revised crime bill"—a bill that dropped items from the President's bill and added most of our bill to it—we agreed to that request. And the Senate voted, and rejected this hybrid proposal soundly.

The Republicans wanted a vote on exclusionary rule reform. So we said, OK let's vote on the President's package. And they said, "No thanks," and proposed a reform that was one-half of what the President proposed.

And still, we took an up-and-down vote on it. And again, we rejected it.

The Republicans said they did not want to have the first gun vote be on the Brady bill—they wanted to have a gun substitute, the Stevens bill. So we gave them a vote on the Stevens bill—and, again, we rejected it.

And on, and on, and on. Each time, we have been, in effect, dared to take up and vote on Republican amendments to this bill—and each time, we have voted on them, up and down, just as requested.

So we have had a full airing of the philosophical differences between the President's bill and our bill—the President has won on some, we have won on others—and whatever you want to say about the product, no one can be against cloture because there has not yet been a full airing of our respective views.

Now maybe the opponents of cloture will say that they are voting "no" because they have nongermane amendments they wish to offer to the bill.

We all have amendments we would like to put on this bill. There are dozens of Democratic Senators who have amendments. I have amendments.

But we recognize that there comes a time when each Senator's desire to have his amendments adopted must give way to the Senate's need to complete a bill. On this bill, the Senate has considered and disposed of 84 amendments—84 amendments.

So, it can hardly be said that the bill has been closed to amendment. And so I say to my Republican friends: If we Democratic Senators are prepared to forgo our amendments to pass this bill, why will you not do the same?

Now, perhaps we will hear that some people don't want cloture because they are afraid that the key provisions in the bill will be changed after cloture is invoked. But yesterday, I stood here and proposed that we look in the key provisions of the bill—an offer the distinguished ranking Member accepted—only to have it rejected by other Republican Senators.

So much for that excuse for being against cloture.

Perhaps we will hear the opposite complaint: That cloture should not be invoked because the major provisions in the bill need to be changed. But to this I say: Many amendments that would change the major provisions in the bill would remain germane postcloture. So invoking cloture does not cut off all efforts to change the exclusionary rule or habeas corpus.

So much for that excuse.

Now I am sure that we will hear a host of other explanations as well. But let's lay the cards on the table. If cloture is not invoked today, it is for one simple reason, and it can be summarized in four letters: g-u-n-s, guns. If cloture is not invoked, it will be because opponents of the firearms provisions in this bill vote to block further progress on the bill.

I respect the rights of any Senator to vote against cloture for any reason. If a Senator wants to oppose cloture because he does not want any crime bill if that bill includes the Brady bill or the DeConcini bill, that is his prerogative, and I respect that.

But I hope we do not hear that Senators are voting against cloture because, as one of my Republican colleagues claimed last week, this is a gun bill, not a crime bill.

This isn't a crime bill? With 60 death penalty offenses—more than even the President's bill contained? With 10,000 new local cops?

Not a crime bill? With unprecedented limits on habeas appeals? With 3,000 new Federal agents? With a rural crime plan?

Not a crime bill? With new mandatory penalties for every gun offense? With an antigang plan? With new prisons and boot camps?

Not a crime bill? Tell that to the police officers waiting out in the reception room—or to those walking the beat today in neighborhoods around the country.

They want this bill. And they want you to vote for cloture on it.

In closing, Mr. President, I want to make two observations.

First, I want to say to my colleagues, that we all make speeches about getting tough on crime. Boy, do we make speeches. We make TV ads. We go to town meetings and tell our constituents how tough we are on crime. And we make more speeches.

Well today, we vote on whether we are going to have a crime bill. And it is high time to see whether our votes are going to match up to our raised voices. Are we going to just give speeches on crime, or are we going to have a crime bill—that's the question.

My second observation concerns the administration, and the politics of crime.

When this bill came to the floor, I called on the administration to take the politics out of this bill; to make it a bipartisan effort; to join us in working out a compromise crime bill.

It has not been easy, but here we are with a crime bill—not the way I wanted it, not the way the President wanted it—but basically, in a fashion that we are both prepared to accept it. Simply put: I support this crime bill. The President supports this crime bill. That dispute is resolved.

I do want to say this: I have been reading over the past few weeks that the White House intends to make crime an issue in the upcoming elections.

And if that is true, I hope the President and the media will not forget today's vote. Because if cloture fails today, and the crime bill is blocked, it won't be because a majority of Democrats vote against cloture—it will be because a majority of the members of the President's own party vote to block a crime bill.

So let's not hear about the Republicans being tougher on crime. I hope we won't hear any statements from the White House about congressional foot-dragging on crime unless those statements also include an accurate report that the cause of the delay is members of the President's own party.

Crime is not a political issue, or at least it should not be. And before anyone tries to make it one, they should stop and reflect on today's vote, and what it means.

With regard to what we had agreed to in terms of the amendments that we had agreed to by unanimous consent, if all my papers are here—here they are. I want to make clear what they are. They have been out there for a long time. We have been on this for 3 weeks.

This is Rudman amendment, which we accepted, which changes the Biden bill in the following way: It says instead of the drug czar deciding where we place these boot camps, the Director of the Bureau of Prisons will make that decision. I accepted that amendment.

Mr. President, there is a D'Amato amendment that is a purely technical amendment relating to a previous amendment the Senate had passed, having to do with whereas and wherefores, and it does not change the substance of what was passed.

There is a Dole technical amendment on guns; there is a Seymour amendment on alien exploitation, where if someone has an alien, or has control of an alien, and says, "Unless you commit the following crime, I will report you and you will be deported," it calls for a penalty for that.

There is a McConnell amendment changing the McNally ruling so that wire fraud statutes can be used more easily against public officials who are engaged in wrongdoing.

There is a Thurmond-Biden technical amendment which is purely technical.

There is a Bingaman technical amendment relating to the Bingaman amendment which we passed relating to literacy training and teaching in prisons.

There is a Riegle amendment on violent crime by minorities, where some of these new grants will go into the cities with the highest crime rates.

There is a DeConcini amendment setting up a Commission on Law Enforcement to help the law enforcement agencies to determine what new initiatives they can take, and how they can better organize to deal with violent crime.

And there is a Graham prison amendment which says that if you use dope, if you use narcotics, if you use controlled substances while you are in prison, it increases the penalty for those. That is what we just did, Mr. President.

And this brings us to a total of 94 amendments that have been disposed of relative to this bill, and cloture is the only way, the only way to get a crime bill the President wants and all America wants.

So we can play games all we want, all night. We can be petulant; we can insist that every one of our amendments or only our amendments get accepted. It will be totally appropriate in light of what we just heard for Senator WIRTH to come over here and suggest that he is going to insist on a vote on his amendment, and so on.

But I hope we do not do that. I hope we get a crime bill. There are a number of other vehicles that are available to pursue amendments that in fact have not been accepted and will be out of order because they are not germane if we vote cloture.

I thank my colleagues for listening, and I hope we invoke cloture.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I rise to say that I am in favor of invoking cloture on this bill. This bill contains the key points of the President's bill. They have been incorporated into the bill offered by the distinguished Senator from Delaware, the chairman of the committee: The comprehensive Federal death penalty, which is virtually identical to the death penalty contained in the President's crime bill—and this will give Federal prosecutors their first comprehensive death penalty since 1972.

This bill contains a habeas corpus reform which is extremely important. The Senate passed President Bush's habeas corpus reform proposal, which is the toughest habeas reform ever to pass this Senate.

And this bill contains a provision on antiterrorism that is important. Senator BIDEN essentially accepted the President's language on aviation and maritime terrorism.

This bill contains a provision on victims. The bill lifts the cap on the crime victim fund which helps crime victims recover financially. In addition, the bill contains language on mandatory restitution for crime victims.

So, Mr. President, this bill contains some things that I do not approve of. But on account of containing the main provisions of the President's crime bill, which we have incorporated into this bill, I feel that they outweigh the detrimental portions of the bill and we should pass this crime bill.

The people of this country are demanding action on this crime bill. I do not know of anybody anywhere that does not favor taking action on crime. There is too much crime all over this country; not just here, in Washington, DC, but in all the States of the Nation. And the people are looking to us to pass a bill that will take care of this crime situation.

Therefore, I am going to vote for cloture, and I hope every Member of this Senate will vote for cloture. I certainly hope we get enough to apply cloture. Anyway, the provisions that my distinguished chairman of the committee just mentioned—he has listed those—I will not go over them again. We have reached a consensus on those. I want some others there, but we could not reach a consensus on them. I wanted a vote on some others, in addition to that, but the chairman of the committee decided we could not do that.

So at any rate, these are provisions that I think are helpful, and I am willing to go along with them and adopt them at this time prior to the voting on cloture.

So, Mr. President, I am hoping that we can adopt these provisions that have been agreed upon en bloc, and then vote for cloture on this crime bill.

CLOTURE MOTION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The hour of 8:30 p.m. having arrived, under the previous order, the clerk will report the motion to invoke cloture.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

CLOTURE MOTION

We, the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of Rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, hereby move to bring to a close debate on S. 1241, a bill to control and reduce violent crime.

Wyche Fowler, Jr., Quentin Burdick, J.R. Biden, Jr., B.A. Mikulski, Herb Kohl, Claiborne Pell, Edward Kennedy, Jeff Bingaman, Pat Leahy, Albert Gore, Jr., Joe Lieberman, Wendell Ford, Dennis DeConcini, Alan Cranston, Charles S. Robb, and Tom Daschle.

CALL OF THE ROLL

The PRESIDING OFFICER. By unanimous consent, the quorum call has been waived.

VOTE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Is it the sense of the Senate that the debate on S. 1241, a bill to control and reduce violent crime, shall be brought to a close?

The yeas and nays are required. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. FORD. I announce that the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. PRYOR] is absent because of illness.

Mr. SIMPSON. I announce that the Senator from Missouri [Mr. BOND] is necessarily absent.

The yeas and nays resulted—yeas 71, nays 27, as follows:

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FORD). On this vote, there are 71 yeas, 27 nays. Three-fifths of the Senators duly chosen and sworn having voted in the affirmative, the motion is agreed to.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the motion was agreed to.

Mr. THURMOND. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MORNING BUSINESS

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. McCathran, one of his secretaries.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

As in executive session the Presiding Officer laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(The nominations received today are printed at the end of the Senate proceedings.)

REPORT OF THE DEFENSE BASE CLOSURE AND REALIGNMENT COMMISSION—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT—PM 60

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, together with an accompanying report; which was referred to the Committee on Armed Services:

To the Congress of the United States:

I transmit herewith the report of the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission pursuant to section 2903 of Public Law 101-510; 104 Stat. 1810, accompanied by the Commission's errata sheet submitted to me on July 9, 1991.

I also hereby certify that I approve all the recommendations contained in the Commission's report.

GEORGE BUSH.

THE WHITE HOUSE, July 10, 1991.

MESSAGES FROM THE HOUSE

At 12:17 p.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Mr. Hays, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House disagrees to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 1455) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 1991 for intelligence activities of the U.S. Government, the Intelligence Community Staff, and the Central Intelligence Agency Retirement and Disability System, and for other purposes; it agrees to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints the following as managers of the conference on the part of the House:

From the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence: Mr. McCURDY, Mr. WILSON, Mrs. KENNELLY, Mr. GLICKMAN, Mr. MAVROULES, Mr. RICHARDSON, Mr. SOLARZ, Mr. DICKS, Mr. DELLUMS, Mr. BONIOR, Mr. SABO, Mr. OWENS of Utah, Mr. SHUSTER, Mr. COMBEST, Mr. BERREUTER, Mr. DORNAN of California, Mr. YOUNG of Florida, Mr. MARTIN, and Mr. GEKAS.

From the Committee on Armed Services, for the consideration of the Department of Defense Tactical Intelligence and related activities and section 505 of both the House bill and Senate amendment: Mr. ASPIN, Mr. SKELTON, and Mr. DICKINSON.

The message also announced that the House has passed the following bills and joint resolution, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

H.R. 531. An act to establish procedures to improve the allocation and assignment to the electromagnetic spectrum, and for other purposes.

H.R. 2387. An act to authorize appropriations for certain programs for the conservation of striped bass, and for other purposes;

H.R. 2720. An act to extend for 1 year the authorization of appropriations for the programs under the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act, and the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act, and for certain programs relating to adoption opportunities, and for other purposes; and H.J. Res. 279. Joint resolution to declare it to be the policy of the United States that there should be a renewed and sustained commitment by the Federal Government and the American people to the importance of adult education.

The message further announced that the House has agreed to the following concurrent resolution, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

H. Con. Res. 113. Concurrent resolution to express the sense of the Congress that the President should seek an international moratorium on the use of large-scale driftnets called for in United Nations Resolution 44-225, while working to achieve the United States policy of a permanent ban on large-scale driftnets.

The message also announced that pursuant to the provisions of section 3(a) of Public Law 86-380, and the order of the House of June 26, 1991, empowering the Speaker to make appointments authorized by law or by the House, the Speaker, on June 28, 1991, did appoint Mr. PAYNE of New Jersey to the Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations on the part of the House.

MEASURES REFERRED

The following bills were read the first and second times by unanimous consent, and referred as indicated:

S. 1441. A bill to provide disaster assistance to agricultural producers, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

AGRICULTURE DISASTER ASSISTANCE ACT

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, there have been some very serious weather problems throughout the country this year and last year which have caused some serious problems for American agriculture. The 1990 farm bill has several provisions such as the Emergency Loan Program and other programs that are designed to respond to some of the needs that farmers have as a result of natural disasters such as severe weather problems. But we have found that in the administration of the programs, particularly the Emergency Loan Program, the requirements for eligibility and the exact steps that were required of farmers to qualify for loans were such that very few were being approved.

In testimony before the Agriculture Appropriations Subcommittee this came out in the early part of this year when we were having our usual hearings which included witnesses from the Farmers Home Administration. As a result of the information obtained from these hearings and in visiting with farmers throughout my State of Mississippi and across the country, it became obvious that we needed additional assistance from the administration or possibly additional legislation. We worked with the Secretary of Agriculture and other administration officials to try to identify things that could be done administratively to respond to these problems.

I must say, Mr. President, that the Secretary and his staff have worked very hard to help meet some of these needs, but it seems to me that in spite of some very sensitive changes that have already been made we do need additional assistance.

Today, I am introducing an agriculture disaster assistance act which will provide what we hope will be adequate assistance to farmers in the form of direct payments for eligible producers of 1990 or 1991 crops that were prevented from planting or that have experienced reduced yields due to damaging weather conditions.

I am happy to report, Mr. President, that over 20 Senators are joining in cosponsoring this legislation.

Thousands of farm families throughout the country have been adversely affected by devastating crop losses due to drought, flood, and freeze damage during 1990 and the current growing season. This bill will provide disaster assistance in the form of direct payments to eligible producers of all 1990 or 1991 crops that were prevented from planting or that have experienced reduced yields due to damaging weather conditions.

It is imperative that we assist these farmers who have suffered great losses due to conditions beyond their control.

I have received many letters from across the Nation requesting disaster assistance for 1990 crop losses due to adverse weather conditions. In fact, in my State, it is estimated that farmers lost nearly $100 million due to natural disasters during the 1990 growing season.

Agricultural production in the Midsouth region of the country is currently suffering from a deluge of record flooding that has caused severe damage. During this spring nearly 2 million acres of crop land was flooded in Mississippi alone. These heavy rains resulted in the delayed planting of thousands of acres of cotton, rice, and soybeans which will cause a significant reduction in normal production yields. It is estimated that over 100,000 acres of crop land in Mississippi will not be planted this year due to flooding. In addition to the row crop losses, there were several thousand acres of commercial catfish ponds which were flooded. Many of the farmers affected by this year's floods, also suffered devastating crop losses during last year's growing season.

Mr. President, this bill satisfies the provision in the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990, pertaining to the designation of an emergency by Congress. If enacted, the Secretary of Agriculture would have the authority to utilize funds from the Commodity Credit Corporation to provide disaster assistance only if the President designates that an emergency exists. Therefore, this bill is designed to provide needed disaster assistance without triggering a sequester under the Budget Act, as amended.

The principal provisions of this legislation are as follows:

For 1990 crop losses: Producers who have had losses to their 1990 crops may elect to obtain benefits under the emergency crop loss assistance provisions of the Food, Agriculture, Conservation, and Trade Act of 1990, but may not obtain benefits for crop losses in both 1990 and 1991.

For 1991 crop losses: Program crop participants will retain their advance deficiency payment on up to 35 percent of normal production on maximum payment acres. For losses of 36 to 75 percent of normal production, they will receive 65 percent of the target price and for losses of more than 75 percent of normal production, they will receive 90 percent of the target price.

Nonprogram participants with losses of 36 to 75 percent of normal production will receive 65 percent of the loan value and for losses of more than 75 percent, producers will receive 90 percent.

Provides prevented planting and reduced yield benefits for crops planted, or intended to be planted, on all flex acres on the same basis as nonparticipants or nonprogram crops, whichever is applicable.

Provides payments to producers of peanuts, sugar beets, sugarcane, and tobacco at a rate of 65 percent of price support level for losses in excess of 35 percent and 90 percent for losses in excess of 75 percent. Losses are measured by county average yield, payment yield, or farm marketing quota as applicable.

Provides payments to producers of oilseeds and other nonprogram crops at a rate of 65 percent of the 5-year average market price received by producers, excluding the high and low years, for losses in excess of 35 percent of the 3-year average yield and 90 percent for losses in excess of 75 percent.

Provides payments to operators of commercial aquaculture ventures for financial losses as a result of damaging weather on the same basis as for other nonprogram crops. It also authorizes an emergency cost-share program to provide for repair of damaged levees used for commercial aquaculture.

Reauthorizes the Emergency Livestock Feed Assistance Program.

Authorizes additional payments to producers of crops that suffer losses from the reduced quality of such crops due to damaging weather or related conditions.

Authorizes payments for reduced yields to be calculated on the basis of crop production by a producer on the farm if there are multiple producers on the same farm who collectively do not qualify.

Authorizes the Secretary to make a reasonable adjustment to disaster payments to reflect the income generated by any replacement crop produced on the same acreage, provided the adjustment does not exceed 5 percent of the value of the replacement crop.

Authorizes loan guarantees to rural businesses impacted directly or indirectly by the adverse weather.

I ask unanimous consent that the bill and the bill summary be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SEC. 2. DEFINITIONS.

As used in this Act:

(1) DAMAGING WEATHER.—The term "damaging weather" includes but is not limited to drought, hail, excessive moisture, freeze, tornado, hurricane, earthquake, excessive wind, or any combination thereof.

(2) RELATED CONDITION.—The term "related condition" includes but is not limited to insect infestations, plant diseases, or other deterioration of a crop of a commodity, including aflatoxin, that is accelerated or exacerbated naturally as a result of damaging weather occurring prior to or during harvest.

(3) SECRETARY.—The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Agriculture.

TITLE I—EMERGENCY LIVESTOCK ASSISTANCE

SEC. 101. EMERGENCY FEED AND RELATED ASSISTANCE.

Section 609 of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1471g) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(e) No person may receive benefits under this title attributable to lost production of a feed commodity due to damaging weather in 1991 to the extent that the person receives a disaster payment under the Disaster Assistance Act of 1991 on that lost production.

"(f) A person otherwise eligible for a livestock emergency benefit under this title in 1991 shall be subject to the combined payment and benefits limitation established under section 210(c) of the Disaster Assistance Act of 1991."

SEC. 102. EMERGENCY FORAGE PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall implement an emergency forage program for established pasture damaged by damaging weather or related condition in 1991, under which the Secretary shall enter into cost-share agreements with owners or operators of the damaged land to provide for reseeding of forage crops on the land in order to facilitate late fall 1991 and early spring 1992 grazing and haying. Assistance may be provided to the owners and operators only when—

(1) the forage crop will not regenerate naturally;

(2) reseeding is the most cost-effective method for reestablishing the forage crop; and

(3) reseeded is not undertaken simply to improve the forage crop damaged by the drought.

(b) COST-SHARE.—The Secretary shall share half the costs incurred under each agreement entered into under subsection (a), including the costs of seed, fertilizer, and other inputs on reseeded pasture.

(c) LIMITATIONS ON ASSISTANCE.—

(1) TOTAL ASSISTANCE.—The total amount of payments an owner or operator of pasture land shall be entitled to receive under this section shall be $3,500.

(2) RESEEDING.—The Secretary may cost-share for reseeded under this section only if the reseeded is to be used for nonannual crops planted for pasture purposes.

(d) FUNDING.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall use the funds, facilities, and authorities of the Commodity Credit Corporation to carry out this section as provided under section 224.

(2) LIMITATION.—Not more than $50,000,000 of the funds of the Commodity Credit Corporation may be expended under paragraph (1).

(3) PRORATION.—To ensure the equitable award of agreements under this section, as limited under paragraph (2), the Secretary may prorate, and adopt procedures to facilitate the proration of, funds made available under this section.

SEC. 103. EMERGENCY AQUACULTURE PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall implement an emergency aquaculture program to assist owners and operators of established commercial fresh water aquaculture operations in restoring the retention levees and other structural improvements that have been damaged by damaging weather or related condition in 1991.

(b) COST-SHARE.—Assistance under this section shall be provided through cost-share agreements entered into by the Secretary with the owners and operators for the restoration of the damaged levees and other structural improvements. The Secretary shall share half the costs incurred under each agreement based on damage surveys made pursuant to regulations issued by the Secretary.

(c) FUNDING.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall use the funds, facilities, and authorities of the Commodity Credit Corporation to carry out this section as provided in section 224.

(2) LIMITATION.—Not more than $5,000,000 of the funds of the Commodity Credit Corporation may be expended under paragraph (1).

(3) PRORATION.—To ensure the equitable award of funds for agreements under this section as a result of the limitations in paragraphs (1) and (2), the Secretary may prorate, and adopt procedures to facilitate the proration of, funds made available under this section.

TITLE II—EMERGENCY CROP LOSS ASSISTANCE

Subtitle A—Annual Crops

SEC. 201. PAYMENTS TO PROGRAM PARTICIPANTS FOR TARGET PRICE COMMODITIES.

(a) DISASTER PAYMENTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Effective only for producers on a farm who elected to participate in the production adjustment program established under the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1421 et seq.) for the 1991 crop of wheat, feed grains, upland cotton, extra long staple cotton, or rice, except as otherwise provided in this subsection, if the Secretary determines that, because of damaging weather or related condition in 1991, the total quantity of the 1991 crop of the commodity that the producers are able to harvest on the farm is less than the result of multiplying 65 percent of the farm program payment yield established by the Secretary for the crop by the sum of the acreage planted for harvest and the acreage prevented from being planted (because of damaging weather or related condition in 1991) within the payment acres as determined by the Secretary for the crop, the Secretary shall make a disaster payment available to the producers at a rate equal to—

(A) 65 percent of the established price for the crop for any deficiency in production greater than 35 percent, but not greater than 75 percent, for the crop; and

(B) 90 percent of the established price for the crop for any deficiency in production greater than 75 percent for the crop.

(2) LIMITATIONS.—

(A) PAYMENT ACRES.—Payments provided under paragraph (1) for a crop of a commodity may not be made available to producers on a farm with respect to any acreage in excess of the payment acres for the farm for the commodity.

(B) PLANTING FLEXIBILITY.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—Payments shall be made available as provided in section 202, 203, or 204 of this Act, as applicable, to the extent the Secretary determines that because of damaging weather or other related condition in 1991 there is a reduction in the quantity of the crop of a commodity that producers are able to harvest, in accordance with section 504 of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1464).

(ii) AMOUNT OF PAYMENTS.—The payments shall be based on losses to the commodity on the nonpaid flexible acreage. The acreage for which prevented planting credit shall be provided shall not exceed an amount determined by the Secretary that will provide fair and equitable treatment to producers.

(C) CROP INSURANCE.—Payments provided under paragraph (1) for a crop of a commodity may not be made available to producers on a farm unless the producers enter into an agreement to obtain multiperil crop insurance, to the extent required under section 207.

(3) DEFICIENCY PAYMENTS.—The total quantity of a crop of a commodity on which deficiency payments otherwise would be payable to producers on a farm under the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1421 et seq.) shall be reduced by the quantity on which a payment is made to the producers for the crop under paragraph (1).

(4) ELECTION OF PAYMENTS.—Effective only for the 1991 crops of wheat, feed grains, cotton, and rice, in the case of producers on a farm who elected after March 11, 1991, to devote all or a portion of the permitted acreage of the farm for the commodity to conservation or other uses in accordance with section 107B(c)(1)(E), 105B(c)(1)(E), 103B(c)(1)(D), or 101B(c)(1)(D) of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1445b-3a(c)(1)(C), 1444f(c)(1)(E), 1444-2(c)(1)(D), or 1441-2(c)(1)(D)), the Secretary shall allow the producers (within 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act) to elect whether to receive disaster payments in accordance with this subsection in lieu of payments under such section.

(b) ADVANCE DEFICIENCY PAYMENTS.—

(1) APPLICABILITY.—This subsection shall apply only to producers on a farm who elected to participate in the production adjustment program established under the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1421 et seq.) for the 1991 crop of wheat, feed grains, upland cotton, extra long staple cotton, or rice.

(2) PAYMENTS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subparagraph (B), if because of damaging weather or related condition in 1991 the total quantity of the 1991 crop of the commodity that the producers are able to harvest on the farm is less than the result of multiplying the farm program payment yield established by the Secretary for the crop by the sum of the payment acreage planted for harvest and the payment acreage prevented from being planted (because of the damaging weather, as determined by the Secretary) for the crop (hereafter referred to as the "qualifying amount"), the producers shall not be required to refund any advance deficiency payment made to the producers for the crop under section 114 of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1445j) with respect to that portion of the deficiency in production that does not exceed 35 percent of the qualifying amount.

(B) CROP INSURANCE.—Producers on a farm shall not be eligible for the forgiveness provided for under subparagraph (A), unless the producers enter into an agreement to obtain multiperil crop insurance, to the extent required under section 207.

(3) ELECTION.—The Secretary shall allow producers on a farm that elected, prior to the date of enactment of this Act, not to receive advance deficiency payments made available for the 1991 crop under section 114 of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1445j) to elect (within 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act) whether to receive the advance deficiency payments.

(4) REFUND.—Effective only for the 1991 crops of wheat, feed grains, upland cotton, extra long staple cotton, and rice, if the Secretary determines that any portion of the advance deficiency payment made to producers for the crop under section 114 of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1445j) must be refunded, the refund shall not be required prior to July 31, 1992, for that portion of the crop for which a disaster payment is made under subsection (a).

SEC. 202. PAYMENTS TO PROGRAM NON-PARTICIPANTS FOR TARGET PRICE COMMODITIES.

(a) DISASTER PAYMENTS.—

(1) APPLICABILITY.—Except as provided in section 201(a)(2)(B), this section is effective only for producers on a farm who elected not to participate in the production adjustment program established under the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1421 et seq.) for the 1991 crop of wheat, feed grains, upland cotton, extra long staple cotton, or rice.

(2) PAYMENT.—If the Secretary determines that because of damaging weather or related condition in 1991, the total quantity of the 1991 crop of the commodity that the producers are able to harvest on the farm or on the nonpaid flexible acreage is less than the result of multiplying 65 percent of the county average yield established by the Secretary for the crop by the sum of acreage planted for harvest and the acreage for which prevented planting credit is approved by the Secretary for the crop under subsection (b), the Secretary shall make a disaster payment available to the producers. The payment shall be made to the producers at a rate equal to—

(1) 65 percent of the basic county loan rates (or a comparable price if there is no current basic county loan rate) for the crop, as determined by the Secretary, for any deficiency in production greater than 35 percent, but not greater than 75 percent, for the crop; and

(2) 90 percent of the basic county loan rate (or a comparable price if there is no current basic county loan rate) for the crop, as determined by the Secretary, for any deficiency in production greater than 75 percent for the crop.

(b) PREVENTED PLANTING CREDIT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall provide prevented planting credit under subsection (a) with respect to acreage that producers on a farm were prevented from planting to the 1991 crop of the commodity for harvest on the farm because of damaging weather or related condition in 1991, as determined by the Secretary.

(2) ACREAGE LIMITATIONS.—The acreage may not exceed the greater of—

(A) a quantity equal to the acreage on the farm planted (or prevented from being planted due to damaging weather or other condition beyond the control of the producers) to the commodity for harvest in 1990 minus acreage actually planted to the commodity for harvest in 1991; or

(B) a quantity equal to the average of the acreage on the farm planted (or prevented from being planted due to damaging weather or other condition beyond the control of the producers) to the commodity for harvest in 1988, 1989, and 1990, minus acreage actually planted to the commodity for harvest in 1991.

(3) ADJUSTMENTS.—The Secretary shall make appropriate adjustments in applying the limitations contained in this subsection to take into account crop rotation practices of the producers.

(c) LIMITATIONS.—

(1) ACREAGE LIMITATION PROGRAM PERCENTAGE.—The amount of payments made available to producers on a farm for a crop of a commodity under subsection (a) shall be reduced by a factor equivalent to the acreage limitation program percentage established for the crop under the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1421 et seq.).

(2) CROP INSURANCE.—Payments provided under subsection (a) for a crop of a commodity may not be made available to the producers on a farm unless the producers enter into an agreement to obtain multiperil crop insurance, to the extent required under section 207.

SEC. 203. PEANUTS, SUGAR, AND TOBACCO.

(a) DISASTER PAYMENTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Effective only for the 1991 crops of peanuts, sugar beets, sugarcane, and tobacco, if the Secretary determines that, because of damaging weather or related condition in 1991, the total quantity of the 1991 crop of the commodity that the producers on a farm are able to harvest is less than the result of multiplying 65 percent of the county average yield (or program yield, in the case of peanuts) established by the Secretary for the crop by the sum of the acreage planted for harvest and the acreage for which prevented planting credit is approved by the Secretary for the crop under subsection (b), the Secretary shall make a disaster payment available to the producers.

(2) PAYMENT RATE.—The payment shall be made to the producers at a rate equal to—

(A) 65 percent of the applicable payment level under paragraph (2), as determined by the Secretary, for any deficiency in production greater than 35 percent, but not greater than 75 percent, for the crop (or in the case of a crop of burley tobacco or flue-cured tobacco, for any deficiency in production greater than 35 percent, but not greater than 75 percent, of the farm's effective marketing quota for 1991); and

(B) 90 percent of the applicable payment level under paragraph (2), as determined by the Secretary, for any deficiency in production greater than 75 percent for the crop (or, in the case of burley tobacco or flue-cured tobacco, for any deficiency in production greater than 75 percent of the farm's effective marketing quota for 1991).

(3) PAYMENT LEVEL.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the payment level for a commodity shall be equal to—

(A) for peanuts, the price support level for quota peanuts or the price support level for additional peanuts, as applicable;

(B) for tobacco, the national average loan rate for the type of tobacco involved, or (if there is none) the market price, as determined under section 204(a)(2); or

(C) for sugar beets and sugarcane, a level determined by the Secretary to be fair and reasonable in relation to the level of price support established for the 1991 crops of sugar beets and sugarcane, and that, insofar as is practicable, shall reflect no less return to the producer than under the 1991 price support levels.

(b) PREVENTED PLANTING CREDIT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall provide prevented planting credit under subsection (a) with respect to acreage that producers on a farm were prevented from planting to the 1991 crop of the commodity for harvest because of damaging weather or related condition in 1991, as determined by the Secretary.

(2) ACREAGE LIMITATIONS.—The acreage may not exceed the greater of—

(A) a quantity equal to the acreage on the farm planted (or prevented from being planted due to damaging weather or other condition beyond the control of the producers) to the commodity for harvest in 1990 minus acreage actually planted for harvest in 1991; or

(B) a quantity equal to the average of the acreage on the farm planted (or prevented from being planted due to damaging weather or other condition beyond the control of the producers) to the commodity for harvest in 1988, 1989, and 1990, minus acreage actually planted to the commodity for harvest in 1991.

(3) ADJUSTMENTS.—The Secretary shall make appropriate adjustments in applying the limitations contained in paragraph (2) to take into account crop rotation practices of the producers and increased quotas for the 1991 crops of tobacco.

(c) CROP INSURANCE.—Payments provided under subsection (a) for a crop of a commodity may not be made available to the producers on a farm unless the producers enter into an agreement to obtain multiperil crop insurance, to the extent required under section 207.

(d) SPECIAL RULES FOR PEANUTS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law—

(1) a deficiency in production of quota peanuts from a farm, as otherwise determined under this section, shall be reduced by the quantity of peanut poundage quota that was the basis of the anticipated production that has been transferred from the farm;

(2) payments shall be made under this section whether the deficiency in production was a deficiency in production of quota or additional peanuts and the payment rate shall be established accordingly; and

(3) the quantity of undermarketings of quota peanuts from a farm for the 1991 crop that may otherwise be claimed under section 353 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 (7 U.S.C. 1353) for purposes of future quota increases shall be reduced by the quantity of the deficiency of production of the peanuts for which payment has been received under this section.

(e) SPECIAL RULES FOR TOBACCO.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law—

(1) the quantity of undermarketings of quota tobacco from a farm for the 1991 crop that may otherwise be claimed under section 317 or 319 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 (7 U.S.C. 1314c or 1314e) for purposes of future quota increases shall be reduced by the quantity of the deficiency of production of the tobacco for which payment has been received under this section; and

(2) disaster payments made to producers under this section may not be considered by the Secretary in determining the net losses of the Commodity Credit Corporation under section 106A(d) of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1445-1(d)).

(f) SPECIAL RULE FOR SUGAR.—

(1) INABILITY TO PROCESS.—A producer of the 1991 crop of sugarcane or sugar beets that is unable to process the commodity into sugar because of the inability of local processing plants to process sugar as a result of damaging weather or related condition in 1991 shall be eligible for disaster payments in accordance with subsection (a) for any loss in sugar production attributable to the inability. Disaster payments made available under this subsection for the loss of production shall be reduced by an amount equal to any proceeds received by the producer from the disposition of that portion of the crop on which disaster payments are made.

(2) SUGARCANE.—For purposes of determining the total quantity of the 1991 crop of sugarcane that the producers on a farm are able to harvest, the Secretary shall make the determination based on the quantity of recoverable sugar.

SEC. 204. OILSEEDS AND NONPROGRAM CROPS.

(a) DISASTER PAYMENTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Effective only for the 1991 crops of oilseeds and nonprogram crops, if the Secretary determines that, because of damaging weather or related condition in 1991, the total quantity of the 1991 crop of the commodity that the producers on a farm are able to harvest is less than the result of multiplying 65 percent of—

(i) with respect to oilseeds, the State, area, or county yield, adjusted for adverse weather conditions during the 3 previous crop years, as determined by the Secretary; or

(ii) with respect to nonprogram crops, the yield established by the Commodity Credit Corporation under subsection (d)(2), for the crop by the sum of the acreage planted for harvest and the acreage for which prevented planting credit is approved by the Secretary for the crop under subsection (b), the Secretary shall make a disaster payment available to the producers.

(B) RATES.—The payment shall be made to the producers at a rate equal to—

(i) 65 percent of the applicable payment level under paragraph (2), as determined by the Secretary, for any deficiency in production greater than 35 percent, but not greater than 75 percent, for the crop; and

(ii) 90 percent of the applicable payment level under paragraph (2), as determined by the Secretary, for any deficiency in production greater than 75 percent for the crop.

(2) PAYMENT LEVEL.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the payment level for a commodity shall equal the simple average price received by producers of the commodity, as determined by the Secretary subject to paragraph (3), during the marketing years for the immediately preceding 5 crops of the commodity, excluding the year in which the average price was the highest and the year in which the average price was the lowest in the period.

(3) METHOD OF DETERMINING PAYMENTS.—

(A) CROP-BY-CROP BASIS.—The Secretary shall make disaster payments under subsection (a) on a crop-by-crop basis, with consideration given to markets and uses of the crops, under regulations issued by the Secretary.

(B) SEPARATE CROPS.—For the purposes of determining the payment levels on a crop-by-crop basis, the Secretary shall consider as separate crops, and develop separate payment levels insofar as is practicable for, different varieties of the same commodity for which there is a significant difference in the economic value in the market.

(b) PREVENTED PLANTING CREDIT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall provide prevented planting credit under subsection (a) with respect to acreage that producers on a farm were prevented from planting to the 1991 crop of the commodity for harvest because of damaging weather or related condition in 1991, as determined by the Secretary.

(2) ACREAGE LIMITATION.—The acreage may not exceed the greater of—

(A) a quantity equal to the acreage on the farm planted (or prevented from being planted because of damaging weather or other condition beyond the control of the producers) to the commodity for harvest in 1990 minus acreage actually planted for harvest in 1991; or

(B) a quantity equal to the average of the acreage on the farm planted (or prevented from being planted due to damaging weather or other condition beyond the control of the producers) to the commodity for harvest in 1988, 1989, and 1990, minus acreage actually planted to the commodity for harvest in 1991.

(3) ADJUSTMENTS.—The Secretary shall make appropriate adjustments in applying the limitations contained in paragraph (2) to take into account crop rotation practices of the producers.

(c) CROP INSURANCE.—Payments provided under subsection (a) for a crop of a commodity may not be made available to the producers on a farm unless the producers enter into an agreement to obtain multiperil crop insurance, to the extent required under section 207.

(d) SPECIAL RULES FOR NONPROGRAM CROPS.—

(1) FARM YIELDS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The Commodity Credit Corporation shall establish disaster program farm yields for nonprogram crops.

(B) BASIS.—The yield for a farm shall be based on proven yields, if the producers on the farm can provide satisfactory evidence to the Commodity Credit Corporation of actual crop yields on the farm for at least one of the immediately preceding 3 crop years. If the data do not exist for any of the 3 preceding crop years, the Commodity Credit Corporation shall establish a yield for the farm by using a county average yield for the commodity or by using other data available to it.

(3) DEMONSTRATION OF LOSSES.—It shall be the responsibility of the producers of nonprogram crops to provide satisfactory evidence of crop losses resulting from damaging weather or related condition in 1991 in order for the producers to obtain disaster payments under this section.

(4) NONPROGRAM CROPS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—As used in this section, the term "nonprogram crops" means all crops for which crop insurance through the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation was available for crop year 1991, and other commercial crops (including sweet potatoes) for which the insurance was not available for crop year 1991, except that the term shall not include a crop covered under section 201, 202, or 203, or oilseeds.

(B) FISH OR SEAFOOD.—As used in the nonprogram crop provisions of this section—

(i) a reference to the acreage on the farm planted for harvest, or prevented from being planted, shall be considered to refer to the acreage of the pond or other aquatic areas in which the fish or seafood are produced or prevented from being produced; and

(ii) the term "nonprogram crop" includes fish or seafood produced or prevented from being produced in established freshwater commercial aquaculture operations.

SEC. 205. CROP QUALITY REDUCTION DISASTER PAYMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—To ensure that all producers of 1991 crops covered under the sections 201 through 203, and producers of oilseeds, are treated equitably, the Secretary may make additional disaster payments to producers of the crops that suffer losses resulting from the reduced quality of the crops caused by damaging weather or related condition in 1991, as determined by the Secretary.

(b) ELIGIBLE PRODUCERS.—If the Secretary determines to make crop quality disaster payments available to producers under subsection (a), producers on a farm of a crop described in subsection (a) shall be eligible to receive reduced quality disaster payments only if the producers incur a deficiency in production of not less than 35 percent and not more than 75 percent for the crop (as determined under section 201, 202, 203, or 204, as appropriate).

(c) MAXIMUM PAYMENT RATE.—The Secretary shall establish the reduced quality disaster payment rate, but the rate shall not exceed 10 percent, as determined by the Secretary, of—

(1) the established price for the crop, for commodities covered under section 201;

(2) the basic county loan rate for the crop (or a comparable price if there is no current basic county loan rate), for commodities covered under section 202;

(3) the payment level under section 203(a)(2), for commodities covered under section 203; and

(4) the payment level under section 204(a)(2), for commodities covered under section 204.

(d) DETERMINATION OF PAYMENT.—The amount of payment to a producer under this section shall be determined by multiplying the payment rate established under subsection (c) by the portion of the actual harvested crop on the producer's farm that is reduced in quality by the damaging weather or related condition in 1991, as determined by the Secretary.

SEC. 206. EFFECT OF FEDERAL CROP INSURANCE PAYMENTS.

In the case of producers on a farm who obtained crop insurance for the 1991 crop of a commodity under the Federal Crop Insurance Act (7 U.S.C. 1501 et seq.), the Secretary shall reduce the amount of payments made available under this subtitle for the crop to the extent that the amount determined by adding the net amount of crop insurance indemnity payment (gross indemnity less premium paid) received by the producers for the deficiency in the production of the crop and the disaster payment determined in accordance with this subtitle for the crop exceeds the amount determined by multiplying—

(1) 100 percent of the yield used for the calculation of disaster payments made under this subtitle for the crop; by

(2) the sum of the acreage of the crop planted to harvest and the acreage for which prevented planting credit is approved by the Secretary (or, in the case of disaster payments under section 201, the eligible acreage established under sections 201(a)(1) and 201(a)(2)(A)); by

(3)(A) in the case of producers who participated in a production adjustment program for the 1991 crop or wheat, feed grains, upland cotton, extra-long staple cotton, or rice, the established price for the 1991 crop of the commodity, except that for the non-paid flexible acreage for the producers, there shall be used a price determined under subparagraph (B), (C), or (D), as applicable to the commodity;

(B) in the case of producers who did not participate in a production adjustment program for the 1991 crop or wheat, feed grains, upland cotton, extra long staple cotton, or rice, the basic county loan rate (or a comparable price, as determined by the Secretary, if there is no current basic county loan rate) for the 1991 crop of the commodity;

(C) in the case of producers of sugar beets, sugarcane, peanuts, or tobacco, the payment level for the commodity established under section 203(a)(2); or

(D) in the case of producers of oilseeds or a nonprogram crop (as defined in section 204(d)(4)), the simple average price received by producers of the commodity, as determined by the Secretary, during the marketing years for the immediately preceding 5 crops of the commodity, excluding the year in which the average price was the highest and the year in which the average price was the lowest.

SEC. 207. CROP INSURANCE COVERAGE FOR 1992 CROPS.

(a) REQUIREMENT.—Subject to subsection (b), producers on a farm, to be eligible to receive a disaster payment under this subtitle, an emergency loan under subtitle C of the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act (7 U.S.C. 1961 et seq.) for crop losses due to damaging weather or related condition in 1991, or forgiveness of the repayment of advance deficiency payments under section 201(b), must agree to obtain multiperil crop insurance under the Federal Crop Insurance Act (7 U.S.C. 1501 et seq.) for the 1992 crop of the commodity for which the payments, loans, or forgiveness are sought.

(b) CROP INSURANCE.—Producers on a farm shall not be required to agree to obtain crop insurance under subsection (a) for a commodity—

(1) unless the producers' deficiency in production, with respect to the crop for which a disaster payment under this subtitle otherwise may be made, exceeds 75 percent;

(2) crop insurance coverage is not available to the producers for the commodity for which the payment, loan, or forgiveness is sought;

(3) if the producers' annual premium rate for the crop insurance is an amount greater than 125 percent of the average premium rate for insurance on that commodity for the 1991 crop in the county in which the producers are located;

(4) in any case in which the producers' annual premium for the crop insurance is an amount greater than 25 percent of the amount of the payment, loan, or forgiveness sought; or

(5) if the producers can establish by appeal to the county committee established under section 8(b) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act (16 U.S.C. 590(b)), or to the county committee established under section 332 of the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act (7 U.S.C. 1982), as appropriate, that the purchase of crop insurance would impose an undue financial hardship on the producers and that a waiver of the requirement to obtain crop insurance should, in the discretion of the county committee, be granted.

(c) IMPLEMENTATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall ensure (acting through the county committees established under section 8(b) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act and located in the counties in which the assistance programs provided for under sections 201 through 205 are implemented and through the county committees established under section 332 of the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act (7 U.S.C. 1982) in counties in which emergency loans, as described in subsection (a), are made available, that producers who apply for assistance, as described in subsection (a), obtain multiperil crop insurance as required under this section.

(2) DEMONSTRATION OF COMPLIANCE.—Each producer who is subject to the requirements of this section may comply with the requirements by providing evidence of multiperil crop insurance coverage from sources other than through the county committee office, as approved by the Secretary.

(3) REDUCTION OF COMMISSIONS.—The Secretary shall provide by regulation for a reduction in the commissions paid to private insurance agents, brokers, or companies on crop insurance contracts entered into under this section sufficient to reflect that the insurance contracts principally involve only a servicing function to be performed by the agent, broker, or company.

(d) REPAYMENT OF BENEFITS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, if (prior to the end of the 1992 crop year for the commodity involved) the crop insurance coverage required of the producer under this section is canceled by the producer, the producer—

(1) shall make immediate repayment to the Secretary of any disaster payment or forgiven advance deficiency payment that the producer otherwise is required to repay; and

(2) shall become immediately liable for full repayment of all principal and interest outstanding on any emergency loan described in subsection (a) made subject to this section.

SEC. 208. TRANSFER OF FUNDS.

The Secretary may transfer funds made available to the Commodity Credit Corporation during fiscal year 1991 to the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service in such amounts as are necessary for salaries and other expenses incurred in carrying out title I and this title, except that this authorization shall be available only if funding for this purpose is not provided under an appropriations Act.

SEC. 209. CROPS HARVESTED FOR FORAGE USES.

Not later than 15 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall announce the terms and conditions by which producers on a farm may establish 1991 yields, for purposes of this Act, with respect to crops that will be harvested for silage and other forage uses.

SEC. 210. PAYMENT LIMITATIONS.

(a) LIMITATION.—Subject to subsections (b) and (c), the total amount of payments that a person shall be entitled to receive under one or more of the programs established under this subtitle may not exceed $100,000.

(b) DUPLICATIVE PAYMENTS.—No person may receive disaster payments under this subtitle to the extent that the person receives a livestock emergency benefit for lost feed production in 1991 under section 606 of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1471d).

(c) COMBINED LIMITATION.—

(1) TOTAL BENEFITS.—No person may receive any payment under this subtitle or benefit under title VI of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1471 et seq.) for livestock emergency losses suffered in 1991 if the payment or benefit will cause the combined total amount of the payments and benefits received by the person to exceed $100,000.

(2) ADVANCE DEFICIENCY PAYMENTS.—The advance deficiency payments referred to in section 201(b) shall continue to be subject to the payment limitation in section 1001 of the Food Security Act of 1985 (7 U.S.C. 1308) in lieu of the foregoing limitation.

(3) ELECTION OF BENEFITS.—If a producer is subject to paragraph (1), the producer may elect (subject to the benefits limitations under section 609 of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1471g)) whether to receive the $100,000 in the payments, or the livestock emergency benefits (not to exceed $50,000), or a combination of payments and benefits specified by the person.

(d) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall issue regulations—

(1) defining the term "person" for the purposes of this section, which shall conform, to the extent practicable, to the regulations defining the term "person" issued under section 1001 of the Food Security Act of 1985 (7 U.S.C. 1308); and

(2) prescribing such rules as the Secretary determines necessary to ensure a fair and reasonable application of the limitations established under this section.

SEC. 211. DE MINIMIS YIELDS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Any producer whose actual yield for a crop is equal to or less than the de minimis yield for the crop shall be considered as having an actual yield of zero for the purpose of calculating any reduced yield disaster payments for the crop under this subtitle.

(b) DETERMINATION BY SECRETARY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may determine a de minimis yield for each crop eligible for reduced yield disaster payments under this subtitle.

(2) LEVEL.—The de minimis yield shall be set at a level that will minimize any incentive provided by the prospect of disaster payments to abandon crops that have a value that exceeds the cost of harvesting.

(3) MINIMUM.—In no case may the de minimis yield be less than the amount of production that, when valued at current market prices, equals the average cost of harvesting the crop, as determined by the Secretary.

SEC. 212. PRODUCER ELIGIBILITY.

A producer on a farm who produces any crop of a commodity for which disaster payments are made available under this subtitle shall qualify for a disaster payment if the total quantity of the commodity that the producer is able to harvest on that farm is reduced as a result of damaging weather or related condition in an amount that meets the criteria of section 201, 202, 203, or 204, even though the producers on the farm, collectively, may not meet the criteria.

SEC. 213. NO DOUBLE PAYMENTS ON REPLANTED ACREAGE.

(a) REDUCTION OF DISASTER PAYMENT.—Effective only for the producers on a farm who receive disaster payments under this subtitle for a crop of a commodity, the Secretary shall reduce the payments by an amount that reflects 5 percent of the value of any crop that the producers plant for harvest in 1991 to replace the crop for which disaster payments are received.

(b) REPLACEMENT CROPS.—For purposes of subsection (a), a crop shall be considered to be planted to replace the crop for which disaster payments are received if (because of loss or damage to the first crop due to damaging weather or related condition in 1991) the second crop is planted on acreage on which the producers planted, or were prevented from planting, the first crop.

(c) ADMINISTRATION.—In carrying out this section, the Secretary shall—

(1) determine the value of the second crop based on the actual yield of the producers and average market prices for the second crop during a representative period; and

(2) take into account the historical cropping patterns of producers.

SEC. 214. SUBSTITUTION OF CROP INSURANCE PROGRAM YIELDS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the Secretary may permit each eligible producer (as defined in subsection (d)) of a 1991 crop of a commodity who has obtained multiperil crop insurance for the crop (or, as provided in subsection (c), who obtained multiperil crop insurance for the producer's 1990 crop of the commodity) under the Federal Crop Insurance Act (7 U.S.C. 1501 et seq.) to substitute, at the discretion of the producer, the crop insurance yield for the crop, as established under such Act, for the farm yield otherwise assigned to the producer under this Act, for the purposes of determining the producer's eligibility for a disaster payment on the 1991 crop under this Act and the amount of the payment.

(b) ADJUSTMENT OF ADVANCED DEFICIENCY PAYMENTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, if an eligible producer of wheat, feed grains, cotton, or rice elects to substitute yields for the producer's 1991 crop under subsection (a), the producer's eligibility for a waiver or repayment of an advance deficiency payment on the crop under this Act shall be adjusted as provided in paragraph (2).

(2) AMOUNT.—The amount of production of the crop on which a producer otherwise would be eligible for waiver of repayment of advance deficiency payments under this Act shall be reduced by an amount of production equal to the difference between—

(A) the amount of production eligible for disaster payments under this Act using a substituted yield under this section; and

(B) the amount of production that would have been eligible for disaster payments using the farm program payment yield otherwise assigned to the producer under this Act.

(c) MULTIPERIL CROP INSURANCE NOT AVAILABLE.—A producer may use the crop insurance yield for the producer's 1990 crop of a commodity for purposes of substituting yields under subsection (a) if the producer demonstrates to the Secretary that, through no fault of the producer, multiperil crop insurance under the Federal Crop Insurance Act (7 U.S.C. 1501 et seq.) was not made available to the producer for the producer's 1991 crop of the commodity.

(d) DEFINITION OF ELIGIBLE PRODUCER.—For purposes of this section, the term "eligible producer" means a producer of the 1991 crop of wheat, feed grains, upland cotton, extra long staple cotton, or rice.

Subtitle B—Administrative Provisions

SEC. 221. TIMING AND MANNER OF ASSISTANCE.

(a) TIMING OF ASSISTANCE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—

(A) ASSISTANCE MADE AVAILABLE AS SOON AS PRACTICABLE.—Subject to subparagraph (B), the Secretary shall make full disaster assistance available under this title as soon as practicable after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(B) COMPLETED APPLICATION.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law or of this Act, no payment or benefit provided under this title shall be payable or due until such time as a completed application for a crop of a commodity therefor has been approved.

(2) DEADLINE FOR APPLICATION.—A person eligible to receive payments under subtitle A shall make application for the payments not later than March 31, 1992, or such later date as the Secretary, by regulation, may prescribe.

(b) MANNER.—The Secretary may make payments available under subtitle A in the form of cash, commodities, or commodity certificates, as determined by the Secretary.

SEC. 222. USE OF COMMODITY CREDIT CORPORATION.

(a) USE.—The Secretary shall use the funds, facilities, and authorities of the Commodity Credit Corporation in carrying out this title, as provided in section 224.

(b) EXISTING AUTHORITY.—The authority provided by this title shall be in addition to, and not in place of, any authority granted to the Secretary or the Commodity Credit Corporation under any other provision of law.

SEC. 223. EMERGENCY CROP LOSS ASSISTANCE FOR THE 1990 CROPS.

(a) FUNDING.—Notwithstanding sections 2270 and 2271 of the Food, Agriculture, Conservation, and Trade Act of 1990 (7 U.S.C. 1421 note), funds of the Commodity Credit Corporation, as provided in section 224, shall be available to carry out chapter 3 of title XXII of such Act (7 U.S.C. 1421 note).

(b) DUPLICATIVE BENEFITS.—A producer eligible for assistance under such chapter who is also eligible for assistance under titles I and II may elect to receive benefits under such chapter or under this Act, but may not receive benefits under both.

SEC. 224. EMERGENCY DESIGNATION OF OUTLAYS.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that in fiscal years 1990 and 1991 there have been excessive rains, often of unprecedented scope, in many sections of the United States, and serious drought conditions and other unusual weather conditions in many other sections of the United States that have caused major economic losses to producers of agricultural commodities.

(b) FUNDING.—The funds of the Commodity Credit Corporation shall be available subject to the limitations set forth in subparagraph (c) to carry out chapter 3 of title XIII of the Food, Agriculture, Conservation, and Trade Act of 1990 (7 U.S.C. 1421 note) and titles I and II of this Act.

(c) EMERGENCY DESIGNATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to paragraph (2), the funds provided for in this Act are designated as an emergency requirement as provided for in section 252(e) of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 (2 U.S.C. 902(e)).

(2) BUDGET REQUEST.—The funds provided for in this Act shall be made available only after submission to Congress of a formal budget request by the President that includes designation of the entire amount of the request as an emergency requirement as provided for in section 252(e) of such Act.

(d) All actions authorized by this Act which result in cost shall be subject to the limitations set forth in subparagraph (c).

SEC. 225. REGULATIONS.

The Secretary or the Commodity Credit Corporation, as appropriate, shall issue regulations to implement this title as soon as practicable after the date of enactment of this Act, without regard to the requirement for notice and public participation in rule-making prescribed in section 553 of title 5, United States Code, or in any directive of the Secretary.

Subtitle C—Sense of Congress

SEC. 231. PURPOSES OF DISASTER PAYMENTS.

It is the sense of Congress that disaster payments made to producers under subtitle A are intended to—

- (1) preserve each producer's livelihood and farming operation;
- (2) enable the producer to meet preexisting commitments and obligations;
- (3) protect the infrastructure of the United States agricultural production input, supply, marketing, and distribution systems; and
- (4) preserve the vitality and financial health of rural communities.

TITLE III—OTHER EMERGENCY PROVISIONS

SEC. 301. DISASTER ASSISTANCE FOR RURAL BUSINESS ENTERPRISES.

(a) LOAN GUARANTEES.—The Secretary shall guarantee loans made in rural areas—

- (1) to public, private, or cooperative organizations, to Indian tribes on Federal and State reservations or other federally recognized Indian tribal groups, or to any other business entities, to assist them in alleviating distress caused to the entities, directly or indirectly, by the damaging weather or related condition in 1991; and
- (2) to the entities that refinance or restructure debt as a result of losses incurred, directly or indirectly, because of the damaging weather or related condition in 1991.

(b) ELIGIBLE LOANS.—Loans that may be guaranteed under this section are loans made by any—

- (1) Federal or State chartered—
  - (A) bank;
  - (B) savings and loan association;
  - (C) cooperative lending agency; or
  - (D) insurance company; or
- (2) other legally organized lending agency.

(c) LENDING LIMITS.—

(1) INDIVIDUAL GUARANTEES.—No guarantee under this section may exceed 90 percent of the principal amount of the loan. Guarantees made on loans to any eligible borrower may not exceed $500,000.

(2) TOTAL AMOUNT OF GUARANTEES.—The total amount of loan guarantees that may be made under this section shall not exceed $200,000,000.

(d) USE OF THE RURAL DEVELOPMENT INSURANCE FUND.—The Secretary shall use the Rural Development Insurance Fund established under section 309A of the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act (7 U.S.C. 1929a) for the purposes of carrying out this section.

SEC. 302. SHIFTING OF CROP ACREAGE BASES.

Section 503 of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1463) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(1) SHIFTING OF BASES.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, in order to help alleviate economic distress caused by a natural disaster or other similar condition beyond the control of producers, the Secretary may provide for the temporary shifting of some or all of the crop acreage bases between farms owned or operated by the same producers, under such terms and conditions as are determined appropriate by the Secretary. Such a shift may be allowed only on a crop-year-by-crop-year basis.”

AGRICULTURE DISASTER ASSISTANCE ACT OF 1991

SUMMARY OF MAJOR PROVISIONS

Provides disaster assistance to eligible producers of all 1990 or 1991 crops (at the producer's option) prevented from planting or experiencing reduced yields due to damaging weather conditions.

For 1990 crop losses:

Producers who have had losses to their 1990 crops may elect to obtain benefits under the Emergency Crop Loss Assistance Provisions under the Food, Agriculture, Conservation and Trade Act of 1990, but may not obtain benefits for crop losses in both 1990 and 1991.

For 1991 crop losses:

Provides payments for producers of program crops as follows:

Program Participants:

Losses of up to 35 percent of normal production on maximum payment acres—retain advanced deficiency payment;

Losses of 36 to 75 percent of normal production on maximum payment acres—65 percent of target price; and Losses of more than 75 percent of normal production on maximum payment acres—percent of target price.

Non-participants:

Losses of 36 to 75 percent of normal production—65 percent of loan; and Losses of more than 75 percent of normal production—90 percent of loan.

Provides prevented planting and reduced yield benefits for crops planted or intended to be planted on flex acres (NFA and OFA) on same basis as non-participants or non-program crops, whichever is applicable.

Provides payments to producers of peanuts, sugar beets, sugar cane, and tobacco at a rate of 65 percent of price support level for losses in excess of 35 percent and 90 percent for losses in excess of 75 percent. Losses are measured by county average yield, payment yield or farm marketing quota as applicable.

Provides payments to producers of oilseeds and other non-program crops at a rate of 65 percent of the five-year average market price received by producers, excluding the high and low years, for losses in excess of 35 percent of the three-year average yield and 90 percent for losses in excess of 75 percent.

Provides payments to operators of commercial aquaculture ventures for financial losses as a result of damaging weather on the same basis as for other non-program crops.

Reauthorizes emergency livestock feed assistance program.

Authorizes emergency forage program for established pasture under which the Secretary may utilize cost-share agreement, limited to $3,500 per operator, for reseeding.

Authorizes emergency cost-share program to provide for repair of damaged levees used for commercial aquaculture.

Authorizes additional payments to producers of crops that suffer losses from the reduced quality of such crops due to damaging weather or related conditions.

Limits the total of disaster payments and crop insurance benefits to a level not to exceed 100 percent of the price used to calculate disaster benefits multiplied by the payment yield.

Requires producers who accept disaster payments for losses of production in excess of 75 percent to purchase crop insurance for 1992 unless it is determined to be an economic hardship.

Establishes a separate limitation of $100,000 per person for combined crop losses and livestock emergency losses provided livestock benefits may not exceed $50,000 in a calendar year.

Authorizes establishment of de minimis yields, for each crop eligible for reduced yield disaster payments, that shall be considered as having an actual yield of zero.

Authorizes payments for reduced yields to be calculated on basis of crop production by a producer on the farm if there are multiple producers on the same farm who collectively do not qualify.

Authorizes Secretary to make a reasonable adjustment to disaster payments to reflect the income generated by any replacement crop produced on the same acreage—provided the adjustment does not exceed 5 percent of the value of the replacement crop.

Authorizes Secretary to allow producers who purchased crop insurance to substitute the insurance yield for the farm program payment yield.

Authorizes Secretary to utilize CCC funds to carry out provisions of legislation and designates the outlays as an emergency requirement as provided in the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990.

Authorizes loan guarantees to rural businesses impacted directly or indirectly by adverse weather.

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, I rise to say that my staff and Senator COCHRAN'S staff have worked long and hard on this legislation that is being introduced. We now have 26 Senators sponsoring this bill upon introduction.

But the point I make is that in my State—and I speak only for my State—I believe that my farmers are in about as bad shape as they have ever been. Those who did not get wiped out in 1990 got wiped out in 1991.

Incidentally, under this bill, these farmers will have to choose between 1990 and 1991. Some of them suffered damages in both years. But the bill gives them the option. It will provide 65 percent of all the losses they sustained above 35 percent. So if a farmer had 100 acres of soybeans and he lost the whole 100 acres, he will be entitled to 65 percent of the loss on 65 acres.

Now, Mr. President, last year the Red River Valley in southwest Arkansas and in northeast Texas and southeast Oklahoma, northwest Louisiana, that whole four-State region had the most unbelievable flood in the history of my State, I believe. It was not just a loss of crops. Oftentimes an entire farm had 2 and 3 feet of sand on it when the waters receded, so that much of the land was lost permanently. That is the kind of damage that occurred. This year farmers have had to plant their crops two, sometimes three times. I have talked to the most successful farmers in my State who tell me they are hanging by their thumbs. If we do get some relief, they are going under.

Finally, Mr. President, I believe very strongly that we simply have to cut some spending or things that do not amount to a priority. For example, I am going to offer an amendment this morning on the superconducting super collider to cut it, maybe eliminate it.

And I am going to make a clinical case. I do not have a dog in the fight, but I can tell you that is a project—no matter how meritorious it is—which is not urgent just like a lot of other things around here which are not urgent.

We sent disaster relief to Bangladesh because of cyclones; we sent disaster relief to Ethiopia because of famine; to Sudan because of famine; to Angola; we sent aid to Kuwait to help them put out their oil well fires. We send money on an emergency basis to every nation on Earth almost.

We have farmers that are the most endangered species in America. They are people. They are human beings. And they are suffering and they are hurting. It has gotten to where nobody goes into farming except an occasional son of a farmer.

Mr. President, the cost of this is $1 billion. Two or three people who were asked to cosponsor said they did not know about the cost. I do not know about the cost either. It is staggering. But I can tell you this: people vote for the most unbelievable things around here that cost billions, and when it comes to helping our own and doing something for our own people oftentimes we cannot find it in our hearts to do it.

So I am not only the chief coauthor and the cosponsor of this bill, but I strongly urge all of my colleagues to cosponsor this, and help us come up with the funds to not only pass the bill but to fund it.

Mr. SEYMOUR. Mr. President, I am proud to join Senator COCHRAN and Senator BUMPERS as an original cosponsor of this important legislation to provide relief to America's farm communities devastated by natural disasters. As many Senators know, there have been substantial natural disasters throughout the United States during 1990, and in 1991. Producers in the Southeast, Southwest, Midwest, as well as in California have suffered significant crop loss.

In California, a catastrophic freeze struck in December 1990, destroying much of California's navel and valencia orange crop, as well as many other crops. The freeze damage further compounded losses suffered within the agricultural sector by the drought, which is now in its fifth year. While USDA and various agencies within the administration have attempted to develop regulatory fixes to these disasters, much more needs to be done. At this point, I am convinced that disaster assistance is the only solution to assist rural communities that are in desperate need of assistance.

Mr. President, in many rural communities throughout California, as well as across the Nation, agriculture is the economic industry which holds these communities together. For people in these communities, agriculture is more than fresh produce in a grocery store. The orange crop, the avocado crop, strawberries, these crops provide a way of life, and ultimately, livelihood.

From local business to school lunch programs, the fiscal consequences of this freeze has reached all corners of California.

In terms of crop damage, this cold wave was the most devastating on record in California. From December 19 to January 3, numerous all time low temperatures were broken, breaking records set as far back as 1932. Conservative estimates of crop damage have been as high as $1 billion. Some of the hardest hit agricultural communities were in the counties of Tulare, Fresno, Ventura, and Kern. The freeze coupled with the last 5 years of drought has been devastating to California's rural communities.

In Tulare County, crop damage has been estimated to be in excess of $341 million, while unemployment reached upward of 23 percent in March 1991. Tulare County, located in the heart of California's Central Valley, lost 90 percent of its citrus crops to the freeze, and additionally incurred substantial losses of avocados, olives, pistachios, nursery stock, and broccoli crops. In the small town of Lindsay, in Tulare County, unemployment due to the freeze reached 50 percent. In Fresno County, citrus producers had production losses totaling over 227,000 tons, resulting in a crop loss of over $70 million.

This winter's freeze is the third worst disaster in the history of California, third only to the 1906 San Francisco earthquake and the 1989 Loma Prieta earthquake. For farmers, farmworkers, and farm families, the devastation they suffered is no less catastrophic than a tornado or hurricane.

Though the cold weather has given way to the warm months of summer, the crippling effects of the freeze are still being felt today. Orange groves that would normally be bustling with farmworkers harvesting ripe Valencia oranges, now stand quiet. Once green, healthy trees stand brown and withered, their fruit decaying on the ground below. Packing plants normally working around the clock have been turned into distribution centers, where proud farmworkers stand in line to receive food supplies to feed their families.

Small business continue to suffer as unemployment has slowed even necessary consumer spending.

We need disaster assistance so that farmers will be able to get back to farming, and farmworkers will be able to go back to work. This is why I am cosponsoring a disaster relief bill that will provide the essential assistance to farmers whose crops were severely devastated in 1990 and 1991 by natural disaster. I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

By Mr. PRESSLER:

S. 1442. A bill relating to the rights of consumers in connection with telephone advertising; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

TELEPHONE ADVERTISING CONSUMER RIGHTS ACT

Mr. PRESSLER. Mr. President, today I am introducing the Telephone Advertising Consumer Rights Act, a bill that responds to the national outcry over the explosion of unsolicited telephone advertising. I am pleased to join this effort which was begun by Representative EDWARD J. MARKEY, the chairman of the House Telecommunications and Finance Subcommittee, who has shown real vision and leadership in this area.

The telemarketing industry has witnessed unprecedented success over the past 10 years. In fact, telemarketing sales skyrocketed to over $435 million in 1990. This is a fourfold increase since 1984. This marketing success has created an industry in which over 300,000 telemarketing solicitors call more than 18 million Americans every day. Many consumers and business owners, however, complain that these calls are not only an annoyance, but also can pose dangerous consequences.

The cost and the interference of unsolicited advertising calls has sparked the introduction of over 1,000 bills in State legislatures around the country seeking to limit this abuse. I am proud to say that my home State of South Dakota is at the forefront of this effort and has just passed one of the most comprehensive pieces of legislation dealing with telemarketing abuse. Congress needs to act now to provide uniform ground rules to protect consumers while ensuring that the telemarketing industry continues to be a vigorously active player in the U.S. economy.

The Telephone Advertising Consumer Rights Act directs the FCC to prescribe regulations to protect the privacy rights of consumers from the intrusion of unsolicited telephone marketing calls. One such proposal the FCC would consider, if this bill becomes law, is the use of a telephone electronic data base that would allow consumers to have their phone numbers protected from unsolicited advertising. Another proposal the FCC would examine is the placement of all telemarketers on a single exchange, thus allowing consumers to block calls from that exchange. This bill would not end unsolicited calls, but it would allow consumers to choose how their phone is used and requires vendors to respect that consumer decision.

Due to advances in auto-dialer technology, machines can be programmed to deliver a prerecorded message to thousands of sequential phone numbers. This results in calls to hospitals, emergency care providers, unlisted numbers, and paging and cellular equipment. There are many examples of auto-dial machines hitting hospital switchboards and sequentially delivering a recorded message to all phone lines. In some instances, the calling machine does not release the called party's line until the recorded message has ended. This renders the called party's phone inoperable. In an emergency situation, this can create a real hazard.

To remedy this situation, my bill requires auto-dialer machines to release the phone line after the called party hangs up. In addition, it requires all prerecorded messages to clearly identify the name, phone number, or address of the person or business initiating the call. This bill also allows hospitals, police stations, fire stations, and owners of paging and cellular equipment to eliminate all unsolicited calls.

The growth of facsimile machines in the workplace has brought another form of unsolicited advertising: the junk fax. Unsolicited facsimile advertising ties up fax machines and uses the called party's fax paper. This costs the recipient both time and money. My bill requires that auto-dial fax machines clearly mark on all transmissions the date and time of transmission, the identity of the sender, and the telephone number of the sending machine.

My legislation provides uniform Federal guidelines to ensure that the telemarketing industry will continue to experience unprecedented growth. Responsible telemarketers welcome a single set of clear rules. This bill will not preempt any State law addressing this topic. Rather, it would assist States in their attempts to regulate intrastate telemarketing abuse.

I urge my colleagues to support and cosponsor this legislation. It can ensure a robust telemarketing industry while giving consumers the ability to choose how their telephones are used.

By Mr. SIMON:

S. 1444. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to allow a deduction for 25 percent of the purchase price of new electric-powered automobiles; to the Committee on Finance.

DEDUCTION OF PERCENTAGE OF PURCHASE PRICE OF NEW ELECTRIC AUTOMOBILES

Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, today I am introducing a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to allow a deduction of 25 percent of the purchase price of new electric-powered automobiles.

The widespread use of electric vehicles [EV's] would go a long way toward resolving some of our Nation's environmental and energy problems.

Ninety-six cities and urban areas in the United States have air pollution levels that exceed national standards for ozone. While, as we all know, gasoline-fueled vehicles produce emissions of various pollutants, including volatile organic compounds, carbon monoxide and nitrogen oxide, electric vehicles produce no tailpipe emissions whatsoever, and they generate only minute emissions resulting from the operation of the vehicle. When compared to gasoline-powered vehicles, electric vehicles show a 97-percent reduction of major pollutant emissions. Electric vehicles would be the single most effective means of reducing transportation sector emissions in urban areas. The benefits of the use of EV's to air pollution control would be enormous.

The use of electric vehicles would also bring about greater energy efficiency. Sixty-three percent of the total U.S. oil consumption is used in the transportation sector. This is true even though significant advancements have been made in vehicle fuel efficiency in the last 15 years. Use of petroleum in the United States was approximately the same in 1989 as it was in 1974 because there are more vehicles on the road traveling more miles annually. But it has been estimated that a 1-percent replacement of gasoline-powered vehicles by electric-powered vehicles would reduce oil consumption by 60,000 barrels a day.

We would cut down on the use of imported oil by the use of electric vehicles, and we must cut down on foreign oil. Nearly one-half of the oil used in the United States today is imported, and this has a significant adverse impact on the U.S. balance of trade.

While their extensive use will not be the total solution to our air pollution problems, there is no doubt about the great benefit to society of converting to electric vehicles. We cannot do this right away, Mr. President. But we can do it in the near future. U.S. automakers are interested in the development of electric vehicle batteries and the major domestic automobile manufacturers have all announced plans to produce electric vehicles in the months ahead. This year General Motors unveiled an electric sports car, the Impact. And they have designated a facility in East Lansing, MI, as a potential site for future production of electric vehicles.

Although they will become less expensive over time, initially, electric vehicles will be costly. The deduction my bill provides would be an incentive to taxpayers to purchase electric-powered vehicles—an incentive that will help the development of electric vehicles succeed in its crucial first step. I urge my colleagues to support this measure.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that an article from the Washington Post on this subject, titled "Gasoline-Fueled Cars May Be Running Out of Time," be printed in full in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Post, July 6, 1991]
GASOLINE-FUELED CARS MAY BE RUNNING OUT OF TIME

(By Thomas W. Lippman)

Within a few years, millions, of Americans will be driving cars, light trucks and buses that do not run on gasoline.

Federal and state air quality laws, and in particular rigorous new antipollution rules adopted by California and Texas, are compelling manufacturers and purchasers of vehicles to switch to natural gas, propane, alcohol fuels and electricity.

Major corporations, including the "Big Three" U.S. auto makers and giant utilities such as Southern California Edison, are pouring money into research to develop and test the vehicles. Each week brings some new announcement: Phillips Petroleum has installed a natural-gas pump at a filling station in Oklahoma; Nissan has developed a quick-recharge battery; a Sunoco station in the District is selling methanol; Chrysler Corp. is making an electric version of its popular minivan.

Nobody knows for certain how many alternative-fuel vehicles will be on the road a decade from now, but the California and Texas rules alone ensure that the number will be in the millions. The American Gas Association has projected a figure as high as 10 million. The U.S. car and truck fleet now totals 172 million vehicles.

The picture will become clearer in the next year or two as additional states formulate plans for compliance with the 1990 Clean Air Act, new alternative-fuel measures work their way through Congress and test results on new engines and batteries become available.

Gasoline—cheap, ubiquitous and technologically familiar—will remain the fuel that powers most privately owned vehicles for many years to come, according to industry experts and independent analysts. But with the switch to alternative sources by vehicles such as taxis and delivery vans could come the public acceptance that would make alternative fuels adaptable to the family car as well.

After years in which the U.S. demand for alternative-fuel vehicles was so light that manufacturers and energy companies could ignore it, companies are racing to secure a share of what suddenly looms as a booming market. Du Pont Co.'s Conoco division, for example, has set up a separate unit to promote propane as an alternative to the natural gas that otherwise might corner the market in Texas and other states.

"It's a marketing horse race," said Robert E. Meyers, president of the LP Gas Clean Fuels Coalition, a propane advocacy group in Irvine, Calif.

The 1990 amendments to the Clean Air Act require many fleets that are fueled at a central site, such as school buses and Federal Express vans, to be converted to cleaner-burning fuels beginning in 1993. President Bush's proposed national energy strategy and a wide-ranging energy bill under consideration in the Senate would greatly expand the number of fleets covered by this requirement and put it into effect sooner.

Bush also has issued an executive order requiring that federal fleets acquire "the maximum number practicable" of non-gasoline vehicles. The Energy Department and the General Services Administration are scheduled to take delivery next March of 50 vans built by Chrysler that will be powered by compressed natural gas, a fuel now available commercially at an Amoco station on Capitol Hill.

Industry officials and regulators expect that mandatory sales to fleets will induce car makers to produce more vehicles and fuel suppliers to provide more fueling sites. The "chicken and egg problem" has long inhibited the development of alternative-fuel vehicles; consumers will not buy them because the fuel is not available, and auto manufacturers will not make them because consumers won't buy them. As more alternative-fuel cars are made, more sources of the fuel become available and more drivers become familiar with the vehicles, costs should decline and consumer demand is expected to rise.

"Car companies know a lot about how to build cars that run on alternative fuels," said Thomas H. Hanna, president of the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association. "The question is whether people want to buy them."

California and Texas have ensured that some people will buy them whether they want to or not.

A new Texas law requires most school districts, public transit authorities and state agencies to buy only vehicles powered by natural gas or other cleaner burning alternative fuels beginning this year, and to convert at least half their vehicles by 1996.

California, the most populous state, has gone much further. Regulations adopted by the Air Resources Board require progressive reductions in hydrocarbon emissions beginning in 1994. By 2003, all cars must emit 85 percent less hydrocarbons than currently permitted, 50 percent less carbon monoxide and 75 percent less nitrogen oxide. State officials said the regulations do not specify which technology or fuel auto makers must adopt to meet the standards, but they said that cars fueled by methanol, natural gas and propane will be a large part of the mix.

The state recently certified a natural gas school bus engine built by a Massachusetts firm, Tecogen Inc., as acceptable under the new antipollution standards. The state financed development of the engine as part of a $100 million program to replace 463 school buses built before 1977 with new, cleaner burning models.

In addition, 2 percent of the 2 million vehicles sold in California each year must be "emission free" beginning in 1998. By 2003, the figure will rise to 10 percent.

"Emission free" means "powered by electricity," said Air Resources Board spokesman Jerry Martin.

Because the California market is so large that manufacturers cannot abandon it, these rules have spurred auto and fuel industries into a burst of research and experimentation. In April, for example, Mobil Corp. opened the first for 10 planned methanol filling stations in Pasadena. Chrysler, Ford and General Motors have begun producing cars that can run on a mixture of 15 percent gasoline and 85 percent methanol, or wood alcohol.

As Hanna said, there is essentially nothing new about making cars and light trucks that run on methanol, compressed natural gas or propane.

The Energy Department and other federal agencies here have methanol powered cars in their fleets that are indistinguishable in appearance and performance from conventional autos. School buses in Hudson, Ohio, run on natural gas. The truck fleet of the Los Angeles Times runs on propane. Overall, more than 30,000 natural gas vehicles and more than 400,000 propane-powered cars and trucks are in use in the United States.

The vast majority are owned by governments and corporations, not individual motorists. Almost any new car can run on gasoline, a mixture of gasoline and ethanol, but vehicles powered by natural gas, propane and methanol are generally not available in retail showrooms. Standard cars can be converted to "dual fuel" operation—capable of running on gasoline and either natural gas or propane—at a cost of $1,000 or more.

The real technological innovation is in electricity, long spurned as a power source for motor vehicles because electric cars require large banks of heavy, expensive batteries that run down in an hour or so of use. Facing a requirement to produce electric cars that California motorists will buy, the electric utility industry and all major auto makers are seeking ways to increase the cars' range and cut the batteries' size and weight.

Industry officials say electric vehicles probably will never replace the family station wagon, but should be adequate to serve commuters and other motorists who drive short distances. Daniel Sperling, an alternative-fuel expert at the University of California-Davis, has predicted that most households will have several vehicles, "each serving a different specialized need. For instance, commuter cars could be electric, while vehicles used on longer drives could run on natural gas."

"An electric vehicle won't take you as far as a tank of gas, but who drives 350 miles a day anyway?" said Paul Brown, executive director of the Electric Vehicle Association of the Americas, an industry-sponsored group.

The three major U.S. auto makers have formed an Advanced Battery Consortium that is working with Southern California Edison, the utility-funded Electric Power Research Institute, and the Energy Department on a $10 million battery research program. Under this program, Chrysler built four prototypes of an electric minivan.

"They do perform," said Lawrence O'Connell, transportation program manager of the Electric Power Research Institute. "The next step is to undertake production engineering, which essentially means to keep vehicle performance as good as it is in the prototypes, while cutting weight and cost. The next step [after that] would be federal safety certification."

Separately, General Motors Corp. has announced plans to build an electric-powered sports car, the Impact. GM already is selling an electric-powered van known as the G-Van with a 60-mile range. Ford is testing an electric version of its European Escort model, Nissan Motor Co. of Japan reported in May that it had found a way to cut battery recharging time from several hours to 12 minutes.

A bill introduced by Rep. George E. Brown Jr. (D-Calif.) to provide $100 million in federal aid over 10 years to promote the use of electric vehicles is considered to have a good chance of passage this year, congressional aides said. But aside from electricity, which is required in California, it is not clear which alternative fuel will gain the widest use as manufacturers, consumers and regulators evaluate test results.

Each of the major contenders—natural gas, methanol, propane and ethanol, or grain alcohol—has strong supporters on Capitol Hill and among state legislators, but each has drawbacks as a fuel. None provides as much energy as the equivalent amount of gasoline, and all are more difficult to store and transport. Methanol is poisonous and corrosive, propane is potentially explosive, ethanol is difficult to transport or store because it absorbs water, and natural gas requires large onboard storage tanks that use up trunk space.

"None of the alternative-fuel options emerges as clearly superior to all the others," Sperling said.

By Mr. LAUTENBERG (for himself, Mr. DURENBERGER, and Mr. LIEBERMAN):

S. 1445. A bill to amend the Safe Drinking Water Act to reduce human exposure to lead in drinking water; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

LEAD IN DRINKING WATER REDUCTION ACT

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I am joined by Senator DURENBERGER and Senator LIEBERMAN in introducing legislation, which will be the Senate companion on drinking water to the bill Congressman WAXMAN is introducing today in the House. Our bill, the Lead in Drinking Water Reduction Act, will significantly reduce the health threats of lead in our Nation's drinking water.

The threat is serious. Lead in drinking water contributes 10 to 20 percent of total lead exposure in young children.

Lead is highly toxic. The Centers for Disease Control tells us that lead is our No. 1 preventable pediatric health problem. Lead can interfere with the formation of red blood cells. It can reduce birth weight and cause premature birth. It can impair physical and mental development in babies and children.

In adults, lead can increase blood pressure and interfere with hearing. At high levels of exposure, lead can cause anemia, kidney damage, and mental retardation.

The 1986 amendments to the Safe Drinking Water Act told EPA to develop a drinking water standard for lead. On May 7, 1991, EPA gave us a regulation that falls far short of protecting the public health. It falls short by making the public wait too long—over 20 years in some cases—for water systems to reduce lead in drinking water.

It falls short by creating loopholes that would let water systems ignore the lead problems of 10 percent of their households.

It falls short by allowing too much lead for too long. It is ironic that recent tests showed high lead levels in the Vice President's house.

It is time for the administration to wake up and realize that the lead problem goes well beyond the pristine walls of the Vice President's mansion.

On May 17, 1991, the Subcommittee on Superfund, Ocean and Water Protection, which I chair held a hearing on EPA's implementation of the Safe Drinking Water Act and the mandate to protect the public from the threats of lead. That hearing underscored the many problems with EPA's approach and the need for congressional action.

For this reason, we are introducing this legislation to assure that we protect the public from lead in drinking water.

The legislation will set a tough limit for regulating lead in our water. It is important to point out, however, that the bill's lead contamination limit for tapwater is not a maximum contaminant level [MCL]. In drafting the legislation, we were aware of significant concerns raised by many water systems of potential liability for violations of a tapwater MCL, even if they did everything they could to comply but could not achieve that MCL. The tapwater limit provision, however, has been drafted so that not meeting it does not constitute a violation of the national primary drinking water regulations for lead. Instead, a violation would occur if a water system failed to comply with the actual requirements in the bill, such as corrosion control, public education, and service line replacement. So the bill forces water systems to take aggressive steps to reduce lead, but does so in a way that will not penalize them for results over which they have no control.

And the bill will force the Nation's drinking water systems promptly to get lead out of our drinking water. EPA's regulation gives water companies exceeding the Agency's action level 7 years to install corrosion control and 15 more years to replace lead lines. My bill would require corrosion control in 2 years and lead line replacement in 5 years after that, for an accelerated timeframe of 7 years. Communities with especially large numbers of lead lines will be able to seek extensions, however. A system with over 50,000 lines to be replaced would get a 3-year extension; one exceeding 100,000 lines would get a 5-year extension; one exceeding 300,000 lines would get a 10-year extension; and one exceeding 450,000 lines would get a 13-year extension.

Mr. President, the bill also addresses issues not covered by EPA's regulation, including lead in school drinking water. It strengthens existing programs to reduce lead in school drinking water, as well as the programs designed to eliminate the use of lead components in plumbing.

Mr. President, this legislation will allow the Nation to make major strides in the battle to get the lead out of the Nation's water supply. I look forward to working with Senator DURENBERGER, Senator LIEBERMAN, and my other colleagues in moving this legislation through the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee, and on to passage in the Senate.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the full text of the bill be printed in the RECORD following my statement.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1445

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Lead in Drinking Water Reduction Act of 1991".

SEC. 2. LEAD CONTAMINATION IN DRINKING WATER.

(a) NATIONAL PUBLIC DRINKING WATER REGULATIONS FOR LEAD.—Title XIV of the Public Health Service Act (Safe Drinking Water Act; 42 U.S.C. 300f and following) is amended by inserting "Subpart 1—In General" immediately before the section heading for section 1411 and by adding the following at the end thereof:

"SUBPART 2—SPECIAL PROVISIONS RELATING TO NATIONAL PRIMARY DRINKING WATER REGULATIONS FOR LEAD

"Subpart 2—Special Provisions Relating to National Primary Drinking Water Regulations for Lead

"SEC. 1418. DEFINITIONS.

"For purposes of this subpart—

"(1) The term 'corrosion inhibitor' means a substance capable of reducing the corrosivity of water toward metal plumbing materials, especially lead, by forming a protective film on the interior surface of those materials.

"(2) The term 'effective corrosion inhibitor residual' means a concentration sufficient to form a passivating film on the interior walls of a pipe.

"(3) The term 'first draw sample' means a one-liter sample of tap water, collected in accordance with section 1418G(b)(2), that has been standing in plumbing pipes at least 6 hours and is collected without flushing the tap.

"(4) The term 'large water system' means a water system that serves more than 50,000 persons.

"(5) The term 'lead service line' means a service line made of lead which connects the water main to the building inlet and any lead pigtail, gooseneck, or other fitting which is connected to such lead line.

"(6) The term 'medium-size water system' means a water system that serves greater than 3,300 and less than or equal to 50,000 persons.

"(7) The term 'optimal corrosion control treatment' means the corrosion control treatment that minimizes the lead concentrations at users' taps while insuring that the treatment does not cause (A) the water system to violate any national primary drinking water regulations or (B) significant adverse impacts on the environment, including treatment works and the water receiving the effluent of treatment works.

"(8) The term 'service line sample means a one-liter sample of water, collected in accordance with section 1418G(b)(3) that has been standing for at least 6 hours in a service line.

"(9) The term 'single family structure' means a building constructed as a single-family residence that is currently used as either a residence or a place of business.

"(10) The term 'small water system' means a water system that serves 3,300 persons or fewer.

"SEC. 1418A. GENERAL REQUIREMENTS.

"(a) APPLICABILITY AND EFFECTIVE DATES.—(1) The requirements set forth in this subpart constitute the national primary drinking water regulation for lead for purposes of this part. Unless otherwise indicated, each of the provisions of this subpart applies to community water systems and noncommunity water systems (hereinafter in this subpart referred to as 'water systems' or 'systems').

"(2) Except as otherwise expressly provided in this subpart, the requirements set forth in this subpart shall take effect 30 days after the enactment of this subpart.

"(b) LEAD CONTAMINATION LIMIT FOR TAP WATER.—The Congress hereby establishing a limit for lead in tap water (hereinafter in this subpart referred to as the 'tap water lead limit'). The tapwater lead limit is exceeded if the concentration of lead in any tap water sample collected during any monitoring conducted in accordance with section 1418G is greater than 10 parts per billion (ppb).

"(c) MAXIMUM CONTAMINANT LEVEL GOAL.—The maximum contaminant level goal (in mg/L) for lead in drinking water is zero.

"(d) VIOLATION OF NATIONAL PRIMARY DRINKING WATER REGULATIONS.—Failure to comply with the applicable requirements of this subpart, including requirements established by the State pursuant to this subpart, shall constitute a violation of the national primary drinking water regulations for lead.

"(e) RELATIONSHIP TO PRIOR REGULATIONS.—

"(1) EPA LEAD REGULATIONS REPLACED.—The requirements set forth in this subpart shall apply in lieu of the requirements with regard to lead in drinking water contained in regulations of the Administrator promulgated on May 6, 1991, except as otherwise provided in the first sentence of section 1418J (relating to analytical methods). After the enactment of this section, the Administrator may promulgate, under this subpart and under subpart 1, regulations with regard to lead in drinking water but only to the extent that such regulations are more protective of human health than any corresponding requirements of this subpart.

"(2) PRIOR MCL FOR LEAD.—The maximum contaminant level for lead in effect for lead before May 6, 1991, shall be in effect immediately upon enactment of this subpart.

"SEC. 1418B. APPLICABILITY OF CORROSION CONTROL TREATMENT STEPS TO SMALL, MEDIUM-SIZE AND LARGE WATER SYSTEMS.

"(a) COMPLETION OF CORROSION CONTROL TREATMENT.—Systems shall complete the applicable corrosion control treatment requirements described in section 1418C by the deadlines established in this section.

"(1) A large system (serving greater than 50,000 persons) shall complete the corrosion control treatment steps specified in subsection (d) of this section, unless it is deemed to have optimized corrosion control under paragraphs (2) or (3) of subsection (b).

"(2) A small system (serving greater than or equal to 3,300 persons) and a medium-sized system (serving greater than 3,300 persons and less than or equal to 50,000 persons) shall complete the corrosion control treatment steps specified in subsection (e) of this section, unless it is deemed to have optimized corrosion control under paragraphs (1), (2) or (3) of subsection (b).

"(b) SYSTEMS DEEMED TO HAVE OPTIMIZED CORROSION CONTROL.—A system is deemed to have optimized corrosion control and is not required to complete the applicable corrosion control treatment steps identified in this section if the system satisfies 1 of the following criteria:

"(1) A small or medium-sized water system is deemed to have optimized corrosion control if the system meets the tap water lead limit lead during each of 2 consecutive 6-month monitoring periods conducted in accordance with section 1418G.

"(2) Any water system may be deemed by the State, after notice and opportunity for comment, to have optimized corrosion control treatment if the system demonstrates to the satisfaction of the State that it has conducted activities equivalent to the corrosion control steps applicable to such system under this section. If the State makes this determination, it shall provide the system with written notice explaining the basis for its decision and shall specify the water quality control parameters representing optimal corrosion control in accordance with section 1418C. A system shall provide the State with the following information in order to support a determination under this paragraph—

"(A) the results of all test samples collected for each of the water quality parameters in section 1418C(c)(3);

"(B) a report explaining the test methods used by the water system to evaluate the corrosion control treatments listed in section 1418C(c)(1), the results of all tests conducted, and the basis for the system's selection of optimal corrosion control treatment;

"(C) a report explaining how corrosion control has been installed and how it is being maintained to insure minimal lead and copper concentrations at consumers' taps; and

"(D) the results of tap water samples collected in accordance with section 1418G at least once every 6 months for 1 year after corrosion control has been installed.

"(3) Any water system is deemed to have optimized corrosion control if it submits results of tap water monitoring conducted in accordance with section 1418G and source water monitoring conducted in accordance with section 1418I that demonstrates for 2 consecutive 6-month monitoring periods that the difference between the highest tap water lead concentration and the highest source water lead concentration is not detectable.

"(c) CESSATION OF CORROSION CONTROL.—Any small or medium-sized water system that is required to complete the corrosion control steps due to its exceedance of the tap water lead limit may cease completing the treatment steps whenever the system meets such tap water lead limit during each of 2 consecutive monitoring periods conducted pursuant to section 1418G and submits the results to the State. If any such water system thereafter exceeds the tap water lead limit during any monitoring period, the system (or the State, as the case may be) shall recommence completion of the applicable treatment steps, beginning with the first treatment step which was not previously completed in its entirety. The State may require a system to repeat treatment steps previously completed by the system where the State determines that this is necessary to implement properly the treatment requirements of this section. The State shall notify the system in writing of such a determination and explain the basis for its decision.

"(d) TREATMENT STEPS AND DEADLINES FOR LARGE SYSTEMS.—Except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3) of subsection (b) of this section, large systems shall complete the following corrosion control treatment steps by the indicated dates.

"(1) STEP 1: The system shall conduct initial monitoring (sections 1418G(d)(1) and 1418H(b)) within 6 months after enactment of this subpart.

"(2) STEP 2: The system shall complete corrosion control studies (section 1418C(c)) within 12 months after enactment of this subpart.

"(3) STEP 3: The State shall designate optimal corrosion control treatment (section 1418C(d)) within 18 months after enactment of this subpart.

"(4) STEP 4: The system shall install optimal corrosion control treatment (section 1418C(e)) within 24 months after enactment of this subpart.

"(5) STEP 5: The system shall complete follow-up sampling (section 1418H(c)) within 30 months after enactment of this subpart.

"(6) STEP 6: The State shall review installation of treatment and designate optimal water quality control parameters (section 1418C(f)) within 36 months after enactment of this subpart.

"(7) STEP 7: The system shall operate in compliance with the State specified optimal water quality control parameters (section 1418C(g)) and continue to conduct tap sampling (section 1418H(d)).

"(e) TREATMENT STEPS AND DEADLINES FOR SMALL AND MEDIUM-SIZE SYSTEMS.—Except as provided in subsection (b) of this section, small and medium-size systems shall complete the following corrosion control treatment steps (described in the referenced portions of sections 1418C, 1418G, and 1418H) by the indicated time periods.

"(1) STEP 1: The system shall conduct initial tap sampling (section 1418G(d)(1)) within 6 months after enactment of this subpart. A system exceeding the tap water lead limit shall recommence optimal corrosion control treatment (section 1418C(a)) within 6 months after it exceeds the tap water lead limit.

"(2) STEP 2: Within 12 months after a system exceeds tap water lead limit the State may require the system to perform corrosion control studies (section 1418C(b)). If the State does not require the system to perform such studies, the State shall specify optimal corrosion control treatment (section 1418C(d)) within 12 months after such system exceeds the tap water lead limit.

"(3) STEP 3: If the State requires a system to perform corrosion control studies under step 2, the system shall complete the studies (section 1418C(c)) within 12 months after the State requires that such studies be conducted.

"(4) STEP 4: If the system has performed corrosion control studies under step 2, the State shall designate optimal corrosion control treatment (section 1418C(d)) within 6 months after completion of step 3.

"(5) STEP 5: The system shall install optimal corrosion control treatment (section 1418C(e)) within 12 months after the State designates such treatment.

"(6) STEP 6: The system shall complete follow-up sampling (section 1418H(c)) within 24 months after the State designates optimal corrosion control treatment.

"(7) STEP 7: The State shall review the system's installation with the State designated optimal water quality control parameters (section 1418C(f)) within 6 months after completion of step 6.

"(8) STEP 8: The system shall operate in compliance with the State designated optimal water quality control parameters (section 1418C(g)) and continue to conduct tap sampling (section 1418H(d)).

"SEC. 1418C. DESCRIPTION OF CORROSION CONTROL TREATMENT REQUIREMENTS.

"Each system shall complete the corrosion control treatment requirements described below which are applicable to such system under section 1418B.

"(a) SYSTEM RECOMMENDATION REGARDING CORROSION CONTROL TREATMENT.—Based upon the results of lead tap monitoring and water quality parameter monitoring, small and medium-size water systems exceeding the tap water lead limit shall recommend installation of 1 or more of the corrosion control treatments listed in subsection (c)(1) of this section which the system believes constitutes optimal corrosion control for that system. The State may require the system to conduct additional water quality parameter monitoring in accordance with section 1418H(b) to assist the State in reviewing the system's recommendation.

"(b) STATE DECISION TO REQUIRE STUDIES OF CORROSION CONTROL TREATMENT (APPLICABLE TO SMALL AND MEDIUM-SIZE SYSTEMS).—The State may require any small or medium-size system that exceeds the tap water lead limit to perform corrosion control studies under subsection (c) of this section to identify optimal corrosion control treatment for the system.

"(c) PERFORMANCE OF CORROSION CONTROL STUDIES.—

"(1) Any public water system performing corrosion control studies shall evaluate the effectiveness of each of the following treatments, and, if appropriate, combinations of the following treatments to identify the optimal corrosion control treatment for that system—

“(A) alkalinity and pH adjustment;

“(B) calcium hardness adjustment; and

“(C) the addition of a phosphate or silicate based corrosion inhibitor at a concentration sufficient to maintain an effective residual concentration in all test tap samples.

"(2) The water system shall evaluate each of the corrosion control treatments using either pipe rig/loop tests, metal coupon tests, partial-system tests, or analyses based on documented analogous treatments with other systems of similar size, water chemistry, and distribution system configuration.

"(3) The water system shall measure the following water quality parameters in any tests conducted under this paragraph before and after evaluating the corrosion control treatments listed above—

“(A) lead;

“(B) copper;

“(C) pH;

“(D) alkalinity;

“(E) calcium;

“(F) conductivity;

“(G) orthophosphate (when an inhibitor containing a phosphate compound is used);

“(H) silicate (when an inhibitor containing a silicate compound is used); and “(I) water temperature.

"(4) The water system shall identify all chemical or physical constraints that limit or prohibit the use of a particular corrosion control treatment and document such constraints with at least 1 of the following:

"(A) data and documentation showing that a particular corrosion control treatment has adversely affected other water treatment processes when used by another water system with comparable water quality characteristics; and/or

"(B) data and documentation demonstrating that the water system has previously attempted to evaluate a particular corrosion control treatment and has found that the treatment is ineffective or adversely affects other water quality treatment processes.

"(5) The water system shall evaluate the effect of the chemicals used for corrosion control treatment on other water quality treatment processes.

"(6) On the basis of an analysis of the data generated during each evaluation, the water system shall recommend to the State in writing the treatment option that the corrosion control studies indicate constitutes optimal corrosion control treatment for that system. The water system shall provide a rationale for its recommendation along with all supporting documentation specified in subsections (c)(1) through (5) of this section.

"(d) STATE DESIGNATION OF OPTIMAL CORROSION CONTROL TREATMENT.—(1) Based upon consideration of available information including, where applicable, studies performed under subsection (c) of this section and a system's recommended treatment alternative, the State shall, after notice and opportunity for comment, either approve the corrosion control treatment option recommended by the system, or designate alternative corrosion control treatment(s) from among those listed in subsection (c)(1) of this section. When designating optimal treatment the State shall consider the effects that additional corrosion control treatment will have on water quality parameters and on other water quality treatment processes.

"(2) The State shall notify the system of its decision on optimal corrosion control treatment in writing and explain the basis for this determination. If the State requests additional information to aid its review, the water system shall provide the information.

"(e) INSTALLATION OF OPTIMAL CORROSION CONTROL.—Each system shall properly install and operate throughout its distribution system the optimal corrosion control treatment designated by the State under subsection (d) of this section.

"(f) STATE REVIEW OF TREATMENT AND SPECIFICATION OF OPTIMAL WATER QUALITY CONTROL PARAMETERS.—The State shall evaluate the results of all lead tap samples and water quality parameter samples submitted by the water system and determine whether the system has properly installed and operated the optimal corrosion control treatment designated by the State in subsection (d) of this section. Upon reviewing the results of tap water and water quality parameter monitoring by the system, both before and after the system installs optimal corrosion control treatment, the State shall, after notice and opportunity for comment, designate—

"(1) a minimum value or a range of values for pH measured at each entry point to the distribution system;

"(2) a minimum pH value, measured in all tap samples. Such value shall be equal to or greater than 7.0, unless the State determines that meeting a pH level of 7.0 is not technologically feasible or is not necessary for the system to optimize corrosion control;

"(3) if a corrosion inhibitor is used, a minimum concentration or a range of concentrations for the inhibitor, measured at each entry point to the distribution system and in all tap samples, that the State determines is necessary to form a passivating film on the interior walls of the pipes of the distribution system;

"(4) if alkalinity is adjusted as part of optimal corrosion control treatment, a minimum concentration or a range of concentrations for alkalinity, measured at each entry point to the distribution system and in all tap samples;

"(5) if calcium carbonate stabilization is used as part of corrosion control, a minimum concentration or a range of concentrations for calcium, measured in all tap samples.

The values for the applicable water quality control parameters listed above shall be those that the State determines to reflect optimal corrosion control treatment for the system. The State may designate values for additional water quality control parameters determined by the State to reflect optimal corrosion control for the system. The State shall notify the system in writing of these determinations and explain the basis for its decisions.

"(g) CONTINUED OPERATION AND MONITORING.—All systems shall maintain water quality parameter values at or above minimum values or within ranges designated by the State under subsection (f) of this section in each sample collected under section 1418H(d). If the water quality parameter value of any sample is below the minimum value or outside the range designated by the State, then the system is out of compliance with this subsection. As specified in section 1418H(d), the system may take a confirmation sample for any water quality parameter value no later than 3 days after the first sample. If a confirmation sample is taken, the result must be averaged with the first sampling result and the average must be used for any compliance determinations under this subsection. States have discretion to delete results of obvious sampling errors from this calculation.

"(h) MODIFICATION OF STATE TREATMENT DECISIONS.—Upon its own initiative or in response to a request by a water system or other interested party, a State may, after notice and opportunity for comment, modify its determination of the optimal corrosion control treatment under subsection (d) of this section or optimal water quality control parameters under subsection (f) of this section. A request for modification by a system or other interested party shall be in writing, explain why the modification is appropriate, and provide supporting documentation. The State may modify its determination where it concludes that such change is necessary to ensure that the system continues to optimize corrosion control treatment. A revised determination shall be made in writing, set forth the new treatment requirements, explain the basis for the State's decision, and provide an implementation schedule for completing the treatment modifications.

"(i) EPA Regulations or Guidelines.—Within 6 months after the enactment of this subpart the Administrator shall issue regulations or guidelines to facilitate compliance with the requirements of this section.

"SEC. 1418D. SOURCE WATER MCL.

"The Congress hereby establishes, by operation of law, to be effective 18 months after the enactment of this subpart, a maximum contaminant level (MCL) for lead in source water which shall be considered exceeded whenever the concentration of lead in source water is greater than 5 parts per billion (ppb).

"SEC. 1418E. LEAD SERVICE LINE REPLACEMENT REQUIREMENTS.

"(a) BASIC REQUIREMENT.—Public water systems that fail to meet the tap water lead limit in samples taken pursuant to section 1418G(d) after installing corrosion control shall replace lead service lines in accordance with the requirements of this section.

"(b) REPLACEMENT SCHEDULE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—A system shall replace lead services lines in its distribution system at an annual rate which will replace each year either 20 percent of the lead service lines or 10 percent of the total service lines, whichever results in replacement of a greater number of lead service lines. The initial number of lead service lines is the number of lead lines in place at the time the replacement program begins. The system shall identify the initial number of lead and nonlead service lines in its distribution system based upon a materials evaluation, including the evaluation required under section 1418G(a). The first year of lead service line replacement shall begin on the date the tap water lead limit was exceeded in tap water sampling referenced in subsection (a) of this section. If the State fails to designate optimal corrosion control by the date required under section 1418B or if a system fails to install corrosion control treatment by the date required under section 1418B, the first year of lead service line replacement shall begin 6 months after the such date.

"(2) EXTENSION OF SCHEDULE FOR CERTAIN SYSTEMS.—Upon the application of a public water system with an especially large number of lead service lines in its distribution system, the State may, after notice and opportunity for comment, extend the schedule for lead service line replacement established under paragraph (1). Such extension shall provide for the replacement by the system of all lead service lines in its distribution system at the earliest feasible date. Such extension shall provide for replacement of an equal percentage of such lines in each year during the extension and shall terminate no later than the date specified in the following table:

Total number of lead service lines to be replaced by system	Maximum extension period (years)
More than 50,000 .....	3
More than 100,000 .....	5
More than 300,000 .....	10
More than 450,000 .....	13

"(c) Service Lines Not Contributing to Violation.—A system is not required to replace an individual lead service line if the State determines, after notice and opportunity for comment, that the service line does not contribute to tap water lead concentrations in excess of 10 parts per billion (ppb). In such a case, the service line shall be treated by the system as a nonlead line.

"(d) PORTION OF SERVICE LINE REPLACED.—A water system shall replace the entire service line (up to the building inlet) unless it demonstrates to the satisfaction of the State under subsection (e) of this section that it controls less than the entire service line. In such cases, the system shall replace the portion of the line which the State determines is under the system's control. The system shall notify the user served by the line that the system will replace the portion of the service line under its control and shall offer to replace the building owner's portion of the line, but is not required to bear the cost of replacing the building owner's portion of the line. For buildings where only a portion of the lead service line is replaced, the water system shall inform each resident that the system will collect a first flush tap water sample after partial replacement of the service line is completed if the resident so desires. In cases where the resident accepts the offer, the system shall collect the sample and report the results to the resident within 14 days following partial lead service replacement.

"(e) CONTROL.—A water system is presumed to control the entire lead service line (up to the building inlet) unless the State determines, after notice and opportunity for comment, that it does not have any of following forms of control over the entire line (as defined by State statutes, municipal ordinances, public service contracts or other applicable legal authority): authority to set standards for construction, repair, or maintenance of the line, authority to replace, repair, or maintain the service line, or ownership of the service line. The State shall review the information supplied by the system and determine whether the system controls less than the entire service line and, in such cases, shall determine the extent of the system's control. The State's determination shall be in writing and explain the basis for its decision.

"(f) SHORTER SCHEDULE.—The State shall require a system to replace lead service lines on a shorter schedule than that required by this section, taking into account the number of lead service lines in the system, where such a shorter replacement schedule is feasible. The State shall, after notice and opportunity for comment, make this determination in writing and notify the system of its finding within 6 months after the system is triggered into lead service line replacement based on monitoring referenced in subsection (a) of this section.

"(g) CESSATION OF SERVICE LINE REPLACEMENT.—Any system may cease replacing lead service lines whenever the tap water samples collected pursuant to section 1418G(d)(1) meet the tap water lead limit during each of 2 consecutive monitoring periods and the system submits the results to the State. If the tap water samples in any such water system thereafter exceed the tap water lead limit, the system shall recommence replacing lead service lines within 6 months of such exceedance.

"(h) REPORTING BY SYSTEM.—To demonstrate compliance with subsections (a) through (d) of this section, a system shall report to the State the information specified in section 1418K(e).

"(i) VOLUNTARY LEAD PIPE REMOVAL.—Each State shall, within 18 months of the date of enactment of this subpart, establish a program to encourage all public water systems in the State to provide a voluntary service of referring building owners in the system's service area to approved contractors to remove lead plumbing, fixtures, or solder from their buildings. Such programs shall also encourage public water systems to offer to fund such removal and to bill their water customers on their water bills, amortized over a significant period of time, to allow easy payment for such removal. The Administrator shall, within 6 months of the date of enactment of this Act, develop and distribute to each State and the public a model State program designed to achieve these goals.

"SEC. 1418F. PUBLIC EDUCATION AND SUPPLEMENTAL MONITORING REQUIREMENTS.

"A water system that exceeds the tap water lead limit shall deliver the public education materials contained in subsections (a) and (b) of this section in accordance with the requirements in subsection (c) of this section.

"(a) CONTENT OF WRITTEN MATERIALS.—A water system shall include the following text in all of the printed materials it distributes through its lead public education program. Any additional information presented by a system shall be consistent with the information below and be in plain English that can be understood by laypersons:

"INTRODUCTION

"The drinking water supplied by [insert name of water supplier] has been tested at several locations in your community and found to be contaminated with the toxic chemical lead. Some homes in the community have lead levels above the Federal tap water lead limit of 10 parts per billion (ppb), or 0.010 milligrams of lead per liter of water (mg/L). Other homes may have lead levels above the maximum contaminant level goal for lead established by the United States Environmental Protection Agency, which is no lead in drinking water.

Under Federal law we are required to have a program in place to minimize lead in your drinking water. This program includes corrosion control treatment (to decrease the level of lead drawn into water from lead in distribution pipes and from lead in home plumbing) and public education. We are also required to replace each lead service line that we control if the line contributes to lead concentrations of 10 parts per billion or more after we have completed the corrosion control treatment program. If you have any questions about how we are carrying out the requirements of Federal law please give us a call at [insert water system's phone number].

Although our lead control program will reduce lead in drinking water, because of contamination from home plumbing, it may not succeed in completely eliminating lead from drinking water or even in lowering lead contamination to the tap water lead limit. This brochure explains the simple additional steps you can take to protect you and your family by reducing your exposure to lead in drinking water.

"HEALTH EFFECTS OF LEAD

"Lead is

"Lead is an extremely dangerous and pervasive poison found in lead-based paint, air, soil, household dust, food, certain types of pottery, porcelain, pewter, and water. Lead can pose a significant risk to your health and especially to the health of your children.

Lead builds up in the body over many years and can cause damage to the brain, red blood cells, and kidneys. Lead probably causes cancer in humans. Lead appears to cause elevated blood pressure in adult men.

The greatest risk is to young children and pregnant women. Small amounts of lead can impair normal mental and physical development of young children and fetuses. This damage can reduce intelligence and cause behavioral disturbances. These effects appear to be irreversible.

There is no known safe level of lead exposure.

"LEAD IN DRINKING WATER

"Lead in drinking water can significantly increase a person's total lead exposure, particularly the exposure of infants who drink baby formulas and concentrated juices that are mixed with water. The EPA estimates that, on average, drinking water makes up about 20 percent of a person's total exposure to lead. In some cases the percentage can be much higher. Infants who drink baby formulas made from lead contaminated tap water have in some instances suffered acute lead poisoning.

"Lead is unusual among drinking water contaminants in that it seldom occurs naturally in water supplies like rivers and lakes. Lead enters drinking water primarily as a result of the corrosion, or wearing away, of materials containing lead in the water distribution system and household plumbing. These materials include lead-based solder used to join copper pipe, brass, and chrome plated brass faucets, and in some cases, pipes made of lead that connect your house to the water main (service lines). In 1986, Congress banned the use of lead solder containing greater than 0.2 percent lead, and restricted the lead content of faucets, pipes and other plumbing materials to 8.0 percent. In 1991 Congress further tightened controls on lead content in faucets, pipes and other plumbing materials.

"When water stands in lead pipes or plumbing systems containing lead for several hours or more, the lead may dissolve into your drinking water. This means the first water drawn from the tap in the morning, or later in the afternoon after returning from work or school, can contain fairly high levels of lead.

"Federal law has set a tap water lead limit which is being exceeded in homes in your community. As a result of this exceedance, we are undertaking a program of corrosion control, public education, and [if necessary] lead service line replacement as required by Federal law to reduce lead levels in tap water. Installation of corrosion control [is required to occur/occurred] by [insert date]. Replacement of lead service lines [if necessary] [is required to occur/occurred] by [insert date]. Despite these measures lead levels [may] still exceed the tap water lead limit in homes in your community due to lead contamination in home plumbing.

"To find out whether you need to take action in your own home, have your drinking water tested to determine if it contains excessive concentrations of lead. Testing the water is essential because you cannot see, taste, or smell lead in drinking water. Some local laboratories that can provide this service are listed at the end of this booklet. For more information on having your water tested, please call [insert phone number of water system]. "If a water test indicates that the drinking water drawn from a tap in your home contains lead above 10 ppb, then you should take the following precautions. The EPA has set a goal of zero for lead contamination in drinking water so you should consider taking these steps even if the lead concentration in your drinking water is below 10 ppb.

"(1) Let the water run from the tap before using it for drinking or cooking any time the water in a faucet has gone unused for more than 6 hours. The longer water resides in your home's plumbing the more lead it may contain. Flushing the tap means running the cold water faucet until the water gets noticeably colder, usually about 15-30 seconds. If your house has a lead service line to the water main, you may have to flush the water for a longer time, perhaps one minute, before drinking. Although toilet flushing or showering flushes water through a portion of your home's plumbing system, you still need to flush the water in each faucet before using it for drinking or cooking. Flushing tap water is a simple and inexpensive measure you can take to protect your family's health. It usually uses less than 1 or 2 gallons of water and costs less than [insert a cost estimate based on flushing 2 times a day for 30 days] per month. To conserve water, fill a couple of bottles for drinking water after flushing the tap, and whenever possible use the first flush water to wash the dishes or water the plants.

"If you live in a high-rise building, letting the water flow before using it may not work to lessen your risk from lead. The plumbing systems have more, and sometimes larger pipes than smaller buildings. Ask your landlord for help in locating the source of the lead and for advice on reducing the lead level.

"(2) Try not to cook with, or drink water from the hot water tap. Hot water can dissolve more lead more quickly than cold water. If you need hot water, draw water from the cold tap and heat it on the stove.

"(3) Remove loose lead solder and debris from the plumbing materials installed in newly constructed homes, or homes in which the plumbing has recently been replaced, by removing the faucet strainers from all taps and running the water from 3 to 5 minutes. Thereafter, periodically remove the strainers and flush out any debris that has accumulated over time.

"(4) If your copper pipes are joined with lead solder that has been installed illegally since it was banned in 1986, notify the plumber who did the work and request that he or she replace the lead solder with lead-free solder. Lead solder looks dull gray, and when scratched with a key looks shiny. In addition, notify your State [insert name of department responsible for enforcing the Safe Drinking Water Act in your State] about the violation.

"(5) Determine whether or not the service line that connects your home or apartment to the water main is made of lead. The best way to determine if your service line is made of lead is by contacting us at [insert phone number of water system] hiring a licensed plumber to inspect the line or contacting the plumbing contractor who installed the line. You can identify the plumbing contractor by checking the city's record of building permits which should be maintained in the files of the [insert name of department that issues building permits]. A licensed plumber can at the same time check to see if your home's plumbing contains lead solder, lead pipes, or pipe fittings that contain lead.

The public water system that delivers water to your home should also maintain records of the materials located in the distribution system. If the service line that connects your dwelling to the water main contributes to an exceedance of the Federal tap water lead limit after our corrosion control treatment program is in place, we are required to replace the line. If the line is only partially controlled by the [insert name of the city, county, or water system that controls the line], we are required to provide you with information on how to replace your portion of the service line, and offer to replace that portion of the line at your expense and take a follow-up tap water sample within 14 days of the replacement. Acceptable replacement alternatives include copper, steel, iron, and plastic pipes.

"(6) Have an electrician check your wiring. If grounding wires from the electrical system are attached to your pipes, corrosion may be greater. Check with a licensed electrician or your local electrical code to determine if your wiring can be grounded elsewhere. DO NOT attempt to change the wiring yourself because improper grounding can cause electrical shock and fire hazards.

"The steps described above will reduce the lead concentrations in your drinking water.

However, if a water test indicates that the drinking water coming from your tap contains lead concentrations in excess of 10 ppb after flushing, or after we have completed our actions to minimize lead levels, then you may want to take the following additional measures.

"(1) Purchase or lease a home treatment device. Home treatment devices are limited in that each unit treats only the water that flows from the faucet to which it is connected, and all of the devices require periodic maintenance and replacement. Devices such as reverse osmosis systems or distillers can effectively remove lead from your drinking water. Some activated carbon filters may reduce lead levels at the tap, however all lead reduction claims should be investigated. Be sure to check the actual performance of a specific home treatment device before and after installing the unit.

"(2) Purchase bottled water for drinking and cooking.

"In addition to exposure through drinking water, a child at play often comes into contact with sources of lead contamination—like dirt and dust—that rarely affect an adult. It is important to wash children's hands and toys often to reduce these sources of lead exposure.

"You can consult a variety of sources for additional information. Your family doctor or pediatrician can perform a blood test for lead and provide you with more information about the health effects of lead. State and local government agencies that can be contacted include:

"[insert the name of city or county department of public utilities] at [insert phone number] can provide you with information about your community's water supply, and a list of local laboratories that have been certified by EPA for testing water quality;

"[insert the name of city or county department that issues building permits] at [insert phone number] can provide you with information about building permit records that should contain the names of plumbing contractors that plumbed your home; and

"[insert the name of the State Department of Public Health] at [insert phone number] or the [insert the name of the city or county health department] at [insert phone number] can provide you with information about the health effects of lead and how you can have your child's blood tested.

"The following is a list of some State approved laboratories in your area that you can call to have your water tested for lead. [Insert names and phone numbers of at least 2 laboratories].

"(b) CONTENT OF BROADCAST MATERIALS.—A water system shall include the following information in all public service announcements submitted under its lead public education program to television and radio stations for broadcasting:

"Why should everyone want to know the facts about lead and drinking water? Because lead is an extremely dangerous poison that can enter drinking water and pose a significant risk to your health and the health of your children. Lead contamination can impair the intellectual development of young children. That's why I urge you to do what I did. I had my water tested for [insert free or $ per sample]. You can contact the [insert the name of the city or water system] for information on testing and on simple ways to reduce your exposure to lead in drinking water.

"To have your water tested for lead, or to get more information about this public health concern, please call [insert the phone number of the city or water system].

"(c) DELIVERY OF PUBLIC EDUCATION PROGRAM.—(1) In communities where a significant proportion of the population speaks a language other than English, public education materials shall be communicated in the appropriate language(s).

"(2) A community water system that fails to meet the tap water lead limit shall, within 60 days:

"(A) insert notices in each customer's water utility bill containing the information in subsection (a), along with the following alert on the water bill itself in large print:

"SOME HOMES IN THIS COMMUNITY HAVE ELEVATED LEAD LEVELS IN THEIR DRINKING WATER. LEAD CAN POSE A SIGNIFICANT RISK TO YOUR HEALTH AND TO THE HEALTH OF YOUR CHILDREN. PLEASE READ THE ENCLOSED NOTICE FOR FURTHER INFORMATION,"

"(B) submit the information in subsection (a) to the editorial departments of the major daily and weekly newspapers circulated throughout the community,

"(C) deliver pamphlets and/or brochures that contain the public education materials in subsection (a) of this section relating to the health effects of lead and steps to be taken in the home to reduce exposure to lead in drinking water of this section to facilities and organizations, including the following: public and private schools and/or local school boards; city or county health department; women, infants, and children and/or Head Start Program(s) whenever available; public and private hospitals and/or clinics; pediatricians; family planning clinics; public libraries; and local welfare agencies, and

"(D) submit the public service announcement in subsection (b) to at least 5 of the radio and television stations with the largest audiences that broadcast to the community served by the water system.

"(3) A community water system shall repeat the tasks contained in subsection (c)(2) (A), (B), and (C) every 12 months, and the tasks contained in subsection (c)(2)(D) every 6 months for as long as the system exceeds the tap water lead limit.

"(4) Within 60 days after it exceeds the tap water lead limit, a noncommunity water system shall deliver the public education materials contained in subsection (a) of this section as follows:

"(A) Post informational posters on lead in drinking water in a public place or common area in each of the buildings served by the system.

"(B) Distribute informational pamphlets and/or brochures on lead in drinking water to each person served by the noncommunity water system.

"(5) A noncommunity water system shall repeat the tasks contained in subsection (c)(4) of this section at least once during each calendar year in which the system exceeds the tap water lead limit.

"(6) A water system may discontinue delivery of public education materials if the system has met the tap water lead limit during the most recent 6-month monitoring period conducted pursuant to section 1418G. Such a system shall recommence public education in accordance with this section if it subsequently exceeds the tap water lead limit during any monitoring period.

"(d) SUPPLEMENTAL MONITORING AND NOTIFICATION OF RESULTS.—A water system that fails to meet the tap water lead limit shall offer to sample the tap water of any customer who requests it. The system is not required to pay for collecting or analyzing the sample, nor is the system required to collect and analyze the sample itself.

"(e) NOTIFICATION OF VIOLATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—A water system which fails to comply with a water maximum contaminant level for lead or any other requirement under this subpart shall notify persons served by such system of such violation in the manner provided for public notification of violations of maximum contaminant levels and treatment techniques in regulations of the Administrator under this part.

"(2) MANDATORY HEALTH EFFECTS LANGUAGE.—When providing the information on potential adverse health effects in notices of violation, the water system shall include the language in subsection (a) relating to the health effects of lead.

"SEC. 1418G. MONITORING REQUIREMENTS FOR LEAD IN TAP WATER.

"(a) SAMPLE SITE LOCATION.—(1) By the applicable date for commencement of monitoring under subsection (d)(1) of this section, each water system shall complete a materials evaluation of its distribution system in order to identify a pool of targeted sampling sites that meets the requirements of this section, and which is sufficiently large to ensure that the water system can collect the number of lead tap samples required in subsection (c). All sites from which first draw samples are collected shall be selected from this pool of targeted sampling sites. Sampling sites may not include faucets that have point-of-use or point-of-entry treatment devices designed to remove inorganic contaminants.

"(2) A water system shall use the information that it is required to collect under regulations promulgated by the Administrator under this part relating to special monitoring for corrosivity characteristics when conducting a materials evaluation. When an evaluation of the information collected pursuant to such regulations is insufficient to locate the requisite number of lead sampling sites that meet the targeting criteria in this subsection, the water system shall review each source of information listed below in order to identify a sufficient number of sampling sites and in addition, the system shall seek to collect such information where possible in the course of its normal operations (e.g. checking service line materials when reading water meters or performing maintenance activities):

"(A) All plumbing codes, permits, and records in the files of the building department which indicate the plumbing materials that are installed within publicly and privately owned structures connected to the distribution system.

"(B) All inspections and records of the distribution system that indicate the material composition of the service connections that connect a structure to the distribution system.

"(C) All existing water quality information, which includes the results of all prior analyses of the system or individual structures connected to the system, indicating locations that may be particularly susceptible to high lead concentrations.

"(3) The sampling sites selected for a community water system's sampling pool ("tier 1 sampling sites") shall consist of single family structures that (A) contain copper pipes with lead solder installed after 1982 or contain lead pipes; and/or (B) are served by a lead service line. When multiple-family residences comprise at least 20 percent of the structures served by a water system, the system may include these types of structures in its sampling pool.

"(4) Any community water system with insufficient tier 1 sampling sites shall complete its sampling pool with "tier 2 sampling sites", consisting of buildings, including multiple-family residences that: (A) contain copper pipes with lead solder installed after 1982 or contain lead pipes; and/or (B) are served by a lead service line.

"(5) Any community water system with insufficient tier 1 and tier 2 sampling sites shall complete its sampling pool with "tier 3 sampling sites", consisting of single family structures that contain copper pipes with lead solder installed before 1983.

"(6) The sampling sites selected for a noncommunity water system ("tier 1 sampling sites") shall consist of buildings that: (A) contain copper pipes with lead solder installed after 1982 or contain lead pipes; and/or (B) are served by a lead service line.

"(7) A noncommunity water system with insufficient tier 1 sites that meet the targeting criteria in paragraph (6) of subsection (a) shall complete its sampling pool with sampling sites that contain copper pipes with lead solder installed before 1983.

"(8) Any water system whose sampling pool does not consist exclusively of tier 1 sites shall demonstrate in a letter submitted to the State under section 1418K(a)(2) why a review of the information listed in subsection (a)(2) was inadequate to locate a sufficient number of tier 1 sites. Any community water system which includes tier 3 sampling sites in its sampling pool shall demonstrate in such a letter why it was unable to locate a sufficient number of tier 1 and tier 2 sampling sites.

"(9) Any water system whose distribution system contains lead service lines shall draw 50 percent of the samples it collects during each monitoring period from sites that contain lead pipes, or copper pipes with lead solder, and 50 percent of those samples from sites served by a lead service line. A water system that cannot identify a sufficient number of sampling sites served by a lead service line shall demonstrate in a letter submitted to the State why the system was unable to locate a sufficient number of such sites. Such a water system shall collect lead service line samples from all of the sites identified as being served by such lines.

"(b) SAMPLE COLLECTION METHODS.—(1) All tap samples for lead collected in accordance with this subpart (but not lead service line samples collected under section 1418E) shall be first draw samples.

"(2) Each first-draw tap sample for lead shall be one liter in volume and have stood motionless in the plumbing system of each sampling site for at least 6 hours. First draw samples from residential housing shall be collected from the cold-water kitchen tap or bathroom sink tap. First-draw samples from a nonresidential building shall be collected at an interior tap from which water is typically drawn for consumption. First draw samples may be collected by the system or the system may allow residents to collect first draw samples after instructing the residents of the sampling procedures specified in this paragraph. If a system allows residents to perform sampling, the system may not challenge, based on alleged errors in sampling collection, the accuracy of sampling results.

"(3) Each service line sample shall be 1 liter in volume and have stood motionless in the lead service line for at least 6 hours. Lead service line samples shall be collected in 1 of the following 3 ways:

"(A) At the tap after flushing the volume of water between the tap and the lead service line. The volume of water shall be calculated based on the interior diameter and length of the pipe between the tap and the lead service line.

“(B) Tapping directly into the lead service line.

“(C) If the sampling site is a building constructed as a single-family residence, allowing the water to run until there is a significant change in temperature which would be indicative of water that has been standing in the lead service line.

“(4) A water system shall collect each first draw tap sample from the same sampling site from which it collected a previous sample. If, for any reason, the water system cannot gain entry to a sampling site in order to collect a follow-up tap sample, the system may collect the follow-up tap sample from another sampling site in its sampling pool as long as the new site meets the same targeting criteria, and is within reasonable proximity of the original site.

System size (No. people served)	No. of sites (standard monitoring)	No. of sites (reduced monitoring)
100,000	100	50
10,001 to 100,000	60	30
3,301 to 10,000	40	20
501 to 3,300	20	10
101 to 500	10	5
100	5	5

“(d) TIMING OF MONITORING.—

“(1) STANDARD MONITORING.—Monitoring required under this section for lead concentrations in tap water shall commence 6 months after the enactment of this subpart and shall occur at 6-month intervals thereafter, except as provided in paragraph (2).

“(2) REDUCED MONITORING.—(A) Any water system that meets the tap water lead limit during each of 2 consecutive 6-month monitoring periods may reduce the number of samples in accordance with subsection (c) of this subsection, and reduce the frequency of sampling to once per year.

“(B) Any water system that meets the tap water lead limit during 3 consecutive years of monitoring may reduce the frequency of monitoring for lead from annually to once every 3 years.

“(C) A water system that reduces the number and frequency of sampling shall collect these samples from sites included in the pool of targeted sampling sites identified in subsection (a). Systems sampling annually or less frequently shall conduct the lead tap sampling during the month of June, July, August, or September.

“(D) Any water system subject to reduced monitoring that exceeds the tap water lead limit shall immediately resume sampling in accordance with subsection (d)(1) and collect the number of samples specified for standard monitoring under subsection (c).

“(e) ADDITIONAL MONITORING BY SYSTEMS.—The results of any monitoring conducted in addition to the minimum requirements of this section shall be considered by the system and the State in making any determinations under this subpart.

“SEC. 1418H. MONITORING REQUIREMENTS FOR WATER QUALITY PARAMETERS.

“All large water systems and all small and medium-size systems that exceed the tap water lead limit shall monitor water quality parameters in addition to lead in accordance with this section.

“(a) GENERAL REQUIREMENTS.—

“(1) SAMPLE COLLECTION METHODS.—(A) Tap samples shall be representative of water quality throughout the distribution system taking into account the number of persons served, the different sources of water, the different treatment methods employed by the system, and seasonal variability. Tap sampling under this section is not required to be conducted at taps targeted for lead sampling under section 1418G(a).

“(B) Samples collected at the entry point(s) to the distribution system shall be from locations representative of each source after treatment. If a system draws water from more than one source and the sources are combined before distribution, the system must sample at an entry point to the distribution system during periods of normal operating conditions (i.e., when water is representative of all sources being used).

“(2) NUMBER OF SAMPLES.—(A) Systems shall collect 2 tap samples for applicable water quality parameters during each monitoring period specified under subsections (b) through (e) of this section from the following number of sites:

System size	Number of people served:	Number of sites
100,000	100,000	25
10,001 to 100,000	10,001 to 100,000	10
3,301 to 10,000	3,301 to 10,000	3
501 to 3,300	501 to 3,300	2

“(B) Systems shall collect two samples for each applicable water quality parameter at each entry point to the distribution system during each monitoring period specified in subsection (b). During each monitoring period specified in subsections (c) through (e) of this section, systems shall collect one sample for each applicable water quality parameter at each entry point to the distribution system.

“(b) INITIAL SAMPLING.—All large water systems shall measure the applicable water quality parameters as specified below at taps and at each entry point to the distribution system during each 6-month monitoring period specified in section 1418G(d)(1). All small- and medium-size systems shall measure the applicable water quality parameters at the locations specified below during each 6-month monitoring period specified in section 1418G(d)(1) during which the system exceeds the tap water lead limit.

“(1) At taps: pH; alkalinity; orthophosphate, when an inhibitor containing a phosphate compound is used; silica, when an inhibitor containing a silicate compound is used; calcium; conductivity; and water temperature.

“(2) At each entry point to the distribution system: all of the applicable parameters listed in paragraph (1) above.

“(c) MONITORING AFTER INSTALLATION OF CORROSION CONTROL.—Any system which installs optimal corrosion control treatment pursuant to section 1418B(d)(4) or section 1418B(e)(5) shall measure the water quality parameters at the locations and frequencies specified below during each 6-month monitoring period following such installation.

“(1) At taps, two samples for: pH; alkalinity; orthophosphate, when an inhibitor containing a phosphate compound is used; silica, when an inhibitor containing a silicate compound is used; calcium, when calcium carbonate stabilization is used as part of corrosion control.

“(2) At each entry point to the distribution system, one sample every two weeks for: pH; when alkalinity is adjusted as part of optimal corrosion control, a reading of the dosage rate of the chemical used to adjust alkalinity, and the alkalinity concentration; and when a corrosion inhibitor is used as part of optimal corrosion control, a reading of the dosage rate of the inhibitor used, and the concentration of orthophosphate or silica (whichever is applicable).

“(d) MONITORING AFTER STATE SPECIFIES WATER QUALITY PARAMETER VALUES FOR OPTIMAL CORROSION CONTROL.—After the State specifies the values for applicable water quality control parameters reflecting optimal corrosion control treatment under section 1418C(f), all systems shall measure the applicable water quality parameters in accordance with subsection (c) of this section during each 6-month monitoring period after such specification. The system may take a confirmation sample for any water quality parameter value no later than 3 days after the first sample. If a confirmation sample is taken, the result must be averaged with the first sampling result and the average must be used for any compliance determinations under section 1418C(g). States have discretion to delete results of obvious sampling errors from this calculation.

“(e) REDUCED MONITORING.—(1) Any water system that maintains the range of values for the water quality parameters reflecting optimal corrosion control treatment during each of two consecutive 6-month monitoring periods under subsection (d) of this section shall continue monitoring at the entry point(s) to the distribution system as specified in subsection (c)(2) of this section. Such system may collect two tap samples for applicable water quality parameters from the following reduced number of sites during each 6-month monitoring period.

System size	Reduced number of sites
Number of people served:
More than 100,000	10
10,001 to 100,000	7
3,301 to 10,000	3
501 to 3,300	2
101 to 500	1
Less than 100	1

“(2) Any water system that maintains the range of values for the water quality parameters reflecting optimal corrosion control treatment specified by the State under section 1418C(f) during 3 consecutive years of monitoring may reduce the frequency with which it collects the number of tap samples for applicable water quality parameters specified in paragraph (1) from every 6 months to annually.

“(3) A water system that conducts sampling annually shall collect these samples evenly throughout the year so as to reflect seasonal variability.

“(4) Any water system subject to reduced monitoring frequency that fails to operate within the range of values for the water quality parameters specified by the State under section 1418C(f) shall resume tap water sampling in accordance with the number and frequency requirements in subsection (c) of this section.

“(f) ADDITIONAL MONITORING BY SYSTEMS.—The results of any monitoring conducted in addition to the minimum requirements of this section shall be considered by the system and the State in making any determinations (i.e., determining concentrations of water quality parameters) under this section or section 1418C.

"SEC. 1418I. MONITORING REQUIREMENTS FOR LEAD IN SOURCE WATER.

"(a) SAMPLE LOCATION, COLLECTION METHODS, AND NUMBER OF SAMPLES.—(1) Each water system shall collect lead source water samples in accordance with the requirements regarding sample location, number of samples, and collection methods specified in regulations of the Administrator under subpart 1 relating to inorganic chemical sampling.

"(2) Where the results of sampling indicate an exceedance of the source water maximum contaminant level for lead, the State may require that 1 additional sample be collected as soon as possible after the initial sample was taken (but not to exceed 2 weeks) at the same sampling point. If a State-required confirmation sample is taken for lead, then the results of the initial and confirmation sample shall be averaged in determining compliance with the source water maximum contaminant level for lead. Any sample value below the detection limit shall be considered to be zero. Any value above the detection limit but below the PQL shall either be considered as the measured value or be considered one-half the PQL.

"(b) Monitoring Frequency.—Each system shall collect one source water sample from each entry point to the distribution system within 6 months after the enactment of this subpart and at 6 month intervals thereafter.

"(c) Reduced Monitoring Frequency.—(1) A water system using only ground water which demonstrates that finished drinking water entering the distribution system has been maintained below the source water maximum contaminant level for lead during at least 3 consecutive compliance periods under subsection (b) of this section may reduce the monitoring frequency for lead to once every 2 years.

"(2) A water system using surface water (or a combination of surface and ground waters) which demonstrates that finished drinking water entering the distribution system has been maintained below the source water maximum contaminant level for lead for at least 3 consecutive years may reduce the monitoring frequency in subsection (b) of this section to once every 2 years.

"(3) A water system that uses a new source of water is not eligible for reduced monitoring for lead until concentrations in samples collected from the new source during 3 consecutive monitoring periods are below the source water maximum contaminant level for lead.

"SEC. 1418J. ANALYTICAL METHODS.

"Analyses for lead, copper, pH, conductivity, calcium, alkalinity, orthophosphate, silica, and temperature shall be conducted using the methods specified in 40 C.F.R. 141.89, as may be modified by the Administrator from time to time. For purposes of this title and regulations thereunder, where it is not economically or technologically feasible to ascertain the level of a contaminant in drinking water which is as close to the maximum contaminant level goal as feasible, the Administrator shall establish a treatment technique for such contaminant in accordance with section 1412(b)(7). The Administrator shall have no authority in such cases to promulgate national primary drinking water regulations under this title based upon the level of a contaminant which is economically or technologically feasible to ascertain. Any such regulations in effect on the date of enactment of this subpart which are inconsistent with the provisions of the preceding sentence (including any regulations based on a Practical Quantification Level) shall be revised by the Administrator within 6 months after the enactment of this subpart to conform to such requirements. Such existing inconsistent regulations shall cease to apply on the date on which the revised regulations take effect.

"SEC. 1418K. REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.

"All water systems shall report all of the following information to the State in accordance with this section.

"(a) Reporting Requirements for Tap Water Monitoring for Lead and for Water Quality Parameters Monitoring.—(1) A water system shall report the information specified below for all tap water samples within the first 10 days following the end of each applicable monitoring period specified in section 1418G and 1418H (i.e. every 6 months, annually, or every 3 years).

"(A) The results of all tap samples for lead, including the location of each site and the criteria under paragraph (3), (4), (5), (6) and/or (7) of section 1418G(a) under which the site was selected for the system's sampling pool.

"(B) A certification that each first draw sample collected by the water system is one-liter in volume and, to the best of its knowledge, has stood motionless in the service line, or in the interior plumbing of a sampling site, for at least 6 hours.

"(C) Where residents collected samples, a certification that each tap sample collected by the residents was taken after the water system informed them of proper sampling procedures.

"(D) The results of all tap water samples for lead.

"(E) With the exception of initial tap sampling conducted pursuant to this section, the system shall designate any site which was not sampled during previous monitoring periods, and include an explanation of why sampling sites have changed.

"(F) The results of all tap samples for pH, and where applicable, alkalinity, calcium, conductivity, temperature, and orthophosphate or silica collected under subsections (b) through (e) of section 1418H.

"(G) The results of all samples collected at the entry point to the distribution system for applicable water quality parameters under subsections (b) through (e) of section 1418H.

"(2) By the applicable date specified in section 1418G(d)(1) for commencement of monitoring, each community water system which does not complete its targeted sampling pool with tier 1 sampling sites meeting the criteria in section 1418G(a)(3) shall send a letter to the State justifying its selection of tier 2 and/or tier 3 sampling sites under section 1418G(a)(4) and/or (a)(5).

"(3) By the applicable date specified in section 1418G(d)(1) for commencement of monitoring, each noncommunity water system which does not complete its sampling pool with tier 1 sampling sites meeting the criteria in section 1418G(a)(6) shall send a letter to the State justifying its selection of sampling sites under section 1418G(a)(7).

"(4) By the applicable date specified in section 1418G(d)(1) for commencement of monitoring, each water system with lead service lines that is not able to locate the number of sites served by such lines required under section 1418G(a)(9) shall send a letter to the State demonstrating why it was unable to locate a sufficient number of such sites based upon the information listed in section 1418G(a)(2).

"(b) SOURCE WATER MONITORING REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.—(1) A water system shall report the sampling results for all source water samples collected in accordance with section 1418I within the first 10 days following the end of each source water monitoring period (i.e., annually, per compliance period, per compliance cycle) specified in section 1418I.

"(2) With the exception of the first round of source water sampling conducted pursuant to section 1418I, the system shall specify any site which was not sampled during previous monitoring periods, and include an explanation of why the sampling point has changed.

"(c) CORROSION CONTROL TREATMENT REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.—By the applicable dates under section 1418B systems shall report the following information:

"(1) For systems demonstrating that they have already optimized corrosion control, information required in section 1418B(b)(2) or (3).

"(2) For systems required to optimize corrosion control, their recommendation regarding optimal corrosion control treatment under section 1418C(a).

"(3) For systems required to evaluate the effectiveness of corrosion control treatments under section 1418C(c), the information required by that paragraph.

"(4) For systems required to install optimal corrosion control designated by the State under section 1418C(d), a letter certifying that the system has completed installing that treatment.

"(d) LEAD SERVICE LINE REPLACEMENT REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.—Systems shall report the following information to the State to demonstrate compliance with the requirements of section 1418E:

"(1) Within 12 months after a system exceeds the tap water lead limit in sampling referred to in section 1418E(a), the system shall demonstrate in writing to the State that it has conducted a materials evaluation, including the evaluation in section 1418G(a), to identify the initial number of lead service lines in its distribution system, and shall provide the State with the system's schedule for replacing lead service lines.

"(2) Within 12 months after a system exceeds the tap water lead limit in sampling referred to in section 1418E(a), and every 12 months thereafter, the system shall demonstrate to the State in writing that the system has replaced in the previous 12 months the number of lead service lines in its distribution system required by section 1418E.

"(3) The annual letter submitted to the State under subsection (d)(2) shall contain the following information:

"(A) The number of lead service lines scheduled to be replaced during the previous year of the system's replacement schedule.

"(B) The number and location of each lead service line replaced during the previous year of the system's replacement schedule.

"(C) If measured, the water lead concentration and location of each lead service line sampled, the sampling method, and the date of sampling.

"(4) As soon as practicable, but in no case later than 3 months after a system has completed the installation of optimal corrosion control treatment and subsequently been found to exceed the tap water lead limit in any sampling referred to in section 1413(a), any system seeking to rebut the presumption that it has control over the entire lead service line pursuant to section 1418E(d) shall submit a letter to the State describing the legal authority (e.g., State statutes, municipal ordinances, public service contracts, or other applicable legal authority) which limits the system's control over the service lines and the extent of the system's control.

"(e) PUBLIC EDUCATION PROGRAM REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.—(1) By December 31 of each year, any water system that is subject to the public education requirements in section 1418F shall submit a letter to the State demonstrating that the system has delivered the public education materials that meet the content requirements in section 1418F(a) through (d) and the delivery requirements in section 1418F(c). This information shall include a list of all the newspapers, radio stations, television stations, facilities, and organizations to which the system delivered public education materials during the previous year. The water system shall submit the letter required by this paragraph annually for as long as it exceeds the tap water lead limit.

"(2) By December 31 of each year any water system subject to the public notification requirements of section 1418F(e) shall submit a letter to the State demonstrating compliance with the requirements of section 1418F(e).

"(f) REPORTING OF ADDITIONAL MONITORING DATA.—Any system which collects sampling data in addition to that required by this subpart shall report the results to the State by the end of the applicable monitoring period under sections 1418G, 1418H, and 1418I during which the samples are collected.

"(g) ANNUAL COMPLIANCE CERTIFICATION.—All public water systems shall submit a letter to the State by March 1 of each year certifying the extent to which the system was in compliance with each applicable provision of this subpart during the preceding calendar year.

"SEC. 1418L. RECORDKEEPING REQUIREMENTS.

"Any system subject to the requirements of this subpart shall retain on its premises original records of all sampling data and analyses, reports, surveys, letters, evaluations, schedules, State determinations, and any other information required by this subpart. Each water system shall retain the records required by this section for no fewer than 12 years.

"SEC. 1418M. IMPLEMENTATION REQUIREMENTS.

"(a) RECORDS KEPT BY STATES.—Each State shall maintain for not less than 10 years files for each public water system which contain records of currently applicable or most recent State determinations, including all supporting information and an explanation of the technical basis for each of the following decisions, made under the preceding provisions of this subpart:

"(1) Decisions to require a water system to conduct corrosion control treatment studies.

"(2) Designations of optimal corrosion control treatment.

"(3) Designations of optimal water quality parameters.

"(4) Decisions to modify a public water system's optimal corrosion control treatment or water quality parameters.

"(5) Determinations that a system does not control entire lead service lines.

"(6) Determinations establishing or failing to establish a shorter lead service line replacement schedule than required by section 1418E.

"(7) Records of reports and any other information submitted by water systems under section 1418K.

"(8) Records of State activities, and the results thereof, to verify compliance with State determinations issued under section 1418C(f) and 1418C(h) and compliance with lead service line replacement schedules under section 1418E.

"(9) Records of each system's currently applicable or most recently designated monitoring requirements.

If, for the records identified in paragraphs (1) through (6) of this subsection, no change is made to a State decision during a 12 year retention period, the State shall maintain the record until a new decision, determination, or designation has been issued.

"(b) SPECIAL REPORTS.—Each State shall submit to the Administrator by May 15, August 15, November 15, and February 15 of each year the following information relating to each system's compliance with the requirements for lead under this subpart during the preceding calendar quarter. Specifically, States shall report the name and Public Water System identification number of—

"(1) each public water system which exceeded any maximum contaminant level for lead or tap water lead limit and the date upon which the exceedance occurred;

"(2) each public water system required to complete the corrosion control evaluations specified in section 1418C(c) and the date the State received the results of the evaluations from each system;

"(3) each public water system for which the State has designated optimal corrosion control treatment under section 1418C(d), the date of the determination, and each system that completed installation of treatment as certified under section 1418K(c)(4);

"(4) each public water system for which the State has designated optimal water quality parameters under section 1418C(f) and the date of the determination; and

"(5) each public water system required to begin replacing lead service lines as specified in section 1418E, each public water system for which the State has established a replacement schedule under section 1418E(f), and each system reporting compliance with its replacement schedule under section 1418K(d)(2).

"(c) SPECIAL PRIMACY REQUIREMENTS.—An application for approval of a State program revision which adopts the requirements specified in this section must contain (in addition to the general primacy requirements enumerated elsewhere in this part, including the requirement that State regulations be at least as stringent as the Federal requirements) a description of how the State will accomplish the following program requirements:

"(1) SECTION 1418C(d), (f), AND (h).—Designating optimal corrosion control treatment methods, optimal water quality parameters and modifications thereto.

"(2) SECTION 1418K(d).—Verifying compliance with lead service line replacement schedules and of Public Water System demonstrations of limited control over lead service lines.

"(d) AVAILABILITY OF RECORDS.—All records, data, and reports collected, maintained, received, or otherwise developed by States pursuant to the requirements of this subpart shall be made available by the State to the public upon request, unless making such records, data, or reports available would divulge trade secrets or secret processes.

"SEC. 1418N. EPA REVIEW OF IMPLEMENTATION OF NPDWR FOR LEAD.

"(a) EPA REVIEW.—Pursuant to the procedures in this section, the Administrator shall review State determinations required to be made after notice and opportunity for comment under this subpart and shall issue an order establishing a Federal determination where—

"(1) a State has failed to issue a determination by the applicable deadline; or

"(2) a State has issued a determination that does not comply with the requirements of this subpart.

"(b) INFORMATION USED BY STATE.—The State shall forward to the Administrator each State determination referred to in subsection (a) and all information that was considered by the State in making its determination, including public comments, if any, within 60 days of the State determination.

"(c) PROPOSED REVIEW OF STATE DETERMINATIONS.—(1) Where the conditions in subsection (a)(1) or (a)(2) are met, the Administrator shall issue a proposed review order within 90 days of the State action or failure to act which shall—

"(A) identify the public water system(s) affected, the State determination being reviewed and the provisions of State and/or Federal law at issue;

"(B) identify the determination that the State failed to carry out by the applicable deadline, or identify the particular provisions of the State determination which, in the Administrator's judgment, fail to carry out applicable requirements of this subpart and explain the basis for the Administrator's conclusion;

"(C) identify the treatment requirements which the Administrator proposes to apply to the affected system(s), and explain the basis for the proposed requirements; and

"(D) request public comment on the proposed order and the supporting record.

"(2) The Administrator shall provide notice of the proposed review order by:

"(A) mailing the proposed order to the affected public water system(s), the State agency whose order is being reviewed, and any other parties of interest known to the Administrator; and

"(B) publishing a copy of the proposed order in a newspaper of general circulation in the affected communities.

"(3) The Administrator shall make available for public inspection during the comment period the record supporting the proposed order, which shall include all of the information submitted by the State to the Administrator under subsection (b) of this section, all other studies, monitoring data and other information considered by the Administrator in developing the proposed order.

"(d) FINAL REVIEW ORDER.—(1) Based upon review of all information obtained regarding the proposed review order, including public comments, the Administrator shall issue a final review order within 120 days after issuance of the proposed order which affirms, modifies, or withdraws the proposed order. If the final order modifies or withdraws the proposed order, the final order shall explain the reasons supporting the change.

"(2) The record of the final order shall consist of the record supporting the proposed order, all public comments, all other information considered by the Administrator in issuing the final order and a document responding to all significant public comments submitted on the proposed order. If new points are raised or new material supplied during the public comment period, the Administrator may support the responses on those matters by adding new materials to the record. The record shall be complete when the final order is issued.

"(3) Notice of the final order shall be provided by mailing the final order to the affected system(s), the State, and all parties who commented on the proposed order.

"(4) Upon issuance of the final order, its terms constitute requirements of the national primary drinking water regulation for lead until such time as the Administrator issues a new order (which may include rescission of the previous order) pursuant to the procedures in this section. Such requirements shall supersede any inconsistent treatment requirements established by the State pursuant to the national primary drinking water regulations for lead.

"(5) The Administrator may not issue a final order to impose conditions less stringent than those imposed by the State.

"(e) FINALITY.—Action of the State with respect to which review by the Administrator is required under this section shall not be subject to judicial review in any civil or criminal proceeding for enforcement.

"(f) PRIMACY STATES.—All references in this subpart to the 'State' refer to the State which has primary enforcement responsibility under this title for the public water system concerned. If a State does not have primary enforcement responsibility under this title for public water systems in that State, the authorities and responsibilities vested in the State under this section shall be vested in the Administrator and all references in this section to the 'State' shall be treated as references to the 'Administrator'. The Administrator shall promptly withdraw primary enforcement responsibility under this title in the case of any State which is not fully implementing the requirements of this title.

"SEC. 14190. VARIANCES AND EXEMPTIONS.

"(a) USE OF BOTTLED WATER, ETC.—The State may require a public water system to use bottled water, point-of-use devices, point-of-entry devices, or other means as a condition of granting a variance or exemption from the requirements of national primary drinking water regulations under this part to avoid an unreasonable risk to health. The State may require a public water system to use bottled water and point-of-use devices or other means, but not point-of-entry devices, as a condition for granting an exemption from corrosion control treatment requirements for lead in sections 1418B and 1418C to avoid an unreasonable risk to health. The State may require a public water system to use point-of-entry devices as a condition for granting an exemption from the source water and lead service line replacement requirements for lead under section 1418D or 1418E to avoid an unreasonable risk to health.

"(b) PUBLIC WATER SYSTEMS USING BOTTLED WATER.—Public water systems that use bottled water as a condition for receiving a variance or an exemption from the national primary drinking water regulations under this part or an exemption from the requirements of sections 1418B through 1418E must meet the requirements specified in either paragraph (1) or (2) and paragraph (3) of this subsection:

"(1) The State must require and approve a monitoring program for bottled water. The public water system must develop and put in place a monitoring program that provides reasonable assurances that the bottled water meets all maximum contaminant levels and does not contain lead content in excess of 10 parts per billion. The public water system must monitor a representative sample of the bottled water for all contaminants regulated under this part during the first 3-month period that it supplies the bottled water to the public, and annually thereafter. Results of the monitoring program shall be provided to the State annually.

"(2) The public water system must receive a certification from the bottled water company that the bottled water supplied has been taken from an 'approved source' as defined by rule by the Administrator of the Food and Drug Administration; the bottled water company has conducted monitoring in accordance with such rules; and the bottled water does not exceed any maximum con-taminant levels or quality limits as set out in such rules. The public water system shall provide the certification to the State the first quarter after it supplies bottled water and annually thereafter. At the State's option a public water system may satisfy the requirements of this subsection if an approved monitoring program is already in place in another State.

"(3) The public water system is fully responsible for the provision of sufficient quantities of bottled water to every person supplied by the public water system via door-to-door bottled water delivery.

"(c) POINT OF ENTRY DEVICES.—In requiring the use of a point-of-entry device as a condition for granting an exemption from the national public drinking water regulation for lead under section 1418D or 1418F, the State must be assured that use of the device will not cause increased corrosion of lead bearing materials located between the device and the tap that could increase contaminant levels at the tap."

(b) EPA ACTION LEVEL REGULATIONS.—The Congress hereby finds and declares that the establishment by the Environmental Protection Agency of action levels in regulations regarding lead and copper in drinking water is inconsistent with title XIV of the Public Health Service Act because it does not provide the protection for public health mandated by section 1412 of that title. The Administrator may not hereafter promulgate any national primary drinking water regulations under such title based on an action level in lieu of a maximum contaminant level or a treatment technique as prescribed by section 1412 of that title, and any such regulations promulgated before the enactment of this Act, including regulations relating to lead and copper in drinking water, are hereby declared to be null and void on the date 30 days after the enactment of this Act (except as otherwise provided in the first sentence of section 1418J of that title, relating to analytical methods). In the case of any contaminant, other than lead, for which regulations are declared null and void under this subsection, the Administrator shall promulgate national primary drinking water regulations under subpart 1 of title XIV of the Public Health Service Act which are consistent with the requirements of section 1412 of that title within 6 months after the enactment of this Act.

(c) CLASSES OF PUBLIC WATER SYSTEMS.—Except as specifically provided in sections 1415 and 1416 and subpart B of title XIV of the Public Health Service Act (the Safe Drinking Water Act), nothing in such title shall be construed to authorize the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency or a State with primary enforcement responsibility under that title to regulate any class of public water systems in a manner that may be less protective of public health than is required for all other public water systems.

(d) SCHOOL DRINKING WATER CONTAINING LEAD.—

(1) TESTING.—(A) Section 1464(d)(1) of the Public Health Service Act (the Safe Drinking Water Act; 42 U.S.C. 300j-23) is amended by adding the following at the end thereof: "Within 18 months after the enactment of the Lead Contamination Control Act Amendments of 1991 each local education agency shall complete testing, in accordance with the protocol under subsection (b), for lead contamination in drinking water from coolers and in other drinking water outlets (including outlets used in food preparation) at schools under the jurisdiction of such agency."

"(B) Section 1464(b) of such Act is amended by adding the following at the end: "The Administrator shall revise the guidance document and the protocol published under this subsection within 6 months after the enactment of the Lead Contamination Control Act Amendments of 1991. Such revision shall, at a minimum, provide for follow-up sampling and recommend remedial steps whenever the lead concentration in any drinking water outlet exceeds 10 parts per billion."

(2) PUBLIC AVAILABILITY.—Section 1464(d)(2) of the Public Health Service Act (the Safe Drinking Water Act; 42 U.S.C. 300j-24(d)(2)) is amended by inserting the following before the period at the end thereof: "and, if the testing results show a tap water lead concentration in excess of 10 parts per billion, the local education agency shall, within 90 days after completion of such testing, provide to all teachers and other school personnel at the school and to parents (and guardians) of children enrolled in the school a summary of the testing results, a lead disclosure statement, and a description of the actions the agency has taken, or will take, in response to such test results, together with a schedule for such actions. The local education agency shall simultaneously provide a copy of such materials to the agency with primary enforcement responsibility for the public water system which serves the school. Such agency with primary enforcement responsibility shall promptly (but not later than 3 months after receipt of such materials) transmit to the Administrator a summary of such test results, the response actions taken, and proposed response actions. The Administrator, in consultation with the Centers for Disease Control, shall, within 1 year after the enactment of the Lead Contamination Control Act Amendments of 1991, publish a lead disclosure statement to be used for purposes of this subsection. Such statement shall explain the risks to children from exposure to lead in school drinking water and describe potential remedial actions."

(3) FEDERAL ASSISTANCE.—(A) Section 1465(a) of the Public Health Service Act (the Safe Drinking Water Act; 42 U.S.C. 300j-25(a)) is amended by striking "may" in the last sentence and inserting "shall only" and by adding the following before the period at the end thereof: ", except that not more than 5 percent of the grants made to any State for purposes of this section in any fiscal year may be retained by the State for purposes of administering the grant program under this section. Reimbursement shall be made to local education agencies on the basis of financial need and the severity of the drinking water contamination at the schools concerned"

(B) Section 1465(c) of such Act is amended by striking "and" and by inserting the following before the period at the end thereof: "and $30,000,000 for each of the 5 fiscal years thereafter."

(4) CIVIL PENALTIES.—Section 1464 of the Public Health Service Act (the Safe Drinking Water Act; 42 U.S.C. 300j-24(d)(2)) is amended by adding the following new subsection at the end thereof:

"(e) ENFORCEMENT.—Any local education agency which fails or refuses to comply with the requirements of this section shall be subject to a civil penalty in the amount of $10,000 for each such violation. The Administrator may bring an action in the appropriate United States district court to assess and collect such penalty or to enjoin any such violation. The court in any action against a local education agency under this section or section 1449 shall have discretion to order that all civil penalties collected be used to reimburse the local education agency for the costs of testing and remedying lead contamination in drinking water."

(5) COOLERS CONTAINING LEAD.—

(A) List.—Section 1463(a) of the Public Health Service Act (the Safe Drinking Water Act; 42 U.S.C. 300j-23(a)) is amended by adding the following at the end thereof: "At a minimum, the Administrator shall revise and republish the list within 1 year after the date of the enactment of the Lead Contamination Control Act Amendments of 1991 to ensure that all drinking water coolers in use or being manufactured as of that date which are not lead free are included on the list."

(B) RECALL ORDER.—Section 1462 of such Act is amended by striking "such order" in the last sentence thereof and inserting "each such order" and by adding the following before such last sentence: "The Commission shall issue a new order within 1 year after the list is revised under section 1463 to require manufacturers and importers of all coolers on such list to repair, replace, or recall and provide a refund for such coolers."

(C) CLARIFYING AMENDMENT.—Section 1461(3)(B) of such Act is amended to read as follows:

"(B) the owner of any building used as a school."

(e) LEAD PIPES, SOLDER, AND FLUX.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 1417 of the Public Health Service Act (the Safe Drinking Water Act; 42 U.S.C. 300g-6) is amended as follows:

(A) Subsection (a) is amended—

(i) by inserting "pipe fitting, fixture," after "pipe,";

(ii) by striking out so much of subparagraph (B) as follows "consumption" and inserting in lieu thereof a comma; and

(iii) by adding the following at the end thereof "Effective 1 year after the enactment of the Lead Contamination Control Act Amendments of 1991, it shall be unlawful (i) for any person to introduce into commerce any pipe, pipe fitting or fixture that is not lead free, (ii) for persons engaged in the business of selling plumbing supplies to sell solder or flux which is not lead free, or (iii) for any person to introduce into commerce any solder or flux which is not lead free unless such solder or flux bears a prominent label stating that it is illegal to use such solder or flux in the installation or repair of any plumbing providing water for human consumption."

(B) Subsection (d) is amended by adding the following at the end thereof: "Effective 4 years after the enactment of the Lead Contamination Control Act Amendments of 1991, when used with respect to pipes, pipe fittings, fixtures, solder, and flux, such term refers to pipes, pipe fittings, fixtures, solder, and flux that either have no lead content or that have been certified as lead free by the Administrator. The Administrator may certify a pipe, pipe fitting, fixture, solder, or flux as lead free only if the Administrator determines that (A) such pipe, pipe fitting, fixture, solder, or flux cannot feasibly be manufactured without lead or with a lower lead content, (B) such product meets the definition of lead free under paragraph (1) or (2), as applicable, and (C) use of such pipe, pipe fitting, fixture, solder, or flux, when new and after 30 days of usage, will not cause tap water lead concentrations to exceed 10 parts per billion (ppb), as demonstrated pursuant to leach tests using corrosive water and dwell periods of at least 10 hours."

(2) ENFORCEMENT.—Title XIV of the Public Health Service Act (the Safe Drinking Water Act; 42 U.S.C. 300g-6) is amended as follows:

(A) Subsection (c) of section 1417 is amended by inserting "(1)" after "Penalties.—" and by adding the following at the end thereof:

"(2) Any person who violates any requirement of this section, including any requirement of any regulation, order, or certification issued under this section, shall be in violation of this section and shall be liable to the United States for a civil penalty in an amount not to exceed $10,000 for each such violation. The $10,000 amount specified in the preceding sentence shall be adjusted annually for each calendar year after the calendar year 1991 to account for inflation or deflation."

"(3) The Administrator may commence a civil action to enjoin any violation of this section or to assess and recover any civil penalty under paragraph (2). Any action under this paragraph may be brought in the district court of the United States for the district in which the violation is alleged to have occurred or in which the defendant resides or has its principal place of business, and the court shall have jurisdiction to issue injunctive relief and to assess a civil penalty."

"(4) The Administrator may issue an order to any person requiring such person to comply with any requirement of this section and the Administrator may, after notice and opportunity for hearing on the record in accordance with section 554 and 556 of title 5 of the United States Code, issue an order assessing a civil penalty for violation of this section."

(B) In subsection (a)(1) of section 1449 after "alleged" insert "to have violated or".

(C) The last sentence of subsection (a) of section 1449 is amended by inserting the following before the period at the end "and to apply any appropriate civil penalties (except for actions under paragraph (2))".

(D) Insert in section 1449 "or a State with primary enforcement responsibility" after "the Administrator" in each place such term appears.

(E) In section 1445(a)(1), strike all of the first sentence before "shall establish" and insert "Every person who is subject to any requirement of this title" and strike "by regulation".

(F) In section 1445(b)(1), strike "any supplier of water" and all that follows down to "is authorized to" and insert "any person who is subject to any requirement of this title or any person who is in charge of any property of such person,".

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I am delighted to join with my colleagues Senator LAUTENBERG and Senator DURENBERGER in introducing the Lead in Drinking Water Reduction Act. The more we learn about lead, the more we understand how dangerous it is to our children, and how important it is that we remove it from the environment. Lead in drinking water is responsible for 10 to 20 percent of the total lead exposure in young children. We know how to test for lead in water and we could be protecting our children from being exposed to lead in the water they drink at home and at school, yet we have failed to do so. Instead, we have waited for the Environmental Protection Agency to regulate lead in drinking water and it has failed to do so. Today, we are introducing legislation that will finally ensure that our children do not risk lead poisoning by drinking water.

The Lead in Drinking Water Reduction Act does what EPA has failed to do over the past 5 years, it protects the public health by strictly regulating lead in our drinking water and mandating prompt action to reduce the lead throughout our Nation's drinking water systems. The bill establishes a limit for lead in tapwater. Water systems will be required to monitor lead levels at the tap; however, under this legislation water systems which comply with the corrosion control and lead service line replacement provisions will not be held liable if the tapwater monitorings show levels above the established lead limit. I believe these provisions provide workable, effective protections for our children.

Today, the National Resources Defense Council released a report on the failure of the States to test schools and day care facilities for lead in drinking water. In 1988, Congress enacted legislation requiring States to identify and eliminate lead hazards in school and day care drinking water. In very few States have these requirements been met and every day in schools and day care centers across the country children are drinking water which may contain hazardous amounts of lead. This bill will require that the testing of lead in schools and day care centers be completed within 18 months after enactment and that parents be notified of the results.

I look forward to working with my colleagues to ensure that this legislation and the Lead Exposure Reduction Act previously introduced by Senator REID and myself become law this year. As the cover story in this week's Newsweek graphically illustrates children all across America are being irrevocably harmed by lead and we must take action now.

By Mr. SPECTER (for himself and Mr. WOFFORD):

S.J. Res. 175. Joint resolution disapproving the recommendations of the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission; to the Committee on Armed Services.

DISAPPROVAL OF RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE BASE CLOSURE AND REALIGNMENT COMMISSION

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, today I propose a joint resolution of disapproval of the recommendations of the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission as submitted by the President on July 10, 1991. I urge my colleagues to join me in approving this resolution so that we may send a strong signal to the Department of Defense, and the Navy in particular, that Congress will no longer tolerate the blatant disregard of congressional intent as exhibited by the Navy's non-compliance with the base closure statute.

I am confident that almost all of us in this body support the objectives of the base closure process—to reduce our defense infrastructure to levels sufficient to support the present and future composition of our Armed Forces. More importantly, we realize that these reductions must be made in accordance with a defense outlook and force structure plan which will prepare us to meet the security challenges of the 1990's and beyond.

For this reason, and to avoid the appearance of bias as exhibited often by the 1988 Base Closure Commission, the Congress enacted a base closure law in the fiscal year 1991 Defense Authorization Act which would ensure a fair and objective process. While undoubtedly few of us are completely content with all the recommendations to close specific facilities, I am not here to discuss my displeasure with the closing of facility X or Y. This resolution deals with much more fundamental issues, issues of due process and procedural fairness. The Commission, and the Navy in particular, in many instances appeared to blatantly disregard the procedures and requirements set forth in the base closure statute. As a result, both the Commission and the Navy engaged in activities contrary to both the letter and the spirit of the base closure law.

The Commission based its decisions on a significant amount of information supplied by the Navy which, in violation of the Base Closure Act, was not evaluated or even made available to the General Accounting Office or to Congress. Key documents were withheld—some continue to be withheld—by the Navy and were not provided in some cases until several weeks after the last opportunity for public testimony. In many instances these documents were revealed only hours before the Commission cast its final votes on these facilities.

One memo prepared by the Naval Sea Systems Command and signed by Adm. Claman—the memo which constituted the principal input by the Navy command responsible for planning and oversight of Navy shipyards—was deliberately concealed because it contained information which contradicted the Navy's recommendations.

The Commission decided to adopt key portions of the Navy's list even though the GAO had found that the Navy: First, had not treated all bases equally, as required by the Base Closure Act; second, had not complied with the Secretary of Defense's first four selection criteria, as required by the Base Closure Act; and third, had not complied with the Secretary of Defense's "recordkeeping" and "internal control" requirements. GAO could not determine the basis for the Committee's military value ratings for Navy installations. GAO also identified inconsistencies within the Committee's internal rating process. Explanations of these inconsistencies were never provided by the Navy nor explained by the Base Closure Commission. These inconsistencies obviously prejudiced the results of the Navy's analyses and in the case of shipyards led to the exclusion from further review all naval shipyards except for Philadelphia. The Navy's response to the GAO concerns about their rating system was a glib "not all yellows are equal" and "not all greens are equal" on the Navy's own rating system which used those colors.

In addition, both the Navy and the Commission failed to consider all naval installations inside the United States equally, without regard to whether installations had been previously considered or proposed for closure or realignment. In the case of the Philadelphia Naval Yard we learned from a memo prepared by Adm. Peter Hekman dated December 19, 1990, that the Navy had decided to close Philadelphia even prior to the convening of the Base Structure Committee, the Navy's review panel. The Navy's failure to consider such facilities without prejudice represents yet another violation of the Base Closure Act.

As indicated by the Commission's own findings presented in its final report, the Commission exceeded its statutory authority to make base closure recommendations by considering the "availability" of privately owned shipyards to fulfill requirements for capacity to meet emergency repair needs. The memo signed by Admiral Claman states that:

"This dock is privately owned and its docking schedule is not controlled by the Navy. The cost to have Newport News provide a dedicated dock under contract is considered prohibitive.

The Commission also clearly exceeded its authority in voting to accept the Army Corps of Engineers proposal for reorganization. The Commission didn't decide to review the corps' proposal until May 25, 1991. A brief interlude was provided for members to prepare public testimony on June 5, 1991. However, members didn't have the benefit of a GAO evaluation of the corps' proposal. Moreover, although corps' analyses seemed fairly comprehensive, they provided no justification for their closure recommendations. It was also learned that the Oversight Committee—the group responsible for actually deciding which offices to close—kept no record of its deliberations on which facilities should be realigned.

Further, the Commission acted inappropriately in accepting recommendations made by the Navy for the consolidation of its research and development facilities. The comprehensive lab consolidation plan was presented to the Commission on Friday, June 28, 1991, prior to the final votes that were taken on Sunday, June 30, 1991. The report included no detail about cost assumptions relating to individual facilities, much of which is known to be flawed.

This late presentation violated due process in that Members of Congress were not provided an opportunity to respond to the erroneous conclusions presented by the Commission staff.

Therefore, I maintain that if I—and other Members from affected districts in which naval facilities and Army Corps of Engineers offices were recommended for closure—can honestly go before the thousands of men and women who will be losing their jobs as a result of our actions and say the system was fair but unfortunately your facility must close; then I could say with confidence that the system worked. This, however, is not the case. The process was not fair, the Navy's analyses was fatally flawed, and it appears there may have been deliberate attempts on the part of Navy officials to deceive the Base Closure Commission and the Congress. Beyond the issue of unfair and illegal process, DOD and the Navy Department excluded evidence which would have demonstrated, for example, the importance of a facility like the Philadelphia Naval Yard for national security. For these reasons, I urge my colleagues to support this resolution of disapproval.

By Mr. DIXON (for himself and Mr. BURNS):

S.J. Res. 176. Joint resolution to designate March 19, 1992, as "National Women in Agriculture Day"; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

NATIONAL WOMEN IN AGRICULTURE DAY

● Mr. DIXON. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce a joint resolution designating March 19, 1992, as "National Women in Agriculture Day."

America's economic health and well-being rests upon the agricultural sector's ability to effectively produce and distribute our abundant food supply. Time and time again, the American farmer has proven to be the most productive farmer in the world. Our farmers have succeeded in providing our Nation, and the rest of the world, with an abundance of high quality, low cost, and safe food.

The most basic unit of our agricultural system—the family farm—offers insurance that the Nation's natural resources are protected. In addition, the family farm guarantees continued American success and advances in the agriculture field.

Women, as full working partners on the family farm and in agribusinesses, play a vital role in the agricultural community. The leadership that women provide in all aspects of farming has elevated the American agricultural system to leader status in the world and has set the standard of agricultural production for future generations throughout the world.

Mr. President, it is indeed my pleasure today to pay tribute to the contributions and successes of women in the field of agriculture. Their hard work and dedication ensure health and prosperity for each and every American.

"National Women in Agriculture Day" brings to the forefront these women and their achievements, and asks that each one of us take time on May 19, 1992, to salute them.●

TITLE XXVII—FELON FIREARM PURCHASE PREVENTION

SEC. 2701. FEDERAL FIREARMS LICENSEE REQUIRED TO CONDUCT CRIMINAL BACKGROUND CHECK BEFORE TRANSFER OF FIREARM TO NONLICENSEE.

(a) INTERIM PROVISION.—Section 922 of title 18, United States Code, as amended by section 702 of this Act, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(u)(1) Beginning on the date that is 90 days after the date of enactment of this subsection and ending on the date that the Attorney General certifies that the national instant criminal background check system is in compliance with section 2702(d)(1) of the Violent Crime Control Act of 1991 (except as provided as paragraphs (2) and (3) of section 2702(d) of such Act); it shall be unlawful for any licensed importer, licensed manufacturer, or licensed dealer to sell, deliver, or transfer a handgun to an individual who is not licensed under section 923, unless—

“(A) after the most recent proposal of such transfer by the transferee—

“(i) the transferor has—

“(I) received from the transferee a statement of the transferee containing the information described in paragraph (3);

“(II) verified the identification of the transferee by examining the identification document presented; and

“(III) within 1 day after the transferee furnishes the statement, provided notice of the contents of the statement to the chief law enforcement officer of the place of residence of the transferee; and

“(ii)(I) 5 business days (as defined by days in which State offices are open) have elapsed from the date the transferee furnished notice of the contents of the statement to the chief law enforcement officer, during which period the transferor has not received information from the chief law enforcement officer that receipt for possession of the handgun by the transferee would be in violation of Federal, State, or local law; or

“(II) the transferor has received notice from the chief law enforcement officer that the officer has no information indicating that receipt or possession of the handgun by the transferee would violate Federal, State, or local law;

“(B) the transferee has presented to the transferor a written statement, issued by the chief law enforcement officer of the place of residence of the transferee during the 10-day period ending on the date of the most recent proposal of such transfer by the transferee, stating that the transferee requires access to a handgun because of a threat to the life of the transferee or of any member of the household of the transferee;

“(C)(i) the transferee has presented to the transferor a permit that—

“(I) allows the transferee to possess a handgun; and

“(II) was issued not more than 5 years earlier by the State in which the transfer is to take place; and

“(ii) the law of the State provides that such a permit is to be issued only after an authorized government official has verified that the information available to such official does not indicate that possession of a handgun by the transferee would be in violation of law;

“(D) the Secretary has approved the transfer under section 5812 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986; or

“(E) on application of the transferor, the Attorney General has certified that compliance with subparagraph (A)(i)(III) is impracticable because of the inability of the trans-feror to communicate with the chief law enforcement officer because of the remote location and absence of telecommunication facilities in the remote location of the licensed premises.

"(2) A chief law enforcement officer to whom a transferor has provided notice pursuant to paragraph (1)(A)(i)(III) shall make a reasonable effort to ascertain within 5 business days whether the transferee has a criminal record or whether there is any other legal impediment to the transferee's receiving a handgun, including research in whatever State and local recordkeeping systems are available and in a national system designated by the Attorney General.

"(3) The statement referred to in paragraph (1)(A)(i)(D) shall contain only—

"(A) the name, address, and date of birth appearing on a valid identification document (as defined in section 1028(d)(1)) of the transferee containing a photograph of the transferee and a description of the identification used;

"(B) a statement that transferee—

"(i) is not under indictment for, and has not been convicted in any court of, a crime punishable by imprisonment for a term exceeding one year;

"(ii) is not a fugitive from justice;

"(iii) is not an unlawful use of or addicted to any controlled substance (as defined in section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act);

"(iv) has not been adjudicated as a mental defective or been committed to a mental institution;

"(v) is not an alien who is illegally or unlawfully in the United States;

"(vi) has not been discharged from the Armed Forces under dishonorable conditions; and

"(vii) is not a person who, having been a citizen of the United States, has renounced such citizenship;

"(C) the date the statement is made; and

"(D) notice that the transferee intends to obtain a handgun from the transferor.

"(4) The chief law enforcement officer of the place of residence of a prospective transferee of a handgun, at the request of a person who alleges the person requires access to a handgun because of a threat to the life of the person or a member of the household of the person, shall immediately meet with the person and forthwith sign a written statement described in paragraph (1)(B) unless the officer has clear and convincing evidence that no threat was made to the life of the person or any member of the household of the person.

"(5) Any transferor of a handgun who, after such transfer, receives a report from a chief law enforcement officer containing information that receipt or possession of the handgun by the transferee violates Federal, State, or local law shall immediately communicate all information the transferor has about the transfer and the transferee to—

"(A) the chief law enforcement officer of the place of business of the transferor; and

"(B) the chief law enforcement officer of the place of residence of the transferee.

"(6) Any transferor who receives information, not otherwise available to the public, in a report under this subsection shall not disclose such information except to the transferee, to law enforcement authorities, or pursuant to the direction of a court of law.

"(7)(A) Any transferor who sells, delivers, or otherwise transfers a handgun to a transferee shall retain the copy of the statement of the transferee with respect to the handgun transaction.

"(B)(1) Unless the chief law enforcement officer to whom notice is provided under paragraph (1)(A)(i)(III) determines that a transaction shall, within 5 days after the date the transferee made such statement, destroy and record containing information derived from such statement.

"(ii) Information conveyed to a chief law enforcement officer under paragraph (1)(A)(i)(III)—

"(I) shall not be conveyed to any person except a person who has a need to know in order to carry out this subsection; and

"(II) shall not be used for any purpose other than to carry out this subsection.

"(8) A chief law enforcement officer shall not be liable in an action at law for damages for failure to prevent the sale or transfer of a handgun to a person whose receipt or possession of the handgun is unlawful under this section.

"(9) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'chief law enforcement officer' means the chief of police, the sheriff, or an equivalent officer or the designee of any such individual.

"(10) The Secretary shall take necessary actions to ensure that the provisions of this subsection are published and disseminated to licensed dealers and to the public."

(b) PERMANENT PROVISION.—Section 922 of title 18, United States Code, as amended by subsection (a), is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(v)(1) Beginning on the date that the Attorney General certifies that the national instant criminal background check system is in compliance with section 2702(d)(1) of the Violent Crime Control Act of 1991 (except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3) of section 2702(d) of such Act), a licensed importer, licensed manufacturer, or licensed dealer shall not transfer a firearm from the business inventory of the licensee to any other person who is not such a licensee, unless—

"(A) before the completion of the transfer, the licensee contacts the national instant criminal background check system established under section 2703 of the Felon Firearm Purchase Prevention Act of 1991; and

"(B) the system notifies the licensee that the system has not located any record that demonstrates that the receipt of a firearm by such other person would violate subsection (g) or (n) of this section.

"(2) Paragraph (1) shall not apply to a firearm transfer between a licensee and another person if—

"(A) such other person presents to the licensee a valid permit or license, issued by the State or political subdivision thereof in which the transfer is to occur, that authorizes such other person to purchase, possess, or carry a firearm;

"(B) The Secretary has approved the transfer under section 5812 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986; or

"(C) on application of the transferor, the Secretary has certified that compliance with paragraph (1)(A) is impracticable because of the inability of the transferor to communicate with the national instant criminal background check system because of the remote location and absence of telecommunication facilities in the remote location of the licensee premises.

"(3) If the national instant criminal background check system notifies the licensee that the information available to the system does not demonstrate that the receipt of a firearm by such other person would violate subsection (g) or (n), and the licensee transfers a firearm to such other person, the licensee shall include in the record of the transfer the unique identification number provided by the system with respect to the transfer.

"(4) If the licensee knowingly transfers a firearm to such other person and knowingly fails to comply with paragraph (1) with respect to the transfer and, at the time such other person most recently proposed the transfer, the national instant criminal background check system was operating and information was available to the system demonstrating that receipt of a firearm by such other person would violate subsection (g) or (n), the Secretary may, after notice and opportunity for a hearing, suspend for not more than 6 months or revoke any license issued to the licensee under this section, and may impose on the licensee a civil fine of not more than $5,000.

"(5) A State employee responsible for providing information to the national instant criminal background check system shall not be liable in an action at law for damages for failure to prevent the sale or transfer of a firearm to a person whose receipt or possession of the firearm is unlawful under this section."

(c) PENALTY.—Section 924(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1) by striking "(2) or (3)"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

"(5) Whoever knowingly violates section 922 (u) or (v) shall be fined not more than $1,000, imprisoned for not more than 1 year, or both."

SEC. 2702. NATIONAL INSTANT CRIMINAL BACKGROUND CHECK SYSTEM.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF SYSTEM.—The Attorney General of the United States shall establish a national instant criminal background check system that any licensee may contact for information on whether receipt of a firearm by a prospective transferee thereof would violate section 922 (g) or (n) of title 18, United States Code.

(b) EXPEDITED ACTION BY THE ATTORNEY GENERAL.—The Attorney General shall expedite—

(1) the incorporation of State criminal history records into the Federal criminal records system maintained by the Federal Bureau of Investigation;

(2) the development of hardware and software systems to link State criminal history check systems into the national instant criminal background check system established by the Attorney General pursuant to this section; and

(3) the current revitalization initiatives by the Federal Bureau of Investigation for technologically advanced fingerprint and criminal records identification.

(c) PROVISION OF STATE CRIMINAL RECORDS TO THE NATIONAL INSTANT CRIMINAL BACKGROUND CHECK SYSTEM.—(1) Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall—

(A) determine the type of computer hardware and software that will be used to operate the national instant criminal background check system and the means by which State criminal records systems will communicate with the national system;

(B) investigate the criminal records system of each State and determine for each State a timetable by which the State should be able to provide criminal records on an on line capacity basis to the national system;

(C) notify each State of the determinations made pursuant to subparagraphs (A) and (B).

(2) The Attorney General shall require as a part of the State timetable that the State achieve, by the end of 5 years after the date of enactment of this Act, at least 80 percent currency of case dispositions in computerized criminal history files for all cases in which there has been an entry of activity within the last 5 years and continue to maintain such a system.

(d) NATIONAL SYSTEM CERTIFICATION.—(1) On or after the date that is 30 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall certify that—

(A) the national system has achieved at least 80 percent currency of case dispositions in computerized criminal history files for all cases in which there has been an entry of activity within the last 5 years on a national average basis; and

(B) the States are in compliance with the timetable established pursuant to subsection (C).

(2) If on the date of certification in paragraph (1), a State that is not in compliance with the timetable established pursuant to subsection (c), the provision of section 922(u) of title 18, United States Code, as added by section 2701, shall remain in effect in such State. The Attorney General shall certify if a State subject to the provisions of section 922(u) under the preceding sentence achieves compliance with its timetable after the date of certification in paragraph (1) and section 922(u) of title 18, United States Code, as added by section 2701, shall not apply to such State.

(3) Six years after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall certify whether or not a State is in compliance with subsection (c)(2) and if the State is not in compliance, the provisions of section 922(u) of title 18, United States Code, shall be in effect. The Attorney General shall certify if a State subject to the provisions of section 922(u) under the preceding sentence achieves compliance with the standards in subsection (c)(2) and section 922(u) of title 18, United States Code, as added by section 2701, shall not apply to such State.

(e) NOTIFICATION OF LICENSEES.—On establishment of the system under this section, the Attorney General shall notify each licensee of the existence and purpose of the system and the means to be used to contact the system.

(f) ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS.—

(1) AUTHORITY TO OBTAIN OFFICIAL INFORMATION.—Notwithstanding any other law, the Attorney General may secure directly from any department or agency of the United States such information on persons for whom receipt of a firearm would violate section 922(g) or (n) of title 18, United States Code as is necessary to enable the system to operate in accordance with this section. On request of the Attorney General, the head of such department or agency shall furnish such information to the system.

(2) OTHER AUTHORITY.—The Attorney General shall develop such computer software, design and obtain such telecommunications and computer hardware, and employ such personnel, as are necessary to establish and operate the system in accordance with this section.

(g) CORRECTION OF ERRONEOUS SYSTEM INFORMATION.—If the system established under this section informs an individual contacting the system that receipt of a firearm by a prospective transferee would violate section 922 (g) or (n) of title 18, United States Code, the transferee may request the Attorney General to provide such other person with the reasons therefor. Upon receipt of such a request, the Attorney General shall immediately comply with the request. The transferee may submit to the Attorney General information that to correct, clarify, or supplement records of the system with respect to the transferee. After receipt of such information, the Attorney General shall immediately consider the information, investigate the matter further, and correct all erroneous Federal records relating to such the transferee and give notice of the error to any Federal department or agency or any State that was the source of such erroneous records.

(h) REGULATIONS.—After 90 days notice to the public and an opportunity for hearing by interested parties, the Attorney General shall prescribe regulations to ensure the privacy and security of the information of the system established under this section.

(i) PROHIBITIONS RELATING TO ESTABLISHMENT OF REGISTRATION SYSTEMS WITH RESPECT TO FIREARMS.—No department, agency, officer, or employee of the United States may—

(1) require that any record or portion thereof maintained by the system established under this section be recorded at or transferred to a facility owned, managed, or controlled by the United States or any State or political subdivision thereof; or

(2) use the system established under this section to establish any system for the registration of firearms, firearm owners, or firearm transactions or dispositions, except with respect to persons prohibited by section 922(g) or (n) of title 18, United States Code, from receiving a firearm.

(j) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section:

(1) LICENSEE.—The term "licensee" means a licensed importer, licensed manufacturer, or licensed dealer under section 923 of title 18, United States Code.

(2) OTHER TERMS.—The terms "firearm", "licensed importer", "licensed manufacturer", and "licensed dealer" have the meanings stated in section 921(a) (3), (9), (10), and (11), respectively, of title 18, United States Code.

SEC. 2703. FUNDING FOR IMPROVEMENT OF CRIMINAL RECORDS.

(a) IMPROVEMENTS IN STATE RECORDS.—

(1) USE OF FORMULA GRANTS.—Section 509(b) of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3759(b)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (2) by striking "and" after the semicolon;

(2) in paragraph (3) by striking the period and inserting "; and"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(4) the improvement of State record systems and the sharing of all of the records described in paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) and the records required by the Attorney General under section 3 of the Felon Firearm Purchase Prevention Act of 1991 with the Attorney General for the purpose of implementing the Felon Firearm Purchase Prevention Act of 1991."

(2) ADDITIONAL FUNDING.—

(A) GRANTS FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF CRIMINAL RECORDS.—The Attorney General shall, subject to appropriations and with preference to States that as of the date of enactment of this Act have the lowest percent currency of case dispositions in computerized criminal history files, make a grant to each State to be used—

(i) for the creation of a computerized criminal history record system or improvement of an existing system;

(ii) to improve accessibility to the national instant criminal background system; and

(iii) upon establishment of the national system, to assist the State in the transmittal of criminal records to the national system.

(B) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated for grants under subparagraph (A) a total of $100,000,000 for fiscal year 1992 and all fiscal years thereafter.

(b) WITHHOLDING STATE FUNDS.—Effective on the date of enactment of this Act the Attorney General may reduce by up to 50 percent the allocation to a State for a fiscal year under title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 of a State that is not in compliance with the timetable established for such State under section 2702(c).

(c) WITHHOLDING OF DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE FUNDS.—If the Attorney General does not certify the national instant criminal background check system pursuant to section 2702(d)(1) by—

(1) 30 months after the date of enactment of this Act the general administrative funds appropriated to the Department of Justice for the fiscal year beginning in the calendar year that is 30 months after the date of enactment of this Act shall be reduced by 5 percent on a monthly basis; and

(2) 42 months after the date of enactment of this Act the general administrative funds appropriated to the Department of Justice for the fiscal beginning in the calendar year that is 42 months after the date of enactment of this Act shall be reduced by 10 percent on a monthly basis.

SEC. 202. CONSTITUTIONAL PROCEDURES FOR THE IMPOSITION OF THE SENTENCE OF DEATH.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part II of title 18 of the United States Code is amended by adding the following new chapter after chapter 227:

"CHAPTER 228—DEATH SENTENCE

"Sec.

"3591. Sentence of death.

"3592. Mitigating and aggravating factors to be considered in determining whether a sentence of death is justified.

"3593. Special hearing to determine whether a sentence of death is justified.

"3594. Imposition of a sentence of death.

"3595. Review of a sentence of death.

"3596. Implementation of a sentence of death.

"3597. Use of State facilities.

"3598. Special provisions for Indian country.

"§ 3591. Sentence of death

"A defendant who has been found guilty of—

"(1) an offense described in section 794 or section 2381 of this title;

"(2) an offense described in section 1751(c) of this title, if the offense, as determined beyond a reasonable doubt at the hearing under section 3593, constitutes an attempt to kill the President of the United States and results in bodily injury to the President or comes dangerously close to causing the death of the President; or

"(3) any other offense for which a sentence of death is provided, if the defendant, as determined beyond a reasonable doubt at the hearing under section 3593—

"(A) intentionally killed the victim;

"(B) intentionally inflicted serious bodily injury that resulted in the death of the victim;

"(C) intentionally participated in an act, contemplating that the life of a person would be taken or intending that lethal force would be used in connection with a person, other than one of the participants in the offense, and the victim died as a direct result of the act; or

"(D) intentionally and specifically engaged in an act, knowing that the act created a grave risk of death to a person, other than one of the participants in the offense, such that participation in the act constituted a reckless disregard for human life and the victim died as a direct result of the act, shall be sentenced to death if, after consideration of the factors set forth in section 3592 in the course of a hearing held pursuant to section 3593, it is determined that imposition of a sentence of death is justified, except that no person may be sentenced to death who was less than 18 years of age at the time of the offense.

"§ 3592. Mitigating and aggravating factors to be considered in determining whether a sentence of death is justified"(a) MITIGATING FACTORS.—In determining whether a sentence of death is to be imposed on a defendant, the finder of fact shall consider any mitigating factor, including the following:"(1) IMPAIRED CAPACITY.—The defendant's capacity to appreciate the wrongfulness of the defendant's conduct or to conform conduct to the requirements of law was significantly impaired, regardless of whether the capacity was so impaired as to constitute a defense to the charge."(2) DURESS.—The defendant was under unusual and substantial duress, regardless of whether the duress was of such a degree as to constitute a defense to the charge."(3) MINOR PARTICIPATION.—The defendant is punishable as a principal (as defined in section 2 of title 18 of the United States Code) in the offense, which was committed by another, but the defendant's participation was relatively minor, regardless of whether the participation was so minor as to constitute a defense to the charge.

"(4) FORSEEABILITY.—The defendant could not reasonably have foreseen that the defendant's conduct in the course of the commission of murder, or other offense resulting in death for which the defendant was convicted, would cause, or would create a grave risk of causing, death to any person."(5) YOUTH.—The defendant was youthful, even though not under the age of 18."(6) NO PRIOR CRIMINAL RECORD.—The defendant did not have a significant prior criminal record."(7) DISTURBANCE.—The defendant committed the offense under severe mental or emotional disturbance."(8) OTHER DEFENDANTS.—Another defendant or defendants, equally culpable in the crime, will not be punished by death."(9) VICTIM'S CONSENT.—The victim consented to the criminal conduct that resulted in the victim's death."(10) OTHER FACTORS.—Other factors in the defendant's background or character that mitigate against imposition of the death sentence."(b) AGGRAVATING FACTORS FOR ESPIONAGE AND TREASON.—In determining whether a sentence of death is justified for an offense described in section 3591(1), the jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall consider each of the following aggravating factors and determine which, if any, exist:"(1) PRIOR ESPIONAGE OR TREASON OFFENSE.—The defendant has previously been convicted of another offense involving espionage or treason for which a sentence of either life imprisonment or death was authorized by law."(2) GRAVE RISK TO NATIONAL SECURITY.—In the commission of the offense the defendant knowingly created a grave risk of substantial danger to the national security."(3) GRAVE RISK OF DEATH.—In the commission of the offense the defendant knowingly created a grave risk of death to another person. The jury, or if there is no jury, the court, may consider whether any other aggravating factor exists."(c) AGGRAVATING FACTORS FOR HOMICIDE AND FOR ATTEMPTED MURDER OF THE PRESIDENT.—In determining whether a sentence of death is justified for an offense described in section 3591 (2) or (3), the jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall consider each of the following aggravating factors and determine which, if any, exist:"(1) DEATH DURING COMMISSION OF ANOTHER CRIME.—The death, or injury resulting in death, occurred during the commission or attempted commission of, or during the immediate flight from the commission of, an offense under section 751 (prisoners in custody of institution or officer), section 794 (gathering or delivering defense information to aid foreign government), section 844(d) (transportation of explosives in interstate commerce for certain purposes), section 844(f) (destruction of Government property in interstate commerce by explosives), section 1118 (prisoners serving life term), section 1201 (kidnaping), or section 2381 (treason) of this title, or section 902 (i) or (n) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 (49 U.S.C. 1472 (i) or (n)) (aircraft piracy)."(2) PREVIOUS CONVICTION OF OFFENSE FOR WHICH A SENTENCE OF DEATH OR LIFE IMPRISONMENT WAS AUTHORIZED.—The defendant has previously been convicted of another Federal or State offense resulting in the death of a person, for which a sentence of life imprisonment or a sentence of death was authorized by statute."(3) PREVIOUS CONVICTION OF OTHER SERIOUS OFFENSES.—The defendant has previously been convicted of two or more Federal or State offenses, punishable by a term of imprisonment of more than one year, committed on different occasions, involving the infliction of, or attempted infliction of, serious bodily injury or death upon another person."(4) GRAVE RISK OF DEATH TO ADDITIONAL PERSONS.—The defendant, in the commission of the offense, or in escaping apprehension for the violation of the offense, knowingly created a grave risk of death to one or more persons in addition to the victim of the offense."(5) HEINOUS, CRUEL, OR DEPRAVED MANNER OF COMMITTING OFFENSE.—The defendant committed the offense in an especially heinous, cruel, or depraved manner in that it involved torture or serious physical abuse to the victim."(6) PROCUREMENT OF OFFENSE BY PAYMENT.—The defendant procured the commission of the offense by payment, or promise of payment, of anything of pecuniary value."(7) PECUNIARY GAIN.—The defendant committed the offense as consideration for the receipt, or in the expectation of the receipt, of anything of pecuniary value."(8) SUBSTANTIAL PLANNING AND PREMEDITATION.—The defendant committed the offense after substantial planning and premeditation to cause the death of a person or commit an act of terrorism."(9) CONVICTION FOR TWO FELONY DRUG OFFENSES.—The defendant has previously been convicted of two or more State or Federal offenses punishable by a term of imprisonment of more than one year, committed on different occasions, involving the distribution of a controlled substance."(10) VULNERABILITY OF VICTIM.—The victim was particularly vulnerable due to old age, youth, or infirmity."(11) CONVICTION FOR SERIOUS FEDERAL DRUG OFFENSES.—The defendant had previously been convicted of violating title II or title III of the Controlled Substances Act for which a sentence of 5 or more years may be imposed or had previously been convicted of engaging in a continuing criminal enterprise."(12) CONTINUING CRIMINAL ENTERPRISE INVOLVING DRUG SALES TO MINORS.—The defendant committed the offense in the course of engaging in a continuing criminal enterprise in violation of section 408(c) of the Controlled Substances Act and that violation involved the distribution of drugs to persons under the age of 21 in violation of section 418 of such Act."(13) HIGH PUBLIC OFFICIALS.—The defendant committed the offense against—

"(A) the President of the United States, the President-elect, the Vice President, the Vice-President-elect, the Vice-President-designate, or, if there is no Vice President, the officer next in order of succession to the office of the President of the United States, or any person who is acting as President under the Constitution and laws of the United States;

"(B) a chief of state, head of government, or the political equivalent, of a foreign nation;

"(C) a foreign official listed in section 1116(b)(3)(A) of this title, if the official is in the United States on official business; or

"(D) a Federal public servant who is a judge, a law enforcement officer, or an employee of a United States penal or correctional institution—

"(i) while he is engaged in the performance of his official duties;

“(ii) because of the performance of his official duties; or “(iii) because of his status as a public servant.

For purposes of this subparagraph, a ‘law enforcement officer’ is a public servant authorized by law or by a Government agency or Congress to conduct or engage in the prevention, investigation, or prosecution or adjudication of an offense, and includes those engaged in corrections, parole, or probation functions.

The jury, or if there is no jury, the court, may consider whether any other aggravating factor exists.

“(a) NOTICE BY THE GOVERNMENT.—If, in a case involving an offense described in section 3591, the attorney for the government believes that the circumstances of the offense are such that a sentence of death is justified under this chapter, the attorney shall, a reasonable time before the trial, or before acceptance by the court of a plea of guilty, or at such time thereafter as the court may permit upon a showing of good cause, sign and file with the court, and serve on the defendant, a notice—

“(1) stating that the government believes that the circumstances of the offense are such that, if the defendant is convicted, a sentence of death is justified under this chapter and that the government will seek the sentence of death; and

“(2) setting forth the aggravating factor or factors that the government, if the defendant is convicted, proposes to prove as justifying a sentence of death.

The court may permit the attorney for the government to amend the notice upon a showing of good cause.

“(b) HEARING BEFORE A COURT OR JURY.—If the attorney for the government has filed a notice as required under subsection (a) and the defendant is found guilty of or pleads guilty to an offense described in section 3591, the judge who presided at the trial or before whom the guilty plea was entered, or another judge if that judge is unavailable, shall conduct a separate sentencing hearing to determine the punishment to be imposed. The hearing shall be conducted—

“(1) before the jury that determined the defendant’s guilt;

“(2) before a jury impaneled for the purpose of the hearing if—

“(A) the defendant was convicted upon a plea of guilty;

“(B) the defendant was convicted after a trial before the court sitting without a jury;

“(C) the jury that determined the defendant’s guilt was discharged for good cause; or “(D) after initial imposition of a sentence under this section, reconsideration of the sentence under this section is necessary; or

“(3) before the court alone, upon the motion of the defendant and with the approval of the attorney for the government.

A jury impaneled pursuant to paragraph (2) shall consist of twelve members, unless, at any time before the conclusion of the hearing, the parties stipulate, with the approval of the court, that it shall consist of a lesser number.

“(c) PROOF OF MITIGATING AND AGGRAVATING FACTORS.—Notwithstanding rule 32(c) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, when a defendant is found guilty or pleads guilty to an offense under section 3591, no presentence report shall be prepared. At the sentencing hearing, information may be presented as to any matter relevant to the sentence, including any mitigating or aggravating factor permitted or required to be considered under section 3592. Information presented may include the trial transcript and exhibits if the hearing is held before a jury or judge not present during the trial. The defendant may present any information relevant to a mitigating factor. The government may present any information relevant to an aggravating factor, subject to the Federal Rules of Evidence and Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure. The government and the defendant shall be permitted to rebut any information received at the hearing, and shall be given fair opportunity to present argument as to the adequacy of the information to establish the existence of any aggravating or mitigating factor, and as to the appropriateness in the case of imposing a sentence of death. The government shall open the argument. The defendant shall be permitted to reply. The government shall then be permitted to reply in rebuttal. The burden of establishing the existence of any aggravating factor is on the government, and is not satisfied unless the existence of such a factor is established beyond a reasonable doubt. The burden of establishing the existence of any mitigating factor is on the defendant, and is not satisfied unless the existence of such a factor is established by a preponderance of the information.

“(d) RETURN OF SPECIAL FINDINGS.—The jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall consider all the information received during the hearing. It shall return special findings identifying any aggravating factor or factors set forth in section 3592 found to exist and any other aggravating factor for which notice has been provided under subsection (a) found to exist. A finding with respect to a mitigating factor may be made by one or more members of the jury, and any member of the jury who finds the existence of a mitigating factor may consider such factor established for purposes of this section regardless of the number of jurors who concur that the factor has been established. A finding with respect to any aggravating factor must be unanimous. If no aggravating factor set forth in section 3592 is found to exist, the court shall impose a sentence other than death authorized by law.

“(e) RETURN OF A FINDING CONCERNING A SENTENCE OF DEATH.—If, in the case of—

“(1) an offense described in section 3591(1), an aggravating factor required to be considered under section 3592(b) is found to exist; or

“(2) an offense described in section 3591 (2) or (3), an aggravating factor required to be considered under section 3592(c) is found to exist, the jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall consider whether all the aggravating factor or factors found to exist sufficiently outweigh all the mitigating factor or factors found to exist to justify a sentence of death, or, in the absence of a mitigating factor, whether the aggravating factor or factors alone are sufficient to justify a sentence of death. Based upon this consideration, the jury by unanimous vote, or if there is no jury, the court, shall recommend whether a sentence of death shall be imposed rather than a lesser sentence. The jury or the court, if there is no jury, regardless of its findings with respect to aggravating and mitigating factors, is never required to impose a death sentence, and the jury shall be so instructed.

“(f) SPECIAL PRECAUTION TO ENSURE AGAINST DISCRIMINATION.—In a hearing held before a jury, the court, prior to the return of a finding under subsection (e), shall instruct the jury that, in considering whether a sentence of death is justified, it shall not consider the race, color, religious beliefs, national origin, or sex of the defendant or of any victim and that the jury is not to recommend a sentence of death unless it has concluded that it would recommend a sentence of death for the crime in question no matter what the race, color, religious beliefs, national origin, or sex of the defendant or of any victim may be. The jury, upon return of a finding under subsection (e), shall also return to the court a certificate, signed by each juror, that consideration of the race, color, religious beliefs, national origin, or sex of the defendant or any victim was not involved in reaching his or her individual decision and that the individual juror would have made the same recommendation regarding a sentence for the crime in question no matter what the race, color, religious beliefs, national origin, or sex of the defendant or any victim may be.

“§3594. Imposition of a sentence of death

“Upon a finding under section 3593(e) that a sentence of death is justified, the court shall sentence the defendant to death. Otherwise, the court shall impose any sentence other than death that is authorized by law. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, if the maximum term of imprisonment for the offense is life imprisonment, the court may impose a sentence of life imprisonment without parole.

“§3595. Review of a sentence of death

“(a) APPEAL.—In a case in which a sentence of death is imposed, the sentence shall be subject to review by the court of appeals upon appeal by the defendant. Notice of appeal must be filed within the time specified for the filing of a notice of appeal. An appeal under this section may be consolidated with an appeal of the judgment of conviction and shall have priority over all other cases.

“(b) REVIEW.—The court of appeals shall review the entire record in the case, including—

“(1) the evidence submitted during the trial;

“(2) the information submitted during the sentencing hearing;

“(3) the procedures employed in the sentencing hearing; and “(4) the special findings returned under section 3593(d).

“(c) DECISION AND DISPOSITION.—

“(1) The court of appeals shall address all substantive and procedural issues raised on the appeal of a sentence of death, and shall consider whether the sentence of death was imposed under the influence of passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor and whether the evidence supports the special finding of the existence of an aggravating factor required to be considered under section 3592.

“(2) Whenever the court of appeals finds that—

“(A) the sentence of death was imposed under the influence of passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor;

“(B) the admissible evidence adduced does not support the special finding of the existence of the required aggravating factor; or the court shall remand the case for reconsideration under section 3593 or imposition of a sentence other than death.

“(C) other legal error requires reversal of the sentence of death,

“(3) The court of appeals shall state in writing the reasons for its disposition of an appeal of a sentence of death under this section.

§3596. Implementation of a sentence of death

"(a) IN GENERAL.—A person who has been sentenced to death pursuant to the provisions of this chapter shall be committed to the custody of the Attorney General until exhaustion of the procedures for appeal of the judgment of conviction and for review of the sentence. When the sentence is to be implemented, the Attorney General shall release the person sentenced to death to the custody of a United States marshal, who shall supervise implementation of the sentence in the manner prescribed by the law of the State in which the sentence is imposed. If the law of such State does not provide for implementation of a sentence of death, the court shall designate another State, the law of which does provide for the implementation of a sentence of death, and the sentence shall be implemented in the latter State in the manner prescribed by such law.

"(b) PREGNANT WOMAN.—A sentence of death shall not be carried out upon a woman while she is pregnant.

"(c) MENTAL CAPACITY.—A sentence of death shall not be carried out upon a person who is mentally retarded. A sentence of death shall not be carried out upon a person who, as a result of mental disability—

"(1) cannot understand the nature of the pending proceedings, what such person was tried for, the reason for the punishment, or the nature of the punishment; or

"(2) lacks the capacity to recognize or understand facts which would make the punishment unjust or unlawful, or lacks the ability to convey such information to counsel or to the court.

§3597. Use of State facilities

"(a) IN GENERAL.—A United States marshal charged with supervising the implementation of a sentence of death may use appropriate State or local facilities for the purpose, may use the services of an appropriate State or local official or of a person such an official employs for the purpose, and shall pay the costs thereof in an amount approved by the Attorney General.

"(b) EXCUSE OF AN EMPLOYEE ON MORAL OR RELIGIOUS GROUNDS.—No employee of any State department of corrections or the Federal Bureau of Prisons and no employee providing services to that department or bureau under contract shall be required, as a condition of that employment or contractual obligation, to be in attendance at or to participate in any execution carried out under this section if such participation is contrary to the moral or religious convictions of the employee. For purposes of this subsection, the term "participation in executions" includes personal preparation of the condemned individual and the apparatus used for execution and supervision of the activities of other personnel in carrying out such activities.

§ 3598. Special provisions for Indian country

Subtitle B—Maritime Terrorism

SEC. 511. SHORT TITLE FOR SUBTITLE B.

This subtitle may be cited as the “Act for the Prevention and Punishment of Violence Against Maritime Navigation and Fixed Platforms”.

SEC. 512. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts Against the Safety of Maritime Navigation requires each contracting State to establish its jurisdiction over certain offenses affecting the safety of maritime navigation;

(2) the Protocol for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts Against the Safety of Fixed Platforms Located on the Continental Shelf, which accompanies the aforementioned Convention, requires that each contracting State to the Protocol establish its jurisdiction over certain offenses affecting the safety of fixed platforms;

(3) such offenses place innocent lives and property in jeopardy, endanger national security, affect domestic tranquility, gravely affect interstate and foreign commerce, and are offenses against the law of nations;

(4) on December 27, 1988, the President of the United States issued Proclamation 5928 proclaiming that the territorial sea of the United States henceforth extended to 12 nautical miles from the baselines of the United States determined in accordance with international law; and

(5) on November 5, 1989, the Senate gave its advice and consent to ratification of the Convention and its Protocol.

SEC. 513. STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.

The purpose of this subtitle is to—

(1) implement fully the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts Against the Safety of Maritime Navigation and the Protocol for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts Against the Safety of Fixed Platforms Located on the Continental Shelf;

(2) clarify Federal criminal jurisdiction over the territorial sea of the United States; and

(3) establish Federal criminal jurisdiction over certain acts committed by or against a national of the United States while upon a foreign vessel during a voyage having a scheduled departure from or arrival in the United States.

SEC. 514. OFFENSES OF VIOLENCE AGAINST MARITIME NAVIGATION OR FIXED PLATFORMS.

Chapter 111 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sections:

“§ 2280. Violence against maritime navigation

“(a) Whoever unlawfully and intentionally—

“(1) seizes or exercises control over a ship by force or threat thereof or any other form of intimidation;

“(2) performs an act of violence against a person on board a ship if that act is likely to endanger the safe navigation of that ship;

“(3) destroys a ship or causes damage to a ship or to its cargo which is likely to endanger the safe navigation of that ship;

“(4) places or causes to be placed on a ship, by any means whatsoever, a device or substance which is likely to destroy that ship, or cause damage to that ship or its cargo which endangers or is likely to endanger the safe navigation of that ship;

“(5) destroys or seriously damages maritime navigational facilities or seriously interferes with their operation, if such act is likely to endanger the safe navigation of a ship;

“(6) communicates information, knowing the information to be false and under circumstances in which such information may reasonably be believed, thereby endangering the safe navigation of a ship;

“(7) injures or kills any person in connection with the commission or the attempted commission of any of the offenses set forth in paragraphs (1) to (6); or shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than twenty years, or both; and if the death of any person results from conduct prohibited by this subsection, shall be punished by death or imprisoned for any term of years or for life.

“(8) attempts to do any act prohibited under paragraphs (1)–(7);

“(b) Whoever threatens to do any act prohibited under paragraphs (2), (3) or (5) of subsection (a), with apparent determination and will to carry the threat into execution, if the threatened act is likely to endanger the safe navigation of the ship in question, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than five years, or both.

“(c) There is jurisdiction over the prohibited activity in subsections (a) and (b)—

“(1) in the case of a covered ship, if—

“(A) such activity is committed—

“(i) against or on board a ship flying the flag of the United States at the time the prohibited activity is committed;

“(ii) in the United States; or

“(iii) by a national of the United States or by a stateless person whose habitual residence is in the United States;

“(B) during the commission of such activity, a national of the United States is seized, threatened, injured or killed; or

“(C) the offender is later found in the United States after such activity is committed;

“(2) in the case of a ship navigating or scheduled to navigate solely within the territorial sea or internal waters of a country other than the United States, if the offender is later found in the United States after such activity is committed; and

“(3) in the case of any vessel, if such activity is committed in an attempt to compel the United States to do or abstain from doing any act.

“(d) The master of a covered ship flying the flag of the United States who has reasonable grounds to believe that he has on board his ship any person who has committed an offense under Article 3 of the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts Against the Safety of Maritime Navigation may deliver such person to the authorities of a State Party to that Convention. Before delivering such person to the authorities of another country, the master shall notify in an appropriate manner the Attorney General of the United States of the alleged offense and await instructions from the Attorney General as to what action he should take. When delivering the person to a country which is a State Party to the Convention, the master shall, whenever practicable, and if possible before entering the territorial sea of such country, notify the authorities of such country of his intention to deliver such person and the reason therefor. If the master delivers such person, he shall furnish the authorities of such country with the evidence in the master's possession that pertains to the alleged offense.

“(e) As used in this section, the term—

“(1) ‘ship’ means a vessel of any type whatsoever not permanently attached to the seabed, including dynamically supported craft, submersibles or any other floating craft: Provided, That the term does not include a warship, a ship owned or operated by a government when being used as a naval auxiliary or for customs or police purposes, or a ship which has been withdrawn from navigation or laid up;

“(2) ‘covered ship’ means a ship that is navigating or is scheduled to navigate into, through or from waters beyond the outer limit of the territorial sea of a single country or a lateral limit of that country's territorial sea with an adjacent country;

“(3) ‘national of the United States’ has the meaning given such term in section 101(a)(22) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1101(a)(22));

“(4) ‘territorial sea of the United States’ means all waters extending seaward to 12 nautical miles from the baselines of the United States determined in accordance with international law; and

“(5) ‘United States’, when used in a geographical sense, includes the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Commonwealth of the Northern Marianas Islands and all territories and possessions of the United States.

“§ 2281. Violence against maritime fixed platforms

“(a) Whoever unlawfully and intentionally—

“(1) seizes or exercises control over a fixed platform by force or threat thereof or any other form of intimidation;

“(2) performs an act of violence against a person on board a fixed platform if that act is likely to endanger its safety;

“(3) destroys a fixed platform or causes damage to it which is likely to endanger its safety;

“(4) places or causes to be placed on a fixed platform, by any means whatsoever, a device or substance which is likely to destroy that fixed platform or likely to endanger its safety;

“(5) injures or kills any person in connection with the commission or the attempted commission of any of the offenses set forth in paragraphs (1) to (4); or shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than twenty years, or both; and if death results to any person from conduct prohibited by this subsection, shall be punished by death or imprisoned for any term of years or for life.

“(6) attempts to do anything prohibited under paragraphs (1)–(5),

“(b) Whoever threatens to do anything prohibited under paragraphs (2) or (3) of subsection (a), with apparent determination and will to carry the threat into execution, if the threatened act is likely to endanger the safety of the fixed platform, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than five years, or both.

“(c) There is jurisdiction over the prohibited activity in subsections (a) and (b) if—

“(1) such activity is committed against or on board a fixed platform—

“(A) that is located on the continental shelf of the United States;

“(B) that is located on the continental shelf of another country, by a national of the United States or by a stateless person whose habitual residence is in the United States; or

“(C) in an attempt to compel the United States to do or abstain from doing any act;

“(2) during the commission of such activity against or on board a fixed platform located on a continental shelf, a national of the United States is seized, threatened, injured or killed; or

“(3) such activity is committed against or on board a fixed platform located outside the United States and beyond the continental shelf of the United States and the offender is later found in the United States.

“(d) As used in this section, the term—

“(1) ‘continental shelf’ means the sea-bed and subsoil of the submarine areas that extend beyond a country's territorial sea to the limits provided by customary international law as reflected in Article 76 of the 1982 Convention on the Law of the Sea;

“(2) ‘fixed platform’ means an artificial island, installation or structure permanently attached to the sea-bed for the purpose of exploration or exploitation of resources or for other economic purposes;

“(3) ‘national of the United States’ has the meaning given such term in section 101(a)(22) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1101(a)(22));

“(4) ‘territorial sea of the United States’ means all waters extending seaward to 12 nautical miles from the baselines of the United States determined in accordance with international law; and

"(5) 'United States', when used in a geographical sense, includes the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Commonwealth of the Northern Marianas Islands and all territories and possessions of the United States."

SEC. 515. CLERICAL AMENDMENTS.

The analysis for chapter 111 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"2280. Violence against maritime navigation.
"2281. Violence against maritime fixed platforms."

SEC. 516. EFFECTIVE DATES.

Section 514 of this subtitle shall take effect on the later of—

(1) the date of the enactment of this subtitle; or

(2)(A) in the case of section 2280 of title 18, United States Code, the date the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts Against the Safety of Maritime Navigation has come into force and the United States has become a party to that Convention; and

(B) in the case of section 2281 of title 18, United States Code, the date the Protocol for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts Against the Safety of Fixed Platforms Located on the Continental Shelf has come into force and the United States has become a party to that Protocol.

SEC. 517. TERRITORIAL SEA EXTENDING TO TWELVE MILES INCLUDED IN SPECIAL MARITIME AND TERRITORIAL JURISDICTION.

The Congress hereby declares that all the territorial sea of the United States, as defined by Presidential Proclamation 5928 of December 27, 1988, is part of the United States, subject to its sovereignty, and, for purposes of Federal criminal jurisdiction, is within the special maritime and territorial jurisdiction of the United States wherever that term is used in title 18, United States Code.

SEC. 518. ASSIMILATED CRIMES IN EXTENDED TERRITORIAL SEA.

Section 13 of title 18, United States Code (relating to the adoption of State laws for areas within Federal jurisdiction), is amended by—

(1) inserting after "title" in subsection (a) the following: "or on, above, or below any portion of the territorial sea of the United States not within the territory of any State, Territory, Possession, or District"; and

(2) inserting at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(c) Whenever any waters of the territorial sea of the United States lie outside the territory of any State, Territory, Possession, or District, such waters (including the airspace above and the seabed and subsoil below, and artificial islands and fixed structures erected thereon) shall be deemed for purposes of subsection (a) to lie within the area of that State, Territory, Possession, or District it would lie within if the boundaries of such State, Territory, Possession, or District were extended seaward to the outer limit of the territorial sea of the United States."

SEC. 519. JURISDICTION OVER CRIMES AGAINST UNITED STATES NATIONALS ON CERTAIN FOREIGN SHIPS.

Section 7 of title 18, United States Code (relating to the special maritime and territorial jurisdiction of the United States), is amended by inserting at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(8) Any foreign vessel during a voyage having a scheduled departure from or arrival in the United States with respect to an offense committed by or against a national of the United States."

Subtitle C—Terrorism Offenses and Sanctions

SEC. 521. TORTURE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part I of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after chapter 113A the following new chapter:

"CHAPTER 113B—TORTURE

"Sec.

"2340. Definitions.

"2340A. Torture.

"2340B. Exclusive remedies.

"§ 2340. Definitions

"As used in this chapter—

"(1) 'torture' means an act committed by a person acting under the color of law specifically intended to inflict severe physical or mental pain or suffering (other than pain or suffering incidental to lawful sanctions) upon another person within his custody or physical control.

"(2) 'severe mental pain or suffering' means the prolonged mental harm caused by or resulting from: (a) the intentional infliction or threatened infliction of severe physical pain or suffering; (b) the administration or application, or threatened administration or application, of mind altering substances or other procedures calculated to disrupt profoundly the senses or the personality; (c) the threat of imminent death; or (d) the threat that another person will imminently be subjected to death, severe physical pain or suffering, or the administration or application of mind altering substances or other procedures calculated to disrupt profoundly the senses or personality.

"(3) 'United States' includes all areas under the jurisdiction of the United States including any of the places within the provisions of sections 5 and 7 of this title and section 101(38) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958, as amended (49 U.S.C. App. 1301(38)).

"§ 2340A. Torture

"(a) Whoever outside the United States commits or attempts to commit torture shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than twenty years, or both; and if death results to any person from conduct prohibited by this subsection, shall be punished by death or imprisoned for any term of years or for life.

"(b) There is jurisdiction over the prohibited activity in subsection (a) if: (1) the alleged offender is a national of the United States; or (2) the alleged offender is present in the United States, irrespective of the nationality of the victim or the alleged offender.

"§ 2340B. Exclusive remedies

"Nothing in this chapter shall be construed as precluding the application of State or local laws on the same subject, nor shall anything in this chapter be construed as creating any substantive or procedural right enforceable by law by any party in any civil proceeding."

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of chapters for part I of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item for chapter 113B the following new item:

"113B. Torture ..... 2340."

SEC. 522. WEAPONS OF MASS DESTRUCTION.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that the use and threatened use of weapons of mass destruction, as defined in the statute enacted by subsection (b) of this section, gravely harm the national security and foreign relations interests of the United States, seriously affect interstate and foreign commerce, and disturb the domestic tranquility of the United States.

(b) OFFENSE.—Chapter 113A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding the following new section:

"§ 2339. Use of weapons of mass destruction

"(a) Whoever uses, or attempts or conspires to use, a weapon of mass destruction—

"(1) against a national of the United States while such national is outside of the United States;

"(2) against any person within the United States; or

"(3) against any property that is owned, leased or used by the United States or by any department or agency of the United States, whether the property is within or outside of the United States; shall be imprisoned for any term of years or for life, and if death results, shall be punished by death or imprisoned for any term of years or for life.

"(b) For purposes of this section—

"(1) 'national of the United States' has the meaning given in section 101(a)(22) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1101(a)(22)); and

"(2) 'weapon of mass destruction' means—

(1) in section 981(a)(1) by inserting at the end thereof the following:

“(F) Any property, real or personal—

“(i) used or intended for use for; or

“(ii) constituting or derived from, the gross profits or other proceeds obtained from a violation of section 32, 36, 351, 844 (f) or (i), 1114, 1116, 1203, 1361, 1363, 1751, 2280, 2281, 2332, or 2339 of this title, or section 902(i) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958, as amended (49 U.S.C. 1472(i)), or to facilitate the concealment or an escape from the commission of any of the foregoing offenses.”; and

(2) in section 982(a) by inserting at the end thereof the following:

“(5) Any property, real or personal—

“(A) used or intended for use for; or

“(B) constituting or derived from,

the gross profits or other proceeds obtained from a violation of section 32, 36, 351, 844 (f) or (i), 1114, 1116, 1203, 1361, 1363, 1751, 2280, 2281, 2332, or 2339 of this title, or section 902(i) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958, as amended (49 U.S.C. 1472(i)), or to facilitate the concealment or an escape from the commission of any of the foregoing offenses.”.

PART II—COOPERATION OF WITNESSES IN TERRORIST INVESTIGATIONS

SEC. 541. SHORT TITLE.

This part may be cited as the “Alien Witness Cooperation Act of 1991”.

SEC. 542. ALIEN WITNESS COOPERATION.

Chapter 224 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by—

(1) redesignating section 3528 as 3529;

(2) adding at the end of section 3529, as redesignated, the following new paragraph:

“As used in section 3528, the terms ‘alien’ and ‘United States’ shall have the same meanings given to them in the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1101 et seq.); and

(3) inserting after section 3527 the following new section:

“§ 3528. Aliens; waiver of admission requirements

“(a) IN GENERAL.—Upon authorizing protection to any alien under this chapter, the United States shall provide such alien with appropriate immigration visas and allow such alien to remain in the United States so long as that alien abides by all laws of the United States and guidelines, rules and regulations for protection. The Attorney General may determine that the granting of permanent resident status to such alien is in the public interest and necessary for the safety and protection of such alien without regard to the alien’s admissibility under immigration or any other laws and regulations or the failure to comply with such laws and regulations pertaining to admissibility.

“(d) ALIEN WITH FELONY CONVICTIONS.—Notwithstanding any other provisions of this chapter, an alien who would not be excluded because of felony convictions shall be considered for permanent residence on a conditional basis for a period of two years. Upon a showing that the alien is still being provided protection, or such protection remains available to the alien in accordance with provisions of this chapter, or such alien is still cooperating with the government, and has maintained good moral character, the Attorney General shall remove the conditional basis of the status effective as of the second anniversary of the alien’s obtaining the status of admission for permanent residence. Permanent resident status shall not be granted to an alien who would be excluded because of felony convictions, unless the Attorney General determines, pursuant to regulations which shall be prescribed by him, that granting permanent residence status to such alien is necessary in the interests of justice, and comports with safety of the community.

“(c) LIMIT ON NUMBER OF ALIENS.—The number of aliens and members of their immediate families entering the United States under the authority of this section shall in no case exceed 200 persons in any one fiscal year. The decision to grant or deny permanent resident status under this section is at the discretion of the Attorney General and shall not be subject to judicial review.”.

SEC. 543. CONFORMING AMENDMENT.

The analysis for chapter 224 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by—

(1) redesignating the item for section 3528 as section 3529; and

AMENDMENT No. 598

Strike everything after the word "Sec." and replace with the following:

TITLE VIII—POLICE CORPS AND LAW ENFORCEMENT TRAINING AND EDUCATION ACT

SEC. 801. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Police Corps and Law Enforcement Training and Education Act".

SEC. 802. PURPOSES.

The purposes of this title are to—

(1) address violent crime by increasing the number of police with advanced education and training on community patrol;

(2) provide educational assistance to law enforcement personnel and to students who possess a sincere interest in public service in the form of law enforcement; and

(3) assist State and local law enforcement efforts to enhance the educational status of law enforcement personnel both through increasing the educational level of existing officers and by recruiting more highly educated officers.

SEC. 803. ESTABLISHMENT OF OFFICE OF THE POLICE CORPS AND LAW ENFORCEMENT EDUCATION.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established in the Department of Justice, under the general authority of the Attorney General, an Office of the Police Corps and Law Enforcement Education.

(b) APPOINTMENT OF DIRECTOR.—The Office of the Police Corps and Law Enforcement Education shall be headed by a Director (referred to in this title as the "Director") who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

(c) RESPONSIBILITIES OF DIRECTOR.—The Director shall be responsible for the administration of the Police Corps program established in subtitle A and the Law Enforcement Scholarship program established in subtitle B and shall have authority to promulgate regulations to implement this title.

SEC. 804. DESIGNATION OF LEAD AGENCY AND SUBMISSION OF STATE PLAN.

(a) LEAD AGENCY.—A State that desires to participate in the Police Corps program under subtitle A or the Law Enforcement Scholarship program under subtitle B shall designate a lead agency that will be responsible for—

(1) submitting to the Director a State plan described in subsection (b); and

(2) administering the program in the State.

(b) STATE PLANS.—A State plan shall—

(1) contain assurances that the lead agency shall work in cooperation with the local law enforcement liaisons, representatives of police labor organizations and police management organizations, and other appropriate State and local agencies to develop and implement interagency agreements designed to carry out the program;

(2) contain assurances that the State shall advertise the assistance available under this title;

(3) contain assurances that the State shall screen and select law enforcement personnel for participation in the program;

(4) if the State desires to participate in the Police Corps program under subtitle A, meet the requirements of section 816; and

(5) if the State desires to participate in the Law Enforcement Scholarship program under subtitle B, meet the requirements of section 826.

Subtitle A—Police Corps Program

SEC. 811. DEFINITIONS.

For the purposes of this subtitle—

(1) the term "academic year" means a traditional academic year beginning in August or September and ending in the following May or June;

(2) the term "dependent child" means a natural or adopted child or stepchild of a law enforcement officer who at the time of the officer's death—

(A) was no more than 21 years old; or

(B) if older than 21 years, was in fact dependent on the child's parents for at least one-half of the child's support (excluding educational expenses), as determined by the Director;

(3) the term "educational expenses" means expenses that are directly attributable to—

(A) a course of education leading to the award of the baccalaureate degree; or

(B) a course of graduate study following award of a baccalaureate degree, including the cost of tuition, fees, books, supplies, transportation, room and board and miscellaneous expenses;

(4) the term "participant" means a participant in the Police Corps program selected pursuant to section 813;

(5) the term "State" means a State of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, Guam, and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands; and

(6) the term "State Police Corps program" means a State police corps program approved under section 816.

SEC. 812. SCHOLARSHIP ASSISTANCE.

(a) SCHOLARSHIPS AUTHORIZED.—(1) The Director is authorized to award scholarships to participants who agree to work in a State or local police force in accordance with agreements entered into pursuant to subsection (d).

(2)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B) each scholarship payment made under this section for each academic year shall not exceed—

(i) $10,000; or

(ii) the cost of the educational expenses related to attending an institution of higher education.

(B) In the case of a participant who is pursuing a course of educational study during substantially an entire calendar year, the amount of scholarship payments made during such year shall not exceed $13,333.

(C) The total amount of scholarship assistance received by any one student under this section shall not exceed $40,000.

(4) Recipients of scholarship assistance under this section shall continue to receive such scholarship payments only during such periods as the Director finds that the recipient is maintaining satisfactory progress as determined by the institution of higher education the recipient is attending.

(5)(A) The Director shall make scholarship payments under this section directly to the institution of higher education that the student is attending.

(B) Each institution of higher education receiving a payment on behalf of a participant pursuant to subparagraph (A) shall remit to such student any funds in excess of the costs of tuition, fees, and room and board payable to the institution.

(b) REIMBURSEMENT AUTHORIZED.—(1) The Director is authorized to make payments to a participant to reimburse such participant for the costs of educational expenses if such student agrees to work in a State or local police force in accordance with the agreement entered into pursuant to subsection (d).

(2)(A) Each payment made pursuant to paragraph (1) for each academic year of study shall not exceed—

(i) $10,000; or

(ii) the cost of educational expenses related to attending an institution of higher education.

(B) In the case of a participant who is pursuing a course of educational study during substantially an entire calendar year, the amount of scholarship payments made during such year shall not exceed $13,333.

(C) The total amount of payments made pursuant to subparagraph (A) to any one student shall not exceed $40,000.

(c) USE OF SCHOLARSHIP.—Scholarships awarded under this subsection shall only be used to attend a 4-year institution of higher education.

(d) AGREEMENT.—(1) Each participant receiving a scholarship or a payment under this section shall enter into an agreement with the Director. Each such agreement shall contain assurances that the participant shall—

(A) after successful completion of a baccalaureate program and training as prescribed in section 814, work for 4 years in a State or local police force without there having arisen sufficient cause for the participant's dismissal under the rules applicable to members of the police force of which the participant is a member;

(B) complete satisfactorily—

(i) an educational course of study and receipt of a baccalaureate degree (in the case of undergraduate study) or the reward of credit to the participant for having completed one or more graduate courses (in the case of graduate study);

(ii) Police Corps training and certification by the Director that the participant has met such performance standards as may be established pursuant to section 814; and

(C) repay all of the scholarship or payment received plus interest at the rate of 10 percent in the event that the conditions of subparagraphs (A) and (B) are not complied with.

(2)(A) A recipient of a scholarship or payment under this section shall not be considered in violation of the agreement entered into pursuant to paragraph (1) if the recipient—

(i) dies; or

(ii) becomes permanently and totally disabled as established by the sworn affidavit of a qualified physician.

(B) In the event that a scholarship recipient is unable to comply with the repayment provision set forth in subparagraph (B) of paragraph (1) because of a physical or emotional disability or for good cause as determined by the Director, the Director may substitute community service in a form prescribed by the Director for the required repayment.

(C) The Director shall expeditiously seek repayment from participants who violate the agreement described in paragraph (1).

(e) DEPENDENT CHILD.—A dependent child of a law enforcement officer—

(1) who is a member of a State or local police force or is a Federal criminal investigator or uniformed police officer,

(2) who is not a participant in the Police Corps program, but

(3) who serves in a State for which the Director has approved a Police Corps plan, and

(4) who is killed in the course of performing police duties, shall be entitled to the scholarship assistance authorized in this section. Such dependent child shall not incur any repayment obligation in exchange for the scholarship assistance provided in this section.

(f) GROSS INCOME.—For purposes of section 61 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, a participant's or dependent child's gross income shall not include any amount paid as scholarship assistance under this section or as a stipend under section 814.

(g) APPLICATION.—Each participant desiring a scholarship or payment under this section shall submit an application as prescribed by the Director in such manner and accompanied by such information as the Director may reasonably require.

(h) DEFINITION.—For the purposes of this section the term "institution of higher education" has the meaning given that term in the first sentence of section 1201(a) of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1141(a)).

SEC. 813. SELECTION OF PARTICIPANTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Participants in State Police Corps programs shall be selected on a competitive basis by each State under regulations prescribed by the Director.

(b) SELECTION CRITERIA AND QUALIFICATIONS.—(1) In order to participate in a State Police Corps program, a participant must—

(A) be a citizen of the United States or an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence in the United States;

(B) meet the requirements for admission as a trainee of the State or local police force to which the participant will be assigned pursuant to section 815(c)(5), including achievement of satisfactory scores on any applicable examination, except that failure to meet the age requirement for a trainee of the State or local police shall not disqualify the applicant if the applicant will be of sufficient age upon completing an undergraduate course of study;

(C) possess the necessary mental and physical capabilities and emotional characteristics to discharge effectively the duties of a law enforcement officer;

(D) be of good character and demonstrate sincere motivation and dedication to law enforcement and public service;

(E) in the case of an undergraduate, agree in writing that the participant will complete an educational course of study leading to the award of a baccalaureate degree and will then accept an appointment and complete 4 years of service as an officer in the State police or in a local police department within the State;

(F) in the case of a participant desiring to undertake or continue graduate study, agree in writing that the participant will accept an appointment and complete 4 years of service as an officer in the State police or in a local police department within the State before undertaking or continuing graduate study;

(G) contract, with the consent of the participant's parent or guardian if the participant is a minor, to serve for 4 years as an officer in the State police or in a local police department, if an appointment is offered; and

(H) except as provided in paragraph (2), be without previous law enforcement experience.

(2)(A) Until the date that is 5 years after the date of enactment of this title, up to 10 percent of the applicants accepted into the Police Corps program may be persons who—

(i) have had some law enforcement experience; and

(ii) have demonstrated special leadership potential and dedication to law enforcement.

(B)(i) The prior period of law enforcement of a participant selected pursuant to subparagraph (A) shall not be counted toward satisfaction of the participant's 4-year service obligation under section 815, and such a participant shall be subject to the same benefits and obligations under this subtitle as other participants, including those stated in section (b)(1) (E) and (F).

(ii) Clause (i) shall not be construed to preclude counting a participant's previous period of law enforcement experience for purposes other than satisfaction of the requirements of section 815, such as for purposes of determining such a participant's pay and other benefits, rank, and tenure.

(3) It is the intent of this Act that there shall be no more than 20,000 participants in each graduating class. The Director shall approve State plans providing in the aggregate for such enrollment of applicants as shall assure, as nearly as possible, annual graduating classes of 20,000. In a year in which applications are received in a number greater than that which will produce, in the judgment of the Director, a graduating class of more than 20,000, the Director shall, in deciding which applications to grant, give preference to those who will be participating in State plans that provide law enforcement personnel to areas of greatest need.

(c) RECRUITMENT OF MINORITIES.—Each State participating in the Police Corps program shall make special efforts to seek and recruit applicants from among members of racial and ethnic groups whose representation on the police forces within the State is substantially less than in the population of the State as a whole. This subsection does not authorize an exception from the competitive standards for admission established pursuant to subsections (a) and (b).

(d) ENROLLMENT OF APPLICANT.—(1) An applicant shall be accepted into a State Police Corps program on the condition that the applicant will be matriculated in, or accepted for admission at, a 4-year institution of higher education (as described in the first sentence of section 1201(a) of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1141(a)))—

(A) as a full-time student in an undergraduate program; or

(B) for purposes of taking a graduate course.

(2) If the applicant is not matriculated or accepted as set forth in paragraph (1), the applicant's acceptance in the program shall be revoked.

(e) LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—(1) A participant in a State Police Corps program who requests a leave of absence from educational study, training or service for a period not to exceed 1 year (or 18 months in the aggregate in the event of multiple requests) due to temporary physical or emotional disability shall be granted such leave of absence by the State.

(2) A participant who requests a leave of absence from educational study, training or service for a period not to exceed 1 year (or 18 months in the aggregate in the event of multiple requests) for any reason other than those listed in paragraph (1) may be granted such leave of absence by the State.

(f) ADMISSION OF APPLICANTS.—An applicant may be admitted into a State Police Corps program either before commencement of or during the applicant's course of educational study.

SEC. 814. POLICE CORPS TRAINING.

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) The Director shall establish programs of training for Police Corps participants. Such programs may be carried out at up to 3 training centers established for this purpose and administered by the Director, or by contracting with existing State training facilities. The Director shall contract with a State training facility upon request of such facility if the Director determines that such facility offers a course of training substantially equivalent to the Police Corps training program described in this subtitle.

(2) The Director is authorized to enter into contracts with individuals, institutions of learning, and government agencies (including State and local police forces), to obtain the services of persons qualified to participate in and contribute to the training process.

(3) The Director is authorized to enter into agreements with agencies of the Federal Government to utilize on a reimbursable basis space in Federal buildings and other resources.

(4) The Director may authorize such expenditures as are necessary for the effective maintenance of the training centers, including purchases of supplies, uniforms, and educational materials, and the provision of subsistence, quarters, and medical care to participants.

(b) TRAINING SESSIONS.—A participant in a State Police Corps program shall attend two 8-week training sessions at a training center, one during the summer following completion of sophomore year and one during the summer following completion of junior year. If a participant enters the program after sophomore year, the participant shall complete 16 weeks of training at times determined by the Director.

(c) FURTHER TRAINING.—The 16 weeks of Police Corps training authorized in this section is intended to serve as basic law enforcement training but not to exclude further training of participants by the State and local authorities to which they will be assigned. Each State plan approved by the Director under section 816 shall include assurances that following completion of a participant's course of education each participant shall receive appropriate additional training by the State or local authority to which the participant is assigned. The time spent by a participant in such additional training, but not the time spent in Police Corps training, shall be counted toward fulfillment of the participant's 4-year service obligation.

(d) COURSE OF TRAINING.—The training sessions at training centers established under this section shall be designed to provide basic law enforcement training, including vigorous physical and mental training to teach participants self-discipline and organizational loyalty and to impart knowledge and understanding of legal processes and law enforcement.

(e) EVALUATION OF PARTICIPANTS.—A participant shall be evaluated during training for mental, physical, and emotional fitness, and shall be required to meet performance standards prescribed by the Director at the conclusion of each training session in order to remain in the Police Corps program.

(f) STIPEND.—The Director shall pay participants in training sessions a stipend of $250 a week during training.

SEC. 815. SERVICE OBLIGATION.

(a) SWEARING IN.—Upon satisfactory completion of the participant's course of education and training program established in section 814 and meeting the requirements of the police force to which the participant is assigned, a participant shall be sworn in as a member of the police force to which the participant is assigned pursuant to the State Police Corps plan, and shall serve for 4 years as a member of that police force.

(b) RIGHTS AND RESPONSIBILITIES.—A participant shall have all of the rights and responsibilities of and shall be subject to all rules and regulations applicable to other members of the police force of which the participant is a member, including those contained in applicable agreements with labor organizations and those provided by State and local law.

(c) DISCIPLINE.—If the police force of which the participant is a member subjects the participant to discipline such as would preclude the participant's completing 4 years of service, and result in denial of educational assistance under section 812, the Director may, upon a showing of good cause, permit the participant to complete the service obligation in an equivalent alternative law enforcement service and, if such service is satisfactorily completed, section 812(d)(1)(C) shall not apply.

SEC. 816. STATE PLAN REQUIREMENTS.

A State Police Corps plan shall—

(1) provide for the screening and selection of participants in accordance with the criteria set out in section 813;

(2) state procedures governing the assignment of participants in the Police Corps program to State and local police forces (no more than 10 percent of all the participants assigned in each year by each State to be assigned to a statewide police force or forces);

(3) provide that participants shall be assigned to those geographic areas in which—

(A) there is the greatest need for additional law enforcement personnel; and

(B) the participants will be used most effectively;

(4) provide that to the extent consistent with paragraph (3), a participant shall be assigned to an area near the participant's home or such other place as the participant may request;

(5) provide that to the extent feasible, a participant's assignment shall be made at the time the participant is accepted into the program, subject to change—

(A) prior to commencement of a participant's fourth year of undergraduate study, under such circumstances as the plan may specify; and

(B) from commencement of a participant's fourth year of undergraduate study until completion of 4 years of police service by participant, only for compelling reasons or to meet the needs of the State Police Corps program and only with the consent of the participant;

(6) provide that no participant shall be assigned to serve with a local police force—

(A) whose size has declined by more than 5 percent since June 21, 1989; or

(B) which has members who have been laid off but not retired;

(7) provide that participants shall be placed and to the extent feasible kept on community and preventive patrol;

(8) assure that participants will receive effective training and leadership;

(9) provide that the State may decline to offer a participant an appointment following completion of Federal training, or may remove a participant from the Police Corps program at any time, only for good cause (including failure to make satisfactory progress in a course of educational study) and after following reasonable review procedures stated in the plan; and

(10) provide that a participant shall, while serving as a member of a police force, be compensated at the same rate of pay and benefits and enjoy the same rights under applicable agreements with labor organizations and under State and local law as other police officers of the same rank and tenure in the police force of which the participant is a member.

SEC. 817. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this subtitle $400,000,000 for fiscal year 1992 and such sums as are necessary to carry out the subtitle for fiscal years 1993, 1994, 1995, and 1996.

Subtitle B—Law Enforcement Scholarship Program

SEC. 821. DEFINITIONS.

As used in this subtitle—

(1) the term "educational expenses" means expenses that are directly attributable to—

(A) a course of education leading to the award of an associate degree;

(B) a course of education leading to the award of a baccalaureate degree; or

(C) a course of graduate study following award of a baccalaureate degree, including the cost of tuition, fees, books, supplies and related expenses;

(2) the term "institution of higher education" has the meaning given that term in section 1201(a) of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1141(a));

(3) the term "law enforcement position" means employment as an officer in a State or local police force, or correctional institution; and

(4) the term "State" means a State of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, Guam, and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands.

SEC. 822. ALLOTMENT.

From amounts appropriated under the authority of section 829, the Director shall allocate—

(1) 80 percent of such funds to States on the basis of the number of law enforcement officers in each State; and

(2) 20 percent of such funds to States on the basis of the State's shortage of law enforcement personnel and the need for assistance under this subtitle.

SEC. 823. PROGRAM ESTABLISHED.

(a) IN GENERAL.—From amounts available pursuant to section 822 each State shall pay the Federal share of the cost of awarding scholarships to in-service law enforcement personnel to enable such personnel to seek further education.

(b) FEDERAL SHARE.—(1) The Federal share of the cost of scholarships under this subtitle shall not exceed 60 percent.

(2) The non-Federal share of the cost of scholarships under this subtitle shall be supplied from sources other than the Federal Government.

(c) RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE DIRECTOR.—The Director shall be responsible for the administration of the program conducted pursuant to this subtitle and shall, in consultation with the Assistant Secretary for Postsecondary Education, promulgate regulations to implement this subtitle.

(d) SPECIAL RULE.—Each State receiving an allotment under section 823 shall ensure that each scholarship recipient under this subtitle be compensated at the same rate of pay and benefits and enjoy the same rights under applicable agreements with labor organizations and under State and local law as other law enforcement personnel of the same rank and tenure in the office of which the scholarship recipient is a member.

(e) SUPPLEMENTATION OF FUNDING.—Funds received under this subtitle shall only be used to supplement, and not to supplant, Federal, State, or local efforts for recruitment and education of law enforcement personnel.

SEC. 824. SCHOLARSHIPS.

(a) PERIOD OF AWARD.—Scholarships awarded under this subtitle shall be for a period of one academic year.

(b) USE OF SCHOLARSHIPS.—Each individual awarded a scholarship under this subtitle may use such scholarship for educational expenses at any accredited institution of higher education.

SEC. 825. ELIGIBILITY.

An individual shall be eligible to receive a scholarship under this subtitle if such individual has been employed in law enforcement for 2 years immediately preceding the date for which assistance is sought.

SEC. 826. STATE PLAN REQUIREMENTS.

A State law enforcement scholarship plan shall—

(1) contain assurances that the State shall make scholarship payments to institutions of higher education on behalf of individuals receiving financial assistance under this subtitle;

(2) identify model curriculum and existing programs designed to meet the educational and professional needs of law enforcement personnel;

(3) contain assurances that the State shall promote cooperative agreements with educational and law enforcement agencies to enhance law enforcement personnel recruitment efforts in high schools and community colleges; and

(4) contain assurances that the State shall not expend for administrative expenses more than 8 percent of Federal funds received under section 823.

SEC. 827. LOCAL APPLICATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Each individual desiring a scholarship under this subtitle shall submit an application to the State at such time, in such manner, and accompanied by such information as the State may reasonably require. Each such application shall describe the academic courses for which financial assistance is sought.

(b) PRIORITY.—In awarding scholarships under this subtitle, each State shall give priority to applications from individuals who are—

(1) members of racial, ethnic, or gender groups whose representation in the law enforcement agencies within the State is substantially less than in the population eligible for employment in law enforcement in the State; and

(2) pursuing an undergraduate degree.

SEC. 828. SCHOLARSHIP AGREEMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Each individual receiving a scholarship under this subtitle shall enter into an agreement with the Director.

(b) CONTENTS.—Each agreement described in subsection (a) shall—

(1) provide assurances that the individual shall work in a law enforcement position in the State which awarded such individual the scholarship in accordance with the service obligation described in subsection (c) after completion of such individual's academic courses leading to an associate, bachelor, or graduate degree;

(2) provide assurances that the individual will repay all of the scholarship assistance awarded under this title in accordance with such terms and conditions as the Director shall prescribe, in the event that the requirements of the agreement under paragraph (1) are not complied with except where the individual—

(A) dies;

(B) becomes physically or emotionally disabled, as established by the sworn affidavit of a qualified physician; or

(C) has been discharged in bankruptcy; and

(3) set forth the terms and conditions under which an individual receiving a scholarship under this subtitle may seek employment in the field of law enforcement in a State other than the State which awarded such individual the scholarship under this subtitle.

(c) SERVICE OBLIGATION.—(1) Each individual awarded a scholarship under this subtitle shall work in a law enforcement position in the State which awarded such individual the scholarship for a period of one month for each credit hour for which financial assistance is received under this subtitle.

(2) For purposes of satisfying the requirement specified in paragraph (1) each individual awarded a scholarship under this Act shall work in a law enforcement position in the State which awarded such individual the scholarship for not less than 6 months nor more than 2 years.

SEC. 829. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this subtitle $30,000,000 for fiscal year 1992 and such sums as are necessary to carry out the subtitle for fiscal years 1993, 1994, 1995, and 1996.

Subtitle C—Reports
SEC. 831. REPORTS TO CONGRESS.

(a) ANNUAL REPORTS.—No later than April 1 of each fiscal year, the Director shall submit a report to the Attorney General, the President, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and the President of the Senate. Such report shall—

(1) state the number of current and past participants in the Police Corps program authorized by subtitle A, broken down according to the levels of educational study in which they are engaged and years of service they have served on police forces (including service following completion of the 4-year service obligation);

(2) describe the geographic dispersion of participants in the Police Corps program;

(3) state the number of present and past scholarship recipients under subtitle B, categorized according to the levels of educational study in which such recipients are engaged and the years of service such recipients have served in law enforcement;

(4) describe the geographic, racial, and gender dispersion of scholarship recipients under subtitle B; and

(5) describe the progress of the programs authorized by this title and make recommendations for changes in the programs.

(b) SPECIAL REPORT.—Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall submit a report to Congress containing a plan to expand the assistance provided under subtitle B to Federal law enforcement officers. Such plan shall contain information of the number and type of Federal law enforcement officers eligible for such assistance.

AMENDMENT No. 599

Strike everything after the word "Sec." and replace with the following:

TITLE IX—POLICE OFFICERS' BILL OF RIGHTS ACT OF 1991

SEC. 901. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Police Officers' Bill of Rights Act of 1991".

SEC. 902. RIGHTS OF LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICERS.

Part H of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3781 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"RIGHTS OF LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICERS

"SEC. 819. (a) POLITICAL ACTIVITY.—Except when on duty or acting in an official capacity, no law enforcement officer shall be prohibited from engaging in political activity or be denied the right to refrain from engaging in such activity.

"(b) RIGHTS OF LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICERS WHILE UNDER INVESTIGATION.—When a law enforcement officer is under investigation or is subjected to questioning for any reason, other than in connection with an investigation or action described in subsection (h), under circumstances that could lead to disciplinary action, the following minimum standards shall apply:

"(1) Questioning of the law enforcement officer shall be conducted at a reasonable hour, preferably when the law enforcement officer is on duty, unless exigent circumstances otherwise require.

"(2) Questioning of the law enforcement officer shall take place at the offices of those conducting the investigation or the place where such law enforcement officer reports for duty unless the officer consents in writing to being questioned elsewhere.

"(3) The law enforcement officer under investigation shall be informed, at the commencement of any questioning, of the name, rank, and command of the officer conducting the questioning.

"(4) During any single period of questioning of the law enforcement officer, all questions shall be asked by or through a single investigator.

"(5) The law enforcement officer under investigation shall be informed in writing of the nature of the investigation prior to any questioning.

"(6) Any questioning of a law enforcement officer in connection with an investigation shall be for a reasonable period of time and shall allow for reasonable periods for the rest and personal necessities of the law enforcement officer.

"(7) No threat against, harassment of, or promise or reward (except an officer of immunity from prosecution) to any law enforcement officer shall be made in connection with an investigation to induce the answering of any question.

"(8) All questioning of any law enforcement officer in connection with the investigation shall be recorded in full in writing or by electronic device, and a copy of the transcript shall be made available to the officer under investigation.

"(9) The law enforcement officer under investigation shall be entitled to the presence of counsel (or any other one person of the officer's choice) at any questioning of the officer, unless the officer consents in writing to being questioned outside the presence of counsel.

"(10) At the conclusion of the investigation, the person in charge of the investigation shall inform the law enforcement officer under investigation, in writing, of the investigative findings and any recommendation for disciplinary action that the person intends to make.

"(11) A law enforcement officer who brought before a disciplinary hearing shall be provided access to all transcripts, records, written statements, written reports and analyses and video tapes pertinent to the case that—

"(A) contain exculpatory information;

"(B) are intended to support any disciplinary action; or

"(C) are to be introduced in the disciplinary hearing.

"(c) OPPORTUNITY FOR A HEARING.—(1) Except in a case of summary punishment or emergency suspension described in subsection (d), if an investigation of a law enforcement officer results in a recommendation of disciplinary action, the law enforcement agency shall notify the law enforcement officer that the officer is entitled to a hearing on the issues by a hearing officer or board.

"(2)(A) Subject to subparagraph (B), a State shall determine the composition of a disciplinary hearing board and the procedures for a disciplinary hearing.

"(B) A disciplinary hearing board that includes employees of the law enforcement agency of which the officer who is the subject of the hearing is a member shall include at least one law enforcement officer of equal or lesser rank to the officer who is the subject of the hearing.

"(3) A penalty greater than that which was recommended by the trial board cannot be imposed upon the officer.

"(d) SUMMARY PUNISHMENT AND EMERGENCY SUSPENSION.—(1) This section does not preclude a State from providing for summary punishment or emergency suspension for misconduct by a law enforcement officer.

"(2) An emergency suspension shall not affect or infringe on the health benefits of a law enforcement officer.

"(e) NOTICE OF DISCIPLINARY ACTION.—When disciplinary action is to be taken against a law enforcement officer, the officer shall be notified of the action and the reasons therefor a reasonable time before the action takes effect.

"(f) RETALIATION FOR EXERCISING RIGHTS.—There shall be no penalty or threat of penalty against a law enforcement officer for the exercise of the officer's rights under this section.

"(g) OTHER REMEDIES NOT IMPAIRED.—(1) Nothing in this section shall be construed to impair any other legal remedy that a law enforcement officer has with respect to any rights under this section.

"(2) A law enforcement officer may waive any of the rights guaranteed by this section.

"(h) APPLICATION OF SECTION.—This section does not apply in the case of—

"(1) an investigation of criminal conduct by a law enforcement officer; or

"(2) a nondisciplinary action taken in good faith on the basis of a law enforcement officer's employment-related performance.

"(i) DEFINITIONS.—For the purposes of this section—

"(1) the term 'disciplinary action' means the suspension, demotion, reduction in pay or other employment benefit, dismissal, transfer, or similar action taken against a law enforcement officer as punishment for misconduct;

"(2) the term 'emergency suspension' means temporary action imposed by the head of the law enforcement agency when that official determines that the action is in the best interests of the public;

"(3) the term 'summary punishment' means punishment imposed for a minor violation of a law enforcement agency's rules and regulations that does not result in disciplinary action;

"(4) the term 'law enforcement agency' means a public agency charged by law with the duty to investigate crimes or apprehend or hold in custody persons charged with or convicted of crimes; and

"(5) the term 'law enforcement officer' means a full-time police officer, sheriff, or correctional officer of a law enforcement agency.

"(j) PROHIBITION OF ADVERSE MATERIAL IN OFFICER'S FILE.—A law enforcement agency shall not insert any adverse material into the file of any law enforcement officer unless the officer has had an opportunity to review and comment in writing on the adverse material.

"(k) DISCLOSURE OF PERSONAL ASSETS.—A law enforcement officer shall not be required or requested to disclose any item of the officer's personal property, income, assets, sources of income, debts, personal or domestic expenditures (including those of any member of the officer's household), unless

"(1) the information is necessary in investigating a violation of any Federal, State, or local law, rule, or regulation with respect to the performance of official duties; or

"(2) such disclosure is required by Federal, State, or local law.

"(l) ENFORCEMENT OF PROTECTIONS FOR LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICERS.—(1) A State shall have not more than 2 legislative sessions to enact a Law Enforcement Officers' Bill of Rights that provides rights for law enforcement officers that are substantially similar to the rights afforded under this section.

"(2) After the expiration of the time limit described in paragraph (1), a law enforcement officer shall have a cause of action in State court for the recovery of pecuniary and other damages and full reinstatement against a law enforcement agency that materially violates the rights afforded by this section.

"(3) The sovereign immunity of a State shall not apply in the case of a violation of the rights afforded by this section.

"(m) STATES' RIGHTS.—This section does not preempt State law or collective bargaining agreements or discussions during the collective bargaining process that provide rights for law enforcement officers that are substantially similar to the rights afforded by this section."

AMENDMENT No. 600

Strike everything after the word "Sec." and replace with the following:

TITLE X—FEDERAL LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCIES

SEC. 1001. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Federal Law Enforcement Act of 1991".

SEC. 1002. AUTHORIZATION FOR FEDERAL LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCIES.

There is authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1992, $345,500,000 (which shall be in addition to any other appropriations) to be allocated as follows:

(1) For the Drug Enforcement Administration, $100,500,000, which shall include:

(A) not to exceed $45,000,000 to hire, equip and train not less than 350 agents and necessary support personnel to expand DEA investigations and operations against drug trafficking organizations in rural areas;

(B) not to exceed $25,000,000 to expand DEA State and Local Task Forces, including payment of state and local overtime, equipment and personnel costs; and

(C) not to exceed $5,000,000 to hire, equip and train not less than 50 special agents and necessary support personnel to investigate violations of the Controlled Substances Act relating to anabolic steroids.

(2) For the Federal Bureau of Investigation, $98,000,000, for the hiring of additional agents and support personnel to be dedicated to the investigation of drug trafficking organizations;

(3) For the Immigration and Naturalization Service, $45,000,000, to be further allocated as follows:

(A) $25,000,000 to hire, train and equip no fewer than 500 full-time equivalent Border Patrol officer positions;

(B) $20,000,000 to hire, train and equip no fewer than 400 full-time equivalent INS criminal investigators dedicated to drug trafficking by illegal aliens and to deportations of criminal aliens.

(4) For the United States attorneys, $45,000,000 to hire and train not less than 350 additional prosecutors and support personnel dedicated to the prosecution of drug trafficking and related offenses;

(5) For the United States Marshals Service, $10,000,000;

(6) For the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms, $15,000,000 to hire, equip and train not less than 100 special agents and support personnel to investigate firearms violations committed by drug trafficking organizations, particularly violent gangs;

(7) For the United States courts, $20,000,000 for additional magistrates, probation officers, other personnel and equipment to address the case-load generated by the additional investigative and prosecutorial resources provided in this title; and

(8) For Federal defender services, $12,000,000 for the defense of persons prosecuted for drug trafficking and related crimes.

AMENDMENT No. 601

Strike everything after the word "Sec." and replace with the following:

TITLE XI—HABEAS CORPUS REFORM ACT
SEC. 1101. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Habeas Corpus Reform Act of 1991".

SEC. 1102. SPECIAL HABEAS CORPUS PROCEDURES IN CAPITAL CASES.

Part VI of title 28 of the United States Code is amended by inserting following chapter 153 the following new chapter:

"CHAPTER 154—SPECIAL HABEAS CORPUS PROCEDURES IN CAPITAL CASES

"Sec.

"2256. Prisoners in State custody subject to capital sentence; appointment of counsel; requirement of rule of court or statute; procedures for appointment.

"2257. Mandatory stay of execution; duration; limits on stays of execution; successive petitions.

"2258. Filing of habeas corpus petition; time requirements; tolling rules.

"2259. Evidentiary hearings; scope of Federal review; district court adjudication.

"2260. Certificate of probable cause inapplicable.

"2261. Counsel in capital cases; trial and post-conviction; standards.

"2262. Law controlling in Federal habeas corpus proceedings; retroactivity.

"§ 2256. Prisoners in State custody subject to capital sentence; appointment of counsel; requirement of rule of court or statute; procedures for appointment

"(a) This chapter shall apply to cases arising under section 2254 of this title brought by prisoners in State custody who are subject to a capital sentence. It shall apply only if subsections (b) and (c) are satisfied.

"(b) This chapter is applicable if a State establishes by rule of its court of last resort or by statute a mechanism for the appointment, compensation, and payment of reasonable fees and litigation expenses of competent counsel consistent with section 2261 of this title.

"(c)(1) Upon receipt of notice that counsel has been appointed to represent a prisoner under sentence of death after the prisoner's conviction and sentence have been upheld on direct review in a State court of last resort or in the Supreme Court of the United States if application is made to that court, the State court of last resort shall enter an order confirming the appointment and shall direct its clerk to forward the record of the case to the attorney appointed.

"(2) Upon receipt of notice that counsel has been offered to, but declined by, a prisoner described in paragraph (1), the State court of last resort shall direct an appropriate court or judge to hold a hearing, at which the prisoner and the attorney offered to the prisoner shall be present, to determine whether the prisoner is competent to decide whether to accept or reject the appointment of counsel and whether, if competent, the prisoner knowingly and intelligently waives the appointment of counsel. The court or judge shall report its determinations to the State court of last resort, which shall review the determinations for error. If the State court of last resort concludes that the prisoner is incompetent and does not waive counsel, the court shall enter an order confirming the appointment of the attorney assigned to the prisoner by the appointing authority and shall direct the clerk to forward the record to the attorney appointed. If the court concludes that the prisoner is competent and waives counsel, the court shall enter an order that counsel need not be appointed and shall direct the clerk to forward the record to the prisoner.

"(3) Nothing in this section requires the appointment of counsel to a prisoner who is not indigent.

"(d) No counsel appointed pursuant to subsections (b) and (c) to represent a State prisoner in State collateral proceedings shall have previously represented the prisoner at trial or on direct appeal in the case for which the appointment is made unless the prisoner and counsel expressly request continued representation.

"(e) The ineffectiveness or incompetence of counsel appointed under this chapter during State or Federal collateral post-conviction proceedings shall not be a ground for relief in a proceeding arising under this chapter or section 2254 of this title. This limitation shall not preclude the appointment of different counsel at any phase of State or Federal post-conviction proceedings.

"§ 2257. Mandatory stay of execution; duration; limits on stays of execution; successive petitions

"(a) Upon the entry in the State court of last resort of an order pursuant to section 2256(c) of this title, a warrant or order setting an execution date for a State prisoner shall be stayed upon application to any court that would have jurisdiction over any proceedings filed pursuant to section 2254 of this title. The application must recite that the State has invoked the post-conviction review procedures of this chapter and that the scheduled execution is subject to stay.

"(b) A stay of execution granted pursuant to subsection (a) shall expire if—

"(1) a State prisoner fails to file a habeas corpus petition under section 2254 of this title within the time required in section 2258 of this title;

"(2) upon completion of district court and court of appeals review under section 2254 of this title the petition for relief is denied and—

"(A) the time for filing a petition for certiorari has expired and no petition has been filed;

"(B) a timely petition for certiorari was filed and the Supreme Court denied the petition; or

"(C) a timely petition for certiorari was filed and upon consideration of the case, the Supreme Court disposed of it in a manner that left the capital sentence undisturbed; or

"(3) before a court of competent jurisdiction, in the presence of counsel and after having been advised of the consequences of his decision, a State prisoner under capital sentence waives the right to pursue habeas corpus review under section 2254 of this title.

"(c) If one of the conditions in subsection (b) has occurred, no Federal court thereafter shall have the authority to enter a stay of execution or grant relief in a capital case unless—

"(1) the basis for the stay and request for relief is a claim not previously presented by the prisoner in the State or Federal courts, and the failure to raise the claim is—

"(A) the result of State action in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States;

"(B) the result of the Supreme Court recognition of a new Federal right that is retroactively applicable; or

"(C) based on a factual predicate that could not have been discovered through the exercise of reasonable diligence;

"(2) the facts underlying the claim would be sufficient, if proven, to undermine the court's confidence in the jury's determination of guilt on the offense or offenses for which the death penalty was imposed; or

"(3) a stay and consideration of the requested relief are necessary to prevent a miscarriage of justice.

"§2256. Filing of habeas corpus petition; time requirements; tolling rules

"Any petition for habeas corpus relief under section 2254 of this title must be filed in the appropriate district court not later than 365 days after the date of filing in the State court of last resort of an order issued in compliance with section 2256(c) of this title. The time requirements established by this section shall be tolled—

"(1) from the date that a petition for certiorari is filed in the Supreme Court until the date of final disposition of the petition if a State prisoner seeks review of a capital sentence that has been affirmed on direct appeal by the court of last resort of the State or has otherwise become final for State law purposes;

"(2) during any period in which a State prisoner under capital sentence has a properly filed request for post-conviction review pending before a State court of competent jurisdiction and if all State filing rules are met in a timely manner, this period shall run continuously from the date that the State prisoner initially files for post-conviction review until final disposition of the case by the State court of last resort, and further until final disposition of the matter by the Supreme Court of the United States, if a timely petition for review is filed; and

"(3) during an additional period not to exceed 90 days, if counsel for the State prisoner—

"(A) moves for an extension of time in the United States district court that would have proper jurisdiction over the case upon the filing of a habeas corpus petition under section 2254 of this title; and

"(B) makes a showing of good cause for counsel's inability to file the habeas corpus petition within the 365-day period established by this section.

"§2259. Evidentiary hearings; scope of Federal review; district court adjudication

"(a) Whenever a State prisoner under a capital sentence files a petition for habeas corpus relief to which this chapter applies, the district court shall—

"(1) determine the sufficiency of the evidentiary record for habeas corpus review; and

"(2) conduct any requested evidentiary hearing necessary to complete the record for habeas corpus review.

Upon the development of a complete evidentiary record under this subsection, the district court shall rule on the merits of the claims properly before it.

"(b)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), a district court may refuse to consider a claim under this section if—

"(A) the prisoner previously failed to raise the claim in State court at the time and in the manner prescribed by State law;

"(B) the State courts, for that reason, refused or would refuse to entertain the claim; and

"(C) such refusal would constitute an adequate and independent State law ground that would foreclose direct review of the State court judgment in the United States Supreme Court.

"(2) A district court shall consider a claim under this section if the prisoner shows that the failure to raise the claim in a State court was due to the ignorance or neglect of the prisoner or counsel or if the failure to consider such a claim would result in a miscarriage of justice.

"§2260. Certificate of probable cause inapplicable

"The requirement of a certificate of probable cause in order to appeal from the district court to the court of appeals does not apply to habeas corpus cases subject to this chapter except when a second or successive petition is filed.

"§2261. Counsel in capital cases; trial and post-conviction; standards

"(a) A mechanism for the provision of counsel services to indigents sufficient to invoke the provisions of this chapter under section 2256(b) of this title shall provide for counsel to—

"(1) indigents charged with offenses for which capital punishment is sought;

"(2) indigents who have been sentenced to death and who seek appellate or collateral review in State court; and

"(3) indigents who have been sentenced to death and who seek certiorari review in the United States Supreme Court.

"(b)(1) In the case of an appointment made before trial, at least one attorney appointed under this chapter must have been admitted to practice in the court in which the prosecution is to be tried for not less than 5 years, and must have had not less than 3 years' experience in the trial of felony prosecutions in that court.

"(2) In the case of an appointment made after trial, at least one attorney appointed under this chapter must have been admitted to practice in the court of last resort of the State for not less than 5 years, and must have had not less than 3 years' experience in the handling of appeals in that State courts in felony cases.

"(3) Notwithstanding paragraphs (1) and (2) of this subsection, a court, for good cause and upon the defendant's request, may appoint another attorney whose background, knowledge, or experience would otherwise enable the attorney to properly represent the defendant, with due consideration of the seriousness of the possible penalty and the unique and complex nature of the litigation.

"(c) Upon a finding in ex parte proceedings that investigative, expert or other services are reasonably necessary for the representation of the defendant, whether in connection with issues relating to guilt or issues relating to sentence, the court shall authorize the defendant's attorney to obtain such services on behalf of the defendant and shall order the payment of fees and expenses therefor, under subsection (d). Upon finding that timely procurement of such services could not practicably await prior authorization, the court may authorize the provision of and payment of such services nunc pro tunc.

"(d) Notwithstanding the rates and maximum limits generally applicable to criminal cases and any other provision of law to the contrary, the court shall fix the compensation to be paid to an attorney appointed under this subsection and the fees and expenses to be paid for investigative, expert, and other reasonably necessary services authorized under subsection (c), at such rates or amounts as the court determines to be reasonably necessary to carry out the requirements of this subsection."

SEC. 1103. LAW APPLICABLE IN CHAPTER 153 PROCEEDINGS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 153 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§2255A. Law applicable

"(a) Except as provided in subsection (b) of this section, each claim under this chapter shall be governed by the law existing on the date the court determines the claim.

"(b) In determining whether to apply a new rule, the court shall consider—

"(1) the purpose to be served by the new rule;

"(2) the extent of the reliance by law enforcement authorities on a different rule; and

"(3) the effect on the administration of justice of the application of the new rule.

"(c) For purposes of this section, the term 'new rule' means a sharp break from precedent announced by the Supreme court of the United States that explicitly and substantially changes the law from that governing at the time the claimant's sentence became final. A rule is not new merely because, based on precedent existing before the rule's announcement, it was susceptible to debate among reasonable minds."

(b) CHAPTER ANALYSIS.—The chapter analysis of chapter 153 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"2255A. Law applicable."

AMENDMENT NO. 602

Strike everything after the word "Sec." and replace with the following:

TITLE XII—PUNISHMENT OF GUN CRIMINALS

SEC. 1201. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Gun Criminals Punishment Act of 1991".

SEC. 1211. DEATH PENALTY FOR GUN MURDERS.

Section 924(c) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by—

(1) inserting "(A)" after "(1)";

(2) designating the second sentence as subparagraph (B);

(3) designating the third and fourth sentences as subparagraph (D); and

(4) inserting before subparagraph (D) the following:

"(C) Whoever violates the terms of subparagraph (A) and discharges a firearm that kills another person, shall, if the killing—

"(A) is a first degree murder as defined in section 1111(a) of this title, be punished by death or imprisonment for any term of years or for life, fined under this title, or both; or

"(B) is a murder other than a first degree murder as defined in section 1111(a) of this title, be fined under this title, imprisoned for any term of years or for life, or both."

SEC. 1212. INCREASED PENALTIES FOR VIOLENT GUN CRIMES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 924(c)(1) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by—

(1) striking subparagraph (A) and inserting the following:

"(A) Whoever, during and in relation to any crime of violence or drug trafficking crime (including a crime of violence or drug trafficking crime which provides an enhanced punishment if committed by the use of a deadly or dangerous weapon or device) for which the person may be prosecuted in a court of the United States—

"(i) discharges, uses, carries, or otherwise possesses a firearm shall, in addition to the penalties already provided for such crime of violence or drug trafficking crime, be sentenced to imprisonment for a term from 5 to 10 years;

"(ii) discharges, uses, carries, or otherwise possesses a firearm that is an assault weapon, short-barreled rifle, or short-barreled shotgun, shall, in addition to the penalties already provided for such crime of violence or drug trafficking crime, be sentenced to imprisonment for a term from 10 to 15 years; or

"(iii) discharges, uses, carries, or otherwise possesses a firearm that is a machinegun, a destructive device, or is equipped with a firearm silencer or firearm muffler, shall be sentenced to imprisonment for 30 years."; and

(2) striking subparagraph (B), as designated by section 1211 of this Act, and inserting the following:

"(B) In the case of a second conviction under this subsection, such person shall be sentenced to imprisonment for 20 years and, if the firearm is an assault weapon, a short-barreled rifle, a short-barreled shotgun, a machinegun, a destructive device, or is equipped with a firearm silencer or firearm muffler, to life imprisonment."

(b) SENTENCING GUIDELINES FOR NEW PENALTIES.—Pursuant to its authority under section 994(p) of title 28, United States Code, the United States Sentencing Commission, shall promulgate guidelines or amend existing guidelines to provide for a sentencing enhancement in accord with the provisions of subsection (c)(1) of section 924 of title 18, United States Code.

Subtitle B—Firearms and Related Amendments

SEC. 1221. POSSESSION OF AN EXPLOSIVE DURING THE COMMISSION OF A FELONY.

(a) POSSESSION OF EXPLOSIVES.—Section 844(h) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by—

(1) striking "carries an explosive during" and inserting "uses, carries, or otherwise possesses an explosive during"; and

(2) striking "used or carried" and inserting "used, carried, or possessed".

(b) PENALTY.—Section 844(h) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking "ten years" and inserting "twenty years".

SEC. 1222. CLARIFICATION OF DEFINITION OF CONVICTION.

Section 921(a)(20) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following: "Notwithstanding the previous sentence, if the conviction was for a violent felony involving the threatened or actual use of a firearm or explosive or was for a serious drug offense, as defined in section 924(e) of this title, the person shall be considered convicted for purposes of this chapter irrespective of any pardon, setting aside, expunction or restoration of civil rights."

SEC. 1224. SMUGGLING FIREARMS IN AID OF DRUG TRAFFICKING.

Section 924 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(m) Whoever, with the intent to engage in or to promote conduct which—

"(1) is punishable under the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 801 et seq.), the Controlled Substances Import and Export Act (21 U.S.C. 951 et seq.), or the Maritime Drug Law Enforcement Act (46 U.S.C. App. 1901 et seq.);

"(2) violates any law of a State relating to any controlled substance (as defined in section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act, 21 U.S.C. 802); or

"(3) constitutes a crime of violence (as defined in subsection (c)(3); smuggles or knowingly brings into the United States a firearm, or attempts to do so, shall be imprisoned for not more than ten years, fined under this title, or both."

SEC. 1225. THEFT OF FIREARMS AND EXPLOSIVES.

(a) FIREARMS.—Section 924 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof:

"(j) whoever steals any firearm which is moving as, or is a part of, or which has moved in, interstate or foreign commerce shall be imprisoned for not less than 2 or more than 10 years, and may be fined under this title, or both."

(b) EXPLOSIVES.—Section 844 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(k) Whoever steals any explosives materials which are moving as, or are a part of, or which have moved in, interstate or foreign commerce shall be imprisoned for not less than 2 or more than 10 years, or fined under this title, or both."

SEC. 1226. CONFORMING AMENDMENT PROVIDING MANDATORY REVOCATION OF SUPERVISED RELEASE FOR POSSESSION OF A FIREARM.

Section 3583 of title 18, United States Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(h) MANDATORY REVOCATION FOR POSSESSION OF A FIREARM.—If the court has provided, as a condition of supervised release, that the defendant refrain from possessing a firearm, and if the defendant is in actual possession of a firearm, as that term is defined in section 921 of this title, at any time prior to the expiration or termination of the term of supervised release, the court shall, after a hearing pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure that are applicable to probation revocation, revoke the term of supervised release and, subject to the limitations of paragraph (e)(3) of this section, require the defendant to serve in prison all or part of the term of supervised release without credit for time previously served on postrelease supervision."

SEC. 1228. STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS FOR CERTAIN GANGSTER WEAPON OFFENSES.

Section 6531 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 6531, relating to periods of limitation of criminal prosecutions) is amended by striking "except that the period of limitation shall be six years" and inserting in lieu thereof "except that the period of limitation shall be five years for offenses described in section 5861 (relating to firearms) and the period of limitation shall be six years".

SEC. 1229. POSSESSION OF EXPLOSIVES BY FELONS AND OTHERS.

Section 842(i) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting "or possess" after "to receive".

SEC. 1230. SUMMARY DESTRUCTION OF EXPLOSIVES SUBJECT TO FORFEITURE.

Section 844(c) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by redesignating subsection (c) as subsection (c)(1) and by adding paragraphs (2) and (3) as follows:

"(2) Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (1), in the case of the seizure of any explosive materials for any offense for which the materials would be subject to forfeiture where it is impracticable or unsafe to remove the materials to a place of storage, or where it is unsafe to store them, the seizing officer is authorized to destroy the explosive materials forthwith. Any destruction under this paragraph shall be in the presence of at least one credible witness. The seizing officer shall make a report of the seizure and take samples as the Secretary may by regulation prescribe.

"(3) Within sixty days after any destruction made pursuant to paragraph (2), the owner of, including any person having an interest in, the property so destroyed may make application to the Secretary for reimbursement of the value of the property. If the claimant establishes to the satisfaction of the Secretary that—

SEC. 1253. DEFINITION OF AMMUNITION FEEDING DEVICE.

Section 921(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding a new paragraph at the end thereof as follows:

"(30) The term 'ammunition feeding device' means a detachable magazine, belt, drum, feed strip, or similar device which has a capacity of, or which can be readily restored or converted to accept, more than 15 rounds of ammunition. The term also includes any combination of parts from which such device can be assembled. Notwithstanding the foregoing, such term shall not include any attached tubular device designed to accept and capable of operating with only .22 rim-fire caliber ammunition."

SEC. 1254. PROHIBITIONS APPLICABLE TO AMMUNITION FEEDING DEVICES.

Section 922 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding new subsections (v), (w), and (x), as follows:

"(v) It shall be unlawful for any person to import, manufacture, transport, ship, transfer, receive, or possess an ammunition feeding device, except that this subsection shall not apply to—

"(1) any importation or manufacture of such a device for sale or distribution by a licensed importer or licensed manufacturer to the United States or any department or agency thereof or to any State or any department, agency, or political subdivision thereof;

"(2) any possession, shipment, transportation or transfer (in accordance with the provisions of subsections (w) and (x)) of such a device that was lawfully possessed before this subsection takes effect; or

"(3) any manufacture of such a device for the purpose of exportation.

"(w) The Secretary shall maintain a central registry of all ammunition feeding devices transferred after the effective date of this subsection which, after such transfer, are not in the possession or under the control of the United States, or any department or agency thereof or any department, agency, or political subdivision thereof. This registry shall be known as the National Ammunition Feeding Device Registry. The registry shall include—

"(1) identification of the device;

"(2) date of registration;

"(3) identification and address of the person entitled to possess the device; and

"(4) such other information as may be required by regulations promulgated by the Secretary.

"(x) Each transferor of an ammunition feeding device that was lawfully possessed before the effective date of subsection (v) shall (except in the case of a transfer to the United States, or any department or agency thereof or any State or any department, agency, or political subdivision thereof) register the device to the transferee in accordance with regulations promulgated by the Secretary. Any information or evidence required to be provided in the course of such registration by a natural person shall be subject to the use-restriction provisions of section 5848 of title 26, United States Code. The transferor shall, contemporaneously with the registration of the device, pay a fee of $25 to the Secretary. A transferee of an ammunition feeding device required to be registered as required by this subsection shall retain proof of such registration which shall be made available to the Secretary upon request."

SEC. 1255. IDENTIFICATION MARKINGS FOR AMMUNITION FEEDING DEVICES.

Section 923(i) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof a new sentence as follows: "An ammunition feeding device shall be identified by a serial number and such other identification as the Secretary may by regulations prescribe."

SEC. 1256. CRIMINAL PENALTIES.

Subsection 924(a)(2) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking out "or (o)" and inserting in lieu thereof "(o), or (v)".

SEC. 1257. NONINTERRUPTION OF BUSINESS FOR PERSONS IN THE BUSINESS OF IMPORTING OR MANUFACTURING AMMUNITION FEEDING DEVICES.

Any person engaging in the business of manufacturing or importing ammunition feeding devices requiring a license under the provisions of chapter 44 of title 18, United States Code, who was engaged in such business on the date of enactment of this Act, and who files an application for a license under the provisions of section 923 of title 18, United States Code, within 30 days after the date of enactment, may continue such business pending final action on the application. All provisions of chapter 44 of title 18, United States Code, shall apply to such applicant in the same manner and to the same extent as if the applicant were a holder of a license under chapter 44.

AMENDMENT NO. 603

Strike everything after the word "Sec." and replace with the following:

TITLE XIII—PRISON FOR VIOLENT DRUG OFFENDERS

SEC. 1301. REGIONAL PRISONS.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The total population of Federal, State, and local prisons and jails increased by 84 percent between 1980 and 1988 and currently numbers more than 900,000 people.

(2) More than 60 percent of all prisoners have a history of drug abuse or are regularly using drugs while in prison, but only 11 percent of State prison inmates and 7 percent of Federal prisoners are enrolled in drug treatment programs. Hundreds of thousands of prisoners are not receiving needed drug treatment while incarcerated, and the number of such persons is increasing rapidly.

(3) Drug-abusing prisoners are highly likely to return to crime upon release, but the recidivism rate is much lower for those who successfully complete treatment programs. Providing drug treatment to prisoners during incarceration therefore provides an opportunity to break the cycle of recidivism, reducing the crime rate and future prison overcrowding.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1992, the following amounts:

(1) $600,000,000 for the construction of 10 regional prisons; and

(2) $100,000,000 for the operation of such regional prisons for one year.

Such amounts shall be in addition to any other amounts authorized to be appropriated to the Bureau of Prisons.

(c) LOCATION AND POPULATION.—The regional prisons authorized by this section shall be located in places chosen by the Director of National Drug Control Policy, after consulting with the Director of the Bureau of Prisons, not less than 6 months after the effective date of this section. Each such facility shall be used to accommodate a population consisting of State and Federal prisoners in proportions of 20 percent Federal and 80 percent State.

(d) ELIGIBILITY OF PRISONERS.—The regional prisons authorized by this section shall be used to incarcerate State and Federal prisoners who have release dates of not more than 2 years from the date of assignment to the prison and who have been found to have substance abuse problems requiring long-term treatment.

(e) STATE RESPONSIBILITIES.—(1) The States shall select prisoners for assignment to the regional prisons who, in addition to satisfying eligibility criteria otherwise specified in this section, have long-term drug abuse problems and serious criminal histories. Selection of such persons is necessary for the regional prison program to have the maximum impact on the crime rate and future prison overcrowding, since such persons are the ones most likely to commit new crimes following release. Prisoners selected for assignment to a regional prison must agree to the assignment.

(2) Any State seeking to refer a State prisoner to a regional prison shall submit to the Director of the Bureau of Prisons (referred to as the "Director") an aftercare plan setting forth the provisions that the State will make for the continued treatment of the prisoner in a therapeutic community following release. The aftercare plan shall also contain provisions for vocational job training where appropriate.

(3) The State referring the prisoner to the regional prison (referred to as the "sending State") shall reimburse the Bureau of Prisons for the full cost of the incarceration and treatment of the prisoner, except that if the prisoner successfully completes the treatment program, the Director shall return to the sending State 25 percent of the amount paid for that prisoner. The total amount returned to each State under this paragraph in each fiscal year shall be used by that State to provide the aftercare treatment required by paragraph (2).

(f) POWERS OF THE DIRECTOR.—(1) The Director shall have the exclusive right to determine whether or not a State or Federal prisoner satisfies the eligibility requirements of this section, and whether the prisoner is to be accepted into the regional prison program. The Director shall have the right to make this determination after the staff of the regional prison has had an opportunity to interview the prisoner in person.

(2) The Director shall have the exclusive right to determine if a prisoner in the regional treatment program is complying with all of the conditions and requirements of the program. The Director shall have the authority to return any prisoner not complying with the conditions and requirements of the program to the sending State at any time. The Director shall notify the sending State whenever such prisoner is returned that the prisoner has not successfully completed the treatment program.

AMENDMENT NO. 604

Strike everything after the word "Sec." and replace with the following:

TITLE XIV—BOOT CAMPS

SEC. 1401. BOOT CAMPS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 1 year after the effective date of this section, the Attorney General shall establish within the Bureau of Prisons 10 military-style boot camp prisons (referred to in this title as "boot camps"). The boot camps will be located on closed military installations on sites to be chosen by the Director of National Drug Control Policy, after consultation with the Director of the Bureau of Prisons, and will provide a highly regimented schedule of strict discipline, physical training, work, drill, and ceremony characteristic of military basic training as well as remedial education and treatment for substance abuse.

(b) CAPACITY.—Each boot camp shall be designed to accommodate between 200 and 300 inmates for periods of not less than 90 days and not greater than 120 days. Not more than 20 percent of the inmates shall be Federal prisoners. The remaining inmates shall be State prisoners who are accepted for participation in the boot camp program pursuant to subsection (d).

(c) FEDERAL PRISONERS.—Section 3582 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(e) BOOT CAMP PRISON AS A SENTENCING ALTERNATIVE.—(1) The court, in imposing sentence in the circumstances described in paragraph (2), may designate the defendant as eligible for placement in a boot camp prison. The Bureau of Prisons shall determine whether a defendant so designated will be assigned to a boot camp prison.

"(2) A defendant may be designated as eligible for placement in boot camp prison if—

"(A) the defendant—

"(i) is under 25 years of age;

"(ii) has no prior conviction for which he or she has served more than 10 days incarceration; and

"(iii) has been convicted of an offense involving a controlled substance punishable under the Controlled Substances Act or the Controlled Substances Export and Import Act, or any other offense if the defendant, at the time of arrest or at any time thereafter, tested positive for the presence of a controlled substance in his or her blood or urine; and

"(B) the sentencing court finds that the defendant's total offense level under the Federal sentencing guidelines is level 9 or less.

"(3) If the Director of the Bureau of Prisons finds that an inmate placed in a boot camp prison pursuant to this subsection has willfully refused to comply with the conditions of confinement in the boot camp, the Director may transfer the inmate to any other correctional facility in the Federal prison system.

"(4) Successful completion of assignment to a boot camp shall constitute satisfaction of any period of active incarceration, but shall not affect any aspect of a sentence relating to a fine, restitution, or supervised release."

(d) STATE PRISONERS.—(1) Any person who has been convicted of a criminal offense in any State, or who anticipates entering a plea of guilty of such offense, but who has not yet been sentenced, may apply to be assigned to a boot camp. Such application shall be made to the Bureau of Prisons and shall be in the form designated by the Director of the Bureau of Prisons and shall contain a statement certified by counsel for the applicant that at the time of sentencing the applicant is likely to be eligible for assignment to a boot camp pursuant to paragraph (2). The Bureau of Prisons shall respond to such applications within 14 days so that the sentencing court is aware of the result of the application at the time of sentencing. In responding to such applications, the Bureau of Prisons shall determine, on the basis of the availability of space, whether a defendant who becomes eligible for assignment to a boot camp prison at the time of sentencing will be so assigned.

(2) A person convicted of a State criminal offense shall be eligible for assignment to a boot camp if he or she—

(A) is under 25 years of age;

(B) has no prior conviction for which he or she has served more than 10 days incarceration;

(C) has been sentenced to a term of imprisonment that will be satisfied under the law of the sentencing State if the defendant successfully completes a term of not less than 90 days nor more than 120 days in a boot camp;

(D) has been designated by the sentencing court as eligible for assignment to a boot camp; and

(E) has been convicted of an offense involving a controlled substance (as defined in section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 802)), or any other offense if the defendant, at the time of arrest or at any time thereafter, tested positive for the presence of a controlled substance in his or her blood or urine.

(3) If the Director of the Bureau of Prisons finds that an inmate placed in a boot camp prison pursuant to this subsection has willfully refused to comply with the conditions of confinement in the boot camp, the Director may transfer the inmate back to the jurisdiction of the State sentencing court.

(4) Each State that refers a prisoner to a boot camp shall reimburse the Bureau of Prisons for—

(A) 80 percent of the cost incurred by the Bureau of Prisons for incarceration and treatment and other services to such prisoner that successfully completes the program; and

(B) 100 percent of such costs for each prisoner that enters a boot camp but does not successfully complete the program.

(e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated $150,000,000 for fiscal year 1992 of which not more than $12,500,000 shall be used to convert each closed military base to a boot camp prison and not more than $2,500,000 shall be used to operate each boot camp for one fiscal year. Such amounts shall be in addition to any other amounts authorized to be appropriated to the Bureau of Prisons.

(a) The Administrator is authorized to make grants to States and units of general local government or combinations thereof to assist them in planning, establishing, operating, coordinating, and evaluating projects directly or through grants and contracts with public and private agencies for the development of more effective programs including education, prevention, treatment and enforcement programs to reduce—

"(1) the formation or continuation of juvenile gangs; and

"(2) the use and sale of illegal drugs by juveniles.

"(b) The grants made under this section can be used for any of the following specific purposes:

"(1) To reduce the participation of juveniles in drug related crimes (including drug trafficking and drug use), particularly in and around elementary and secondary schools;

"(2) To reduce juvenile involvement in organized crime, drug and gang-related activity, particularly activities that involve the distribution of drugs by or to juveniles;

"(3) To develop within the juvenile justice system, including the juvenile corrections system, new and innovative means to address the problems of juveniles convicted of serious, drug-related and gang-related offenses;

"(4) To reduce juvenile drug and gang-related activity in public housing projects;

"(5) To provide technical assistance and training to personnel and agencies responsible for the adjudicatory and corrections components of the juvenile justice system to identify drug-dependent or gang-involved juvenile offenders and to provide appropriate counseling and treatment to such offenders;

"(6) To promote the involvement of all juveniles in lawful activities, including in-school and after-school programs for academic, athletic or artistic enrichment that also teach that drug and gang involvement are wrong;

"(7) To facilitate Federal and State cooperation with local school officials to develop education, prevention and treatment programs for juveniles who are likely to participate in the drug trafficking, drug use or gang-related activities;

"(8) To prevent juvenile drug and gang involvement in public housing projects through programs establishing youth sports and other activities, including girls and boys clubs, scout troops, and little leagues;

"(9) To provide pre- and post-trial drug abuse treatment to juveniles in the juvenile justice system; with the highest possible priority to providing drug abuse treatment to drug-dependent pregnant juveniles and drug-dependent juvenile mothers; and

"(10) To provide education and treatment programs for youth exposed to severe violence in their homes, schools or neighborhoods.

"(c) Of the funds made available to each State under this section (Formula Grants) 50 per centum of the funds made available to each State in any fiscal year shall be used for juvenile drug supply reduction programs and 50 per centum shall be used for juvenile drug demand reduction programs.

"SPECIAL EMPHASIS DRUG DEMAND REDUCTION AND ENFORCEMENT GRANTS

"SEC. 232. (a) The purpose of this section is to provide additional Federal assistance and support to identify promising new juvenile drug demand reduction and enforcement programs, to replicate and demonstrate these programs to serve as national, regional or local models that could be used, in whole or in part, by other public and private juvenile justice programs, and to provide technical assistance and training to public or private organizations to implement similar programs. In making grants under this section, the Administrator shall give priority to programs aimed at juvenile involvement in organized gang- and drug-related activities, including supply- and demand reduction programs.

"(b) The Administrator is authorized to make grants to, or enter into contracts with, public or private non-profit agencies, institutions, or organizations or individuals to carry out any purpose authorized in section 231. The Administrator shall have final authority over all funds awarded under this subchapter.

"(c) Of the total amount appropriated for this subchapter, 20 per centum shall be reserved and set aside for this section in a special discretionary fund for use by the Administrator to carry out the purposes specified in section 231 as described in section 232(a). Grants made under this section may be made for amounts up to 100 per centum of the costs of the programs or projects.

"AUTHORIZATION

"SEC. 233. There is authorized to be appropriated $100,000,000 in fiscal year 1992 and such sums as may be necessary in fiscal year 1993 to carry out the purposes of this subpart.

"ALLOCATION OF FUND

"SEC. 234. Of the total amounts appropriated under this subpart in any fiscal year the amount remaining after setting aside the amounts required to be reserved to carry out section 232 (Discretionary Grants) shall be allocated as follows:

"(1) $400,000 shall be allocated to each of the participating States;

"(2) Of the total funds remaining after the allocation under paragraph (a), there shall be allocated to each State an amount which bears the same ratio to the amount of remaining funds described in this paragraph as the population of juveniles of such State bears to the population of juveniles of all the States.

"APPLICATION

"SEC. 235. (a) Each State applying for grants under section 231 (Formula Grants) and each public or private entity applying for grants under section 232 (Discretionary Grants) shall submit an application to the Administrator in such form and containing such information as the Administrator shall prescribe.

"(b) To the extent practical, the Administrator shall prescribe regulations governing applications for this subpart that are substantially similar to the applications required under part I (general juvenile justice formula grant) and part C (special emphasis prevention and treatment grants), including the procedures relating to competition.

"(c) In addition to the requirements prescribed in subsection (b), each State application submitted under section 231 shall include a detailed description of how the funds made available shall be coordinated with Federal assistance provided in parts B and C of title II of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974 and by the Bureau of Justice Assistance under the Drug Control and System Improvement Grant program.

"REVIEW AND APPROVAL OF APPLICATIONS

"SEC. 236. The procedures and time limits imposed on the Federal and State Governments under sections 505 and 508, respectively, of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 relating to the review of applications and distribution of Federal funds shall apply to the review of applications and distribution of funds under this subpart."

TITLE XVII—DRUG EMERGENCY AREAS ACT OF 1991

SEC. 1701. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the “Drug Emergency Areas Act of 1991”.

SEC. 1702. DRUG EMERGENCY AREAS.

Subsection (c) of section 1005 of the National Narcotics Leadership Act of 1988 is amended to read as follows:

“(c) DECLARATION OF DRUG EMERGENCY AREAS.—

“(1) PRESIDENTIAL DECLARATION.—(A) In the event that a major drug-related emergency exists throughout a State or a part of a State, the President may, in consultation with the Director and other appropriate officials, declare such State or part of a State to be a drug emergency area and may take any and all necessary actions authorized by this subsection or otherwise authorized by law.

“(B) For the purposes of this subsection, the term ‘major drug-related emergency’ means any occasion or instance in which drug trafficking, drug abuse, or drug-related violence reaches such levels, as determined by the President, that Federal assistance is needed to supplement State and local efforts and capabilities to save lives, and to protect property and public health and safety.

“(2) PROCEDURE FOR DECLARATION.—(A) All requests for a declaration by the President designating an area to be a drug emergency area shall be made, in writing, by the Governor or chief executive officer of any affected State or local government, respectively, and shall be forwarded to the President through the Director in such form as the Director may by regulation require. One or more cities, counties, or States may submit a joint request for designation as a drug emergency area under this subsection.

“(B) Any request made under clause (A) of this paragraph shall be based on a written finding that the major drug-related emergency is of such severity and magnitude that effective response to save lives, and to protect property and public health and safety, that Federal assistance is necessary.”

“(C) The President shall not limit declarations made under this subsection to highly-populated centers of drug trafficking, drug use or drug-related violence, but shall also consider applications from governments of less populated areas where the magnitude and severity of such activities is beyond the capability of the State or local government to respond.

“(D) As part of a request for a declaration by the President under this subsection, and as a prerequisite to Federal drug emergency assistance under this subsection, the Governor(s) or chief executive officer(s) shall—

“(i) take appropriate response action under State or local law and furnish such information on the nature and amount of State and local resources which have been or will be committed to alleviating the major drug-related emergency;

“(ii) certify that State and local government obligations and expenditures will comply with all applicable cost-sharing requirements of this subsection; and

“(iii) submit a detailed plan outlining the State and/or local government's short- and long-term plans to respond to the major drug-related emergency, specifying the types and levels of Federal assistance requested, and including explicit goals (where possible quantitative goals) and timetables and shall specify how Federal assistance provided under this subsection is intended to achieve such goals.

“(E) The Director shall review any request submitted pursuant to this subsection and forward the application, along with a recommendation to the President on whether to approve or disapprove the application, within 30 days after receiving such application. Based on the application and the recommendation of the Director, the President may declare an area to be a drug emergency area under this subsection.

“(3) FEDERAL MONETARY ASSISTANCE.—(A) The President is authorized to make grants to State or local governments of up to, in the aggregate for any single major drug-related emergency, $50,000,000.

“(B) The Federal share of assistance under this section shall not be greater than 75 percent of the costs necessary to implement the short- and long-term plan outlined in paragraph (2)(D)(iii).

“(C) Federal assistance under this subsection shall not be provided to a drug disaster area for more than 1 year. In any case where Federal assistance is provided under this Act, the Governor(s) or chief executive officer(s) may apply to the President, through the Director, for an extension of assistance beyond 1 year. The President, based on the recommendation of the Director, may extend the provision of Federal assistance for not more than an additional 180 days.

“(D) Any State or local government receiving Federal assistance under this subsection shall balance the allocation of such assistance evenly between drug supply reduction and drug demand reduction efforts, unless State or local conditions dictate otherwise.

“(4) NONMONETARY ASSISTANCE.—In addition to the assistance provided under paragraph (3), the President may—

“(A) direct any Federal agency, with or without reimbursement, to utilize its authorities and the resources granted to it under Federal law (including personnel, equipment, supplies, facilities, and managerial, technical, and advisory services) in support of State and local assistance efforts; and

“(B) provide technical and advisory assistance, including communications support and law enforcement-related intelligence information.

“(5) ISSUANCE OF IMPLEMENTING REGULATIONS.—Not later than 90 days after the enactment of this subsection, the Director shall issue regulations to implement this subsection, including such regulations as may be necessary relating to applications for Federal assistance and the provision of Federal monetary and nonmonetary assistance.

“(6) AUDIT BY COMPTROLLER GENERAL.—The Comptroller General shall conduct an audit of any Federal assistance (both monetary and nonmonetary) of an amount greater than $100,000 provided to a State or local government under this subsection, including an evaluation of the effectiveness of such assistance based on the goals contained in the application for assistance.

“(7) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year 1992, 1993, 1994, 1995, and 1996, $300,000,000 to carry out the purposes of this subsection.”

Section 1402 of the Victims of Crime Act of 1984, as amended, is amended—

(a) by striking subsection (c) and redesignating (d), (e), (f) and (g) as subsections (c), (d), (e), and (f), respectively; and

(b) by adding a new subsection (c) to read as follows:

"(c) Availability of funds for expenditure; grant program percentages

"(1) Sums deposited in the Fund shall remain in the Fund and be available for expenditure under this subsection for grants under this chapter without fiscal year limitation.

"(2) The Fund shall be available as follows:

"(A) Of the first $100,000,000 deposited in the Fund in a particular fiscal year—

"(i) 49.5 percent shall be available for grants under section 10602 of this title;

"(ii) 45 percent shall be available for grants under section 10603(a) of this title;

"(iii) 1 percent shall be available for grants under section 10603(c) of this title; and

"(iv) 4.5 percent shall be available for grants as provided in section 10603a of this title.

"(B) The next $5,500,000 deposited in the Fund in a particular fiscal year shall be available for grants as provided in section 10603a of this title.

"(D) The next $4,500,000 deposited in the Fund in a particular fiscal year shall be available for grants under section 10603(a) of this title.

"(E) The next $2,200,000 deposited in the Fund in a particular fiscal year shall be available to the judicial branch for administrative costs to carry out the functions of the judicial branch under sections 3611 and 3612 of title 18, United States Code.

(F) Any deposits in the Fund in a particular fiscal year that remain after the funds are distributed under subparagraphs (A) through (E) shall be available as follows:

"(i) 47.5 percent shall be available for grants under section 10602 of this title;

"(ii) 47.5 percent shall be available for grants under section 10603(a) of this title; and

"(iii) 5 percent shall be available for grants under section 10603(c)(1)(B) of this title.

SEC. 2003. AMENDMENT OF RESTITUTION PROVISIONS.

(a) ORDER OF RESTITUTION.—Section 3663 of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a) by—

(A) striking "(a) The court" and inserting "(a)(1) The court";

(B) striking "may order" and inserting "shall order"; and

(C) adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(2) In addition to ordering restitution of the victim of the offense of which a defendant is convicted, a court may order restitution of any person who, as shown by a preponderance of evidence, was harmed physically, emotionally, or pecuniarily, by unlawful conduct of the defendant during—

"(A) the criminal episode during which the offense occurred; or

"(B) the course of a scheme, conspiracy, or pattern of unlawful activity related to the offense.";

(2) in subsection (b)(1)(A) by striking "impractical" and inserting "impracticable";

(3) in subsection (b)(2) by inserting "emotional or" after "resulting in";

(4) in subsection (c) by striking "If the Court decides to order restitution under this section, the" and inserting "The";

(5) by striking subsections (d), (e), (f), (g), and (h); and

(6) by adding at the end thereof the following new subsections:

"(d)(1) The court shall order restitution to a victim in the full amount of the victim's losses as determined by the court and without consideration of—

"(A) the economic circumstances of the offender; or

"(B) the fact that a victim has received or is entitled to receive compensation with respect to a loss from insurance or any other source.

"(2) Upon determination of the amount of restitution owed to each victim, the court shall specify in the restitution order the manner in which and the schedule according to which the restitution is to be paid, in consideration of—

"(A) the financial resources and other assets of the offender;

"(B) projected earnings and other income of the offender; and

"(C) any financial obligations of the offender, including obligations to dependents.

"(3) A restoration order may direct the offender to make a single, lump-sum payment, partial payment at specified intervals, or such in-kind payments as may be agreeable to the victim and the offender.

"(4) An in-kind payment described in paragraph (3) may be in the form of—

"(A) return of property;

"(B) replacement of property; or

"(C) services rendered to the victim or to a person or organization other than the victim.

"(e) When the court finds that more than 1 offender has contributed to the loss of a victim, the court may make each offender liable for payment of the full amount of restitution or may apportion liability among the offenders to reflect the level of contribution and economic circumstances of each offender.

"(f) When the court finds that more than 1 victim has sustained a loss requiring restitution by an offender, the court shall order full restitution of each victim but may provide for different payment schedules to reflect the economic circumstances of each victim.

"(g)(1) If the victim has received or is entitled to receive compensation with respect to a loss from insurance or any other source, the court shall order that restitution be paid to the person who provided or is obligated to provide the compensation, but the restitution order shall provide that all restitution of victims required by the order be paid to the victims before any restitution is paid to such a provider of compensation.

"(2) The issuance of a restitution order shall not affect the entitlement of a victim to receive compensation with respect to a loss from insurance or any other source until the payments actually received by the victim under the restitution order fully compensate the victim for the loss, at which time a person that has provided compensation to the victim shall be entitled to receive any payments remaining to be paid under the restitution order.

"(3) Any amount paid to a victim under an order of restitution shall be set off against any amount later recovered as compensatory damages by the victim in—

"(A) any Federal civil proceeding; and

"(B) any State civil proceeding, to the extent provided by the law of the State.

"(h) A restitution order shall provide that—

"(1) all fines, penalties, costs, restitution payments and other forms of transfers of money or property made pursuant to the sentence of the court shall be made by the offender to the clerk of the court for accounting and payment by the clerk in accordance with this subsection;

"(2) the clerk of the court shall—

"(A) log all transfers in a manner that tracks the offender's obligations and the current status in meeting those obligations, unless, after efforts have been made to enforce the restitution order and it appears that compliance cannot be obtained, the court determines that continued recordkeeping under this subparagraph would not be useful;

"(B) notify the court and the interested parties when an offender is 90 days in arrears in meeting those obligations; and

"(C) disburse money received from an offender so that each of the following obligations is paid in full in the following sequence:

"(i) a penalty assessment under section 3013 of title 18, United States Code; “(ii) restitution of all victims; and

 “(iii) all other fines, penalties, costs, and other payments required under the sentence; and

“(3) the offender shall advise the clerk of the court of any change in the offender’s address during the term of the restitution order.

“(i) A restitution order shall constitute a lien against all property of the offender and may be recorded in any Federal or State office for the recording of liens against real or personal property.

“(j) Compliance with the schedule of payment and other terms of a restitution order shall be a condition of any probation, parole, or other form of release of an offender. If a defendant fails to comply with a restitution order, the court may revoke probation or a term of supervised release, modify the term or conditions of probation or a term of supervised release, hold the defendant in contempt of court, enter a restraining order or injunction, order the sale of property of the defendant, accept a performance bond, or take any other action necessary to obtain compliance with the restitution order. In determining what action to take, the court shall consider the defendant’s employment status, earning ability, financial resources, the willfulness in failing to comply with the restitution order, and any other circumstances that may have a bearing on the defendant’s ability to comply with the restitution order.

“(k) An order of restitution may be enforced—

“(1) by the United States—

“(A) in the manner provided for the collection and payment of fines in subchapter (B) of chapter 229 of this title; or

“(B) in the same manner as a judgment in a civil action; and

“(2) by a victim named in the order to receive the restitution, in the same manner as a judgment in a civil action.

“(l) A victim or the offender may petition the court at any time to modify a restitution order as appropriate in view of a change in the economic circumstances of the offender.”

(b) PROCEDURE FOR ISSUING ORDER OF RESTITUTION.—Section 3664 of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking subsection (a);

(2) by redesignating subsections (b), (c), (d), and (e) as subsections (a), (b), (c), and (d);

(3) by amending subsection (a), as redesignated by paragraph (2), to read as follows:

“(a) The court may order the probation service of the court to obtain information pertaining to the amount of loss sustained by any victim as a result of the offense, the financial resources of the defendant, the financial needs and earning ability of the defendant and the defendant’s dependents, and such other factors as the court deems appropriate. The probation service of the court shall include the information collected in the report of presentence investigation or in a separate report, as the court directs.”; and

(4) by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

“(e) The court may refer any issue arising in connection with a proposed order of restitution to a magistrate or special master for proposed findings of fact and recommendations as to disposition, subject to a de novo determination of the issue by the court.”.

AMENDMENT No. 611

Strike everything after the word “Sec.” and replace with the following:

TITLE XXI—CRACK HOUSE EVICTION ACT

SEC. 2101. EVICTION FROM PLACES MAINTAINED FOR MANUFACTURING, DISTRIBUTING, OR USING CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES.

Section 416 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 856) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

“(c) The Attorney General may bring a civil action against any person who violates the provisions of this section. The action may be brought in any district court of the United States or the United States courts of any territory in which the violation is taking place. The court in which such action is brought shall determine the existence of a violation by a preponderance of the evidence, and shall have the power to assess a civil penalty of up to $100,000 and to grant such other relief including injunctions and evictions as may be appropriate. Such remedies shall be in addition to any other remedy available under statutory or common law.”.

SEC. 2102. USE OF CIVIL INJUNCTIVE REMEDIES, FORFEITURE SANCTIONS, AND OTHER REMEDIES AGAINST DRUG OFFENDERS.

The Attorney General shall—

(1) aggressively pursue the use of criminal penalties authorized by section 1963 of title 18, United States Code, civil remedies authorized by section 1964 of title 18, United States Code, and other equitable remedies against drug offenders, including injunctions, stay-away orders, and forfeiture sanctions; and

(2) submit a report to Congress annually on the manner and extent to which such remedies are being used and the effect of such use in curtailing drug trafficking.

AMENDMENT No. 612

Strike everything after the word “Sec.” and replace with the following:

TITLE XXII—ORGANIZED CRIME AND DANGEROUS DRUGS DIVISION

Subtitle A—Establishment of an Organized Crime and Dangerous Drugs Division in the Department of Justice

SEC. 2201. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the “Justice Department Organized Crime and Drug Enforcement Enhancement Act of 1991”.

SEC. 2202. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) organized criminal activity contributes significantly to the importation, distribution, and sale of illegal and dangerous drugs;

(2) trends in drug trafficking patterns necessitate a response that gives significant weight to—

(A) the prosecution of drug related crimes; and

(B) the forfeiture and seizure of assets and other civil remedies used to strike at the inherent strength of the drug networks and groups;

(3) the structure of the Department of Justice Criminal Division is inadequate to address such drug-related problems; and

(4) the prosecutorial resources devoted to such problems have been inadequately organized.

SEC. 2203. PURPOSES.

The purposes of this title are to—

(1) establish a new division in the Department of Justice by combining the resources of the Criminal Division and the United States Attorneys offices used for the eradication of organized crime, narcotics, and dangerous drugs with additional resources needed to pursue civil sanctions;

(2) enhance the ability of the Department of Justice to deal with international criminal activity;

(3) enhance the ability of the Department of Justice to maintain a vigorous criminal and equally important civil assault upon organized criminal groups and narcotics traffickers both domestic and international;

(4) enhance the ability of the Department of Justice to attack money laundering activities, both domestic and international; and

(5) maintain the level of effort of the Department of Justice against traditional organized crime activity through the maintenance of independent strike forces.

SEC. 2204. ESTABLISHMENT OF ORGANIZED CRIME AND DANGEROUS DRUGS DIVISION.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established within the Department of Justice, the Organized Crime and Dangerous Drugs Division, which shall consist initially of the following units and programs of the Department of Justice as they were organized and were functioning on September 30, 1989:

(1) the Organized Crime and Racketeering Section of the Criminal Division and all subordinate strike forces therein;

(2) the Narcotic and Dangerous Drug Section of the Criminal Division;

(3) the Asset Forfeiture Office of the Criminal Division; and

(4) the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force Program.

(b) TRANSFER.—(1) There are transferred to the Organized Crime and Dangerous Drugs Division—

(A) all functions of each office and program described under subsection (a) (1), (2), (3), and (4) exercised on September 30, 1989; and

(B) all personnel and available funds of each such office and program.

(2) For the purposes of paragraph (1)(A) the term “functions” means all duties, obligations, powers, authorities, responsibilities, rights, privileges, activities, and programs.

SEC. 2205. ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL FOR ORGANIZED CRIME AND DANGEROUS DRUGS.

(a) ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL.—There shall be at the head of the Organized Crime and Dangerous Drugs Division established by this title, an Assistant Attorney General of the Department of Justice for the Organized Crime and Dangerous Drugs Division, who shall—

(1) be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate;

(2) report directly to the Attorney General of the United States;

(3) coordinate all activities and policies of the Division with the Director of National Drug Control Policy; and

(4) ensure that all investigations and prosecutions are coordinated within the Department of Justice to provide the greatest use of civil proceedings and forfeitures to attack the financial resources of organized criminal and narcotics enterprises.

(b) COMPENSATION.—(1) Section 5315 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by striking out:

“Assistant Attorneys General (10).”

and inserting in lieu thereof:

“Assistant Attorneys General (11).”

(2) The Assistant Attorney General of the Organized Crime and Dangerous Drugs Division shall be paid at the rate of basic pay payable for level IV of the Executive Schedule.

SEC. 2206. DEPUTY ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established the position of Deputy Assistant Attorney General of the Organized Crime and Dangerous Drugs Division, who shall report directly and be responsible to the Assistant Attorney General of the Organized Crime and Dangerous Drugs Division.

(b) COMPENSATION.—The Deputy Assistant Attorney General of the Organized Crime and Dangerous Drugs Division shall be paid the rate of basic pay payable for level V of the Executive Schedule.

SEC. 2207. ADMINISTRATIVE ORGANIZATION OF THE DIVISION.

There shall be established within the Organized Crime and Dangerous Drugs Division such sections and offices as the Attorney General shall deem appropriate to maintain or increase the level of enforcement activities in the following areas:

(1) Criminal Racketeering (including of all activities and personnel transferred from the Organized Crime and Racketeering Section dealing with criminal investigation and prosecution of traditional organized crime, other than civil proceedings or forfeiture);

(2) Criminal Narcotics Trafficking (including all activities and personnel transferred from the Criminal Division and the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force Program dealing with large scale drug trafficking);

(3) Money laundering (including all activities transferred from the Criminal Division and Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force Program dealing with money laundering investigations and the negotiation of international agreements on financial crimes);

(4) Asset Forfeiture (including all activities and personnel transferred from the Criminal Division dealing with asset forfeiture);

(5) International Crime (indicating the activities and functions set forth in Subtitle B of this title); and

(6) Civil Enforcement (including activities and personnel currently engaged in civil enforcement of the drug and racketeering laws and such additional personnel as may be added pursuant to this Act).

SEC. 2208. COORDINATION AND ENHANCEMENT OF FIELD ACTIVITIES.

(a) ORGANIZED CRIME AND DANGEROUS DRUGS DIVISION.—The Attorney General shall establish no fewer than 20 field offices of the Organized Crime and Dangerous Drug Division. All such field offices of the Division shall be known as Organized Crime and Dangerous Drug Strike Forces.

(b) OFFICES IN SAME AREA.—If two or more sections of the Division establish field offices in the same metropolitan area, such offices shall—

- (A) be in the same location;
- (B) coordinate activities; and
- (C) be organized as separate sections of a strike force.

(c) TRANSITION.—(1) Consistent with the provisions of this title—

(A) the Organized Crime and Racketeering Section of the Criminal Division is redesignated as the Criminal Racketeering Section of the Organized Crime and Dangerous Drug Division; and

(B) the Organized Crime Strike Forces are redesignated as the field offices of the Division.

(2) Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this subtitle, the Attorney General shall transfer all attorneys and support staff assigned to the Organized Crime

Drug Enforcement Task Forces before such date to the Organized Crime and Dangerous Drug Division and designated the Criminal Narcotics Section. The Assistant Attorney General for such Division shall assign such personnel to the field offices of the Division, with the initial assignments being made to the cities where units of such Task Forces were located before the date of enactment of this subtitle.

(3)(A) Consistent with the provisions of this title, the Asset Forfeiture Office of the Criminal Division is redesignated as the Asset Forfeiture and Civil Enforcement Section of the Organized Crime and Dangerous Drug Division.

(B) Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this subtitle, the Assistant Attorney General shall establish field offices of the Asset Forfeiture and Civil Enforcement Section of the Organized Crime and Dangerous Drug Division which shall include—

(i) agents from the United States Drug Enforcement Administration, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Internal Revenue Service, and United States Marshals Office; and

(ii) other individuals experienced, trained and expert in complex financial transactions involving cash, notes, securities, and similar negotiable instruments, with a special expertise in banking matters and business dealings.

(d) DIFFERENT ORGANIZATIONAL STRUCTURE.—Nothing in subsection (c) shall prevent the Attorney General, consistent with the purposes of this title and the provisions of section 2107, from instituting a different organizational structure within the Organized Crime and Dangerous Drug Division as the Attorney General shall deem appropriate following a period of transition.

(e) STRIKE FORCES PLANS.—(1) The agents assigned to the Organized Crime and Dangerous Drug Strike Forces (including all agents assigned to the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Forces program before the date of enactment of this title) shall be dedicated exclusively to and located with the Strike Forces so that the Strike Forces personnel may develop expertise and function as a working unit.

(2) The agents assigned to the Strike Forces from the various participating agencies shall be given credit for the work of the Strike Forces, regardless of the statutory authority used to prosecute Strike Forces cases.

(f) REPORT.—Not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this title, the Assistant Attorney General for Organized Crime and Dangerous Drugs in consultation with the Director of National Drug Control Policy, shall report to the Congress on the areas of the United States (especially the southwest border of the United States) that may require increased assistance from the Department of Justice through the establishment of additional strike forces.

(g) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—(1) There are authorized to be appropriated $45,000,000 for salaries and expenses of the Organized Crime and Dangerous Drug Division of the Department of Justice for fiscal year 1992.

(2) Any appropriation of funds authorized under paragraph (1) shall be in addition to any appropriations requested by the President in the 1992 fiscal year budget submitted by the President to the Congress for fiscal year 1992, or provided in regular appropriations Acts or continuing resolutions for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1992.

Subtitle B—International Prosecution Teams
SEC. 2211. INTERNATIONAL PROSECUTION TEAMS.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) Drug trafficking, organized crime, and money laundering are problems that are international in scope.

(2) The traditional focus of United States law enforcement agencies on domestic criminal activity has restricted the development of the necessary expertise and coordination to address the international aspects of these problems adequately.

(3) The Justice Department must expand its resources and reorganize its component to engage in new responsibilities and activities involving international crime.

(b) INTERNATIONAL DRUG ENFORCEMENT TEAMS.—In addition to the components and functions otherwise specified in this chapter, the Organized Crime and Dangerous Drug Division shall include no fewer than 10 International Drug Enforcement Teams devoted exclusively to investigating, prosecuting and supporting the investigation and prosecution of international drug cases. Such teams shall be responsible for developing expertise in handling civil and criminal cases involving extradition, money laundering, drug-related corruption, and other complex cases relating to international drug trafficking.

(c) RELATIONSHIP OF TEAM MEMBERS.—Organized Crime and Dangerous Drug Division personnel assigned to the International Drug Enforcement Teams shall work closely with, and where practical be co-located with, agents and liaison personnel of the various law enforcement, diplomatic, intelligence, and military agencies who shall be assigned as necessary to the enforcement teams.

(d) GOALS.—The teams shall be organized to—

(1) increase the expertise of the Department of Justice in matters relating to international law enforcement and foreign policy;

(2) improve coordination among United States and foreign agencies responsible for law enforcement, foreign policy, and international banking;

(3) target resources toward cases with maximum impact on international narcotics trafficking;

(4) gain the cooperation of private entities in the United States and foreign countries whose cooperation in cases involving money laundering and other drug-related financial crimes is essential; and

(5) assist other countries to enact laws and negotiate treaties to assist in the suppression of international money laundering and narcotics trafficking.

TITLE XXIII—EXCLUSIONARY RULE
SEC. 2301. SEARCHES AND SEIZURES PURSUANT TO AN INVALID WARRANT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 109 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

“§ 2237. Evidence obtained by invalid warrant

“Evidence which is obtained as a result of search or seizure shall not be excluded in a proceeding in a court of the United States on the ground that the search or seizure was in violation of the Fourth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, if the search or seizure was carried out in reasonable reliance on a warrant issued by a detached and neutral magistrate ultimately found to be invalid, unless—

“(1) the judicial officer in issuing the warrant was materially misled by information in an affidavit that the affiant knew was false or would have known was false except for his reckless disregard of the truth;

"(2) the judicial officer provided approval of the warrant without exercising a neutral and detached review of the application for the warrant;

"(3) the warrant was based on an affidavit so lacking in indicia of probable cause as to render official belief in its existence entirely unreasonable; or

"(4) the warrant is so facially deficient that the executing officers could not reasonably presume it to be valid."

(b) AMENDMENT TO CHAPTER ANALYSIS.—The chapter analysis for chapter 109 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following.

"2237. Evidence obtained by invalid warrant."

AMENDMENT No. 614

TITLE—FEDERAL PRISONER DRUG TESTING

SEC. 91. FEDERAL PRISONER DRUG TESTING.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This title may be cited as the "Federal Prisoner Drug Testing Act of 1991".

(b) CONDITIONS OF PROBATION.—Section 3563(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (2), by striking "and" after the semicolon;

(2) in paragraph (3), by striking the period and inserting "; and";

(3) by adding a new paragraph (4), as follows:

"(4) for a felony, a misdemeanor, or an infraction, that the defendant refrain from any unlawful use of controlled substance and submit to one drug test within 15 days of release on probation and at least 2 periodic drug tests thereafter (as determined by the court) for use of a controlled substance."; and

(4) by adding at the end thereof the following: "The results of a drug test administered in accordance with paragraph (4) shall be subject to confirmation only if the results are positive, the defendant is subject to possible imprisonment for such failure, and either the defendant denies the accuracy of such test or there is some other reason to question the results of the test. A drug test confirmation shall be a urine drug test confirmed using gas chromatography/mass spectrometry techniques or such test as the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts after consultation with the Secretary of Health and Human Services may determine to be of equivalent accuracy. The court shall consider the availability of appropriate substance abuse treatment programs when considering any action against a defendant who fails a drug test administered in accordance with paragraph (4)."

(c) CONDITIONS ON SUPERVISED RELEASE.—Section 3583(d) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the first sentence the following: "The court shall also order, as an explicit condition of supervised release, that the defendant refrain from any unlawful use of a controlled substance and submit to a drug test within 15 days of release on supervised release and at least 2 periodic drug tests thereafter (as determined by the court) for use of a controlled substance. The results of a drug test administered in accordance with the provisions of the preceding sentence shall be subject to confirmation only if the results are positive, the defendant is subject to possible imprisonment for such failure, and either the defendant denies the accuracy of such test or there is some other reason to question the results of the test. A drug test confirmation shall be a urine drug test confirmed using gas chromatography/mass spectrometry techniques or such test as the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts after consultation with the Secretary of Health and Human Services may determine to be of equivalent accuracy. The court shall consider the availability of appropriate substance abuse treatment programs when considering any action against a defendant who fails a drug test."

(d) CONDITIONS OF PAROLE.—Section 4209(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the first sentence the following: "In every case, the Commission shall also impose as a condition of parole that the parolee pass a drug test prior to release and refrain from any unlawful use of a controlled substance and submit to at least 2 periodic drug tests (as determined by the Commission) for use of a controlled substance. The results of a drug test administered in accordance with the provisions of the preceding sentence shall be subject to confirmation only if the results are positive, the defendant is subject to possible imprisonment for such failure, and either the defendant denies the accuracy of such test or there is some other reason to question the results of the test. A drug test confirmation shall be a urine drug test confirmed using gas chromatography/mass spectrometry techniques or such test as the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts after consultation with the Secretary of Health and Human Services may determine to be of equivalent accuracy. The Commission shall consider the availability of appropriate substance abuse treatment programs when considering any action against a defendant who fails a drug test."

TITLE XXVII—FELON FIREARM PURCHASE PREVENTION

SEC. 2701. FEDERAL FIREARMS LICENSEE REQUIRED TO CONDUCT CRIMINAL BACKGROUND CHECK BEFORE TRANSFER OF FIREARM TO NONLICENSEE.

(a) INTERIM PROVISION.—Section 922 of title 18, United States Code, as amended by section 702 of this Act, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(u)(1) Beginning on the date that is 90 days after the date of enactment of this subsection and ending on the date that the Attorney General certifies that the national instant criminal background check system is in compliance with section 2702(d)(1) of the Violent Crime Control Act of 1991 (except as provided as paragraphs (2) and (3) of section 2702(d) of such Act); it shall be unlawful for any licensed importer, licensed manufacturer, or licensed dealer to sell, deliver, or transfer a handgun to an individual who is not licensed under section 923, unless—

"(A) after the most recent proposal of such transfer by the transferee—

"(i) the transferor has—

"(I) received from the transferee a statement of the transferee containing the information described in paragraph (3);

"(II) verified the identification of the transferee by examining the identification document presented; and

"(i)(I) 5 business days (as defined by days in which State offices are open) have elapsed from the date the transferee furnished notice of the contents of the statement to the chief law enforcement officer, during which period the transferor has not received information from the chief law enforcement officer that receipt for possession of the handgun by the transferee would be in violation of Federal, State, or local law; or

"(II) the transferor has received notice from the chief law enforcement officer that the officer has no information indicating that receipt or possession of the handgun by the transferee would violate Federal, State, or local law;

"(B) the transferee has presented to the transferor a written statement, issued by the chief law enforcement officer of the place of residence of the transferee during the 10-day period ending on the date of the most recent proposal of such transfer by the transferee, stating that the transferee requires access to a handgun because of a threat to the life of the transferee or of any member of the household of the transferee;

"(C)(i) the transferee has presented to the transferor a permit that—

"(I) allows the transferee to possess a handgun; and

"(II) was issued not more than 5 years earlier by the State in which the transfer is to take place; and

"(ii) the law of the State provides that such a permit is to be issued only after an authorized government official has verified that the information available to such official does not indicate that possession of a handgun by the transferee would be in violation of law;

"(D) the Secretary has approved the transfer under section 5812 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986; or

"(E) on application of the transferor, the Attorney General has certified that compliance with subparagraph (A)(i)(III) is impracticable because of the inability of the transferor to communicate with the chief law enforcement officer because of the remote location and absence of telecommunication facilities in the remote location of the licensed premises.

"(2) A chief law enforcement officer to whom a transferor has provided notice pursuant to paragraph (1)(A)(i)(III) shall make a reasonable effort to ascertain within 5 business days whether the transferee has a criminal record or whether there is any other legal impediment to the transferee's receiving a handgun, including research in whatever State and local recordkeeping systems are available and in a national system designated by the Attorney General.

"(3) The statement referred to in paragraph (1)(A)(i)(I) shall contain only—

"(A) the name, address, and date of birth appearing on a valid identification document (as defined in section 1028(d)(1)) of the transferee containing a photograph of the transferee and a description of the identification used;

"(B) a statement that transferee—

"(i) is not under indictment for, and has not been convicted in any court of, a crime punishable by imprisonment for a term exceeding one year;

"(ii) is not a fugitive from justice;

"(iii) is not an unlawful use of or addicted to any controlled substance (as defined in section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act);

"(iv) has not been adjudicated as a mental defective or been committed to a mental institution;

"(v) is not an alien who is illegally or unlawfully in the United States;

"(vi) has not been discharged from the Armed Forces under dishonorable conditions; and

"(vii) is not a person who, having been a citizen of the United States, has renounced such citizenship;

"(C) the date the statement is made; and

"(D) notice that the transferee intends to obtain a handgun from the transferor.

"(4) The chief law enforcement officer of the place of residence of a prospective transferee of a handgun, at the request of a person who alleges the person requires access to a handgun because of a threat to the life of the person or a member of the household of the person, shall immediately meet with the person and forthwith sign a written statement described in paragraph (1)(B) unless the officer has clear and convincing evidence that no threat was made to the life of the person or any member of the household of the person.

"(5) Any transferor of a handgun who, after such transfer, receives a report from a chief law enforcement officer containing information that receipt or possession of the handgun by the transferee violates Federal, State, or local law shall immediately communicate all information the transferor has about the transfer and the transferee to—

"(A) the chief law enforcement officer of the place of business of the transferor; and

"(B) the chief law enforcement officer of the place of residence of the transferee.

"(6) Any transferor who receives information, not otherwise available to the public, in a report under this subsection shall not disclose such information except to the transferee, to law enforcement authorities, or pursuant to the direction of a court of law.

"(7)(A) Any transferor who sells, delivers, or otherwise transfers a handgun to a transferee shall retain the copy of the statement of the transferee with respect to the handgun transaction.

"(B)(1) Unless the chief law enforcement officer to whom notice is provided under paragraph (1)(A)(i)(III) determines that a transaction shall, within 5 days after the date the transferee made such statement, destroy and record containing information derived from such statement.

"(i) Information conveyed to a chief law enforcement officer under paragraph (1)(A)(i)(III)—

"(I) shall not be conveyed to any person except a person who has a need to know in order to carry out this subsection; and

"(II) shall not be used for any purpose other than to carry out this subsection.

"(8) A chief law enforcement officer shall not be liable in an action at law for damages for failure to prevent the sale or transfer of a handgun to a person whose receipt or possession of the handgun is unlawful under this section.

"(9) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'chief law enforcement officer' means the chief of police, the sheriff, or an equivalent officer or the designee of any such individual.

"(10) The Secretary shall take necessary actions to ensure that the provisions of this subsection are published and disseminated to licensed dealers and to the public."

(b) PERMANENT PROVISION.—Section 922 of title 18, United States Code, as amended by subsection (a), is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(v)(1) Beginning on the date that the Attorney General certifies that the national instant criminal background check system is in compliance with section 2702(d)(1) of the Violent Crime Control Act of 1991 (except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3) of section 2702(d) of such Act), a licensed importer, licensed manufacturer, or licensed dealer shall not transfer a firearm from the business inventory of the licensee to any other person who is not such a licensee, unless—

"(A) before the completion of the transfer, the licensee contacts the national instant criminal background check system established under section 2703 of the Felon Firearm Purchase Prevention Act of 1991; and

"(B) the system notifies the licensee that the system has not located any record that demonstrates that the receipt of a firearm by such other person would violate subsection (g) or (n) of this section.

"(2) Paragraph (1) shall not apply to a firearm transfer between a licensee and another person if—

"(A) such other person presents to the licensee a valid permit or license, issued by the State or political subdivision thereof in which the transfer is to occur, that authorizes such other person to purchase, possess, or carry a firearm;

"(B) The Secretary has approved the transfer under section 5812 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986; or

"(C) on application of the transferor, the Secretary has certified that compliance with paragraph (1)(A) is impracticable because of the inability of the transferor to communicate with the national instant criminal background check system because of the remote location and absence of telecommunication facilities in the remote location of the licensee premises.

"(3) If the national instant criminal background check system notifies the licensee that the information available to the system does not demonstrate that the receipt of a firearm by such other person would violate subsection (g) or (n), and the licensee transfers a firearm to such other person, the licensee shall include in the record of the transfer the unique identification number provided by the system with respect to the transfer.

"(4) If the licensee knowingly transfers a firearm to such other person and knowingly fails to comply with paragraph (1) with respect to the transfer and, at the time such other person most recently proposed the transfer, the national instant criminal background check system was operating and information was available to the system demonstrating that receipt of a firearm by such other person would violate subsection (g) or (n), the Secretary may, after notice and opportunity for a hearing, suspend for not more than 6 months or revoke any license issued to the licensee under this section, and may impose on the licensee a civil fine of not more than $5,000.

"(5) A State employee responsible for providing information to the national instant criminal background check system shall not be liable in an action at law for damages for failure to prevent the sale or transfer of a firearm to a person whose receipt or possession of the firearm is unlawful under this section."

(c) PENALTY.—Section 924(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1) by striking "(2) or (3)"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

"(5) Whoever knowingly violates section 922 (u) or (v) shall be fined not more than $1,000, imprisoned for not more than 1 year, or both."

SEC. 2702. NATIONAL INSTANT CRIMINAL BACKGROUND CHECK SYSTEM.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF SYSTEM.—The Attorney General of the United States shall establish a national instant criminal background check system that any licensee may contact for information on whether receipt of a firearm by a prospective transferee thereof would violate section 922 (g) or (n) of title 18, United States Code.

(b) EXPEDITED ACTION BY THE ATTORNEY GENERAL.—The Attorney General shall expedite—

(1) the incorporation of State criminal history records into the Federal criminal records system maintained by the Federal Bureau of Investigation;

(2) the development of hardware and software systems to link State criminal history check systems into the national instant criminal background check system established by the Attorney General pursuant to this section; and

(3) the current revitalization initiatives by the Federal Bureau of Investigation for technologically advanced fingerprint and criminal records identification.

(c) PROVISION OF STATE CRIMINAL RECORDS TO THE NATIONAL INSTANT CRIMINAL BACKGROUND CHECK SYSTEM.—(1) Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall—

(A) determine the type of computer hardware and software that will be used to operate the national instant criminal background check system and the means by which State criminal records systems will communicate with the national system;

(B) investigate the criminal records system of each State and determine for each State a timetable by which the State should be able to provide criminal records on an on line capacity basis to the national system;

(C) notify each State of the determinations made pursuant to subparagraphs (A) and (B).

(2) The Attorney General shall require as a part of the State timetable that the State achieve, by the end of 5 years after the date of enactment of this Act, at least 80 percent currency of case dispositions in computerized criminal history files for all cases in which there has been an entry of activity within the last 5 years and continue to maintain such a system.

(d) NATIONAL SYSTEM CERTIFICATION.—(1) On or after the date that is 30 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall certify that—

(A) the national system has achieved at least 80 percent currency of case dispositions in computerized criminal history files for all cases in which there has been an entry of activity within the last 5 years on a national average basis; and

(B) the States are in compliance with the timetable established pursuant to subsection (C).

(2) If on the date of certification in paragraph (1), a State that is not in compliance with the timetable established pursuant to subsection (c), the provision of section 922(u) of title 18, United States Code, as added by section 2701, shall remain in effect in such State. The Attorney General shall certify if a State subject to the provisions of section 922(u) under the preceding sentence achieves compliance with its timetable after the date of certification in paragraph (1) and section 922(u) of title 18, United States Code, as added by section 2701, shall not apply to such State.

(3) Six years after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall certify whether or not a State is in compliance with subsection (c)(2) and if the State is not in compliance, the provisions of section 922(u) of title 18, United States Code, shall be in effect. The Attorney General shall certify if a State subject to the provisions of section 922(u) under the preceding sentence achieves compliance with the standards in subsection (c)(2) and section 922(u) of title 18, United States Code, as added by section 2701, shall not apply to such State.

(e) NOTIFICATION OF LICENSEES.—On establishment of the system under this section, the Attorney General shall notify each licensee of the existence and purpose of the system and the means to be used to contact the system.

(f) ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS.—

(1) AUTHORITY TO OBTAIN OFFICIAL INFORMATION.—Notwithstanding any other law, the Attorney General may secure directly from any department or agency of the United States such information on persons for whom receipt of a firearm would violate section 922 (g) or (n) of title 18, United States Code as is necessary to enable the system to operate in accordance with this section. On request of the Attorney General, the head of such department or agency shall furnish such information to the system.

(2) OTHER AUTHORITY.—The Attorney General shall develop such computer software, design and obtain such telecommunications and computer hardware, and employ such personnel, as are necessary to establish and operate the system in accordance with this section.

(g) CORRECTION OF ERRONEOUS SYSTEM INFORMATION.—If the system established under this section informs an individual contacting the system that receipt of a firearm by a prospective transferee would violate section 922 (g) or (n) of title 18, United States Code, the transferee may request the Attorney General to provide such other person with the reasons therefor. Upon receipt of such a request, the Attorney General shall immediately comply with the request. The transferee may submit to the Attorney General information that to correct, clarify, or supplement records of the system with respect to the transferee. After receipt of such information, the Attorney General shall immediately consider the information, investigate the matter further, and correct all erroneous Federal records relating to such transferee and give notice of the error to any Federal department or agency or any State that was the source of such erroneous records.

(h) REGULATIONS.—After 90 days notice to the public and an opportunity for hearing by interested parties, the Attorney General shall prescribe regulations to ensure the privacy and security of the information of the system established under this section.

(i) PROHIBITIONS RELATING TO ESTABLISHMENT OF REGISTRATION SYSTEMS WITH RESPECT TO FIREARMS.—No department, agency, officer, or employee of the United States may—

(1) require that any record or portion thereof maintained by the system established under this section be recorded at or transferred to a facility owned, managed, or controlled by the United States or any State or political subdivision thereof; or

(2) use the system established under this section to establish any system for the registration of firearms, firearm owners, or firearm transactions or dispositions, except with respect to persons prohibited by section 922(g) or (n) of title 18, United States Code, from receiving a firearm.

(j) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section:

(1) LICENSEE.—The term "licensee" means a licensed importer, licensed manufacturer, or licensed dealer under section 923 of title 18, United States Code.

(2) OTHER TERMS.—The terms "firearm", "licensed importer", "licensed manufacturer", and "licensed dealer" have the meanings stated in section 921(a) (3), (9), (10), and (11), respectively, of title 18, United States Code.

SEC. 2703. FUNDING FOR IMPROVEMENT OF CRIMINAL RECORDS.

(a) IMPROVEMENTS IN STATE RECORDS.—

(1) USE OF FORMULA GRANTS.—Section 509(b) of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3759(b)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (2) by striking "and" after the semicolon;

(2) in paragraph (3) by striking the period and inserting "; and"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(4) the improvement of State record systems and the sharing of all of the records described in paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) and the records required by the Attorney General under section 3 of the Felon Firearm Purchase Prevention Act of 1991 with the Attorney General for the purpose of implementing the Felon Firearm Purchase Prevention Act of 1991."

(2) ADDITIONAL FUNDING.—

(A) GRANTS FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF CRIMINAL RECORDS.—The Attorney General shall, subject to appropriations and with preference to States that as of the date of enactment of this Act have the lowest percent currency of case dispositions in computerized criminal history files, make a grant to each State to be used—

(i) for the creation of a computerized criminal history record system or improvement of an existing system;

(ii) to improve accessibility to the national instant criminal background system; and

(iii) upon establishment of the national system, to assist the State in the transmittal of criminal records to the national system.

(B) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated for grants under subparagraph (A) a total of $100,000,000 for fiscal year 1992 and all fiscal years thereafter.

(b) WITHHOLDING STATE FUNDS.—Effective on the date of enactment of this Act the Attorney General may reduce by up to 50 percent the allocation to a State for a fiscal year under title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 of a State that is not in compliance with the timetable established for such State under section 2702(c).

(c) WITHHOLDING OF DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE FUNDS.—If the Attorney General does not certify the national instant criminal background check system pursuant to section 2702(d)(1) by—

(1) 30 months after the date of enactment of this Act the general administrative funds appropriated to the Department of Justice for the fiscal beginning in the calendar year that is 30 months after the date of enactment of this Act shall be reduced by 5 percent on a monthly basis; and

(2) 42 months after the date of enactment of this Act the general administrative funds appropriated to the Department of Justice for the fiscal beginning in the calendar year that is 42 months after the date of enactment of this Act shall be reduced by 10 percent on a monthly basis.

Add at the end of the amendment and at the appropriate place in the bill the following:

SEC. 1200. LAW APPLICABLE IN CHAPTER 153 PROCEEDINGS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 153 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

§ 2255A. Law applicable

“(a) Except as provided in subsection (b) of this section, each claim under this chapter shall be governed by the law existing on the date the court determines the claim.

“(b) In determining whether to apply a new rule, the court shall consider—

“(1) the purpose to be served by the new rule;

“(2) the extent of the reliance by law enforcement authorities on a different rule; and

“(3) the effect on the administration of justice of the application of the new rule.

“(c) For purposes of this section, the term ‘new rule’ means a sharp break from precedent announced by the Supreme court of the United States that explicitly and substantially changes the law from that governing at the time the claimant’s sentence became final. A rule is not new merely because, based on precedent existing before the rule’s announcement, it was susceptible to debate among reasonable minds.”

(b) CHAPTER ANALYSIS.—The chapter analysis of chapter 153 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

“2255A. Law applicable.”

TITLE XII—PUNISHMENT OF GUN CRIMINALS

SEC. 1201. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the “Gun Criminals Punishment Act of 1991.”

Subtitle A—Increased Penalties for Gun Offenses

SEC. 1211. DEATH PENALTY FOR GUN MURDERS.

Section 924(c) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by—

(1) inserting “(A)” after “(1)”;

(2) designating the second sentence as subparagraph (B);

AMENDMENT No. 636

Add at the end of the amendment and at the appropriate place in the bill:

“A right that is ‘retroactively applicable’ within the meaning of Title XI, as amended, is any right provided by the law existing on the date the court determines the claim except in cases involving a new rule as provided in subsection (b).

(b) In determining whether to apply a new rule, the court shall consider—

(1) the purpose to be served by the new rule;

(2) the extent of the reliance by law enforcement authorities on a different rule; and

(3) the effect on the administration of justice of the application of the new rule.

(c) For purposes of this section, the term ‘new rule’ means a sharp break from precedent announced by the Supreme Court of the United States that explicitly and substantially changes the law from that governing at the time the claimant’s sentence became final. SEC. 1201. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the “Gun Criminals Punishment Act of 1991”.

Subtitle A—Increased Penalties for Gun Offenses

SEC. 1211. DEATH PENALTY FOR GUN MURDERS.

Section 924(c) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by—

- (1) inserting “(A)” after “(1)”; and
- (2) designating the second sentence as subparagraph (B);

AMENDMENT No. 638

Add at the end of the amendment, the following:

“For the purpose of title XI, the term ‘counsel’ means:

“(b)(1) In the case of an appointment made before trial, at least one attorney appointed under this chapter must have been admitted to practice in the court in which the prosecution is to be tried for not less than 5 years, and must have had not less than 3 years’ experience in the trial of felony prosecutions in that court.

“(2) In the case of an appointment made after trial, at least one attorney appointed under this chapter must have been admitted to practice in the court of last resort of the State for not less than 5 years, and must have had not less than 3 years’ experience in the handling of appeals in that State courts in felony cases.

“(3) Notwithstanding paragraphs (1) and (2) of this subsection, a court, for good cause and upon the defendant’s request, may appoint another attorney whose background, knowledge, or experience would otherwise enable the attorney to properly represent the defendant, with due consideration of the seriousness of the possible penalty and the unique and complex nature of the litigation.”

Add at the end of the amendment and at the appropriate place in the bill:

“Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a prisoner’s claim is not fully and fairly adjudicated within the meaning of sections 2254 or 2259 of title 28, United States Code (as amended by this Act), when it has been decided incorrectly or erroneously as a matter of constitutional law.”

AMENDMENT No. 641

Add at the end of the amendment the following:

A right that is retroactively applicable within the meaning of subsection 3599(c) is any right provided by the law existing on the date the court determines the claim, except a new rule, as provided in subsection (b) below.

(b) In determining whether to apply a new rule, the court shall consider—

- (1) the purpose to be served by the new rule;

TITLE III—CIVIL RIGHTS

SEC. 301. CIVIL RIGHTS.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) crimes motivated by the victim’s gender constitute bias crimes in violation of the victim’s right to be free from discrimination on the basis of gender;

(2) current law provides a civil rights remedy for gender crimes committed in the workplace, but not for gender crimes committed on the street or in the home; and

(3) State and Federal criminal laws do not adequately protect against the bias element of gender-motivated crimes, which separates these crimes from acts of random violence, nor do those laws adequately provide victims of gender-motivated crimes the opportunity to vindicate their interests;

(4) existing bias and discrimination in the criminal justice system often deprives victims of gender-motivated crimes of equal protection of the laws and the redress to which they are entitled;

(5) gender-motivated violence has a substantial adverse effect on interstate commerce, by deterring potential victims from traveling interstate, from engaging in employment in interstate business, and from transacting with business, and in places involved, in interstate commerce;

(6) gender-motivated violence has a substantial adverse effect on interstate commerce, by diminishing national productivity, increasing medical and other costs, and decreasing the supply of and the demand for interstate products;

(7) a Federal civil rights action as specified in this section is necessary to guarantee equal protection of the laws and to reduce the substantial adverse effects of gender-motivated violence on interstate commerce; and

(8) victims of gender-motivated violence have a right to equal protection of the laws, including a system of justice that is unaffected by bias or discrimination and that, at every relevant stage, treats such crimes as seriously as other violent crimes.

(b) RIGHTS, PRIVILEGES AND IMMUNITIES.—All persons within the United States shall have the same rights, privileges and immunities in every State as is enjoyed by all other persons to be free from crimes of violence motivated by the victim’s gender, as defined in subsection (d).

(c) CAUSE OF ACTION.—Any person, including a person who acts under color of any statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage of any State, who commits a crime of violence motivated by gender and thus deprives another of the rights, privileges or immunities secured by the Constitution or laws as enumerated in subsection (b) shall be liable to the party injured, in an action for the recovery of compensatory and punitive damages, injunctive and declaratory relief, and such other relief as the court may deem appropriate.

(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

(1) the term "crime of violence motivated by gender" means any crime of violence, as defined in paragraph (2), committed because of gender or on the basis of gender; and

(2) the term "crime of violence" means an act or series of acts that would come within the meaning of State or Federal offenses described in section 16 of title 18, United States Code, whether or not those acts have actually resulted in criminal charges, prosecution, or conviction and whether or not those acts were committed in the special maritime, territorial, or prison jurisdiction of the United States.

(e) LIMITATION AND PROCEDURES.—

(1) LIMITATION.—Nothing in this section entitles a person to a cause of action under subsection (c) for random acts of violence unrelated to gender or for acts that cannot be demonstrated, by a preponderance of the evidence, to be "motivated by gender" as defined in subsection (d).

(2) NO PRIOR CRIMINAL ACTION.—Nothing in this section requires a prior criminal complaint, prosecution, or conviction to establish the necessary elements of a cause of action under subsection (c).

AMENDMENT NO. 649

At the appropriate place, add the following:

SECS. TESTING OF CERTAIN INDIVIDUALS CHARGED WITH CERTAIN SEXUAL OFFENSE FOR THE PRESENCE OF THE ETIOLOGIC AGENT FOR ACQUIRED IMMUNE DEFICIENCY SYNDROME.

(a) HIV RELATED SERVICES FOR VICTIMS.—Victims of any offense of the type described in chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, shall, on request, be provided with

(1) anonymous and confidential testing for the presence of the etiologic agent for acquired immune deficiency syndrome, and counseling concerning such, at no cost by appropriately trained staff operating through appropriate service providers, including rape crisis centers, community health centers, public health clinics, physicians, or other appropriate service providers; follow-up tests and counseling will be available at no cost on dates that occur three, six months and twelve months following the date of the initial test; and

(2) necessary and appropriate medical care.

(b) LIMITED TESTING OF DEFENDANTS.—

(1) COURT ORDER.—The victim of an offense of the type referred to in subsection (a) may obtain an order in the district court of the United States for the district in which charges are brought against the defendant charged with the offense, after notice to the defendant and an opportunity to be heard, requiring that the defendant be tested for the presence of the etiologic agent for acquired immune deficiency syndrome, and that the results of the test be communicated to the victim and the defendant. Any test result of the defendant given to the victim must be accompanied by appropriate counseling.

(2) SHOWING REQUIRED.—To obtain an order under paragraph (1), the victim must demonstrate that—

(A) The defendant has been charged with the offense in a state or federal court, and, if the defendant has been arrested without a warrant, a probable cause determination has been made.

(B) The test for the etiologic agent for acquired immune deficiency syndrome is requested by the victim after counseling; and

(C) The court determines that the alleged conduct of the defendant created a risk of transmission of the etiologic agent for acquired immune deficiency syndrome to the victim.

(3) FOLLOW-UP TESTING.—The court shall order follow-up tests and counseling under paragraph (b) (1) if the initial test was negative. Such follow-up tests and counseling shall be performed at the request of the victim on dates that occur six months and twelve months following the date of the initial test.

(4) TERMINATION OF TESTING REQUIREMENTS.—An order for follow-up testing under paragraph (3) shall be terminated if the individual to be tested obtains an acquittal on, or dismissal of, all charges against such individual.

(c) CONFIDENTIALITY OF TEST.—The results of any test ordered under this section shall be disclosed only to the victim, or, where the court deems appropriate, to the parent or legal guardian of the victim, and to the person tested.

(d) DISCLOSURE OF TEST RESULTS.—The court shall issue an order to prohibit the disclosure of the results of any test performed under this section to anyone other than those mentioned in subsection (c). The contents of the court order shall be sealed. The results of such test performed on the defendant under this section shall not be used as evidence in any criminal trial, except that testing ordered under this section shall not be a bar to testing permitted under any other law.

(e) CONTEMPT FOR DISCLOSURE.—A victim who disclosed the results of a test in violation of this section may be held in contempt of court.

(f) EFFECT ON PENALTY.—The United States Sentencing Commission shall amend existing guidelines for sentences for offenses under this chapter to enhance the sentence if the offender knew that he was infected with the human immunodeficiency virus, except where the offender did not engage or attempt to engage in conduct creating a risk of transmission of the virus to the victim.

SEC. 101. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Safe Streets for Women Act of 1991."

Subtitle A—Federal Penalties for Sex Crimes

SEC. 111. REPEAT OFFENDERS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

“§2247. Repeat offenders

“Any person who violates a provision of this chapter, after one or more prior convictions for an offense punishable under this chapter, or after one or more prior convictions under the laws of any State or foreign country relating to aggravated sexual abuse, sexual abuse, or abusive sexual contact, is punishable by a term of imprisonment up to twice that otherwise authorized.”

(b) TABLE OF SECTIONS.—The table of sections for chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

SEC. 112. FEDERAL PENALTIES.

(a) RAPE AND AGGRAVATED RAPE.—Pursuant to its authority under section 994(p) of title 28, United States Code, the United States Sentencing Commission shall amend its sentencing guidelines to provide that a defendant convicted of aggravated sexual abuse under section 2241 of title 18, United States Code, or sexual abuse under section 2242 of title 18, United States Code, shall be assigned a base offense level under chapter 2 of the sentencing guidelines that is at least 4 levels greater than the base offense level applicable to criminal sexual abuse under the guidelines in effect on November 1, 1990, or otherwise shall amend the guidelines applicable to such offenses so as to achieve a comparable minimum guideline sentence. In amending such guidelines, the Sentencing Commission shall review the appropriateness of existing specific offense characteristics or other adjustments applicable to such offenses, and make such changes as it deems appropriate, taking into account the severity of rape offenses, with or without aggravating factors; the unique nature and duration of the mental injuries inflicted on the victims of such offenses; and any other relevant factors.

(b) EFFECT OF AMENDMENT.—If the sentencing guidelines are amended after the effective date of this section, the Sentencing Commission shall implement the instructions set forth in subsection (a) so as to achieve a comparable result.

(c) STATUTORY RAPE.

(1) Section 2243(b) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking “one year,” and inserting “two years.”

(2) Pursuant to its authority under section 994(p) of title 28, United States Code, the United States Sentencing Commission shall promulgate guidelines or amend existing guidelines to incorporate the increase in maximum penalties provided by this section for section 2243(b) of title 18, United States Code.

SEC. 113. MANDATORY RESTITUTION FOR SEX CRIMES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

“§2248. Mandatory restitution

“(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding the terms of section 3663 of this title, and in addition to any other civil or criminal penalty authorized by law, the court shall order restitution for any offense under this chapter.

“(b) SCOPE AND NATURE OF ORDER.—(1) The order of restitution under this section shall direct that—

“(A) the defendant pay to the victim the full amount of the victim's losses as determined by the court, pursuant to paragraph (2); and

“(B) the United States Attorney enforce the restitution order by all available and reasonable means.

“(2) For purposes of this subsection, the term ‘full amount of the victim's losses’ includes any costs incurred by the victim for—

“(A) medical services relating to physical, psychiatric, or psychological care;

“(B) physical and occupational therapy or rehabilitation;

“(C) lost income;

“(D) attorneys' fees; and

“(E) any other losses suffered by the victim as a proximate result of the offense.

“(3) Restitution orders under this section are mandatory. A court may not decline to issue an order under this section because of—

“(A) the economic circumstances of the defendant; or

“(B) the fact that a victim has, or is entitled to, receive compensation for his or her injuries from the proceeds of insurance or any other source.

“(4)(A) Notwithstanding the terms of paragraph (3), the court may take into account the economic circumstances of the defendant in determining the manner in which and the schedule according to which the restitution is to be paid.

“(B) For purposes of this paragraph, the term ‘economic circumstances’ includes—

“(i) the financial resources and other assets of the defendant;

“(ii) projected earnings, earning capacity, and other income of the defendant; and

“(iii) any financial obligations of the defendant, including obligations to dependents.

“(C) An order under this section may direct the defendant to make a single lump-sum payment or partial payments at specified intervals. The order shall also provide that the defendant's restitutionary obligation takes priority over any criminal fine ordered.

“(D) In the event that the victim has recovered for any amount of loss through the proceeds of insurance or any other source, the order of restitution shall provide that restitution be paid to the person who provided the compensation, but that restitution shall be paid to the victim before any restitution is paid to any other provider of compensation.

“(5) Any amount paid to a victim under this section shall be set off against any amount later recovered as compensatory damages by the victim from the defendant in—

“(A) any Federal civil proceeding; and

“(B) any State civil proceeding, to the extent provided by the law of the State.

“(c) PROOF OF CLAIM.—(1) Within 60 days after conviction and, in any event, no later than 10 days prior to sentencing, the United States Attorney (or his delegee), after consulting with the victim, shall prepare and file an affidavit with the court listing the amounts subject to restitution under this section. The affidavit shall be signed by the United States Attorney (or his delegee) and the victim. Should the victim object to any of the information included in the affidavit, the United States Attorney (or his delegee) shall advise the victim that the victim may file a separate affidavit.

“(2) If no objection is raised by the defendant, the amounts attested to in the affidavit filed pursuant to subsection (1) shall be entered in the court's restitution order. If objection is raised, the court may require the victim or the United States Attorney (or his delegee) to submit further affidavits or other supporting documents, demonstrating the victim's losses.

“(3) If the court concludes, after reviewing the supporting documentation and considering the defendant's objections, that there is a substantial reason for doubting the authenticity or veracity of the records submitted, the court may require additional documentation or hear testimony on those questions. Any records filed, or testimony heard, pursuant to this section, shall be on camera in the judge's chambers. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, this section does not entitle the defendant to discovery of the contents of, or matters related to, any supporting documentation, including medical, psychological, or psychiatric records.

“(4) In the event that the victim's losses are not ascertainable 10 days prior to sentencing as provided in subsection (c)(1), the United States Attorney (or his delegee) shall so inform the court, and the court shall set a date for the final determination of the victim's losses, not to exceed 90 days after sentencing. If the victim subsequently discovers further losses, the victim shall have 60 days after discovery of those losses in which to petition the court for an amended restitution order. Such order may be granted only upon a showing of good cause for the failure to include such losses in the initial claim for restitutionary relief.

“(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section, the term ‘victim’ includes any person who has suffered direct physical, emotional, or pecuniary harm as a result of a commission of a crime under this chapter, including, in the case of a victim who is under 18 years of age, incompetent, incapacitated, or deceased, the legal guardian of the victim or representative of the victim's estate, another family member, or any other person appointed as suitable by the court: Provided, That in no event shall the defendant be named as such representative or guardian.”

(b) TABLE OF SECTIONS.—The table of sections for chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

“2248. Mandatory restitution.”

Subtitle B—Law Enforcement and Prosecution Grants to Reduce Violent Crimes Against Women*SEC. 121. GRANTS TO COMBAT VIOLENT CRIMES AGAINST WOMEN.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.) is amended by—

(1) redesignating part N as part O;

(2) redesignating section 1401 as section 1501; and

(3) adding after part M the following:

“PART N—GRANTS TO COMBAT VIOLENT CRIMES AGAINST WOMEN*“SEC. 1401. PURPOSE OF THE PROGRAM AND GRANTS.

“(a) GENERAL PROGRAM PURPOSE.—The purpose of this part is to assist States, Indian tribes, cities, and other localities to develop effective law enforcement and prosecution strategies to combat violent crimes against women and, in particular, to focus efforts on those areas with the highest rates of violent crime against women.

“(b) PURPOSES FOR WHICH GRANTS MAY BE USED.—Grants under this part shall provide additional personnel, training, technical assistance, data collection and other equipment for the more widespread apprehension, prosecution, and adjudication of persons committing violent crimes against women and specifically, for the purposes of—

“(1) training law enforcement officers and prosecutors to more effectively identify and respond to violent crimes against women, including the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence;

"(2) developing, training, or expanding units of law enforcement officers and prosecutors specifically targeting violent crimes against women, including the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence;

"(3) developing and implementing police and prosecution policies, protocols, or orders specifically devoted to identifying and responding to violent crimes against women, including the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence;

"(4) developing, installing, or expanding data collection systems, including computerized systems, linking police, prosecutors, and courts or for the purpose of identifying and tracking arrests, prosecutions, and convictions for the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence; and

"(5) developing, enlarging, or strengthening victim services programs, including sexual assault and domestic violence programs, to increase reporting and reduce attrition rates for cases involving violent crimes against women, including the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence.

"SUBPART 1—HIGH INTENSITY CRIME AREA GRANTS

"SEC. 1411. HIGH INTENSITY GRANTS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance (hereafter in this part referred to as the 'Director') shall make grants to areas of 'high intensity crime' against women.

"(b) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this part, a 'high intensity crime area' means an area with one of the 40 highest rates of violent crime against women, as determined by the Bureau of Justice Statistics pursuant to section 1412.

"SEC. 1412. HIGH INTENSITY GRANT APPLICATION.

"(a) COMPUTATION.—Within 45 days after the date of enactment of this part, the Bureau of Justice Statistics shall compile a list of the 40 areas with the highest rates of violent crime against women based on the combined female victimization rate per population for assault, sexual assault (including, but not limited to, rape), murder, robbery, and kidnapping.

"(b) USE OF DATA.—In calculating the combined female victimization rate required by subsection (a), the Bureau of Justice Statistics may rely on—

"(1) existing data collected by States, municipalities, Indian reservations or statistical metropolitan areas showing the number of police reports of the crimes listed in subsection (a); and

"(2) existing data collected by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, including data from those governmental entities already complying with the National Incident Based Reporting System, showing the number of police reports of crimes listed in subsection (a).

"(c) PUBLICATION.—After compiling the list set forth in subsection (a), the Bureau of Justice Statistics shall convey it to the Director who shall publish it in the Federal Register.

"(d) QUALIFICATION.—Upon satisfying the terms of subsection (e), any high intensity crime area shall be qualified for a grant under this subpart upon application by the chief executive officer of the governmental entities responsible for law enforcement and prosecution of criminal offenses within the area and certification that—

"(1) the funds shall be used to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women and for at least 3 of the purposes outlined in section 1401(b);

"(2) grantees and subgrantees shall develop a plan for implementation, and otherwise consult and coordinate program grants, with nongovernmental nonprofit victim services programs; and

"(3) at least 25 percent of the amount granted shall be allocated to each of the following three areas: prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services.

"(e) APPLICATION REQUIREMENTS.—The application requirements provided in section 513 of this title shall apply to grants made under this subpart. In addition, each application must provide the certifications required by subsection (d) including documentation from nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs showing their participation in developing the plan required by subsection (d)(2). Applications shall—

"(1) include documentation from the prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services programs to be assisted showing—

"(A) need for the grant funds;

"(B) intended use of the grant funds; and

"(C) expected results from the use of grant funds; and

"(2) proof of compliance with the requirements for the payment of forensic medical exams provided in section 162 of this title.

"(f) DISBURSEMENT.—

"(1) No later than 60 days after the receipt of an application under this subpart, the Director shall either disburse the appropriate sums provided for under this subpart or shall inform the applicant why the application does not conform to the terms of section 513 of this title or to the requirements of this section.

"(2) In disbursing monies under this subpart, the Director shall ensure, to the extent practicable, that grantees—

"(A) equitably distribute funds on a geographic basis;

"(B) determine the amount of subgrants based on the population to be served; and

"(C) give priority to areas with the greatest showing of need.

"(g) GRANTEE REPORTING.—Upon completion of the grant period under this subpart, the grantee shall file a performance report with the Director explaining the activities carried out together with an assessment of the effectiveness of those activities in achieving the purposes of this part. The Director shall suspend funding for an approved application if an applicant fails to submit an annual performance report.

"Subpart 2—Other Grants to States to Combat Violent Crimes Against Women

"SEC. 1421. GENERAL GRANTS TO STATES.

"(a) GENERAL GRANTS.—The Director is authorized to make grants to States, for use by States, units of local government in the States, and nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs in the States, for the purposes outlined in section 1401(b), and to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women.

"(b) AMOUNTS.—From amounts appropriated, the amount of grants under subsection (a) shall be—

"(1) $500,000 to each State; and

"(2) that portion of the then remaining available money to each State that results from a distribution among the States on the basis of each State's population in relation to the population of all States.

"(c) QUALIFICATION.—Upon satisfying the terms of subsection (d), any State shall be qualified for funds provided under this part upon certification that—

"(1) the funds shall be used to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women and for at least 3 of the purposes outlined in section 1401(b);

"(2) grantees and subgrantees shall develop a plan for implementation, and otherwise consult and coordinate, with nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs, including sexual assault and domestic violence victim services programs;

"(3) at least 25 percent of the amount granted shall be allocated to each of the following three areas: prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services.

"(d) APPLICATION REQUIREMENTS.—The application requirements provided in section 513 of this title shall apply to grants made under this subpart. In addition, each application shall include the certifications of qualification required by subsection (c) including documentation from nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs showing their participation in developing the plan required by subsection (c)(2). Applications shall—

"(1) include documentation from the prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services programs to be assisted showing—

"(A) need for the grant funds;

"(B) intended use of the grant funds; and

"(C) expected results from the use of grant funds; and

"(2) proof of compliance with the requirements for the payment of forensic medical exams provided in section 162 of this title.

"(e) DISBURSEMENT.—(1) No later than 60 days after the receipt of an application under this subpart, the Director shall either disburse the appropriate sums provided for under this subpart or shall inform the applicant why the application does not conform to the terms of section 513 of this title or to the requirements of this section.

"(2) In disbursing monies under this subpart, the Director shall issue regulations to ensure that States will—

"(A) equitably distribute monies on a geographic basis including nonurban and rural areas, and giving priority to localities with populations under 100,000;

"(B) determine the amount of subgrants based on the population and geographic area to be served; and

"(C) give priority to areas with the greatest showing of need, as demonstrated by comparing population and geographic areas to be served to the availability of existing sexual assault and domestic violence services.

"(f) GRANTEE REPORTING.—Upon completion of the grant period under this subpart, the State grantee shall file a performance report with the Director explaining the activities carried out together with an assessment of the effectiveness of those activities in achieving the purposes of this subpart. The Director shall suspend funding for an approved application if an applicant fails to submit an annual performance report.

"SEC. 1422. GENERAL GRANTS TO TRIBES.

"(a) GENERAL GRANTS.—The Director is authorized to make grants to Indian tribes, for use by tribes, tribal organizations or nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs on Indian reservations, for the purposes outlined in section 1401(b), and to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women in Indian country.

"(b) AMOUNTS.—From amounts appropriated, the amount of grants under subsection (a) shall be awarded on a competitive basis to tribes, with minimum grants of $35,000 and maximum grants of $500,000.

"(c) QUALIFICATION.—Upon satisfying the terms of subsection (d), any tribe shall be qualified for funds provided under this part upon certification that—

"(1) the funds shall be used to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women and for at least 3 of the purposes outlined in section 1401(b); and

"(2) at least 25 percent of the grant funds shall be allocated to each of the following three areas: prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services.

"(d) APPLICATION REQUIREMENTS.—(1) Applications shall be made directly to the Director and shall contain a description of the tribes' law enforcement responsibilities for the Indian country described in the application and a description of the tribes' system of courts, including whether the tribal government operates courts of Indian offenses as defined in 25 U.S.C. 1301 or CFR courts under 25 CFR 11 et seq.

"(2) Applications shall be in such form as the Director may prescribe and shall specify the nature of the program proposed by the applicant tribe, the data and information on which the program is based, and the extent to which the program plans to use or incorporate existing services available in the Indian country where the grant will be used.

"(3) The term of any grant shall be for a minimum of 3 years.

"(e) GRANTEE REPORTING.—At the end of the first 12 months of the grant period and at the end of each year thereafter, the Indian tribal grantee shall file a performance report with the Director explaining the activities carried out together with an assessment of the effectiveness of those activities in achieving the purposes of this part. The Director shall suspend funding for an approved application if an applicant fails to submit an annual performance report.

"(f) DEFINITIONS.—(1) The term 'Indian tribe' means any Indian tribe, band, nation, or other organized group or community, including any Alaska Native village or regional or village corporation (as defined in, or established pursuant to, the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (43 U.S.C. 1601, et seq.)), which is recognized as eligible for the special services provided by the United States to Indians because of their status as Indians.

"(2) The term 'Indian country' has the meaning given to such term by section 1151 of title 18, United States Code.

"SUBPART 3—GENERAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS

"SEC. 1431. GENERAL DEFINITIONS.

"As used in this part—

"(1) the term 'victim services program' means any public or private nonprofit program that assists victims, including (A) nongovernmental nonprofit organizations such as rape crisis centers, battered women's shelters, or other rape or domestic violence programs, including nonprofit nongovernmental organizations assisting victims through the legal process and (B) victim/witness programs within governmental entities;

"(2) the term 'sexual assault' includes not only assaults committed by offenders who are strangers to the victim but also assaults committed by offenders who are known or related by blood or marriage to the victim; and

"(3) the term 'domestic violence' includes felony or misdemeanor offenses committed by a current or former spouse of the victim, a person with whom the victim shares a child in common, a person who is cohabitating with or has cohabitated with the victim as a spouse, or any other person similarly situated to a spouse who is protected under the domestic or family violence laws of the jurisdiction receiving grant monies.

"SEC. 1432. GENERAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.

"(a) NONMONETARY ASSISTANCE.—In addition to the assistance provided under subparts 1 or 2, the Director may direct any Federal agency, with or without reimbursement, to use its authorities and the resources granted to it under Federal law (including personnel, equipment, supplies, facilities, and managerial, technical, and advisory services) in support of State and local assistance efforts.

"(b) BUREAU REPORTING.—No later than 180 days after the end of each fiscal year for which grants are made under this part, the Director shall submit to the Judiciary Committees of the House and the Senate a report that includes, for each high intensity crime area (as provided in subpart 1) and for each State and for each grantee Indian tribe (as provided in subpart 2)—

"(1) the amount of grants made under this part;

"(2) a summary of the purposes for which those grants were provided and an evaluation of their progress; and

"(3) a copy of each grantee report filed pursuant to sections 1412(g) and 1421(f).

"(c) REGULATIONS.—No later than 45 days after the date of enactment of this part, the Director shall publish proposed regulations implementing this part. No later than 120 days after such date, the Director shall publish final regulations implementing this part.

"(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year 1992, 1993, and 1994, $160,000,000 to carry out the purposes of subpart 1, and $190,000,000 to carry out the purposes of subpart 2, and $10,000,000 to carry out the purposes of section 1422 of subpart 2."

Subtitle C—Safety for Women in Public Transit and Public Parks

SEC. 131. GRANTS FOR CAPITAL IMPROVEMENTS TO PREVENT CRIME IN PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION.

Section 24 of the Urban Mass Transportation Act of 1964 is amended to read as follows:

"GRANTS TO PREVENT CRIME IN PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION

"SEC. 24. (a) GENERAL PURPOSE.—From funds authorized under section 21, and not to exceed $10,000,000, the Secretary shall make capital grants for the prevention of crime and to increase security in existing and future public transportation systems. None of the provisions of this Act may be construed to prohibit the financing of projects under this section where law enforcement responsibilities are vested in a local public body other than the grant applicant.

"(b) GRANTS FOR LIGHTING, CAMERA SURVEILLANCE, AND SECURITY PHONES.—

"(1) From the sums authorized for expenditure under this section for crime prevention, the Secretary is authorized to make grants and loans to States and local public bodies or agencies for the purpose of increasing the safety of public transportation by—

"(A) increasing lighting within or adjacent to public transportation systems, including bus stops, subway stations, parking lots, or garages;

"(B) increasing camera surveillance of areas within and adjacent to public transportation systems, including bus stops, subway stations, parking lots, or garages;

"(C) providing emergency phone lines to contact law enforcement or security personnel in areas within or adjacent to public transportation systems, including bus stops, subway stations, parking lots, or garages; or

"(D) any other project intended to increase the security and safety of existing or planned public transportation systems.

"(2) From the sums authorized under this section, at least 75 percent shall be expended on projects of the type described in subsection (b)(1) (A) and (B).

"(c) REPORTING.—All grants under this section are contingent upon the filing of a report with the Secretary and the Department of Justice, Office of Victims of Crime, showing crime rates in or adjacent to public transportation before, and for a 1-year period after, the capital improvement. Statistics shall be broken down by type of crime, sex, race, and relationship of victim to the offender.

"(d) INCREASED FEDERAL SHARE.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the Federal share under this section for each capital improvement project which enhances the safety and security of public transportation systems and which is not required by law (including any other provision of this chapter) shall be 90 percent of the net project cost of such project.

"(e) SPECIAL GRANTS FOR PROJECTS TO STUDY INCREASING SECURITY FOR WOMEN.—From the sums authorized under this section, the Secretary shall provide grants and loans for the purpose of studying ways to reduce violent crimes against women in public transit through better design or operation of public transit systems.

"(f) GENERAL REQUIREMENTS.—All grants or loans provided under this section shall be subject to all the terms, conditions, requirements, and provisions applicable to grants and loans made under section 2(a)."

SEC. 132. GRANTS FOR CAPITAL IMPROVEMENTS TO PREVENT CRIME IN NATIONAL PARKS.

The Act of August 18, 1970, the National Park System Improvements in Administration Act (90 Stat. 1931; 16 U.S.C. 1a-1 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"SEC. 13. NATIONAL PARK SYSTEM CRIME PREVENTION ASSISTANCE.

"(a) From the sums authorized pursuant to section 7 of the Land and Water Conservation Act of 1965, and not to exceed $10,000,000, the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to provide Federal assistance to reduce the incidence of violent crime in the National Park System.

"(b) The Secretary shall direct the chief official responsible for law enforcement within the National Park Service to—

"(1) compile a list of areas within the National Park System with the highest rates of violent crime;

"(2) make recommendations concerning capital improvements, and other measures, needed within the National Park System to reduce the rates of violent crime, including the rate of sexual assault; and

"(3) publish the information required by paragraphs (1) and (2) in the Federal Register.

"(c) No later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this section, and based on the recommendations and list issued pursuant to subsection (b), the Secretary shall distribute funds throughout the National Park Service. Priority shall be given to those areas with the highest rates of sexual assault.

"(d) Funds provided under this section may be used for the following purposes—

"(1) to increase lighting within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas;

"(2) to provide emergency phone lines to contact law enforcement or security personnel in areas within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas;

"(3) to increase security or law enforcement personnel within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas; and

"(4) any other project intended to increase the security and safety of public parks and recreation areas."

SEC. 133. GRANTS FOR CAPITAL IMPROVEMENTS TO PREVENT CRIME IN PUBLIC PARKS.

Section 6 of the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1965 (78 Stat. 897; 16 U.S.C. 4601-9) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(h) CAPITAL IMPROVEMENT AND OTHER PROJECTS TO REDUCE CRIME.—In addition to assistance for planning projects, and in addition to the projects identified in subsection (e), and from amounts appropriated, the Secretary shall provide financial assistance to the States, not to exceed $15,000,000 in total, for the following types of projects or combinations thereof:

"(1) For the purpose of making capital improvements and other measures to increase safety in urban parks and recreation areas, including funds to—

"(A) increase lighting within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas;

"(B) provide emergency phone lines to contact law enforcement or security personnel in areas within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas;

"(C) increase security personnel within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas; and

"(D) any other project intended to increase the security and safety of public parks and recreation areas.

"(2) In addition to the requirements for project approval imposed by this section, eligibility for assistance under this subsection is dependent upon a showing of need. In providing funds under this subsection, the Secretary shall give priority to those projects proposed for urban parks and recreation areas with the highest rates of crime and, in particular, to urban parks and recreation areas with the highest rates of sexual assault.

"(3) Notwithstanding the terms of subsection (c), the Secretary is authorized to provide 70 percent improvement grants for projects undertaken by any State for the purposes outlined in this subsection. The remaining share of the cost shall be borne by the State."

Subtitle D—National Commission on Violent Crime Against Women

SEC. 141. ESTABLISHMENT.

There is established a commission to be known as the National Commission on Violent Crime Against Women (hereinafter referred to as "the Commission").

SEC. 142. DUTIES OF COMMISSION.

(a) GENERAL PURPOSE OF THE COMMISSION.—The Commission shall carry out activities for the purposes of promoting a national policy on violent crime against women, and for making recommendations for how to reduce violent crime against women.

(b) FUNCTIONS.—The Commission shall perform the following functions—

(1) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, current law enforcement efforts at the Federal and State levels to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women;

(2) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the responsiveness of State prosecutors and State courts to violent crimes against women;

(3) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the adequacy of current education, prevention, and protection services for women victims of violent crime;

(4) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the role of the Federal Government in reducing violent crimes against women;

(5) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, national public awareness and the public dissemination of information essential to the prevention of violent crimes against women;

(6) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, data collection and government statistics on the incidence and prevalence of violent crimes against women;

(7) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the adequacy of State and Federal laws on sexual assault and the need for a more uniform statutory response to sex offenses, including sexual assaults and other sex offenses committed by offenders who are known or related by blood or marriage to the victim;

(8) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the adequacy of State and Federal laws on domestic violence and the need for a more uniform statutory response to domestic violence; and

(9) evaluate and make recommendations regarding the feasibility of maintaining the confidentiality of addresses of domestic violence victims in voting, welfare, and public records.

SEC. 143. MEMBERSHIP.

(a) NUMBER AND APPOINTMENT.—

(1) APPOINTMENT.—The Commission shall be composed of 15 members as follows:

(A) Five members shall be appointed by the President—

(i) three of whom shall be—

(I) the Attorney General;

(II) the Secretary of Health and Human Services; and

(III) the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation,

who shall be nonvoting members, except that in the case of a tie vote by the Commission, the Attorney General shall be a voting member;

(ii) two of whom shall be selected from the general public on the basis of such individuals being specially qualified to serve on the Commission by reason of their education, training, or experience; and

(iii) at least one of whom shall be selected for their experience in providing services to women victims of sexual assault or domestic violence.

(B) Five members shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives on the joint recommendation of the Majority and Minority Leaders of the House of Representatives.

(C) Five members shall be appointed by the President pro tempore of the Senate on the joint recommendation of the Majority and Minority Leaders of the Senate.

(2) CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE RECOMMENDATIONS.—In making appointments under subparagraphs (B) and (C) of paragraph (1), the Majority and Minority Leaders of the House of Representatives and the Senate shall duly consider the recommendations of the Chairmen and Ranking Minority Members of committees with jurisdiction over laws contained in title 18 of the United States Code.

(3) REQUIREMENTS OF APPOINTMENTS.—The Majority and Minority Leaders of the Senate and the House of Representatives shall—

(A) select individuals who are specially qualified to serve on the Commission by reason of their experience in State or national efforts to fight violence against women and demonstrate experience in State or national advocacy or service organizations specializing in sexual assault and domestic violence; and

(B) engage in consultations for the purpose of ensuring that the expertise of the ten members appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the President pro tempore of the Senate shall provide as much of a balance as possible and, to the greatest extent possible, cover the fields of law enforcement, prosecution, judicial administration, legal expertise, public health, social work, victim compensation boards, and victim advocacy.

(4) TERM OF MEMBERS.—Members of the Commission (other than members appointed under paragraph (1)(A)(i)) shall serve for the life of the Commission.

(5) VACANCY.—A vacancy on the Commission shall be filled in the manner in which the original appointment was made.

(b) CHAIRMAN.—Not later than 15 days after the members of the Commission are appointed, such members shall select a Chairman from among the members of the Commission.

(c) QUORUM.—Seven members of the Commission shall constitute a quorum, but a lesser number may be authorized by the Commission to conduct hearings.

(d) MEETINGS.—The Commission shall hold its first meeting on a date specified by the Chairman, but such date shall not be later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act. After the initial meeting, the Commission shall meet at the call of the Chairman or a majority of its members, but shall meet at least six times.

(e) PAY.—Members of the Commission who are officers or employees or elected officials of a government entity shall receive no additional compensation by reason of their service on the Commission.

(f) PER DIEM.—Except as provided in subsection (e), members of the Commission shall be allowed travel and other expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, at rates authorized for employees of agencies under sections 5702 and 5703 of title 5, United States Code.

(g) DEADLINE FOR APPOINTMENT.—Not later than 45 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the members of the Commission shall be appointed.

SEC. 144. REPORTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 1 year after the date on which the Commission is fully constituted under section 143, the Commission shall prepare and submit a final report to the President and to congressional committees that have jurisdiction over legislation addressing violent crimes against women, including the crimes of domestic and sexual assault.

(b) CONTENTS.—The final report submitted under paragraph (1) shall contain a detailed statement of the activities of the Commission and of the findings and conclusions of the Commission, including such recommendations for legislation and administrative action as the Commission considers appropriate.

SEC. 145. EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR AND STAFF.

(a) EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR.—

(1) APPOINTMENT.—The Commission shall have an Executive Director who shall be appointed by the Chairman, with the approval of the Commission, not later than 30 days after the Chairman is selected.

(2) COMPENSATION.—The Executive Director shall be compensated at a rate not to exceed the maximum rate of the basic pay payable under GS-18 of the General Schedule as contained in title 5, United States Code.

(b) STAFF.—With the approval of the Commission, the Executive Director may appoint and fix the compensation of such additional personnel as the Executive Director considers necessary to carry out the duties of the Commission.

(c) APPLICABILITY OF CIVIL SERVICE LAWS.—The Executive Director and the additional personnel of the Commission appointed under subsection (b) may be appointed without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service, and may be paid without regard to the provisions of chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of such title relating to classification and General Schedule pay rates.

(d) CONSULTANTS.—Subject to such rules as may be prescribed by the Commission, the Executive Director may procure temporary or intermittent services under section 3109(b) of title 5, United States Code, at rates for individuals not to exceed $200 per day.

SEC. 148. POWERS OF COMMISSION.

(a) HEARINGS.—For the purpose of carrying out this subtitle, the Commission may conduct such hearings, sit and act at such times and places, take such testimony, and receive such evidence, as the Commission considers appropriate. The Commission may administer oaths before the Commission.

(b) DELEGATION.—Any member or employee of the Commission may, if authorized by the Commission, take any action that the Commission is authorized to take under this subtitle.

(c) ACCESS TO INFORMATION.—The Commission may request directly from any executive department or agency such information as may be necessary to enable the Commission to carry out this subtitle, on the request of the Chairman of the Commission.

(d) MAILS.—The Commission may use the United States mails in the same manner and under the same conditions as other departments and agencies of the United States.

SEC. 147. AUTHORIZATIONS OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There is authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1992, $500,000 to carry out the purposes of this subtitle.

SEC. 148. TERMINATION.

The Commission shall cease to exist 30 days after the date on which its final report is submitted under section 144. The President may extend the life of the Commission for a period of not to exceed one year.

Subtitle E—New Evidentiary Rules

SEC. 151. SEXUAL HISTORY IN ALL CRIMINAL CASES.

The Federal Rules of Evidence are amended by inserting after rule 412 the following:

“Rule 412A. Evidence of victim's past behavior in other criminal cases

“(a) REPUTATION AND OPINION EVIDENCE EXCLUDED.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in a criminal case, other than a sex offense case governed by rule 412, reputation or opinion evidence of the past sexual behavior of an alleged victim is not admissible.

“(b) ADMISSIBILITY.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in a criminal case, other than a sex offense case governed by rule 412, evidence of an alleged victim's past sexual behavior (other than reputation and opinion evidence) may be admissible if—

“(1) the evidence is admitted in accordance with the procedures specified in subdivision (c); and

“(2) the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice.

“(c) PROCEDURES.—(1) If the defendant intends to offer evidence of specific instances of the alleged victim's past sexual behavior, the defendant shall make a written motion to offer such evidence not later than 15 days before the date on which the trial in which such evidence is to be offered is scheduled to begin, except that the court may allow the motion to be made at a later date, including during trial, if the court determines either that the evidence is newly discovered and could not have been obtained earlier through the exercise of due diligence or that the issue to which such evidence relates has newly arisen in the case. Any motion made under this paragraph shall be served on all other parties and on the alleged victim.

“(2) The motion described in paragraph (1) shall be accompanied by a written offer of proof. If necessary, the court shall order a hearing in chambers to determine if such evidence is admissible. At such hearing, the parties may call witnesses, including the alleged victim and offer relevant evidence. Notwithstanding subdivision (b) of rule 104, if the relevancy of the evidence which the defendant seeks to offer in the trial depends upon the fulfillment of a condition of fact, the court, at the hearing in chambers or at a subsequent hearing in chambers scheduled for such purpose, shall accept evidence on the issue of whether such condition of fact is fulfilled and shall determine such issue.

“(3) If the court determines, on the basis of the hearing described in paragraph (2), that the evidence the defendant seeks to offer is relevant, not excluded by any other evidentiary rule, and that the probative value of such evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice, such evidence shall be admissible in the trial to the extent an order made by the court specifies the evidence which may be offered and areas with respect to which the alleged victim may be examined or cross-examined. In its order, the court should consider (A) the chain of reasoning leading to its finding of relevance, and (B) why the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice given the potential of the evidence to humiliate and embarrass the alleged victim and to result in unfair or biased jury inferences.”

SEC. 152. SEXUAL HISTORY IN CIVIL CASES.

The Federal Rules of Evidence, as amended by section 151 of this Act, are amended by adding after rule 412A the following:

“Rule 412B. Evidence of past sexual behavior in civil cases

“(a) REPUTATION AND OPINION EVIDENCE EXCLUDED.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in a civil case in which a defendant is accused of actionable sexual misconduct, as defined in subdivision (d), reputation or opinion evidence of the plaintiff's past sexual behavior is not admissible.

“(b) ADMISSIBLE EVIDENCE.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in a civil case in which a defendant is accused of actionable sexual misconduct, as defined in subdivision (d), evidence of a plaintiff's past sexual behavior other than reputation or opinion evidence may be admissible if—

“(1) admitted in accordance with the procedures specified in subdivision (c); and

“(2) the probative value of such evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice.

“(c) PROCEDURES.—(1) If the defendant intends to offer evidence of specific instances of the plaintiff's past sexual behavior, the defendant shall make a written motion to offer such evidence not later than 15 days before the date on which the trial in which such evidence is to be offered is scheduled to begin, except that the court may allow the motion to be made at a later date, including during trial, if the court determines either that the evidence is newly discovered and could not have been obtained earlier through the exercise of due diligence or that the issue to which such evidence relates has newly arisen in the case. Any motion made under this paragraph shall be served on all other parties and on the plaintiff.

“(2) The motion described in paragraph (1) shall be accompanied by a written offer of proof. If necessary, the court shall order a hearing in chambers to determine if such evidence is admissible. At such hearing, the parties may call witnesses, including the plaintiff and offer relevant evidence. Notwithstanding subdivision (b) of rule 104, if the relevancy of the evidence which the defendant seeks to offer in the trial depends upon the fulfillment of a condition of fact, the court, at the hearing in chambers or at a subsequent hearing in chambers scheduled for such purpose, shall accept evidence on the issue of whether such condition of fact is fulfilled and shall determine such issue.

“(3) If the court determines on the basis of the hearing described in paragraph (2), that the evidence the defendant seeks to offer is relevant, not excluded by any other evidentiary rule, and that the probative value of such evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice, such evidence shall be admissible in the trial to the extent an order made by the court specifies evidence which may be offered and areas with respect to which the plaintiff may be examined or cross-examined. In its order, the court should consider (A) the chain of reasoning leading to its finding of relevance, and (B) why the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice given the potential of the evidence to humiliate and embarrass the alleged victim and to result in unfair or biased jury inferences.

“(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this rule, a case involving a claim of actionable sexual misconduct, includes, but is not limited to, sex harassment or discrimination claims brought pursuant to title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000(e)) and gender bias claims brought pursuant to title III of the Violence Against Women Act of 1991.”

SEC. 153. AMENDMENTS TO RAPE SHIELD LAW.

Rule 412 of the Federal Rules of Evidence is amended—

(1) by adding at the end thereof the following:

“(e) INTERLOCUTORY APPEAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any evidentiary rulings made pursuant to this rule are subject to interlocutory appeal by the government or by the alleged victim.

“(f) RULE OF RELEVANCE AND PRIVILEGE.—If the prosecution seeks to offer evidence of prior sexual history, the provisions of this rule may be waived by the alleged victim.”;

and

(2) by adding at the end of subdivision (c)(3) the following: “In its order, the court should consider (A) the chain of reasoning leading to its finding of relevance; and (B) why the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice given the potential of the evidence to humiliate and embarrass the alleged victim and to result in unfair or biased jury inferences.”

SEC. 154. EVIDENCE OF CLOTHING.

The Federal Rules of Evidence are amended by adding after rule 412 the following:

“Rule 413. Evidence of victim's clothing as inciting violence

“Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in a criminal case in which a person is accused of an offense under chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, evidence of an alleged victim's clothing is not admissible to show that the alleged victim incited or invited the offense charged."

Subtitle F—Assistance to Victims of Sexual Assault

SEC. 131. EDUCATION AND PREVENTION GRANTS TO REDUCE SEXUAL ASSAULTS AGAINST WOMEN.

Part A of title XIX of the Public Health and Health Services Act (42 U.S.C. 300w et seq.) is amended as follows:

(1) by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"§1910A. Use of allotments for rape prevention education

"(a) Notwithstanding the terms of section 1904(a)(1) of this title, amounts transferred by the State for use under this part may be used for rape prevention and education programs conducted by rape crisis centers or similar nongovernmental nonprofit entities, which programs may include—

- "(1) educational seminars;
- "(2) the operation of hotlines;
- "(3) training programs for professionals;
- "(4) the preparation of informational materials; and

"(5) other efforts to increase awareness of the facts about, or to help prevent, sexual assault.

"(b) States providing grant monies must assure that at least 15 percent of the monies are devoted to education programs targeted for middle school, junior high school, and high school students.

"(c) There are authorized to be appropriated under this section for each fiscal year 1992, 1993, and 1994, $65,000,000 to carry out the purposes of this section.

"(d) Funds authorized under this section may only be used for providing rape prevention and education programs.

"(e) For purposes of this section, the term 'rape prevention and education' includes education and prevention efforts directed at offenses committed by offenders who are not known to the victim as well as offenders who are known to the victim.

"(f) States shall be allotted funds under this section pursuant to the terms of sections 1902 and 1903, and subject to the conditions provided in this section and sections 1904 through 1909."

- (2) striking section 1901(b); and
- (3) striking section 1904(a)(1)(G).

SEC. 162. RAPE EXAM PAYMENTS.

No State or other grantee is entitled to funds under title I of the Violence Against Women Act of 1990 unless the State or other grantee incurs the full cost of forensic medical exams for victims of sexual assault. A State or other grantee does not incur the full medical cost of forensic medical exams if it chooses to reimburse the victim after the fact unless the reimbursement program waives any minimum loss or deductible requirement, provides victim reimbursement within a reasonable time (90 days), permits applications for reimbursement within one year from the date of the exam, and provides information to all subjects of forensic medical exams about how to obtain reimbursement.

TITLE II—SAFE HOMES FOR WOMEN

SEC. 201. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Safe Homes for Women Act of 1990".

Subtitle A—Interstate Enforcement

SEC. 211. INTERSTATE ENFORCEMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part 1 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after chapter 110 the following:

"Chapter 110A—Violence Against Spouses

"Sec. 2261. Traveling to commit spousal abuse.

"Sec. 2262. Interstate violation of protection orders.

"Sec. 2263. Restitution.

"Sec. 2264. Full faith and credit given to protection orders.

"Sec. 2265. Definitions for chapter.

"§ 2261. Traveling to commit spousal abuse

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Any person who travels across State lines—

"(1) and who, in the course of or as a result of such travel, commits an act that injures his or her spouse or intimate partner; or shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than 10 years but not less than 3 months, or both, in addition to any fine or term of imprisonment provided under State law.

"(b) CAUSING THE CROSSING OF STATE LINES.—Any person who causes a spouse or intimate partner to cross State lines by force, coercion, duress or fraud and, in the course or as a result of that conduct, commits an act that injures his or her spouse or intimate partner, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than 10 years but not less than 3 months, or both, in addition to any fine or term of imprisonment provided under State law.

"(c) NO STATE LAW.—If no fine or term of imprisonment is provided for under the law of the State where the injury occurs, a person violating this section shall be punished as follows:

"(1) If permanent disfigurement or life-threatening bodily injury results, by imprisonment for not more than 20 years; where serious bodily injury results, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both; where bodily injury results, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

"(2) If the offense is committed with intent to commit another felony, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both.

"(3) If the offense is committed with a dangerous weapon, with intent to do bodily harm, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

"(4) If the offense constitutes sexual abuse, as that conduct is described under chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code (without regard to whether the offense was committed in the maritime, territorial or prison jurisdiction of the United States) by fine or term of imprisonment as provided for the applicable conduct under chapter 109A.

"(d) CRIMINAL INTENT.—The criminal intent of the offender required to establish an offense under subsection (b) is the general intent to do the acts that result in injury to a spouse or intimate partner and not the specific intent to violate the law of a State.

"(e) NO PRIOR STATE CRIMINAL ACTION NECESSARY.—Nothing in this section requires a prior criminal prosecution or conviction under State law to justify Federal prosecution.

"§ 2262. Interstate violation of protection orders

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Any person against whom a valid protection order has been entered who travels across State lines—

"(1) and who, in the course of or as a result of such travel, commits an act that injures

his or her spouse or intimate partner in violation of a valid protection order issued by a State; or

"(2) for the purpose of harassing, injuring, finding, contacting, or locating a spouse or intimate partner and who, in furtherance of that purpose, commits an act that injures his or her spouse or intimate partner in violation of a valid protection order issued by a State, shall be punished as provided in subsection (c) of this section.

"(b) CAUSING THE CROSSING OF STATE LINES.—Any person who causes a spouse or intimate partner to cross State lines by force, coercion, duress, or fraud, and, in the course or as a result of that conduct, commits an act that injures his or her spouse or intimate partner in violation of a valid protection order issued by a State shall be punished as provided in subsection (c) of this section.

"(c) PENALTIES.—

"(1) If permanent disfigurement or life-threatening bodily injury results, by imprisonment for not more than 20 years; where serious bodily injury results, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both; where bodily injury results, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

"(2) If the offense is committed with intent to commit another felony, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both.

"(3) If the offense is committed with a dangerous weapon, with intent to do bodily harm, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

"(4) If the offender has previously violated any prior protection order issued against that person for the protection of the same victim, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years and not less than six months, or both.

"(5) If the offense constitutes sexual abuse, as that conduct is described under chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code (without regard to whether the conduct was committed in the special maritime, territorial or prison jurisdiction of the United States) by fine or term of imprisonment as provided for the applicable offense under chapter 109A.

"(d) CRIMINAL INTENT.—The criminal intent required to establish the offense provided in subsection (a) is the general intent to do the acts which result in injury to a spouse or intimate partner and not the specific intent to violate a protection order or State law.

"(e) NO PRIOR STATE CRIMINAL ACTION NECESSARY.—Nothing in this section requires a prior criminal prosecution or conviction under State law to justify Federal prosecution.

"§ 2263. Interim protections

"In furtherance of the purposes of this chapter, and to protect against abuse of a spouse or intimate partner, any judge or magistrate before whom a criminal case under this chapter is brought, shall have the power to issue temporary orders of protection for the protection of an abused spouse or intimate partner pending final adjudication of the case, upon a showing of a likelihood of danger to the abused spouse or intimate partner.

"§ 2264. Restitution

"(a) IN GENERAL.—In addition to any fine or term of imprisonment provided under this chapter, and notwithstanding the terms of section 3663 of this title, the court shall order restitution to the victim of an offense under this chapter.

“(b) SCOPE AND NATURE OF ORDER.—(1) The order of restitution under this section shall direct that—

“(A) the defendant pay to the victim the full amount of the victim's losses as determined by the court, pursuant to subsection (3); and

“(B) the United States Attorney enforce the restitution order by all available and reasonable means.

“(2) For purposes of this subsection, the term ‘full amount of the victim's losses’ includes any costs incurred by the victim for—

“(A) medical services relating to physical, psychiatric, or psychological care;

“(B) physical and occupational therapy or rehabilitation; and

“(C) lost income;

“(D) attorneys' fees, plus any costs incurred in obtaining a civil protection order; and

“(E) any other losses suffered by the victim as a proximate result of the offense.

“(3) Restitution orders under this section are mandatory. A court may not decline to issue an order under this section because of—

“(A) the economic circumstances of the defendant; or

“(B) the fact that victim has, or is entitled to, receive compensation for his or her injuries from the proceeds of insurance.

“(4)(A) Notwithstanding the terms of paragraph (3), the court may take into account the economic circumstances of the defendant in determining the manner in which and the schedule according to which the restitution is to be paid, including—

“(i) the financial resources and other assets of the defendant;

“(ii) projected earnings, earning capacity, and other income of the defendant; and

“(iii) any financial obligations of the offender, including obligations to dependents.

“(B) An order under this section may direct the defendant to make a single lump-sum payment, or partial payments at specified intervals. The order shall provide that the defendant's restitutionary obligation takes priority over any criminal fine ordered.

“(C) In the event that the victim has recovered for any amount of loss through the proceeds of insurance or any other source, the order of restitution shall provide that restitution be paid to the person who provided the compensation, but that restitution shall be paid to the victim before any restitution is paid to any other provider of compensation.

“(5) Any amount paid to a victim under this section shall be set off against any amount later recovered as compensatory damages by the victim from the defendant in—

“(A) any Federal civil proceeding; and

“(B) any State civil proceeding, to the extent provided by the law of the State.

“(c) PROOF OF CLAIM.—(1) Within 60 days after conviction and, in any event, no later than 10 days prior to sentencing, the United States Attorney (or his delegee), after consulting with the victim, shall prepare and file an affidavit with the court listing the amounts subject to restitution under this section. The affidavit shall be signed by the United States Attorney (or his delegee) and the victim. Should the victim object to any of the information included in the affidavit, the United States Attorney (or his delegee) shall advise the victim that the victim may file a separate affidavit.

“(2) If no objection is raised by the defendant, the amounts attested to in the affidavit filed pursuant to subsection (1) shall be entered in the court's restitution order. If objection is raised, the court may require the victim or the United States Attorney (or his delegee) to submit further affidavits or other supporting documents, demonstrating the victim's losses.

“(3) If the court concludes, after reviewing the supporting documentation and considering the defendant's objections, that there is a substantial reason for doubting the authenticity or veracity of the records submitted, the court may require additional documentation or hear testimony on those questions. Any records filed, or testimony heard, pursuant to this section, shall be in camera in the judge's chambers. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, this section does not entitle the defendant to discovery of the contents of, or related to, any supporting documentation, including medical, psychological, or psychiatric records.

“(4) In the event that the victim's losses are not ascertainable 10 days prior to sentencing as provided in subsection (c)(1), the United States Attorney (or his delegee) shall so inform the court, and the court shall set a date for the final determination of the victim's losses, not to exceed 90 days after sentencing. If the victim subsequently discovers further losses, the victim shall have 60 days after discovery of those losses in which to petition the court for an amended restitution order. Such order may be granted only upon a showing of good cause for the failure to include such losses in the initial claim for restitutionary relief.

“(d) RESTITUTION AND CRIMINAL PENALTIES.—An award of restitution to the victim of an offense under this chapter shall not be a substitute for imposition of punishment under sections 2261 and 2262.

“(e) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section, the term ‘victim’ includes any person who has suffered direct physical, emotional, or pecuniary harm as a result of a commission of a crime under this chapter, including, in the case of a victim who is under 18 years of age, incompetent, incapacitated, or deceased, the legal guardian of the victim or representative of the victim's estate, another family member, or any other person appointed as suitable by the court: Provided, That in no event shall the defendant be named as such representative or guardian.

“§ 2265. Full faith and credit given to protection orders

“(a) FULL FAITH AND CREDIT.—Any protection order issued consistent with the terms of subsection (b) by the court of one State (the issuing State) shall be accorded full faith and credit by the court of another State (the enforcing State) and enforced as if it were the order of the enforcing State.

“(b) PROTECTION ORDER.—A protection order issued by a State court is consistent with the provisions of this section if—

“(1) such court has jurisdiction over the parties and matter under the law of such State; and

“(2) reasonable notice and opportunity to be heard is given to the person against whom the order is sought sufficient to protect that person's right to due process. In the case of ex parte orders, notice and opportunity to be heard must be provided within the time required by State law, and in any event within a reasonable time after the order is issued, sufficient to protect the respondent's due process rights.

“(c) CROSS OR COUNTER PETITION.—A protection order issued by a State court against one who has petitioned, filed a complaint, or otherwise filed a written pleading for protection against abuse by a spouse or intimate partner is not entitled to full faith and credit if—

“(1) no cross or counter petition, complaint, or other written pleading was filed seeking such a protection order; or

“(2) if a cross or counter petition has been filed, if the court did not make specific findings that each party was entitled to such an order.

“§ 2266. Definitions for chapter

“As used in this chapter—

“(1) the term ‘spouse or intimate partner’ includes—

“(A) a present or former spouse, a person who shares a child in common with the abuser, and a person who cohabits or has cohabited with the abuser as a spouse; and

“(B) any other person similarly situated to a spouse, other than a child, who is protected by the domestic or family violence laws of the State in which the injury occurred or where the victim resides;

“(2) the term ‘protection order’ includes any injunction or other order issued for the purpose of preventing violent or threatening acts by one spouse against his or her spouse or intimate partner, including temporary and final orders issued by civil and criminal courts (other than support or child custody orders) whether obtained by filing an independent action or as a pendente lite order in another proceeding so long as any civil order was issued in response to a complaint, petition or motion of an abused spouse or intimate partner;

“(3) the term ‘act that injures’ includes any act, except those done in self-defense, that results in physical injury or sexual abuse;

“(4) the term ‘State’ includes a State of the United States, the District of Columbia, and any Indian tribe, commonwealth, territory, or possession of the United States; and

“(5) the term ‘travel across State lines’ includes any such travel except travel across State lines by an Indian tribal member when that member remained at all times on tribal lands.”

(b) TABLE OF CHAPTERS.—The table of chapters for part 1 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item for chapter 110 the following:

“110A. Violence against spouses ..... 2261.”

Subtitle B—Arrest in Spousal Abuse Cases

SEC. 221. ENCOURAGING ARREST POLICIES.

The Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10400) is amended by adding after section 311 the following:

“SEC. 312. ENCOURAGING ARREST POLICIES.

“(a) PURPOSE.—To encourage States, Indian tribes and localities to treat spousal violence as a serious violation of criminal law, the Secretary is authorized to make grants to eligible States, Indian tribes, municipalities, or local government entities for the following purposes:

“(1) to implement pro-arrest programs and policies in police departments and to improve tracking of cases involving spousal abuse;

“(2) to centralize and coordinate police enforcement, prosecution, or judicial responsibility for, spousal abuse cases in one group or unit of police officers, prosecutors, or judges;

“(3) to educate judges in criminal and other courts about spousal abuse and to improve judicial handling of such cases.

“(b) ELIGIBILITY.—(1) Eligible grantees are those States, Indian tribes, municipalities or other local government entities that—

“(A) demonstrate, through arrest and conviction statistics, that their laws or policies have been effective in significantly increasing the number of arrests made of spouse abusers; and

"(B) certify that their laws or official policies—

"(i) mandate arrest of spouse abusers based on probable cause that violence has been committed or mandate arrest of spouses violating the terms of a valid and outstanding protection order; or

"(ii) permit warrantless misdemeanor arrests of spouse abusers and encourage the use of that authority;

"(C) demonstrate that their laws, policies, practices and training programs discourage 'dual' arrests of abused and abuser and the increase in arrest rates demonstrated pursuant to paragraph (1)(A) is not the result of increased dual arrests; and

"(D) certify that their laws, policies, and practices prohibit issuance of mutual protection orders in cases where only one spouse has sought a protective order, and require findings of mutual aggression to issue mutual protective orders in cases where both parties file a claim.

"(2) For purposes of this section, the term 'protection order' includes any injunction issued for the purpose of preventing violent or threatening acts of spouse abuse, including temporary and final orders issued by civil and criminal courts (other than support or child custody orders) whether obtained by filing an independent action or as a pendent lite order in another proceeding.

"(3) For purposes of this section, the term 'spousal or spouse abuse' includes felony or misdemeanor offenses committed by a current or former spouse of the victim, a person with whom the victim shares a child in common, a person who is cohabiting with or has cohabited with the victim as a spouse, or any other person protected under the domestic or family violence laws of the jurisdiction receiving grant monies.

"(4) The eligibility requirements provided in this section shall take effect one year after the date of enactment of this section.

"(c) DELEGATION AND AUTHORIZATION.—The Secretary shall delegate to the Attorney General of the United States the Secretary's responsibilities for carrying out this section to the Attorney General. There are authorized to be appropriated not in excess of $25,000,000 for each fiscal year to be used for the purpose of making grants under this section.

"(d) APPLICATION.—An eligible grantee shall submit an application to the Secretary. Such application shall—

"(1) contain a certification by the chief executive officer of the State, Indian tribes, municipality, or local government entity that the conditions of subsection (b) are met;

"(2) describe the entity's plans to further the purposes listed in subsection (a);

"(3) identify the agency or office or groups of agencies or offices responsible for carrying out the program; and

"(4) identify and include documentation showing the nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs that will be consulted in developing, and implementing, the program.

"(e) PRIORITY.—In awarding grants under this section, the Secretary shall give priority to a grantee that—

"(1) does not currently provide for centralized handling of cases involving spousal or family violence in any one of the areas listed in this subsection—police, prosecutors, and courts; and

"(2) demonstrates a commitment to strong enforcement of laws, and prosecution of cases, involving spousal or family violence.

"(f) REPORTING.—Each grantee receiving funds under this section shall submit a report to the Secretary evaluating the effectiveness of the plan described in subsection (d)(2) and containing such additional information as the Secretary may prescribe.

"(g) REGULATIONS.—No later than 45 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall publish proposed regulations implementing this section. No later than 120 days after such date, the Secretary shall publish final regulations implementing this section."

Subtitle C—Funding for Shelters

SEC. 231. AUTHORIZATION.

Section 310 of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10409) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 310. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—(a) There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out the provisions of this title, $85,000,000 for fiscal year 1992, $100,000,000, for fiscal year 1993, and $125,000,000 for fiscal year 1994.

"(b) Of the sums authorized to be appropriated under subsection (a) of this section for any fiscal year, not less than 80 percent shall be used by the Secretary for making grants under section 303.

"(c) Of the sums authorized to be appropriated under subsection (a) of this section for any fiscal year, not more than 5 percent shall be used by the Secretary for making grants under section 314.

"(d) Of the sums authorized to be appropriated under subsection (a) of this section for any fiscal year, not less than 5 percent shall be used by the Secretary for making grants under section 308A."

Subtitle D—Family Violence Prevention and Services Act Amendments

SEC. 241. EXPANSION OF PURPOSE.

Section 302(1) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10401(1)) is amended by striking "to prevent" and inserting "to increase public awareness about and prevent" and by striking "demonstrate the effectiveness of assisting" and inserting "assist".

SEC. 242. EXPANSION OF STATE DEMONSTRATION GRANT PROGRAM.

(a) INCREASING PUBLIC AWARENESS.—Section 303(a)(1) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10402(a)(1)) is amended by striking "to prevent" and inserting "to increase public awareness about and prevent".

(b) EXPANSION OF PROGRAM.—Section 303(a)(2)(B)(ii) is amended by striking "alcohol and drug abuse treatment".

SEC. 243. GRANTS FOR PUBLIC INFORMATION CAMPAIGNS.

The Family Violence Prevention and Services Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"GRANTS FOR PUBLIC INFORMATION CAMPAIGNS"

"SEC. 314. (a) The Secretary may make grants to public or private nonprofit entities to provide public information campaigns regarding domestic violence through the use of public service announcements and informative materials that are designed for print media, billboards, public transit advertising, electronic broadcast media, and other vehicles for information that shall inform the public concerning domestic violence.

"(b) No grant, contract, or cooperative agreement shall be made or entered into under this section unless an application that meets the requirements of subsection (c) has been approved by the Secretary.

"(c) An application submitted under subsection (b) shall—

"(1) provide such agreements, assurances, and information, be in such form and be submitted in such manner as the Secretary shall prescribe through notice in the Federal Register, including a description of how the proposed public information campaign will target the population at risk, including pregnant women;

"(2) include a complete description of the plan of the application for the development of a public information campaign;

"(3) identify the specific audiences that will be educated, including communities and groups with the highest prevalence of domestic violence;

"(4) identify the media to be used in the campaign and the geographic distribution of the campaign;

"(5) describe plans to test market a development plan with a relevant population group and in a relevant geographic area and give assurance that effectiveness criteria will be implemented prior to the completion of the final plan that will include an evaluation component to measure the overall effectiveness of the campaign;

"(6) describe the kind, amount, distribution, and timing of informational messages and such other information as the Secretary may require, with assurances that media organizations and other groups with which such messages are placed will not lower the current frequency of public service announcements; and

"(7) contain such other information as the Secretary may require.

"(d) A grant, contract, or agreement made or entered into under this section shall be used for the development of a public information campaign that may include public service announcements, paid educational messages for print media, public transit advertising, electronic broadcast media, and any other mode of conveying information that the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

"(e) The criteria for awarding grants shall ensure that an applicant—

"(1) will conduct activities that educate communities and groups at greatest risk;

"(2) has a record of high quality campaigns of a comparable type; and

"(3) has a record of high quality campaigns that educate the population groups identified as most at risk."

SEC. 244. FUND DISTRIBUTION TO STATES.

Section 304(a)(1) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act is amended by striking "$50,000" and inserting "$500,000".

SEC. 245. INDIAN TRIBES.

Section 303(b)(1) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10402(b)(1)) is amended by striking "is authorized" and inserting "from sums appropriated shall make no less than 10 percent available for".

SEC. 246. FUNDING LIMITATIONS.

Section 303(c) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10402(c)) is amended by—

(1) striking ", and" and all that follows through "fiscal years"; and

(2) striking "$50,000" and inserting "$75,000".

SEC. 247. GRANTS TO ENTITIES OTHER THAN STATES; LOCAL SHARE.

The first sentence of section 303(f) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10402(f)) is amended to read as follows: "No grant may be made under this section to an entity other than a State or Indian tribe unless the entity provides 35 percent of the funding of the program or project funded by the grant."

SEC. 248. SHELTER AND RELATED ASSISTANCE.

(a) CHANGE OF PERCENTAGES.—Section 303(g) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10402(g)) is amended by striking "not less than 60 percent" and inserting "not less than 75 percent".

(b) DEFINITION OF RELATED ASSISTANCE.—Section 309(5) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act is amended to read as follows:

"(5) The term 'related assistance' includes any, but does not require all, of the following—

"(A) food, shelter, medical services, and counseling with respect to family violence, including counseling by peers individually or in groups;

"(B) transportation, legal assistance, referrals for appropriate health-care services (including alcohol and drug abuse treatment), and technical assistance with respect to obtaining financial assistance under Federal and State programs;

"(C) comprehensive counseling and self-help services to abusers, preventive health (including nutrition, exercise, and prevention of substance abuse), educational services and employment training; and

"(D) child care services for children who are victims of family violence or the dependents of such victims."

SEC. 249. LAW ENFORCEMENT TRAINING AND TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE GRANTS.

Section 311 of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10410(b)) is repealed.

SEC. 250. REPORT ON RECORDKEEPING.

Not later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Government Accounting Office shall complete a study of, and shall submit to Congress a report and recommendations on, problems of record-keeping of criminal complaints involving domestic violence. The study and report shall examine efforts to date of the FBI and Justice Department to collect statistics on domestic violence and the feasibility of, including a suggested timetable for, requiring that the relationship between an offender and victim be reported in Federal and State records of crimes of assault, aggravated assault, rape, and other violent crimes.

SEC. 251. MODEL STATE LEADERSHIP INCENTIVE GRANTS FOR DOMESTIC VIOLENCE INTERVENTION.

The Family Violence Prevention Services Act, as amended by section 103 of this Act, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"MODEL STATE LEADERSHIP GRANTS FOR DOMESTIC VIOLENCE INTERVENTION

"SEC. 315. (a) The Secretary, in cooperation with the Attorney General, shall award grants to not less than 10 States to assist in becoming model demonstration States and in meeting the costs of improving State leadership concerning activities that will—

"(1) increase the number of prosecutions for domestic violent crimes;

"(2) encourage the reporting of incidences of domestic violence;

"(3) facilitate 'arrests and aggressive' prosecution policies; and

"(4) provides court advocacy for victims of domestic violence.

"(b) To be designated as a model State under subsection (a), a State shall have in effect—

"(1) a law that requires mandatory arrest of a person that police have probable cause to believe has committed an act of domestic violence or probable cause to believe has violated an outstanding civil protection order;

"(2) a law or policy that discourages * * *

"(B) implement model projects that include either—

"(i) a 'no-drop' prosecution policy; or

"(ii) a vertical prosecution policy; and

"(C) limit diversion to extraordinary cases, and then only after an admission before a judge of 'dual' arrests;

"(3) statewide prosecution policies that—

"(A) authorize and encourage prosecutors to pursue cases where a criminal case can be proved, including proceeding without the active involvement of the victim if necessary; and

"(B) implement model projects that include either—

"(i) a 'no-drop' prosecution policy; or

"(ii) a vertical prosecution policy; and

"(C) limit diversion to extraordinary cases, and then only after an admission before a judicial officer has been entered;

"(4) statewide laws, policies, or guidelines for judges that—

"(A) prohibit the issuance of mutual protective orders in cases where only one spouse has sought a protective order and require findings of mutual aggression to issue mutual protective orders in cases where both parties file a claim;

"(B) require that any history of child abuse be considered detrimental to the child and discourage custody or joint custody orders by spouse abusers; and

"(C) encourage the understanding of domestic violence as a serious criminal offense and not a trivial dispute;

"(5) develop and disseminate methods to improve the criminal justice system's response to domestic violence to make existing remedies as easily available as possible to victims of domestic violence, including reducing delay, eliminating court fees, and providing easily understandable court forms.

"(c)(1) In addition to the funds authorized to be appropriated under section 310, there are authorized to be appropriated to make grants under this section $25,000,000 for fiscal year 1992 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1993 and 1994.

"(2) Funds shall be distributed under this section so that no State shall receive more than $2,500,000 in each fiscal year under this section.

"(3) The Secretary shall delegate to the Attorney General the Secretary's responsibilities for carrying out this section and shall transfer to the Attorney General the funds appropriated under this section for the purpose of making grants under this section."

SEC. 252. FUNDING FOR TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE CENTERS.

The Family Violence Prevention and Services Act is amended by inserting after section 308 the following:

"SEC. 308A. TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE CENTERS.

"(a) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this section is to provide training and technical assistance to State, Indian tribal, and local domestic violence programs and to other professionals who provide services to victims of domestic violence. From the sums authorized under this title, the Secretary shall provide grants to or contract with, private nonprofit organizations, for the establishment and maintenance of one national and six special-issue resource centers serving defined geographic areas. One national resource center shall offer resource, policy, and/or training assistance to Federal, State, Indian tribal, and local government agencies on issues pertaining to domestic violence and serve a coordinating and resource-sharing function among domestic violence service providers, and maintain a central resource library. The other national resource centers shall provide information, training and technical assistance to State, tribal and local domestic violence service providers. In addition, each national center shall specialize in one of the following areas of domestic violence service, prevention or law:

"(1) criminal justice response to domestic violence, including court-mandated abuser treatment;

"(2) child custody issues in domestic violence cases;

"(3) use of the self-defense plea by domestic violence victims;

"(4) health care response and access to health care resources for domestic violence victims;

"(5) victims' access to, and quality of, effective legal assistance, including civil litigation; and

"(6) the response of child protective service agencies to battered mothers of abused children.

"(b) ELIGIBILITY.—Eligible grantees are private non-profit organizations that—

"(1) focus primarily on domestic violence;

"(2) provide documentation to the Secretary demonstrating a minimum of three years experience with issues of domestic violence, particularly in the specific area for which it is applying;

"(3) include on its advisory boards representatives from domestic violence programs who are geographically and culturally diverse; and

"(4) demonstrate strong support from domestic violence advocates for their designation as the special-issue resource center.

"(c) REPORTING.—Each grantee receiving funds under this section shall submit a report to the Secretary evaluating the effectiveness of the plan described and containing such additional information as the Secretary may prescribe.

"(d) REGULATIONS.—No later than 45 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall publish proposed regulations implementing this section."

Subtitle E—Youth Education and Domestic Violence*SEC. 261. EDUCATING YOUTH ABOUT DOMESTIC VIOLENCE.

(a) GENERAL PURPOSE.—For purposes of this section, the Secretary shall delegate his powers to the Secretary of Education, hereinafter referred to as the "Secretary". The Secretary shall select, implement and evaluate four model programs for education of young people about domestic violence and violence among intimate partners.

(b) NATURE OF PROGRAM.—The Secretary shall select, implement and evaluate separate model programs for four different audiences: primary schools, middle schools, secondary schools, and institutions of higher education. These model programs shall be selected, implemented, and evaluated with the input of educational experts, legal and psychological experts on battering, and victim advocate organizations such as battered women's shelters, State coalitions and resource centers. The participation of each of these groups or individual consultants from such groups is essential to the selection, implementation, and evaluation of programs that meet both the needs of educational institutions and the needs of the domestic violence problem.

(c) REVIEW AND DISSEMINATION.—Not later than 24 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall transmit the design and evaluation of the model programs, along with a plan and cost estimate for nationwide distribution, to the relevant committees of Congress for review.

(d) AUTHORIZATION.—There are authorized to be appropriated under this section for fiscal year 1992, $400,000 to carry out the purposes of this section.

Subtitle F—Confidentiality for Abused Persons

SEC. 271. CONFIDENTIALITY OF ABUSED PERSON'S ADDRESS.

No later than 90 days after the enactment of this Act, the Postmaster General shall promulgate regulations to secure the confidentiality of abused persons' addresses or otherwise prohibit the disclosure of an abused person's address consistent with the following guidelines:

(1) confidentiality shall be provided upon the presentation to an appropriate postal official of an existing and valid court order for the protection of an abused spouse;

(2) disclosure of addresses to State or Federal agencies for legitimate law enforcement or other governmental purposes shall not be prohibited; and

(3) compilations of addresses existing at the time the order is presented to an appropriate postal official shall be excluded from the scope of the proposed regulations.

TITLE III—CIVIL RIGHTS

SEC. 301. CIVIL RIGHTS.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) crimes motivated by the victim's gender constitute bias crimes in violation of the victim's right to be free from discrimination on the basis of gender;

(2) current law provides a civil rights remedy for gender crimes committed in the workplace, but not for gender crimes committed on the street or in the home; and

(3) State and Federal criminal laws do not adequately protect against the bias element of gender-motivated crimes, which separates these crimes from acts of random violence, nor do those laws adequately provide victims of gender-motivated crimes the opportunity to vindicate their interests;

(4) existing bias and discrimination in the criminal justice system often deprives victims of gender-motivated crimes of equal protection of the laws and the redress to which they are entitled;

(5) gender-motivated violence has a substantial adverse effect on interstate commerce, by deterring potential victims from traveling interstate, from engaging in employment in interstate business, and from transacting with business, and in places involved, in interstate commerce;

(6) gender-motivated violence has a substantial adverse effect on interstate commerce, by diminishing national productivity, increasing medical and other costs, and decreasing the supply of and the demand for interstate products;

(7) a Federal civil rights action as specified in this section is necessary to guarantee equal protection of the laws and to reduce the substantial adverse effects of gender-motivated violence on interstate commerce; and

(8) victims of gender-motivated violence have a right to equal protection of the laws, including a system of justice that is unaffected by bias or discrimination and that, at every relevant stage, treats such crimes as seriously as other violent crimes.

(b) RIGHTS, PRIVILEGES AND IMMUNITIES.—All persons within the United States shall have the same rights, privileges and immunities in every State as is enjoyed by all other persons to be free from crimes of violence motivated by the victim's gender, as defined in subsection (d).

(c) CAUSE OF ACTION.—Any person, including a person who acts under color of any statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage of any State, who commits a crime of violence motivated by gender and thus deprives another of the rights, privileges or immunities secured by the Constitution or laws as enumerated in subsection (b) shall be liable to the party injured, in an action for the recovery of compensatory and punitive damages, injunctive and declaratory relief, and such other relief as the court may deem appropriate.

(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

(1) the term "crime of violence motivated by gender" means any crime of violence, as defined in this section, including rape, sexual assault, sexual abuse, abusive sexual contact, or any other crime of violence committed because of gender or on the basis of gender; and

(2) the term "crime of violence" means an act or series of acts that would come within the meaning of State or Federal offenses described in section 16 of title 18, United States Code, whether or not those acts have actually resulted in criminal charges, prosecution, or conviction and whether or not those acts were committed in the special maritime, territorial, or prison jurisdiction of the United States.

(e) LIMITATION AND PROCEDURES.—

(1) LIMITATION.—Nothing in this section entitles a person to a cause of action under subsection (c) for random acts of violence unrelated to gender or for acts that cannot be demonstrated, by a preponderance of the evidence, to be "motivated by gender" as defined in subsection (d).

(2) NO PRIOR CRIMINAL ACTION.—Nothing in this section requires a prior criminal complaint, prosecution, or conviction to establish the necessary elements of a cause of action under subsection (c).

SEC. 302. CONFORMING AMENDMENT.

The Civil Rights Attorney's Fees Awards Act of 1976 (42 U.S.C. 1988) is amended—

(1) in the last sentence, by striking "or" after "Public Law 92-318,"; and

(2) by adding after "1964," the following: "or title III of the Violence Against Women Act of 1991."

TITLE IV—SAFE CAMPUSES FOR WOMEN

SEC. 401. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Safe Campuses for Women Act of 1990".

SEC. 402. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) rape prevention and education programs are essential to an educational environment free of fear for students' personal safety;

(2) sexual assault on campus, whether by fellow students or not, is widespread among the Nation's higher education institutions: experts estimate that 1 in 7 of the women now in college have been raped and over half of college rape victims know their attackers;

(3) sexual assault poses a grave threat to the physical and mental well-being of students and may significantly impair the learning process; and

(4) action by schools to educate students may make substantial inroads on the incidence of rape, including the incidence of acquaintance rape on campus.

SEC. 403. GRANTS FOR CAMPUS RAPE EDUCATION.

Title X of the Higher Education Act of 1965 is amended to add at the end thereof the following:

"PART D—GRANTS FOR CAMPUS RAPE EDUCATION."

SEC. 1071. GRANTS FOR CAMPUS RAPE EDUCATION.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) The Secretary of Education is authorized to make grants to or enter into contracts with institutions of higher education for rape education and prevention programs under this section.

"(2) The Secretary shall make financial assistance available on a competitive basis under this section. An institution of higher education or consortium of such institutions which desires to receive a grant or enter into a contract under this section shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require in accordance with regulations.

"(3) The Secretary shall make every effort to ensure the equitable participation of private and public institutions of higher education and to ensure the equitable geographic participation of such institutions. In the award of grants and contracts under this section, the Secretary shall give priority to institutions who show the greatest need for the sums requested.

"(b) GENERAL RAPE PREVENTION AND EDUCATION GRANTS.—Grants under this section shall be used to educate and provide support services to student victims of rape or sexual assault. Grants may be used for the following purposes:

"(1) to provide training for campus security and college personnel, including campus disciplinary or judicial boards, that address the issues of rape, sexual assault, and other gender-motivated crimes;

"(2) to develop, disseminate, or implement campus security and student disciplinary policies to prevent and discipline rape, sexual assault and other gender-motivated crimes;

"(3) to develop, enlarge or strengthen support services programs including medical or psychological counseling to assist victims' recovery from rape, sexual assault, or other gender-motivated crimes;

"(4) to create, disseminate, or otherwise provide assistance and information about victims' options on and off campus to bring disciplinary or other legal action; and

"(5) to implement, operate, or improve rape education and prevention programs, including programs making use of peer-to-peer education.

"(c) MODEL GRANTS.—Not less than 25 percent of the funds authorized under this section shall be available for grants for model demonstration programs to be coordinated with local rape crisis centers for the development and implementation of quality rape prevention and education curricula and for local programs to provide services to student rape victims.

"(d) ELIGIBILITY.—No institution of higher education or consortium of such institutions shall be eligible for a grant under this section unless—

"(1) its student code of conduct, or other written policy governing student behavior, explicitly prohibits not only rape but all forms of sexual assault; and

"(2) it has in effect and implements a written policy requiring the disclosure to the victim of any sexual assault the outcome of any investigation by campus police or campus disciplinary proceedings brought pursuant to the victim's complaint against the alleged perpetrator of the sexual assault: Provided, That nothing in this section shall be interpreted to authorize disclosure to any person other than the victim.

“(e) APPLICATIONS.—(1) In order to be eligible to receive a grant under this section for any fiscal year, an institution of higher education, or consortium of such institutions, shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time and in such manner as the Secretary shall prescribe.

“(2) Each such application shall—

“(A) set forth the activities and programs to be carried out with funds granted under this part;

“(B) contain an estimate of the cost for the establishment and operation of such programs;

“(C) explain how the program intends to address the issue of acquaintance rape;

“(D) provide assurances that the Federal funds made available under this section shall be used to supplement and, to the extent practical, to increase the level of funds that would, in the absence of such Federal funds, be made available by the applicant for the purpose described in this part, and in no case to supplant such funds; and

“(E) include such other information and assurances as the Secretary reasonably determines to be necessary.

“(e) GRANTEE REPORTING.—Upon completion of the grant period under this section, the grantee institution or consortium of institutions shall file a performance report with the Secretary explaining the activities carried out together with an assessment of the effectiveness of those activities in achieving the purposes of this section. The Secretary shall suspend funding for an approved application if an applicant fails to submit an annual performance report.

“(f) DEFINITIONS.—(1) Except as otherwise provided, the terms used in this part shall have the meaning provided under section 2981 of this title.

“(2) For purposes of this subchapter, the following terms have the following meanings:

“(A) The term ‘rape education and prevention’ includes programs that provide educational seminars, peer-to-peer counseling, operation of hotlines, self-defense courses, the preparation of informational materials, and any other effort to increase campus awareness of the facts about, or to help prevent, sexual assault.

“(B) The term ‘Secretary’ means the Secretary of Education.

“(g) GENERAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—(1) REGULATIONS.—No later than 45 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall publish proposed regulations implementing this section. No later than 120 days after such date, the Secretary shall publish final regulations implementing this section.

“(2) No later than 180 days after the end of each fiscal year for which grants are made under this section, the Secretary shall submit to the committees of the House of Representatives and the Senate responsible for issues relating to higher education and to crime, a report that includes—

“(A) the amount of grants made under this section;

“(B) a summary of the purposes for which those grants were provided and an evaluation of their progress; and

“(C) a copy of each grantee report filed pursuant to subsection (e) of this section.

“(3) For the purpose of carrying out this subchapter, there are authorized to be appropriated $20,000,000 for the fiscal year 1992, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1993, 1994, and 1995.”

SEC. 404. REQUIRED CAMPUS REPORTING OF SEXUAL ASSAULT.

Section 204(f) of the Crime Awareness and Campus Security Act of 1990 is amended to read as follows:

“(F) Statistics concerning the occurrence on campus, during the most recent school year, and during the 2 preceding school years for which data are available, of the following criminal offenses reported to campus security authorities or local police agencies—

- “(i) murder;
- “(ii) rape or sexual assault;
- “(iii) robbery;
- “(iv) aggravated assault;
- “(v) burglary; and
- “(vi) motor vehicle theft.

TITLE V.—EQUAL JUSTICE FOR WOMEN IN THE COURTS ACT OF 1990

SECTION 501. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the “Equal Justice for Women in the Courts Act of 1991”.

Subtitle A—Education and Training for Judges and Court Personnel in State Courts

SEC. 511. GRANTS AUTHORIZED.

The State Justice Institute is authorized to award grants for the purpose of developing, testing, presenting, and disseminating model programs to be used by States in training judges and court personnel in the laws of the States on rape, sexual assault, domestic violence, and other crimes of violence motivated by the victim's gender.

SEC. 512. TRAINING PROVIDED BY GRANTS.

Training provided pursuant to grants made under this subtitle may include current information, existing studies, or current data on—

- (1) the nature and incidence of rape and sexual assault by strangers and non-strangers, marital rape, and incest;
- (2) the underreporting of rape, sexual assault, and child sexual abuse;
- (3) the physical, psychological, and economic impact of rape and sexual assault on the victim, the costs to society, and the implications for sentencing;
- (4) the psychology of sex offenders, their high rate of recidivism, and the implications for sentencing;
- (5) the historical evolution of laws and attitudes on rape and sexual assault;
- (6) sex stereotyping of female and male victims of rape and sexual assault, racial stereotyping of rape victims and defendants, and the impact of such stereotypes on credibility of witnesses, sentencing, and other aspects of the administration of justice;
- (7) application of rape shield laws and other limits on introduction of evidence that may subject victims to improper sex stereotyping and harassment in both rape and nonrape cases, including the need for sua sponte judicial intervention in inappropriate cross-examination;
- (8) the use of expert witness testimony on rape trauma syndrome, child sexual abuse accommodation syndrome, post-traumatic stress syndrome, and similar issues;
- (9) the legitimate reasons why victims of rape, sexual assault, and incest may refuse to testify against a defendant;
- (10) the nature and incidence of domestic violence;
- (11) the physical, psychological, and economic impact of domestic violence on the victim, the costs to society, and the implications for court procedures and sentencing;
- (12) the psychology and self-presentation of batterers and victims and the implications for court proceedings and credibility of witnesses;
- (13) sex stereotyping of female and male victims of domestic violence, myths about presence or absence of domestic violence in certain racial, ethnic, religious, or socioeconomic groups, and their impact on the administration of justice;

(14) historical evolution of laws and attitudes on domestic violence;

(15) proper and improper interpretations of the defenses of self-defense and provocation, and the use of expert witness testimony on battered woman syndrome;

(16) the likelihood of retaliation, recidivism, and escalation of violence by batterers, and the potential impact of incarceration and other meaningful sanctions for acts of domestic violence including violations of orders of protection;

(17) economic, psychological, social and institutional reasons for victims' inability to leave the batterer, to report domestic violence or to follow through on complaints, including the influence of lack of support from police, judges, and court personnel, and the legitimate reasons why victims of domestic violence may refuse to testify against a defendant;

(18) the need for orders of protection, and the implications of mutual orders of protection, dual arrest policies, and mediation in domestic violence cases;

(19) recognition of and response to gender-motivated crimes of violence other than rape, sexual assault and domestic violence, such as mass or serial murder motivated by the gender of the victims; and

(20) current information on the impact of pornography on crimes against women, or data on other activities that tend to degrade women.

SEC. 513. COOPERATION IN DEVELOPING PROGRAMS IN MAKING GRANTS UNDER THIS TITLE.

The State Justice Institute shall ensure that model programs carried out pursuant to grants made under this subtitle are developed with the participation of law enforcement officials, public and private nonprofit victim advocates, legal experts, prosecutors, defense attorneys, and recognized experts on gender bias in the courts.

SEC. 514. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There is authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1992, $600,000 to carry out the purposes of this subtitle. Of amounts appropriated under this section, the State Justice Institute shall expend no less than 40 percent on model programs regarding domestic violence and no less than 40 percent on model programs regarding rape and sexual assault.

Subtitle B—Education and Training for Judges and Court Personnel in Federal Courts

SEC. 521. EDUCATION AND TRAINING GRANTS.

(a) STUDY.—The Federal Judicial Center shall conduct a study of the nature and extent of gender bias in the Federal courts, including in proceedings involving rape, sexual assault, domestic violence, and other crimes of violence motivated by gender. The study shall be conducted by the use of data collection techniques such as reviews of trial and appellate opinions and transcripts, public hearings, and inquiries to attorneys practicing in the Federal courts. The Federal Judicial Center shall publicly issue a final report containing a detailed description of the findings and conclusions of the study, including such recommendations for legislative, administrative, and judicial action as it considers appropriate.

(b) MODEL PROGRAMS.—(1) The Federal Judicial Center shall develop, test, present, and disseminate model programs to be used in training Federal judges and court personnel in the laws on rape, sexual assault, domestic violence, and other crimes of violence motivated by the victim's gender.

(2) The training programs developed under this subsection shall include—

(A) all of the topics listed in section 512 of subtitle A; and

(B) all procedural and substantive aspects of the legal rights and remedies for violent crime motivated by gender including such areas as the Federal penalties for sex crimes, interstate enforcement of laws against domestic violence and civil rights remedies for violent crimes motivated by gender.

SEC. 522. COOPERATION IN DEVELOPING PROGRAMS.

In implementing this subtitle, the Federal Judicial Center shall ensure that the study and model programs are developed with the participation of law enforcement officials, public and private nonprofit victim advocates, legal experts, prosecutors, defense attorneys, and recognized experts on gender bias in the courts.

SEC. 523. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There is authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1992, $400,000 to carry out the purposes of this subtitle. Of amounts appropriated under this section, no less than 25 percent and no more than 40 percent shall be expended by the Federal Judicial Center on the study required by section 521(a) of this subtitle.

SEC. 101. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Safe Streets for Women Act of 1991".

Subtitle A—Federal Penalties for Sex Crimes

SEC. 111. REPEAT OFFENDERS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"§ 2247. Repeat offenders

"Any person who violates a provision of this chapter, after one or more prior convictions for an offense punishable under this chapter, or after one or more prior convictions under the laws of any State or foreign country relating to aggravated sexual abuse, sexual abuse, or abusive sexual contact, is punishable by a term of imprisonment up to twice that otherwise authorized."

(b) TABLE OF SECTIONS.—The table of sections for chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"2247. Repeat offenders."

SEC. 112. FEDERAL PENALTIES.

(a) RAPE AND AGGRAVATED RAPE.—Pursuant to its authority under section 994(p) of title 28, United States Code, the United States Sentencing Commission shall amend its sentencing guidelines to provide that a defendant convicted of aggravated sexual abuse under section 2241 of title 18, United States Code, or sexual abuse under section 2242 of title 18, United States Code, shall be assigned a base offense level under chapter 2 of the sentencing guidelines that is at least 4 levels greater than the base offense level applicable to criminal sexual abuse under the guidelines in effect on November 1, 1990, or otherwise shall amend the guidelines applicable to such offenses so as to achieve a comparable minimum guideline sentence. In amending such guidelines, the Sentencing Commission shall review the appropriateness of existing specific offense characteristics or other adjustments applicable to such offenses, and make such changes as it deems appropriate, taking into account the severity of rape offenses, with or without aggravating factors; the unique nature and duration of the mental injuries inflicted on the victims of such offenses; and any other relevant factors.

(b) EFFECT OF AMENDMENT.—If the sentencing guidelines are amended after the effective date of this section, the Sentencing Commission shall implement the instructions set forth in subsection (a) so as to achieve a comparable result.

(c) STATUTORY RAPE.—

(1) Section 2243(b) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking "one year," and inserting "two years."

(2) Pursuant to its authority under section 994(p) of title 28, United States Code, the United States Sentencing Commission shall promulgate guidelines or amend existing guidelines to incorporate the increase in maximum penalties provided by this section for section 2243(b) of title 18, United States Code.

SEC. 113. MANDATORY RESTITUTION FOR SEX CRIMES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"§ 2248. Mandatory restitution

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding the terms of section 3663 of this title, and in addition to any other civil or criminal penalty authorized by law, the court shall order restitution for any offense under this chapter.

"(b) SCOPE AND NATURE OF ORDER.—(1) The order of restitution under this section shall direct that—

“(A) the defendant pay to the victim the full amount of the victim’s losses as determined by the court, pursuant to paragraph (2); and

“(B) the United States Attorney enforce the restitution order by all available and reasonable means.

“(2) For purposes of this subsection, the term ‘full amount of the victim’s losses’ includes any costs incurred by the victim for—

“(A) medical services relating to physical, psychiatric, or psychological care;

“(B) physical and occupational therapy or rehabilitation;

“(C) lost income;

“(D) attorneys’ fees; and

“(E) any other losses suffered by the victim as a proximate result of the offense.

“(3) Restitution orders under this section are mandatory. A court may not decline to issue an order under this section because of—

“(A) the economic circumstances of the defendant; or

“(B) the fact that a victim has, or is entitled to, receive compensation for his or her injuries from the proceeds of insurance or any other source.

“(4)(A) Notwithstanding the terms of paragraph (3), the court may take into account the economic circumstances of the defendant in determining the manner in which and the schedule according to which the restitution is to be paid.

“(B) For purposes of this paragraph, the term ‘economic circumstances’ includes—

“(i) the financial resources and other assets of the defendant;

“(ii) projected earnings, earning capacity, and other income of the defendant; and

“(iii) any financial obligations of the defendant, including obligations to dependents.

“(C) An order under this section may direct the defendant to make a single lump-sum payment or partial payments at specified intervals. The order shall also provide that the defendant’s restitutionary obligation takes priority over any criminal fine ordered.

“(D) In the event that the victim has recovered for any amount of loss through the proceeds of insurance or any other source, the order of restitution shall provide that restitution be paid to the person who provided the compensation, but that restitution shall be paid to the victim before any restitution is paid to any other provider of compensation.

“(5) Any amount paid to a victim under this section shall be set off against any amount later recovered as compensatory damages by the victim from the defendant in—

“(A) any Federal civil proceeding; and

“(B) any State civil proceeding, to the extent provided by the law of the State.

“(c) PROOF OF CLAIM.—(1) Within 60 days after conviction and, in any event, no later than 10 days prior to sentencing, the United States Attorney (or his delegee), after consulting with the victim, shall prepare and file an affidavit with the court listing the amounts subject to restitution under this section. The affidavit shall be signed by the United States Attorney (or his delegee) and the victim. Should the victim object to any of the information included in the affidavit, the United States Attorney (or his delegee) shall advise the victim that the victim may file a separate affidavit.

“(2) If no objection is raised by the defendant, the amounts attested to in the affidavit filed pursuant to subsection (1) shall be entered in the court’s restitution order. If objection is raised, the court may require the victim or the United States Attorney (or his delegee) to submit further affidavits or other supporting documents, demonstrating the victim’s losses.

“(3) If the court concludes, after reviewing the supporting documentation and considering the defendant’s objections, that there is a substantial reason for doubting the authenticity or veracity of the records submitted, the court may require additional documentation or hear testimony on those questions. Any records filed, or testimony heard, pursuant to this section, shall be in camera in the judge’s chambers. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, this section does not entitle the defendant to discovery of the contents of, or matters related to, any supporting documentation, including medical, psychological, or psychiatric records.

“(4) In the event that the victim’s losses are not ascertainable 10 days prior to sentencing as provided in subsection (c)(1), the United States Attorney (or his delegee) shall so inform the court, and the court shall set a date for the final determination of the victim’s losses, not to exceed 90 days after sentencing. If the victim subsequently discovers further losses, the victim shall have 60 days after discovery of those losses in which to petition the court for an amended restitution order. Such order may be granted only upon a showing of good cause for the failure to include such losses in the initial claim for restitutionary relief.

“(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section, the term ‘victim’ includes any person who has suffered direct physical, emotional, or pecuniary harm as a result of a commission of a crime under this chapter, including, in the case of a victim who is under 18 years of age, incompetent, incapacitated, or deceased, the legal guardian of the victim or representative of the victim’s estate, another family member, or any other person appointed as suitable by the court: Provided, That in no event shall the defendant be named as such representative or guardian.”.

(b) TABLE OF SECTIONS.—The table of sections for chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

“2248. Mandatory restitution.”.

Subtitle B—Law Enforcement and Prosecution Grants to Reduce Violent Crimes Against Women

SEC. 121. GRANTS TO COMBAT VIOLENT CRIMES AGAINST WOMEN.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.) is amended by—

(1) redesignating part N as part O;

(2) redesignating section 1401 as section 1501; and

(3) adding after part M the following:

“PART N—GRANTS TO COMBAT VIOLENT CRIMES AGAINST WOMEN

“SEC. 1401. PURPOSE OF THE PROGRAM AND GRANTS.

“(a) GENERAL PROGRAM PURPOSE.—The purpose of this part is to assist States, Indian tribes, cities, and other localities to develop effective law enforcement and prosecution strategies to combat violent crimes against women and, in particular, to focus efforts on those areas with the highest rates of violent crime against women.

“(b) PURPOSES FOR WHICH GRANTS MAY BE USED.—Grants under this part shall provide additional personnel, training, technical assistance, data collection and other equipment for the more widespread apprehension, prosecution, and adjudication of persons committing violent crimes against women and specifically, for the purposes of—

“(1) training law enforcement officers and prosecutors to more effectively identify and respond to violent crimes against women, including the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence;

“(2) developing, training, or expanding units of law enforcement officers and prosecutors specifically targeting violent crimes against women, including the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence;

“(3) developing and implementing police and prosecution policies, protocols, or orders specifically devoted to identifying and responding to violent crimes against women, including the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence;

“(4) developing, installing, or expanding data collection systems, including computerized systems, linking police, prosecutors, and courts or for the purpose of identifying and tracking arrests, prosecutions, and convictions for the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence; and

“(5) developing, enlarging, or strengthening victim services programs, including sexual assault and domestic violence programs, to increase reporting and reduce attrition rates for cases involving violent crimes against women, including the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence.

“SUBPART 1—HIGH INTENSITY CRIME AREA GRANTS

“SEC. 1411. HIGH INTENSITY GRANTS.

“(a) IN GENERAL.—The Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance (hereafter in this part referred to as the ‘Director’) shall make grants to areas of ‘high intensity crime’ against women.

“(b) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this part, a ‘high intensity crime area’ means an area with one of the 40 highest rates of violent crime against women, as determined by the Bureau of Justice Statistics pursuant to section 1412.

“SEC. 1412. HIGH INTENSITY GRANT APPLICATION.

“(a) COMPUTATION.—Within 45 days after the date of enactment of this part, the Bureau of Justice Statistics shall compile a list of the 40 areas with the highest rates of violent crime against women based on the combined female victimization rate per population for assault, sexual assault (including, but not limited to, rape), murder, robbery, and kidnapping.

“(b) USE OF DATA.—In calculating the combined female victimization rate required by subsection (a), the Bureau of Justice Statistics may rely on—

“(1) existing data collected by States, municipalities, Indian reservations or statistical metropolitan areas showing the number of police reports of the crimes listed in subsection (a); and

“(2) existing data collected by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, including data from those governmental entities already complying with the National Incident Based Reporting System, showing the number of police reports of crimes listed in subsection (a).

“(c) PUBLICATION.—After compiling the list set forth in subsection (a), the Bureau of Justice Statistics shall convey it to the Director who shall publish it in the Federal Register.

“(d) QUALIFICATION.—Upon satisfying the terms of subsection (e), any high intensity crime area shall be qualified for a grant under this subpart upon application by the chief executive officer of the governmental entities responsible for law enforcement and prosecution of criminal offenses within the area and certification that—

"(1) the funds shall be used to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women and for at least 3 of the purposes outlined in section 1401(b);

"(2) grantees and subgrantees shall develop a plan for implementation, and otherwise consult and coordinate program grants, with nongovernmental nonprofit victim services programs; and

"(3) at least 25 percent of the amount granted shall be allocated to each of the following three areas: prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services.

"(e) APPLICATION REQUIREMENTS.—The application requirements provided in section 513 of this title shall apply to grants made under this subpart. In addition, each application must provide the certifications required by subsection (d) including documentation from nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs showing their participation in developing the plan required by subsection (d)(2). Applications shall—

"(1) include documentation from the prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services programs to be assisted showing—

"(A) need for the grant funds;

"(B) intended use of the grant funds; and

"(C) expected results from the use of grant funds; and

"(2) proof of compliance with the requirements for the payment of forensic medical exams provided in section 162 of this title.

"(f) DISBURSEMENT.—

"(1) No later than 60 days after the receipt of an application under this subpart, the Director shall either disburse the appropriate sums provided for under this subpart or shall inform the applicant why the application does not conform to the terms of section 513 of this title or to the requirements of this section.

"(2) In disbursing monies under this subpart, the Director shall ensure, to the extent practicable, that grantees—

"(A) equitably distribute funds on a geographic basis;

"(B) determine the amount of subgrants based on the population to be served; and

"(C) give priority to areas with the greatest showing of need.

"(g) GRANTEE REPORTING.—Upon completion of the grant period under this subpart, the grantee shall file a performance report with the Director explaining the activities carried out together with an assessment of the effectiveness of those activities in achieving the purposes of this part. The Director shall suspend funding for an approved application if an applicant fails to submit an annual performance report.

"Subpart 2—Other Grants to States to Combat Violent Crimes Against Women

"SEC. 1421. GENERAL GRANTS TO STATES.

"(a) GENERAL GRANTS.—The Director is authorized to make grants to States, for use by States, units of local government in the States, and nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs in the States, for the purposes outlined in section 1401(b), and to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women.

"(b) AMOUNTS.—From amounts appropriated, the amount of grants under subsection (a) shall be—

"(1) $500,000 to each State; and

"(2) that portion of the then remaining available money to each State that results from a distribution among the States on the basis of each State's population in relation to the population of all States.

"(c) QUALIFICATION.—Upon satisfying the terms of subsection (d), any State shall be qualified for funds provided under this part upon certification that—

"(1) the funds shall be used to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women and for at least 3 of the purposes outlined in section 1401(b);

"(2) grantees and subgrantees shall develop a plan for implementation, and otherwise consult and coordinate, with nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs, including sexual assault and domestic violence victim services programs;

"(3) at least 25 percent of the amount granted shall be allocated to each of the following three areas: prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services.

"(d) APPLICATION REQUIREMENTS.—The application requirements provided in section 513 of this title shall apply to grants made under this subpart. In addition, each application shall include the certifications of qualification required by subsection (c) including documentation from nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs showing their participation in developing the plan required by subsection (c)(2). Applications shall—

"(1) include documentation from the prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services programs to be assisted showing—

"(A) need for the grant funds;

"(B) intended use of the grant funds; and

"(C) expected results from the use of grant funds; and

"(2) proof of compliance with the requirements for the payment of forensic medical exams provided in section 162 of this title.

"(e) DISBURSEMENT.—(1) No later than 60 days after the receipt of an application under this subpart, the Director shall either disburse the appropriate sums provided for under this subpart or shall inform the applicant why the application does not conform to the terms of section 513 of this title or to the requirements of this section.

"(2) In disbursing monies under this subpart, the Director shall issue regulations to ensure that States will—

"(A) equitably distribute monies on a geographic basis including nonurban and rural areas, and giving priority to localities with populations under 100,000;

"(B) determine the amount of subgrants based on the population and geographic area to be served; and

"(C) give priority to areas with the greatest showing of need, as demonstrated by comparing population and geographic areas to be served to the availability of existing sexual assault and domestic violence services.

"(f) GRANTEE REPORTING.—Upon completion of the grant period under this subpart, the State grantee shall file a performance report with the Director explaining the activities carried out together with an assessment of the effectiveness of those activities in achieving the purposes of this subpart. The Director shall suspend funding for an approved application if an applicant fails to submit an annual performance report.

"SEC. 1422. GENERAL GRANTS TO TRIBES.

"(a) GENERAL GRANTS.—The Director is authorized to make grants to Indian tribes, for use by tribes, tribal organizations or nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs on Indian reservations, for the purposes outlined in section 1401(b), and to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women in Indian country.

"(b) AMOUNTS.—From amounts appropriated, the amount of grants under subsection (a) shall be awarded on a competitive basis to tribes, with minimum grants of $35,000 and maximum grants of $300,000.

"(c) QUALIFICATION.—Upon satisfying the terms of subsection (d), any tribe shall be qualified for funds provided under this part upon certification that—

"(1) the funds shall be used to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women and for at least 3 of the purposes outlined in section 1401(b); and

"(2) at least 25 percent of the grant funds shall be allocated to each of the following three areas: prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services.

"(d) APPLICATION REQUIREMENTS.—(1) Applications shall be made directly to the Director and shall contain a description of the tribes' law enforcement responsibilities for the Indian country described in the application and a description of the tribes' system of courts, including whether the tribal government operates courts of Indian offenses as defined in 25 U.S.C. 1301 or CFR courts under 25 CFR 11 et seq.

"(2) Applications shall be in such form as the Director may prescribe and shall specify the nature of the program proposed by the applicant tribe, the data and information on which the program is based, and the extent to which the program plans to use or incorporate existing services available in the Indian country where the grant will be used.

"(3) The term of any grant shall be for a minimum of 3 years.

"(e) GRANTEE REPORTING.—At the end of the first 12 months of the grant period and at the end of each year thereafter, the Indian tribal grantee shall file a performance report with the Director explaining the activities carried out together with an assessment of the effectiveness of those activities in achieving the purposes of this subpart. The Director shall suspend funding for an approved application if an applicant fails to submit an annual performance report.

"(f) DEFINITIONS.—(1) The term 'Indian tribe' means any Indian tribe, band, nation, or other organized group or community, including any Alaska Native village or regional or village corporation (as defined in, or established pursuant to, the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (43 U.S.C. 1601, et seq.)), which is recognized as eligible for the special services provided by the United States to Indians because of their status as Indians.

"(2) The term 'Indian country' has the meaning given to such term by section 1151 of title 18, United States Code.

"SUBPART 3—GENERAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS

"SEC. 1431. GENERAL DEFINITIONS.

"As used in this part—

"(1) the term 'victim services program' means any public or private nonprofit program that assists victims, including (A) nongovernmental nonprofit organizations such as rape crisis centers, battered women's shelters, or other rape or domestic violence programs, including nonprofit nongovernmental organizations assisting victims through the legal process and (B) victim/witness programs within governmental entities;

"(2) the term 'sexual assault' includes not only assaults committed by offenders who are strangers to the victim but also assaults committed by offenders who are known or related by blood or marriage to the victim; and

"(3) the term 'domestic violence' includes felony or misdemeanor offenses committed by a current or former spouse of the victim, a person with whom the victim shares a child in common, a person who is cohabitating with or has cohabitated with the victim as a spouse, or any other person similarly situated to a spouse who is protected under the domestic or family violence laws of the jurisdiction receiving grant monies.

SEC. 1432. GENERAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.

"(a) NONMONETARY ASSISTANCE.—In addition to the assistance provided under subparts 1 or 2, the Director may direct any Federal agency, with or without reimbursement, to use its authorities and the resources granted to it under Federal law (including personnel, equipment, supplies, facilities, and managerial, technical, and advisory services) in support of State and local assistance efforts.

"(b) BUREAU REPORTING.—No later than 180 days after the end of each fiscal year for which grants are made under this part, the Director shall submit to the Judiciary Committees of the House and the Senate a report that includes, for each high intensity crime area (as provided in subpart 1) and for each State and for each grantee Indian tribe (as provided in subpart 2)—

"(1) the amount of grants made under this part;

"(2) a summary of the purposes for which those grants were provided and an evaluation of their progress; and

"(3) a copy of each grantee report filed pursuant to sections 1412(g) and 1421(f).

"(c) REGULATIONS.—No later than 45 days after the date of enactment of this part, the Director shall publish proposed regulations implementing this part. No later than 120 days after such date, the Director shall publish final regulations implementing this part.

"(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year 1992, 1993, and 1994, $100,000,000 to carry out the purposes of subpart 1, and $190,000,000 to carry out the purposes of subpart 2, and $10,000,000 to carry out the purposes of section 1422 of subpart 2."

Subtitle C—Safety for Women in Public Transit and Public Parks

SEC. 131. GRANTS FOR CAPITAL IMPROVEMENTS TO PREVENT CRIME IN PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION.

Section 24 of the Urban Mass Transportation Act of 1964 is amended to read as follows:

"GRANTS TO PREVENT CRIME IN PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION

"SEC. 24. (a) GENERAL PURPOSE.—From funds authorized under section 21, and not to exceed $10,000,000, the Secretary shall make capital grants for the prevention of crime and to increase security in existing and future public transportation systems. None of the provisions of this Act may be construed to prohibit the financing of projects under this section where law enforcement responsibilities are vested in a local public body other than the grant applicant.

"(b) GRANTS FOR LIGHTING, CAMERA SURVEILLANCE, AND SECURITY PHONES.—

"(1) From the sums authorized for expenditure under this section for crime prevention, the Secretary is authorized to make grants and loans to States and local public bodies or agencies for the purpose of increasing the safety of public transportation by—

"(A) increasing lighting within or adjacent to public transportation systems, including bus stops, subway stations, parking lots, or garages;

"(B) increasing camera surveillance of areas within and adjacent to public transportation systems, including bus stops, subway stations, parking lots, or garages;

"(C) providing emergency phone lines to contact law enforcement or security personnel in areas within or adjacent to public transportation systems, including bus stops, subway stations, parking lots, or garages; or

"(D) any other project intended to increase the security and safety of existing or planned public transportation systems.

"(2) From the sums authorized under this section, at least 75 percent shall be expended on projects of the type described in subsection (b)(1) (A) and (B).

"(c) REPORTING.—All grants under this section are contingent upon the filing of a report with the Secretary and the Department of Justice, Office of Victims of Crime, showing crime rates in or adjacent to public transportation before, and for a 1-year period after, the capital improvement. Statistics shall be broken down by type of crime, sex, race, and relationship of victim to the offender.

"(d) INCREASED FEDERAL SHARE.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the Federal share under this section for each capital improvement project which enhances the safety and security of public transportation systems and which is not required by law (including any other provision of this chapter) shall be 90 percent of the net project cost of such project.

"(e) SPECIAL GRANTS FOR PROJECTS TO STUDY INCREASING SECURITY FOR WOMEN.—From the sums authorized under this section, the Secretary shall provide grants and loans for the purpose of studying ways to reduce violent crimes against women in public transit through better design or operation of public transit systems.

"(f) GENERAL REQUIREMENTS.—All grants or loans provided under this section shall be subject to all the terms, conditions, requirements, and provisions applicable to grants and loans made under section 2(a)."

SEC. 132. GRANTS FOR CAPITAL IMPROVEMENTS TO PREVENT CRIME IN NATIONAL PARKS.

The Act of August 18, 1970, the National Park System Improvements in Administration Act (90 Stat. 1931; 16 U.S.C. 1a-1 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"SEC. 13. NATIONAL PARK SYSTEM CRIME PREVENTION ASSISTANCE.

"(a) From the sums authorized pursuant to section 7 of the Land and Water Conservation Act of 1965, and not to exceed $10,000,000, the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to provide Federal assistance to reduce the incidence of violent crime in the National Park System.

"(b) The Secretary shall direct the chief official responsible for law enforcement within the National Park Services to—

"(1) compile a list of areas within the National Park System with the highest rates of violent crime;

"(2) make recommendations concerning capital improvements, and other measures, needed within the National Park System to reduce the rates of violent crime, including the rate of sexual assault; and

"(3) publish the information required by paragraphs (1) and (2) in the Federal Register.

"(c) No later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this section, and based on the recommendations and list issued pursuant to subsection (b), the Secretary shall distribute funds throughout the National Park Service. Priority shall be given to those areas with the highest rates of sexual assault.

"(d) Funds provided under this section may be used for the following purposes—

"(1) to increase lighting within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas;

"(2) to provide emergency phone lines to contact law enforcement or security personnel in areas within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas;

"(3) to increase security or law enforcement personnel within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas; and

"(4) any other project intended to increase the security and safety of public parks and recreation areas."

SEC. 133. GRANTS FOR CAPITAL IMPROVEMENTS TO PREVENT CRIME IN PUBLIC PARKS.

Section 6 of the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1965 (78 Stat. 897; 16 U.S.C. 4601-9) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(h) CAPITAL IMPROVEMENT AND OTHER PROJECTS TO REDUCE CRIME.—In addition to assistance for planning projects, and in addition to the projects identified in subsection (e), and from amounts appropriated, the Secretary shall provide financial assistance to the States, not to exceed $15,000,000 in total, for the following types of projects or combinations thereof:

"(1) For the purpose of making capital improvements and other measures to increase safety in urban parks and recreation areas, including funds to—

"(A) increase lighting within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas;

"(B) provide emergency phone lines to contact law enforcement or security personnel in areas within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas;

"(C) increase security personnel within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas; and

"(D) any other project intended to increase the security and safety of public parks and recreation areas.

"(2) In addition to the requirements for project approval imposed by this section, eligibility for assistance under this subsection is dependent upon a showing of need. In providing funds under this subsection, the Secretary shall give priority to those projects proposed for urban parks and recreation areas with the highest rates of crime and, in particular, to urban parks and recreation areas with the highest rates of sexual assault.

"(3) Notwithstanding the terms of subsection (c), the Secretary is authorized to provide 70 percent improvement grants for projects undertaken by any State for the purposes outlined in this subsection. The remaining share of the cost shall be borne by the State."

Subtitle D—National Commission on Violent Crime Against Women

SEC. 141. ESTABLISHMENT.

There is established a commission to be known as the National Commission on Violent Crime Against Women (hereinafter referred to as "the Commission").

SEC. 142. DUTIES OF COMMISSION.

(a) GENERAL PURPOSE OF THE COMMISSION.—The Commission shall carry out activities for the purposes of promoting a national policy on violent crime against women, and for making recommendations for how to reduce violent crime against women.

(b) FUNCTIONS.—The Commission shall perform the following functions—

(1) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, current law enforcement efforts at the Federal and State levels to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women;

(2) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the responsiveness of State prosecutors and State courts to violent crimes against women;

(3) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the adequacy of current education, prevention, and protection services for women victims of violent crime;

(4) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the role of the Federal Government in reducing violent crimes against women;

(5) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, national public awareness and the public dissemination of information essential to the prevention of violent crimes against women;

(6) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, data collection and government statistics on the incidence and prevalence of violent crimes against women;

(7) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the adequacy of State and Federal laws on sexual assault and the need for a more uniform statutory response to sex offenses, including sexual assaults and other sex offenses committed by offenders who are known or related by blood or marriage to the victim;

(8) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the adequacy of State and Federal laws on domestic violence and the need for a more uniform statutory response to domestic violence; and

(9) evaluate and make recommendations regarding the feasibility of maintaining the confidentiality of addresses of domestic violence victims in voting, welfare, and public records.

SEC. 143. MEMBERSHIP.

(a) NUMBER AND APPOINTMENT.—

(1) APPOINTMENT.—The Commission shall be composed of 15 members as follows:

(A) Five members shall be appointed by the President—

(i) three of whom shall be—

(I) the Attorney General;

(II) the Secretary of Health and Human Services; and

(III) the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation,

who shall be nonvoting members, except that in the case of a tie vote by the Commission, the Attorney General shall be a voting member;

(ii) two of whom shall be selected from the general public on the basis of such individuals being specially qualified to serve on the Commission by reason of their education, training, or experience; and

(iii) at least one of whom shall be selected for their experience in providing services to women victims of sexual assault or domestic violence.

(B) Five members shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives on the joint recommendation of the Majority and Minority Leaders of the House of Representatives.

(C) Five members shall be appointed by the President pro tempore of the Senate on the joint recommendation of the Majority and Minority Leaders of the Senate.

(2) CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE RECOMMENDATIONS.—In making appointments under subparagraphs (B) and (C) of paragraph (1), the Majority and Minority Leaders of the House of Representatives and the Senate shall duly consider the recommendations of the Chairmen and Ranking Minority Members of committees with jurisdiction over laws contained in title 18 of the United States Code.

(3) REQUIREMENTS OF APPOINTMENTS.—The Majority and Minority Leaders of the Senate and the House of Representatives shall—

(A) select individuals who are specially qualified to serve on the Commission by reason of their experience in State or national efforts to fight violence against women and demonstrate experience in State or national advocacy or service organizations specializing in sexual assault and domestic violence; and

(B) engage in consultations for the purpose of ensuring that the expertise of the ten members appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the President pro tempore of the Senate shall provide as much of a balance as possible and, to the greatest extent possible, cover the fields of law enforcement, prosecution, judicial administration, legal expertise, public health, social work, victim compensation boards, and victim advocacy.

(4) TERM OF MEMBERS.—Members of the Commission (other than members appointed under paragraph (1)(A)(i)) shall serve for the life of the Commission.

(5) VACANCY.—A vacancy on the Commission shall be filled in the manner in which the original appointment was made.

(b) CHAIRMAN.—Not later than 15 days after the members of the Commission are appointed, such members shall select a Chairman from among the members of the Commission.

(c) QUORUM.—Seven members of the Commission shall constitute a quorum, but a lesser number may be authorized by the Commission to conduct hearings.

(d) MEETINGS.—The Commission shall hold its first meeting on a date specified by the Chairman, but such date shall not be later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act. After the initial meeting, the Commission shall meet at the call of the Chairman or a majority of its members, but shall meet at least six times.

(e) PAY.—Members of the Commission who are officers or employees or elected officials of a government entity shall receive no additional compensation by reason of their service on the Commission.

(f) PER DIEM.—Except as provided in subsection (e), members of the Commission shall be allowed travel and other expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, at rates authorized for employees of agencies under sections 5702 and 5703 of title 5, United States Code.

(g) DEADLINE FOR APPOINTMENT.—Not later than 45 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the members of the Commission shall be appointed.

SEC. 144. REPORTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 1 year after the date on which the Commission is fully constituted under section 143, the Commission shall prepare and submit a final report to the President and to congressional committees that have jurisdiction over legislation addressing violent crimes against women, including the crimes of domestic and sexual assault.

(b) CONTENTS.—The final report submitted under paragraph (1) shall contain a detailed statement of the activities of the Commission and of the findings and conclusions of the Commission, including such recommendations for legislation and administrative action as the Commission considers appropriate.

SEC. 145. EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR AND STAFF.

(a) EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR.—

(1) APPOINTMENT.—The Commission shall have an Executive Director who shall be appointed by the Chairman, with the approval of the Commission, not later than 30 days after the Chairman is selected.

(2) COMPENSATION.—The Executive Director shall be compensated at a rate not to exceed the maximum rate of the basic pay payable under GS-18 of the General Schedule as contained in title 5, United States Code.

(b) STAFF.—With the approval of the Commission, the Executive Director may appoint and fix the compensation of such additional personnel as the Executive Director considers necessary to carry out the duties of the Commission.

(c) APPLICABILITY OF CIVIL SERVICE LAWS.—The Executive Director and the additional personnel of the Commission appointed under subsection (b) may be appointed without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service, and may be paid without regard to the provisions of chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of such title relating to classification and General Schedule pay rates.

(d) CONSULTANTS.—Subject to such rules as may be prescribed by the Commission, the Executive Director may procure temporary or intermittent services under section 3109(b) of title 5, United States Code, at rates for individuals not to exceed $200 per day.

SEC. 146. POWERS OF COMMISSION.

(a) HEARINGS.—For the purpose of carrying out this subtitle, the Commission may conduct such hearings, sit and act at such times and places, take such testimony, and receive such evidence, as the Commission considers appropriate. The Commission may administer oaths before the Commission.

(b) DELEGATION.—Any member or employee of the Commission may, if authorized by the Commission, take any action that the Commission is authorized to take under this subtitle.

(c) ACCESS TO INFORMATION.—The Commission may request directly from any executive department or agency such information as may be necessary to enable the Commission to carry out this subtitle, on the request of the Chairman of the Commission.

(d) MAILS.—The Commission may use the United States mails in the same manner and under the same conditions as other departments and agencies of the United States.

SEC. 147. AUTHORIZATIONS OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There is authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1992, $500,000 to carry out the purposes of this subtitle.

SEC. 148. TERMINATION.

The Commission shall cease to exist 30 days after the date on which its final report is submitted under section 144. The President may extend the life of the Commission for a period of not to exceed one year.

Subtitle E—New Evidentiary Rules

SEC. 151. SEXUAL HISTORY IN ALL CRIMINAL CASES.

The Federal Rules of Evidence are amended by inserting after rule 412 the following:

“Rule 412A. Evidence of victim's past behavior in other criminal cases

“(a) REPUTATION AND OPINION EVIDENCE EXCLUDED.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in a criminal case, other than a sex offense case governed by rule 412, reputation or opinion evidence of the past sexual behavior of an alleged victim is not admissible.

“(b) ADMISSIBILITY.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in a criminal case, other than a sex offense case governed by rule 412, evidence of an alleged victim's past sexual behavior (other than reputation and opinion evidence) may be admissible if—

“(1) the evidence is admitted in accordance with the procedures specified in subdivision (c); and

“(2) the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice.

“(c) PROCEDURES.—(1) If the defendant intends to offer evidence of specific instances of the alleged victim's past sexual behavior, the defendant shall make a written motion to offer such evidence not later than 15 days before the date on which the trial in which such evidence is to be offered is scheduled to begin, except that the court may allow the motion to be made at a later date, including during trial, if the court determines either that the evidence is newly discovered and could not have been obtained earlier through the exercise of due diligence or that the issue to which such evidence relates has newly arisen in the case. Any motion made under this paragraph shall be served on all other parties and on the alleged victim.

“(2) The motion described in paragraph (1) shall be accompanied by a written offer of proof. If necessary, the court shall order a hearing in chambers to determine if such evidence is admissible. At such hearing, the parties may call witnesses, including the alleged victim and offer relevant evidence. Notwithstanding subdivision (b) of rule 104, if the relevancy of the evidence which the defendant seeks to offer in the trial depends upon the fulfillment of a condition of fact, the court, at the hearing in chambers or at a subsequent hearing in chambers scheduled for such purpose, shall accept evidence on the issue of whether such condition of fact is fulfilled and shall determine such issue.

“(3) If the court determines on the basis of the hearing described in paragraph (2), that the evidence the defendant seeks to offer is relevant, not excluded by any other evidentiary rule, and that the probative value of such evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice, such evidence shall be admissible in the trial to the extent an order made by the court specifies the evidence which may be offered and areas with respect to which the alleged victim may be examined or cross-examined. In its order, the court should consider (A) the chain of reasoning leading to its finding of relevance, and (B) why the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice given the potential of the evidence to humiliate and embarrass the alleged victim and to result in unfair or biased jury inferences.”

SEC. 152. SEXUAL HISTORY IN CIVIL CASES.

The Federal Rules of Evidence, as amended by section 151 of this Act, are amended by adding after rule 412A the following:

“Rule 412B. Evidence of past sexual behavior in civil cases

“(a) REPUTATION AND OPINION EVIDENCE EXCLUDED.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in a civil case in which a defendant is accused of actionable sexual misconduct, as defined in subdivision (d), reputation or opinion evidence of the plaintiff's past sexual behavior is not admissible.

“(b) ADMISSIBLE EVIDENCE.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in a civil case in which a defendant is accused of actionable sexual misconduct, as defined in subdivision (d), evidence of a plaintiff's past sexual behavior other than reputation or opinion evidence may be admissible if—

“(1) admitted in accordance with the procedures specified in subdivision (c); and

“(2) the probative value of such evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice.

“(c) PROCEDURES.—(1) If the defendant intends to offer evidence of specific instances of the plaintiff's past sexual behavior, the defendant shall make a written motion to offer such evidence not later than 15 days before the date on which the trial in which such evidence is to be offered is scheduled to begin, except that the court may allow the motion to be made at a later date, including during trial, if the court determines either that the evidence is newly discovered and could not have been obtained earlier through the exercise of due diligence or that the issue to which such evidence relates has newly arisen in the case. Any motion made under this paragraph shall be served on all other parties and on the plaintiff.

“(2) The motion described in paragraph (1) shall be accompanied by a written offer of proof. If necessary, the court shall order a hearing in chambers to determine if such evidence is admissible. At such hearing, the parties may call witnesses, including the plaintiff and offer relevant evidence. Notwithstanding subdivision (b) of rule 104, if the relevancy of the evidence which the defendant seeks to offer in the trial depends upon the fulfillment of a condition of fact, the court, at the hearing in chambers or at a subsequent hearing in chambers scheduled for such purpose, shall accept evidence on the issue of whether such condition of fact is fulfilled and shall determine such issue.

“(3) If the court determines on the basis of the hearing described in paragraph (2), that the evidence the defendant seeks to offer is relevant, not excluded by any other evidentiary rule, and that the probative value of such evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice, such evidence shall be admissible in the trial to the extent an order made by the court specifies evidence which may be offered and areas with respect to which the plaintiff may be examined or cross-examined. In its order, the court should consider (A) the chain of reasoning leading to its finding of relevance, and (B) why the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice given the potential of the evidence to humiliate and embarrass the alleged victim and to result in unfair or biased jury inferences.

“(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this rule, a case involving a claim of actionable sexual misconduct, includes, but is not limited to, sex harassment or discrimination claims brought pursuant to title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000(e)) and gender bias claims brought pursuant to title III of the Violence Against Women Act of 1991.”

SEC. 153. AMENDMENTS TO RAPE SHIELD LAW.

Rule 412 of the Federal Rules of Evidence is amended—

(1) by adding at the end thereof the following:

“(e) INTERLOCUTORY APPEAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any evidentiary rulings made pursuant to this rule are subject to interlocutory appeal by the government or by the alleged victim.

“(f) RULE OF RELEVANCE AND PRIVILEGE.—If the prosecution seeks to offer evidence of prior sexual history, the provisions of this rule may be waived by the alleged victim.”; and

(2) by adding at the end of subdivision (c)(3) the following: “In its order, the court should consider (A) the chain of reasoning leading to its finding of relevance; and (B) why the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice given the potential of the evidence to humiliate and embarrass the alleged victim and to result in unfair or biased jury inferences.”

SEC. 154. EVIDENCE OF CLOTHING.

The Federal Rules of Evidence are amended by adding after rule 412 the following:

“Rule 413. Evidence of victim's clothing as inciting violence

“Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in a criminal case in which a person is accused of an offense under chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, evidence of an alleged victim's clothing is not admissible to show that the alleged victim incited or invited the offense charged.”

Subtitle F—Assistance to Victims of Sexual Assault

SEC. 161. EDUCATION AND PREVENTION GRANTS TO REDUCE SEXUAL ASSAULTS AGAINST WOMEN.

Part A of title XIX of the Public Health and Health Services Act (42 U.S.C. 300w et seq.) is amended as follows:

(1) by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

“§ 1910A. Use of allotments for rape prevention education

“(a) Notwithstanding the terms of section 1904(a)(1) of this title, amounts transferred by the State for use under this part may be used for rape prevention and education programs conducted by rape crisis centers or similar nongovernmental nonprofit entities, which programs may include—

“(1) educational seminars;

“(2) the operation of hotlines;

“(3) training programs for professionals;

“(4) the preparation of informational materials; and

“(5) other efforts to increase awareness of the facts about, or to help prevent, sexual assault.

“(b) States providing grant monies must assure that at least 15 percent of the monies are devoted to education programs targeted for middle school, junior high school, and high school students.

“(c) There are authorized to be appropriated under this section for each fiscal year 1992, 1993, and 1994, $65,000,000 to carry out the purposes of this section.

“(d) Funds authorized under this section may only be used for providing rape prevention and education programs.

“(e) For purposes of this section, the term ‘rape prevention and education’ includes education and prevention efforts directed at offenses committed by offenders who are not known to the victim as well as offenders who are known to the victim.

“(f) States shall be allotted funds under this section pursuant to the terms of sections 1902 and 1905, and subject to the conditions provided in this section and sections 1904 through 1909.”;

(2) striking section 1901(b); and

(3) striking section 1904(a)(1)(G).

SEC. 162. RAPE EXAM PAYMENTS.

No State or other grantee is entitled to funds under title I of the Violence Against Women Act of 1990 unless the State or other grantee incurs the full cost of forensic medical exams for victims of sexual assault. A State or other grantee does not incur the full medical cost of forensic medical exams if it chooses to reimburse the victim after the fact unless the reimbursement program waives any minimum loss or deductible requirement, provides victim reimbursement within a reasonable time (90 days), permits applications for reimbursement within one year from the date of the exam, and provides information to all subjects of forensic medical exams about how to obtain reimbursement.

TITLE II—SAFE HOMES FOR WOMEN

SEC. 201. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the “Safe Homes for Women Act of 1990”.

Subtitle A—Interstate Enforcement

SEC. 211. INTERSTATE ENFORCEMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part 1 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after chapter 110 the following:

"Chapter 110A—Violence Against Spouses
 "Sec. 2261. Traveling to commit spousal abuse.
 "Sec. 2262. Interstate violation of protection orders.
 "Sec. 2263. Restitution.
 "Sec. 2264. Full faith and credit given to protection orders.
 "Sec. 2265. Definitions for chapter.

"§ 2261. Traveling to commit spousal abuse

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Any person who travels across State lines—

"(1) and who, in the course of or as a result of such travel, commits an act that injures his or her spouse or intimate partner; or shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than 10 years but not less than 3 months, or both, in addition to any fine or term of imprisonment provided under State law.

"(b) CAUSING THE CROSSING OF STATE LINES.—Any person who causes a spouse or intimate partner to cross State lines by force, coercion, duress or fraud and, in the course or as a result of that conduct, commits an act that injures his or her spouse or intimate partner, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than 10 years but not less than 3 months, or both, in addition to any fine or term of imprisonment provided under State law.

"(c) NO STATE LAW.—If no fine or term of imprisonment is provided for under the law of the State where the injury occurs, a person violating this section shall be punished as follows:

"(1) If permanent disfigurement or life-threatening bodily injury results, by imprisonment for not more than 20 years; where serious bodily injury results, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both; where bodily injury results, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

"(2) If the offense is committed with intent to commit another felony, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both.

"(3) If the offense is committed with a dangerous weapon, with intent to do bodily harm, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

"(4) If the offense constitutes sexual abuse, as that conduct is described under chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code (without regard to whether the offense was committed in the maritime, territorial or prison jurisdiction of the United States) by fine or term of imprisonment as provided for the applicable conduct under chapter 109A.

"(d) CRIMINAL INTENT.—The criminal intent of the offender required to establish an offense under subsection (b) is the general intent to do the acts that result in injury to a spouse or intimate partner and not the specific intent to violate the law of a State.

"(e) NO PRIOR STATE CRIMINAL ACTION NECESSARY.—Nothing in this section requires a prior criminal prosecution or conviction under State law to justify Federal prosecution.

"§ 2262. Interstate violation of protection orders

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Any person against whom a valid protection order has been entered who travels across State lines—

"(1) and who, in the course of or as a result of such travel, commits an act that injures

his or her spouse or intimate partner in violation of a valid protection order issued by a State; or

"(2) for the purpose of harassing, injuring, finding, contacting, or locating a spouse or intimate partner and who, in furtherance of that purpose, commits an act that injures his or her spouse or intimate partner in violation of a valid protection order issued by a State, shall be punished as provided in subsection (c) of this section.

"(b) CAUSING THE CROSSING OF STATE LINES.—Any person who causes a spouse or intimate partner to cross State lines by force, coercion, duress, or fraud, and, in the course or as a result of that conduct, commits an act that injures his or her spouse or intimate partner in violation of a valid protection order issued by a State shall be punished as provided in subsection (c) of this section.

"(c) PENALTIES.—

"(1) If permanent disfigurement or life-threatening bodily injury results, by imprisonment for not more than 20 years; where serious bodily injury results, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both; where bodily injury results, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

"(2) If the offense is committed with intent to commit another felony, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both.

"(3) If the offense is committed with a dangerous weapon, with intent to do bodily harm, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

"(4) If the offender has previously violated any prior protection order issued against that person for the protection of the same victim, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years and not less than six months, or both.

"(5) If the offense constitutes sexual abuse, as that conduct is described under chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code (without regard to whether the conduct was committed in the special maritime, territorial or prison jurisdiction of the United States) by fine or term of imprisonment as provided for the applicable offense under chapter 109A.

"(d) CRIMINAL INTENT.—The criminal intent required to establish the offense provided in subsection (a) is the general intent to do the acts which result in injury to a spouse or intimate partner and not the specific intent to violate a protection order or State law.

"(e) NO PRIOR STATE CRIMINAL ACTION NECESSARY.—Nothing in this section requires a prior criminal prosecution or conviction under State law to justify Federal prosecution.

"§ 2263. Interim protections

"In furtherance of the purposes of this chapter, and to protect against abuse of a spouse or intimate partner, any judge or magistrate before whom a criminal case under this chapter is brought, shall have the power to issue temporary orders of protection for the protection of an abused spouse or intimate partner pending final adjudication of the case, upon a showing of a likelihood of danger to the abused spouse or intimate partner.

"§ 2264. Restitution

"(a) IN GENERAL.—In addition to any fine or term of imprisonment provided under this chapter, and notwithstanding the terms of section 3663 of this title, the court shall order restitution to the victim of an offense under this chapter.

"(b) SCOPE AND NATURE OF ORDER.—(1) The order of restitution under this section shall direct that—

"(A) the defendant pay to the victim the full amount of the victim's losses as determined by the court, pursuant to subsection (3); and

"(B) the United States Attorney enforce the restitution order by all available and reasonable means.

"(2) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'full amount of the victim's losses' includes any costs incurred by the victim for—

"(A) medical services relating to physical, psychiatric, or psychological care;

"(B) physical and occupational therapy or rehabilitation; and

"(C) lost income;

"(D) attorneys' fees, plus any costs incurred in obtaining a civil protection order; and

"(E) any other losses suffered by the victim as a proximate result of the offense.

"(3) Restitution orders under this section are mandatory. A court may not decline to issue an order under this section because of—

"(A) the economic circumstances of the defendant; or

"(B) the fact that victim has, or is entitled to, receive compensation for his or her injuries from the proceeds of insurance.

"(4)(A) Notwithstanding the terms of paragraph (3), the court may take into account the economic circumstances of the defendant in determining the manner in which and the schedule according to which the restitution is to be paid, including—

"(i) the financial resources and other assets of the defendant;

"(ii) projected earnings, earning capacity, and other income of the defendant; and

"(iii) any financial obligations of the offender, including obligations to dependents.

"(B) An order under this section may direct the defendant to make a single lump-sum payment, or partial payments at specified intervals. The order shall provide that the defendant's restitutionary obligation takes priority over any criminal fine ordered.

"(C) In the event that the victim has recovered for any amount of loss through the proceeds of insurance or any other source, the order of restitution shall provide that restitution be paid to the person who provided the compensation, but that restitution shall be paid to the victim before any restitution is paid to any other provider of compensation.

"(5) Any amount paid to a victim under this section shall be set off against any amount later recovered as compensatory damages by the victim from the defendant in—

"(A) any Federal civil proceeding; and

"(B) any State civil proceeding, to the extent provided by the law of the State.

"(c) PROOF OF CLAIM.—(1) Within 60 days after conviction and, in any event, no later than 10 days prior to sentencing, the United States Attorney (or his delegee), after consulting with the victim, shall prepare and file an affidavit with the court listing the amounts subject to restitution under this section. The affidavit shall be signed by the United States Attorney (or his delegee) and the victim. Should the victim object to any of the information included in the affidavit, the United States Attorney (or his delegee) shall advise the victim that the victim may file a separate affidavit.

"(2) If no objection is raised by the defendant, the amounts attested to in the affidavit filed pursuant to subsection (1) shall be entered in the court's restitution order. If objection is raised, the court may require the victim or the United States Attorney (or his delegate) to submit further affidavits or other supporting documents, demonstrating the victim's losses.

"(3) If the court concludes, after reviewing the supporting documentation and considering the defendant's objections, that there is a substantial reason for doubting the authenticity or veracity of the records submitted, the court may require additional documentation or hear testimony on those questions. Any records filed, or testimony heard, pursuant to this section, shall be in camera in the judge's chambers. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, this section does not entitle the defendant to discovery of the contents of, or related to, any supporting documentation, including medical, psychological, or psychiatric records.

"(4) In the event that the victim's losses are not ascertainable 10 days prior to sentencing as provided in subsection (c)(1), the United States Attorney (or his delegate) shall so inform the court, and the court shall set a date for the final determination of the victim's losses, not to exceed 90 days after sentencing. If the victim subsequently discovers further losses, the victim shall have 60 days after discovery of those losses in which to petition the court for an amended restitution order. Such order may be granted only upon a showing of good cause for the failure to include such losses in the initial claim for restitutionary relief.

"(d) RESTITUTION AND CRIMINAL PENALTIES.—An award of restitution to the victim of an offense under this chapter shall not be a substitute for imposition of punishment under sections 2261 and 2262.

"(e) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section, the term 'victim' includes any person who has suffered direct physical, emotional, or pecuniary harm as a result of a commission of a crime under this chapter, including, in the case of a victim who is under 18 years of age, incompetent, incapacitated, or deceased, the legal guardian of the victim or representative of the victim's estate, another family member, or any other person appointed as suitable by the court: Provided, That in no event shall the defendant be named as such representative or guardian.

§2265. Full faith and credit given to protection orders

"(a) FULL FAITH AND CREDIT.—Any protection order issued consistent with the terms of subsection (b) by the court of one State (the issuing State) shall be accorded full faith and credit by the court of another State (the enforcing State) and enforced as if it were the order of the enforcing State.

"(b) PROTECTION ORDER.—A protection order issued by a State court is consistent with the provisions of this section if—

"(1) such court has jurisdiction over the parties and matter under the law of such State; and

"(2) reasonable notice and opportunity to be heard is given to the person against whom the order is sought sufficient to protect that person's right to due process. In the case of ex parte orders, notice and opportunity to be heard must be provided within the time required by State law, and in any event within a reasonable time after the order is issued, sufficient to protect the respondent's due process rights.

"(c) CROSS OR COUNTER PETITION.—A protection order issued by a State court against one who has petitioned, filed a complaint, or otherwise filed a written pleading for protection against abuse by a spouse or intimate partner is not entitled to full faith and credit if—

"(1) no cross or counter petition, complaint, or other written pleading was filed seeking such a protection order; or

"(2) if a cross or counter petition has been filed, if the court did not make specific findings that each party was entitled to such an order.

§2266. Definitions for chapter

"As used in this chapter—

"(1) the term 'spouse or intimate partner' includes—

"(A) a present or former spouse, a person who shares a child in common with the abuser, and a person who cohabits or has cohabited with the abuser as a spouse; and

"(B) any other person similarly situated to a spouse, other than a child, who is protected by the domestic or family violence laws of the State in which the injury occurred or where the victim resides;

"(2) the term 'protection order' includes any injunction or other order issued for the purpose of preventing violent or threatening acts by one spouse against his or her spouse or intimate partner, including temporary and final orders issued by civil and criminal courts (other than support or child custody orders) whether obtained by filing an independent action or as a pendente lite order in another proceeding so long as any civil order was issued in response to a complaint, petition or motion of an abused spouse or intimate partner;

"(3) the term 'act that injures' includes any act, except those done in self-defense, that results in physical injury or sexual abuse;

"(4) the term 'State' includes a State of the United States, the District of Columbia, and any Indian tribe, commonwealth, territory, or possession of the United States; and

"(5) the term 'travel across State lines' includes any such travel except travel across State lines by an Indian tribal member when that member remained at all times on tribal lands."

(b) TABLE OF CHAPTERS.—The table of chapters for part 1 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item for chapter 110 the following:

"110A. Violence against spouses ..... 2261".

Subtitle B—Arrest in Spousal Abuse Cases
SEC. 221. ENCOURAGING ARREST POLICIES.

The Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10400) is amended by adding after section 311 the following:

SEC. 312. ENCOURAGING ARREST POLICIES.

"(a) PURPOSE.—To encourage States, Indian tribes and localities to treat spousal violence as a serious violation of criminal law, the Secretary is authorized to make grants to eligible States, Indian tribes, municipalities, or local government entities for the following purposes:

"(1) to implement pro-arrest programs and policies in police departments and to improve tracking of cases involving spousal abuse;

"(2) to centralize and coordinate police enforcement, prosecution, or judicial responsibility for, spousal abuse cases in one group or unit of police officers, prosecutors, or judges;

"(3) to educate judges in criminal and other courts about spousal abuse and to improve judicial handling of such cases.

"(b) ELIGIBILITY.—(1) Eligible grantees are those States, Indian tribes, municipalities or other local government entities that—

"(A) demonstrate, through arrest and conviction statistics, that their laws or policies have been effective in significantly increasing the number of arrests made of spouse abusers; and

"(B) certify that their laws or official policies—

"(i) mandate arrest of spouse abusers based on probable cause that violence has been committed or mandate arrest of spouses violating the terms of a valid and outstanding protection order; or

"(ii) permit warrantless misdemeanor arrests of spouse abusers and encourage the use of that authority;

"(C) demonstrate that their laws, policies, practices and training programs discourage 'dual' arrests of abused and abuser and the increase in arrest rates demonstrated pursuant to paragraph (1)(A) is not the result of increased dual arrests; and

"(D) certify that their laws, policies, and practices prohibit issuance of mutual protection orders in cases where only one spouse has sought a protective order, and require findings of mutual aggression to issue mutual protective orders in cases where both parties file a claim.

"(2) For purposes of this section, the term 'protection order' includes any injunction issued for the purpose of preventing violent or threatening acts of spouse abuse, including temporary and final orders issued by civil and criminal courts (other than support or child custody orders) whether obtained by filing an independent action or as a pendente lite order in another proceeding.

"(3) For purposes of this section, the term 'spousal or spouse abuse' includes felony or misdemeanor offenses committed by a current or former spouse of the victim, a person with whom the victim shares a child in common, a person who is cohabiting with or has cohabited with the victim as a spouse, or any other person protected under the domestic or family violence laws of the jurisdiction receiving grant monies.

"(4) The eligibility requirements provided in this section shall take effect one year after the date of enactment of this section.

"(c) DELEGATION AND AUTHORIZATION.—The Secretary shall delegate to the Attorney General of the United States the Secretary's responsibilities for carrying out this section to the Attorney General. There are authorized to be appropriated not in excess of $25,000,000 for each fiscal year to be used for the purpose of making grants under this section.

"(d) APPLICATION.—An eligible grantee shall submit an application to the Secretary. Such application shall—

"(1) contain a certification by the chief executive officer of the State, Indian tribes, municipality, or local government entity that the conditions of subsection (b) are met;

"(2) describe the entity's plans to further the purposes listed in subsection (a);

"(3) identify the agency or office or groups of agencies or offices responsible for carrying out the program; and

"(4) identify and include documentation showing the nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs that will be consulted in developing, and implementing, the program.

"(e) PRIORITY.—In awarding grants under this section, the Secretary shall give priority to a grantee that—

"(1) does not currently provide for centralized handling of cases involving spousal or family violence in any one of the areas listed in this subsection—police, prosecutors, and courts; and

"(2) demonstrates a commitment to strong enforcement of laws, and prosecution of cases, involving spousal or family violence.

"(f) REPORTING.—Each grantee receiving funds under this section shall submit a report to the Secretary evaluating the effectiveness of the plan described in subsection (d)(2) and containing such additional information as the Secretary may prescribe.

"(g) REGULATIONS.—No later than 45 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall publish proposed regulations implementing this section. No later than 120 days after such date, the Secretary shall publish final regulations implementing this section."

Subtitle C—Funding for Shelters

SEC. 231. AUTHORIZATION.

Section 310 of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10409) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 310. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"(a) There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out the provisions of this title, $85,000,000 for fiscal year 1992, $100,000,000, for fiscal year 1993, and $125,000,000 for fiscal year 1994.

"(b) Of the sums authorized to be appropriated under subsection (a) of this section for any fiscal year, not less than 80 percent shall be used by the Secretary for making grants under section 303.

"(c) Of the sums authorized to be appropriated under subsection (a) of this section for any fiscal year, not more than 5 percent shall be used by the Secretary for making grants under section 314.

"(d) Of the sums authorized to be appropriated under subsection (a) of this section for any fiscal year, not less than 5 percent shall be used by the Secretary for making grants under section 308A."

Subtitle D—Family Violence Prevention and Services Act Amendments

SEC. 241. EXPANSION OF PURPOSE.

Section 302(1) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10401(1)) is amended by striking "to prevent" and inserting "to increase public awareness about and prevent" and by striking "demonstrate the effectiveness of assisting" and inserting "assist".

SEC. 242. EXPANSION OF STATE DEMONSTRATION GRANT PROGRAM.

(a) INCREASING PUBLIC AWARENESS.—Section 303(a)(1) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10402(a)(1)) is amended by striking "to prevent" and inserting "to increase public awareness about and prevent".

(b) EXPANSION OF PROGRAM.—Section 303(a)(2)(B)(i) is amended by striking "alcohol and drug abuse treatment".

SEC. 243. GRANTS FOR PUBLIC INFORMATION CAMPAIGNS.

The Family Violence Prevention and Services Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"GRANTS FOR PUBLIC INFORMATION CAMPAIGNS

"SEC. 314. (a) The Secretary may make grants to public or private nonprofit entities to provide public information campaigns regarding domestic violence through the use of public service announcements and informative materials that are designed for print media, billboards, public transit advertising, electronic broadcast media, and other vehicles for information that shall inform the public concerning domestic violence.

"(b) No grant, contract, or cooperative agreement shall be made or entered into under this section unless an application that meets the requirements of subsection (c) has been approved by the Secretary.

"(c) An application submitted under subsection (b) shall—

"(1) provide such agreements, assurances, and information, be in such form and be submitted in such manner as the Secretary shall prescribe through notice in the Federal Register, including a description of how the proposed public information campaign will target the population at risk, including pregnant women;

"(2) include a complete description of the plan of the application for the development of a public information campaign;

"(3) identify the specific audiences that will be educated, including communities and groups with the highest prevalence of domestic violence;

"(4) identify the media to be used in the campaign and the geographic distribution of the campaign;

"(5) describe plans to test market a development plan with a relevant population group and in a relevant geographic area and give assurance that effectiveness criteria will be implemented prior to the completion of the final plan that will include an evaluation component to measure the overall effectiveness of the campaign;

"(6) describe the kind, amount, distribution, and timing of informational messages and such other information as the Secretary may require, with assurances that media organizations and other groups with which such messages are placed will not lower the current frequency of public service announcements; and

"(7) contain such other information as the Secretary may require.

"(d) A grant, contract, or agreement made or entered into under this section shall be used for the development of a public information campaign that may include public service announcements, paid educational messages for print media, public transit advertising, electronic broadcast media, and any other mode of conveying information that the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

"(e) The criteria for awarding grants shall ensure that an applicant—

"(1) will conduct activities that educate communities and groups at greatest risk;

"(2) has a record of high quality campaigns of a comparable type; and

"(3) has a record of high quality campaigns that educate the population groups identified as most at risk."

SEC. 244. FUND DISTRIBUTION TO STATES.

Section 304(a)(1) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act is amended by striking "$50,000" and inserting "$500,000".

SEC. 245. INDIAN TRIBES.

SEC. 246. FUNDING LIMITATIONS.

Section 303(c) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10402(c)) is amended by—

(1) striking ", and" and all that follows through "fiscal years"; and

(2) striking "$50,000" and inserting "$75,000".

SEC. 247. GRANTS TO ENTITIES OTHER THAN STATES; LOCAL SHARE.

The first sentence of section 303(f) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10402(f)) is amended to read as follows: "No grant may be made under this section to an entity other than a State or Indian tribe unless the entity provides 35 percent of the funding of the program or project funded by the grant."

SEC. 248. SHELTER AND RELATED ASSISTANCE.

(a) CHANGE OF PERCENTAGES.—Section 303(g) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10402(g)) is amended by striking "not less than 60 percent" and inserting "not less than 75 percent".

(b) DEFINITION OF RELATED ASSISTANCE.—Section 309(5) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act is amended to read as follows:

"(5) The term 'related assistance' includes any, but does not require all, of the following—

"(A) food, shelter, medical services, and counseling with respect to family violence, including counseling by peers individually or in groups;

"(B) transportation, legal assistance, referrals for appropriate health-care services (including alcohol and drug abuse treatment), and technical assistance with respect to obtaining financial assistance under Federal and State programs;

"(C) comprehensive counseling and self-help services to abusers, preventive health (including nutrition, exercise, and prevention of substance abuse), educational services and employment training; and

"(D) child care services for children who are victims of family violence or the dependents of such victims."

SEC. 249. LAW ENFORCEMENT TRAINING AND TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE GRANTS.

Section 311 of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10410(b)) is repealed.

SEC. 250. REPORT ON RECORDKEEPING.

Not later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Government Accounting Office shall complete a study of, and shall submit to Congress a report and recommendations on, problems of record-keeping of criminal complaints involving domestic violence. The study and report shall examine efforts to date of the FBI and Justice Department to collect statistics on domestic violence and the feasibility of including a suggested timetable for, requiring that the relationship between an offender and victim be reported in Federal and State records of crimes of assault, aggravated assault, rape, and other violent crimes.

SEC. 251. MODEL STATE LEADERSHIP INCENTIVE GRANTS FOR DOMESTIC VIOLENCE INTERVENTION.

The Family Violence Prevention Services Act, as amended by section 103 of this Act, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"MODEL STATE LEADERSHIP GRANTS FOR DOMESTIC VIOLENCE INTERVENTION

"SEC. 315. (a) The Secretary, in cooperation with the Attorney General, shall award grants to not less than 10 States to assist in becoming model demonstration States and in meeting the costs of improving State leadership concerning activities that will—

"(1) increase the number of prosecutions for domestic violence crimes;

"(2) encourage the reporting of incidences of domestic violence;

"(3) facilitate 'arrests and aggressive' prosecution policies; and

"(4) provides court advocacy for victims of domestic violence.

"(b) To be designated as a model State under subsection (a), a State shall have in effect—

"(1) a law that requires mandatory arrest of a person that police have probable cause to believe has committed an act of domestic violence or probable cause to believe has violated an outstanding civil protection order;

"(2) a law or policy that discourages * * *

“(B) implement model projects that include either—

“(i) a ‘no-drop’ prosecution policy; or
“(ii) a vertical prosecution policy; and

“(C) limit diversion to extraordinary cases, and then only after an admission before a judge to ‘dual’ arrests;

“(3) statewide prosecution policies that—

“(A) authorize and encourage prosecutors to pursue cases where a criminal case can be proved, including proceeding without the active involvement of the victim if necessary; and

“(B) implement model projects that include either—

“(i) a ‘no-drop’ prosecution policy; or
“(ii) a vertical prosecution policy; and

“(C) limit diversion to extraordinary cases, and then only after an admission before a judicial officer has been entered;

“(4) statewide laws, policies, or guidelines for judges that—

“(A) prohibit the issuance of mutual protective orders in cases where only one spouse has sought a protective order and require findings of mutual aggression to issue mutual protective orders in cases where both parties file a claim;

“(B) require that any history of child abuse be considered detrimental to the child and discourage custody or joint custody orders by spouse abusers; and

“(C) encourage the understanding of domestic violence as a serious criminal offense and not a trivial dispute;

“(5) develop and disseminate methods to improve the criminal justice system’s response to domestic violence to make existing remedies as easily available as possible to victims of domestic violence, including reducing delay, eliminating court fees, and providing easily understandable court forms.

“(c)(1) In addition to the funds authorized to be appropriated under section 310, there are authorized to be appropriated to make grants under this section $25,000,000 for fiscal year 1992 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1993 and 1994.

“(2) Funds shall be distributed under this section so that no State shall receive more than $2,500,000 in each fiscal year under this section.

“(3) The Secretary shall delegate to the Attorney General the Secretary’s responsibilities for carrying out this section and shall transfer to the Attorney General the funds appropriated under this section for the purpose of making grants under this section.”

SEC. 252. FUNDING FOR TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE CENTERS.

The Family Violence Prevention and Services Act is amended by inserting after section 308 the following:

“SEC. 308A. TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE CENTERS.

“(a) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this section is to provide training and technical assistance to State, Indian tribal, and local domestic violence programs and to other professionals who provide services to victims of domestic violence. From the sums authorized under this title, the Secretary shall provide grants to or contract with, private nonprofit organizations, for the establishment and maintenance of one national and six special-issue resource centers serving defined geographic areas. One national resource center shall offer resource, policy, and/or training assistance to Federal, State, Indian tribal, and local government agencies on issues pertaining to domestic violence and serve a coordinating and resource-sharing function among domestic violence service providers, and maintain a central resource library. The other national resource centers shall provide information, training and technical assistance to State, tribal and local domestic violence service providers. In addition, each national center shall specialize in one of the following areas of domestic violence service, prevention or law:

“(1) criminal justice response to domestic violence, including court-mandated abuser treatment;

“(2) child custody issues in domestic violence cases;

“(3) use of the self-defense plea by domestic violence victims;

“(4) health care response and access to health care resources for domestic violence victims;

“(5) victims’ access to, and quality of, effective legal assistance, including civil litigation; and

“(6) the response of child protective service agencies to battered mothers of abused children.

“(o) ELIGIBILITY.—Eligible grantees are private non-profit organizations that—

“(1) focus primarily on domestic violence;

“(2) provide documentation to the Secretary demonstrating a minimum of three years experience with issues of domestic violence, particularly in the specific area for which it is applying;

“(3) include on its advisory boards representatives from domestic violence programs who are geographically and culturally diverse; and

“(4) demonstrate strong support from domestic violence advocates for their designation as the special-issue resource center.

“(c) REPORTING.—Each grantee receiving funds under this section shall submit a report to the Secretary evaluating the effectiveness of the plan described and containing such additional information as the Secretary may prescribe.

“(d) REGULATIONS.—No later than 45 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall publish proposed regulations implementing this section.”

Subtitle E—Youth Education and Domestic Violence

SEC. 261. EDUCATING YOUTH ABOUT DOMESTIC VIOLENCE.

(a) GENERAL PURPOSE.—For purposes of this section, the Secretary shall delegate his powers to the Secretary of Education, hereinafter referred to as the “Secretary”. The Secretary shall select, implement and evaluate four model programs for education of young people about domestic violence and violence among intimate partners.

(b) NATURE OF PROGRAM.—The Secretary shall select, implement and evaluate separate model programs for four different audiences: primary schools, middle schools, secondary schools, and institutions of higher education. These model programs shall be selected, implemented, and evaluated with the input of educational experts, legal and psychological experts on battering, and victim advocate organizations such as battered women’s shelters, State coalitions and resource centers. The participation of each of these groups or individual consultants from such groups is essential to the selection, implementation, and evaluation of programs that meet both the needs of educational institutions and the needs of the domestic violence problem.

(c) REVIEW AND DISSEMINATION.—Not later than 24 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall transmit the design and evaluation of the model programs, along with a plan and cost estimate for nationwide distribution, to the relevant committees of Congress for review.

(d) AUTHORIZATION.—There are authorized to be appropriated under this section for fiscal year 1992, $400,000 to carry out the purposes of this section.

Subtitle F—Confidentiality for Abused Persons

SEC. 271. CONFIDENTIALITY OF ABUSED PERSONS’ ADDRESS.

No later than 90 days after the enactment of this Act, the Postmaster General shall promulgate regulations to secure the confidentiality of abused persons’ addresses or otherwise prohibit the disclosure of an abused person’s address consistent with the following guidelines:

(1) confidentiality shall be provided upon the presentation to an appropriate postal official of an existing and valid court order for the protection of an abused spouse;

(2) disclosure of addresses to State or Federal agencies for legitimate law enforcement or other governmental purposes shall not be prohibited; and

(3) compilations of addresses existing at the time the order is presented to an appropriate postal official shall be excluded from the scope of the proposed regulations.

TITLE III—CIVIL RIGHTS

SEC. 301. CIVIL RIGHTS.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) crimes motivated by the victim’s gender constitute bias crimes in violation of the victim’s right to be free from discrimination on the basis of gender;

(2) current law provides a civil rights remedy for gender crimes committed in the workplace, but not for gender crimes committed on the street or in the home; and

(3) State and Federal criminal laws do not adequately protect against the bias element of gender-motivated crimes, which separates these crimes from acts of random violence, nor do those laws adequately provide victims of gender-motivated crimes the opportunity to vindicate their interests;

(4) existing bias and discrimination in the criminal justice system often deprives victims of gender-motivated crimes of equal protection of the laws and the redress to which they are entitled;

(5) gender-motivated violence has a substantial adverse effect on interstate commerce, by deterring potential victims from traveling interstate, from engaging in employment in interstate business, and from transacting with business, and in places involved, in interstate commerce;

(6) gender-motivated violence has a substantial adverse effect on interstate commerce, by diminishing national productivity, increasing medical and other costs, and decreasing the supply of and the demand for interstate products;

(7) a Federal civil rights action as specified in this section is necessary to guarantee equal protection of the laws and to reduce the substantial adverse effects of gender-motivated violence on interstate commerce; and

(8) victims of gender-motivated violence have a right to equal protection of the laws, including a system of justice that is unaffected by bias or discrimination and that, at every relevant stage, treats such crimes as seriously as other violent crimes.

(b) RIGHTS, PRIVILEGES AND IMMUNITIES.—All persons within the United States shall have the same rights, privileges and immunities in every State as is enjoyed by all other persons to be free from crimes of violence motivated by the victim’s gender, as defined in subsection (d).

(c) CAUSE OF ACTION.—Any person, including a person who acts under color of any statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage of any State, who commits a crime of violence motivated by gender and thus deprives another of the rights, privileges or immunities secured by the Constitution or laws as enumerated in subsection (b) shall be liable to the party injured, in an action for the recovery of compensatory and punitive damages, injunctive and declaratory relief, and such other relief as the court may deem appropriate.

(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

(1) the term "crime of violence motivated by gender" means any crime of violence, as defined in this section, including rape, sexual assault, sexual abuse, abusive sexual contact, or any other crime of violence committed because of gender or on the basis of gender; and

(2) the term "crime of violence" means an act or series of acts that would come within the meaning of State or Federal offenses described in section 16 of title 18, United States Code, whether or not those acts have actually resulted in criminal charges, prosecution, or conviction and whether or not those acts were committed in the special maritime, territorial, or prison jurisdiction of the United States.

(e) LIMITATION AND PROCEDURES.—

(1) LIMITATION.—Nothing in this section entitles a person to a cause of action under subsection (c) for random acts of violence unrelated to gender or for acts that cannot be demonstrated, by a preponderance of the evidence, to be "motivated by gender" as defined in subsection (d).

(2) NO PRIOR CRIMINAL ACTION.—Nothing in this section requires a prior criminal complaint, prosecution, or conviction to establish the necessary elements of a cause of action under subsection (c).

SEC. 302. CONFORMING AMENDMENT.

The Civil Rights Attorney's Fees Awards Act of 1976 (42 U.S.C. 1988) is amended—

(1) in the last sentence, by striking "or" after "Public Law 92-318,"; and

(2) by adding after "1964," the following: "or title III of the Violence Against Women Act of 1991."

TITLE IV—SAFE CAMPUSES FOR WOMEN

SEC. 401. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Safe Campuses for Women Act of 1990".

SEC. 402. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) rape prevention and education programs are essential to an educational environment free of fear for students' personal safety;

(2) sexual assault on campus, whether by fellow students or not, is widespread among the Nation's higher education institutions: experts estimate that 1 in 7 of the women now in college have been raped and over half of college rape victims know their attackers;

(3) sexual assault poses a grave threat to the physical and mental well-being of students and may significantly impair the learning process; and

(4) action by schools to educate students may make substantial inroads on the incidence of rape, including the incidence of acquaintance rape on campus.

SEC. 403. GRANTS FOR CAMPUS RAPE EDUCATION.

Title X of the Higher Education Act of 1965 is amended to add at the end thereof the following:

"PART D—GRANTS FOR CAMPUS RAPE EDUCATION."

SEC. 1071. GRANTS FOR CAMPUS RAPE EDUCATION.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) The Secretary of Education is authorized to make grants to or enter into contracts with institutions of higher education for rape education and prevention programs under this section.

"(2) The Secretary shall make financial assistance available on a competitive basis under this section. An institution of higher education or consortium of such institutions which desires to receive a grant or enter into a contract under this section shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require in accordance with regulations.

"(3) The Secretary shall make every effort to ensure the equitable participation of private and public institutions of higher education and to ensure the equitable geographic participation of such institutions. In the award of grants and contracts under this section, the Secretary shall give priority to institutions who show the greatest need for the sums requested.

"(b) GENERAL RAPE PREVENTION AND EDUCATION GRANTS.—Grants under this section shall be used to educate and provide support services to student victims of rape or sexual assault. Grants may be used for the following purposes:

"(1) to provide training for campus security and college personnel, including campus disciplinary or judicial boards, that address the issues of rape, sexual assault, and other gender-motivated crimes;

"(2) to develop, disseminate, or implement campus security and student disciplinary policies to prevent and discipline rape, sexual assault and other gender-motivated crimes;

"(3) to develop, enlarge or strengthen support services programs including medical or psychological counseling to assist victims' recovery from rape, sexual assault, or other gender-motivated crimes;

"(4) to create, disseminate, or otherwise provide assistance and information about victims' options on and off campus to bring disciplinary or other legal action; and

"(5) to implement, operate, or improve rape education and prevention programs, including programs making use of peer-to-peer education.

"(c) MODEL GRANTS.—Not less than 25 percent of the funds authorized under this section shall be available for grants for model demonstration programs to be coordinated with local rape crisis centers for the development and implementation of quality rape prevention and education curricula and for local programs to provide services to student rape victims.

"(d) ELIGIBILITY.—No institution of higher education or consortium of such institutions shall be eligible for a grant under this section unless—

"(1) its student code of conduct, or other written policy governing student behavior, explicitly prohibits not only rape but all forms of sexual assault; and

"(2) it has in effect and implements a written policy requiring the disclosure to the victim of any sexual assault the outcome of any investigation by campus police or campus disciplinary proceedings brought pursuant to the victim's complaint against the alleged perpetrator of the sexual assault: Provided, That nothing in this section shall be interpreted to authorize disclosure to any person other than the victim.

"(e) APPLICATIONS.—(1) In order to be eligible to receive a grant under this section for any fiscal year, an institution of higher education, or consortium of such institutions, shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time and in such manner as the Secretary shall prescribe.

"(2) Each such application shall—

"(A) set forth the activities and programs to be carried out with funds granted under this part;

"(B) contain an estimate of the cost for the establishment and operation of such programs;

"(C) explain how the program intends to address the issue of acquaintance rape;

"(D) provide assurances that the Federal funds made available under this section shall be used to supplement and, to the extent practical, to increase the level of funds that would, in the absence of such Federal funds, be made available by the applicant for the purpose described in this part, and in no case to supplant such funds; and

"(E) include such other information and assurances as the Secretary reasonably determines to be necessary.

"(e) GRANTEE REPORTING.—Upon completion of the grant period under this section, the grantee institution or consortium of institutions shall file a performance report with the Secretary explaining the activities carried out together with an assessment of the effectiveness of those activities in achieving the purposes of this section. The Secretary shall suspend funding for an approved application if an applicant fails to submit an annual performance report.

"(f) DEFINITIONS.—(1) Except as otherwise provided, the terms used in this part shall have the meaning provided under section 2981 of this title.

"(2) For purposes of this subchapter, the following terms have the following meanings:

"(A) The term 'rape education and prevention' includes programs that provide educational seminars, peer-to-peer counseling, operation of hotlines, self-defense courses, the preparation of informational materials, and any other effort to increase campus awareness of the facts about, or to help prevent, sexual assault.

"(B) The term 'Secretary' means the Secretary of Education.

"(g) GENERAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—(1) REGULATIONS.—No later than 45 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall publish proposed regulations implementing this section. No later than 120 days after such date, the Secretary shall publish final regulations implementing this section.

"(2) No later than 180 days after the end of each fiscal year for which grants are made under this section, the Secretary shall submit to the committees of the House of Representatives and the Senate responsible for issues relating to higher education and to crime, a report that includes—

"(A) the amount of grants made under this section;

"(B) a summary of the purposes for which those grants were provided and an evaluation of their progress; and

"(C) a copy of each grantee report filed pursuant to subsection (e) of this section.

"(3) For the purpose of carrying out this subchapter, there are authorized to be appropriated $20,000,000 for the fiscal year 1992, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1993, 1994, and 1995."

SEC. 404. REQUIRED CAMPUS REPORTING OF SEXUAL ASSAULT.

Section 204(f) of the Crime Awareness and Campus Security Act of 1990 is amended to read as follows:

"(F) Statistics concerning the occurrence on campus, during the most recent school year, and during the 2 preceding school years for which data are available, of the following criminal offenses reported to campus security authorities or local police agencies—

- "(i) murder;
- "(ii) rape or sexual assault;
- "(iii) robbery;
- "(iv) aggravated assault;
- "(v) burglary; and
- "(vi) motor vehicle theft.

TITLE V—EQUAL JUSTICE FOR WOMEN IN THE COURTS ACT OF 1990*SECTION 501. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Equal Justice for Women in the Courts Act of 1991".

Subtitle A—Education and Training for Judges and Court Personnel in State Courts*SEC. 511. GRANTS AUTHORIZED.

The State Justice Institute is authorized to award grants for the purpose of developing, testing, presenting, and disseminating model programs to be used by States in training judges and court personnel in the laws of the States on rape, sexual assault, domestic violence, and other crimes of violence motivated by the victim's gender.

SEC. 512. TRAINING PROVIDED BY GRANTS.

Training provided pursuant to grants made under this subtitle may include current information, existing studies, or current data on—

- (1) the nature and incidence of rape and sexual assault by strangers and nonstrangers, marital rape, and incest;
- (2) the underreporting of rape, sexual assault, and child sexual abuse;
- (3) the physical, psychological, and economic impact of rape and sexual assault on the victim, the costs to society, and the implications for sentencing;
- (4) the psychology of sex offenders, their high rate of recidivism, and the implications for sentencing;
- (5) the historical evolution of laws and attitudes on rape and sexual assault;
- (6) sex stereotyping of female and male victims of rape and sexual assault, racial stereotyping of rape victims and defendants, and the impact of such stereotypes on credibility of witnesses, sentencing, and other aspects of the administration of justice;
- (7) application of rape shield laws and other limits on introduction of evidence that may subject victims to improper sex stereotyping and harassment in both rape and nonrape cases, including the need for sua sponte judicial intervention in inappropriate cross-examination;
- (8) the use of expert witness testimony on rape trauma syndrome, child sexual abuse accommodation syndrome, post-traumatic stress syndrome, and similar issues;
- (9) the legitimate reasons why victims of rape, sexual assault, and incest may refuse to testify against a defendant;
- (10) the nature and incidence of domestic violence;
- (11) the physical, psychological, and economic impact of domestic violence on the victim, the costs to society, and the implications for court procedures and sentencing;
- (12) the psychology and self-presentation of batterers and victims and the implications for court proceedings and credibility of witnesses;
- (13) sex stereotyping of female and male victims of domestic violence, myths about presence or absence of domestic violence in certain racial, ethnic, religious, or socioeconomic groups, and their impact on the administration of justice;

(14) historical evolution of laws and attitudes on domestic violence;

(15) proper and improper interpretations of the defenses of self-defense and provocation, and the use of expert witness testimony on battered woman syndrome;

(16) the likelihood of retaliation, recidivism, and escalation of violence by batterers, and the potential impact of incarceration and other meaningful sanctions for acts of domestic violence including violations of orders of protection;

(17) economic, psychological, social and institutional reasons for victims' inability to leave the batterer, to report domestic violence or to follow through on complaints, including the influence of lack of support from police, judges, and court personnel, and the legitimate reasons why victims of domestic violence may refuse to testify against a defendant;

(18) the need for orders of protection, and the implications of mutual orders of protection, dual arrest policies, and mediation in domestic violence cases;

(19) recognition of and response to gender-motivated crimes of violence other than rape, sexual assault and domestic violence, such as mass or serial murder motivated by the gender of the victims; and

(20) current information on the impact of pornography on crimes against women, or data on other activities that tend to degrade women.

SEC. 513. COOPERATION IN DEVELOPING PROGRAMS IN MAKING GRANTS UNDER THIS TITLE.

The State Justice Institute shall ensure that model programs carried out pursuant to grants made under this subtitle are developed with the participation of law enforcement officials, public and private nonprofit victim advocates, legal experts, prosecutors, defense attorneys, and recognized experts on gender bias in the courts.

SEC. 514. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There is authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1992, $600,000 to carry out the purposes of this subtitle. Of amounts appropriated under this section, the State Justice Institute shall expend no less than 40 percent on model programs regarding domestic violence and no less than 40 percent on model programs regarding rape and sexual assault.

Subtitle B—Education and Training for Judges and Court Personnel in Federal Courts*SEC. 521. EDUCATION AND TRAINING GRANTS.

(a) STUDY.—The Federal Judicial Center shall conduct a study of the nature and extent of gender bias in the Federal courts, including in proceedings involving rape, sexual assault, domestic violence, and other crimes of violence motivated by gender. The study shall be conducted by the use of data collection techniques such as reviews of trial and appellate opinions and transcripts, public hearings, and inquiries to attorneys practicing in the Federal courts. The Federal Judicial Center shall publicly issue a final report containing a detailed description of the findings and conclusions of the study, including such recommendations for legislative, administrative, and judicial action as it considers appropriate.

(b) MODEL PROGRAMS.—(1) The Federal Judicial Center shall develop, test, present, and disseminate model programs to be used in training Federal judges and court personnel in the laws on rape, sexual assault, domestic violence, and other crimes of violence motivated by the victim's gender.

(2) The training programs developed under this subsection shall include—

(A) all of the topics listed in section 512 of subtitle A; and

(B) all procedural and substantive aspects of the legal rights and remedies for violent crime motivated by gender including such areas as the Federal penalties for sex crimes, interstate enforcement of laws against domestic violence and civil rights remedies for violent crimes motivated by gender.

SEC. 522. COOPERATION IN DEVELOPING PROGRAMS.

In implementing this subtitle, the Federal Judicial Center shall ensure that the study and model programs are developed with the participation of law enforcement officials, public and private nonprofit victim advocates, legal experts, prosecutors, defense attorneys, and recognized experts on gender bias in the courts.

SEC. 523. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There is authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1992, $400,000 to carry out the purposes of this subtitle. Of amounts appropriated under this section, no less than 25 percent and no more than 40 percent shall be expended by the Federal Judicial Center on the study required by section 521(a) of this subtitle.

TITLE I—SAFE STREETS FOR WOMEN

SEC. 101. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Safe Streets for Women Act of 1991".

Subtitle A—Federal Penalties for Sex Crimes
SEC. 111. REPEAT OFFENDERS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

“§ 2247. Repeat offenders

“Any person who violates a provision of this chapter, after one or more prior convictions for an offense punishable under this chapter, or after one or more prior convictions under the laws of any State or foreign country relating to aggravated sexual abuse, sexual abuse, or abusive sexual contact, is punishable by a term of imprisonment up to twice that otherwise authorized.”.

(b) TABLE OF SECTIONS.—The table of sections for chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

“2247. Repeat offenders.”.

SEC. 112. FEDERAL PENALTIES.

(a) RAPE AND AGGRAVATED RAPE.—Pursuant to its authority under section 994(p) of title 28, United States Code, the United States Sentencing Commission shall amend its sentencing guidelines to provide that a defendant convicted of aggravated sexual abuse under section 2241 of title 18, United States Code, or sexual abuse under section 2242 of title 18, United States Code, shall be assigned a base offense level under chapter 2 of the sentencing guidelines that is at least 4 levels greater than the base offense level applicable to criminal sexual abuse under the guidelines in effect on November 1, 1990, or otherwise shall amend the guidelines applicable to such offenses so as to achieve a comparable minimum guideline sentence. In amending such guidelines, the Sentencing Commission shall review the appropriateness of existing specific offense characteristics or other adjustments applicable to such offenses, and make such changes as it deems appropriate, taking into account the severity of rape offenses, with or without aggravating factors; the unique nature and duration of the mental injuries inflicted on the victims of such offenses; and any other relevant factors.

(b) EFFECT OF AMENDMENT.—If the sentencing guidelines are amended after the effective date of this section, the Sentencing Commission shall implement the instructions set forth in subsection (a) so as to achieve a comparable result.

(c) STATUTORY RAPE.—

(1) Section 2243(b) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking “one year,” and inserting “two years.”.

(2) Pursuant to its authority under section 994(p) of title 28, United States Code, the United States Sentencing Commission shall promulgate guidelines or amend existing guidelines to incorporate the increase in maximum penalties provided by this section for section 2243(b) of title 18, United States Code.

SEC. 113. MANDATORY RESTITUTION FOR SEX CRIMES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

“§ 2248. Mandatory restitution

“(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding the terms of section 3663 of this title, and in addition to any other civil or criminal penalty authorized by law, the court shall order restitution for any offense under this chapter.

“(b) SCOPE AND NATURE OF ORDER.—(1) The order of restitution under this section shall direct that—

“(A) the defendant pay to the victim the full amount of the victim's losses as determined by the court, pursuant to paragraph (2); and

“(B) the United States Attorney enforce the restitution order by all available and reasonable means.

“(2) For purposes of this subsection, the term ‘full amount of the victim's losses’ includes any costs incurred by the victim for—

“(A) medical services relating to physical, psychiatric, or psychological care;

“(B) physical and occupational therapy or rehabilitation;

“(C) lost income;

“(D) attorneys' fees; and

“(E) any other losses suffered by the victim as a proximate result of the offense.

“(3) Restitution orders under this section are mandatory. A court may not decline to issue an order under this section because of—

“(A) the economic circumstances of the defendant; or

“(B) the fact that a victim has, or is entitled to, receive compensation for his or her injuries from the proceeds of insurance or any other source.

“(4)(A) Notwithstanding the terms of paragraph (3), the court may take into account the economic circumstances of the defendant in determining the manner in which and the schedule according to which the restitution is to be paid.

“(B) For purposes of this paragraph, the term ‘economic circumstances’ includes—

“(i) the financial resources and other assets of the defendant;

“(ii) projected earnings, earning capacity, and other income of the defendant; and

“(iii) any financial obligations of the defendant, including obligations to dependents.

“(C) An order under this section may direct the defendant to make a single lump-sum payment or partial payments at specified intervals. The order shall also provide that the defendant's restitutionary obligation takes priority over any criminal fine ordered.

“(D) In the event that the victim has recovered for any amount of loss through the proceeds of insurance or any other source, the order of restitution shall provide that restitution be paid to the person who provided the compensation, but that restitution shall be paid to the victim before any restitution is paid to any other provider of compensation.

“(5) Any amount paid to a victim under this section shall be set off against any amount later recovered as compensatory damages by the victim from the defendant in—

“(A) any Federal civil proceeding; and

“(B) any State civil proceeding, to the extent provided by the law of the State.

“(c) PROOF OF CLAIM.—(1) Within 60 days after conviction and, in any event, no later than 10 days prior to sentencing, the United States Attorney (or his delegee), after consulting with the victim, shall prepare and file an affidavit with the court listing the amounts subject to restitution under this section. The affidavit shall be signed by the United States Attorney (or his delegee) and the victim. Should the victim object to any of the information included in the affidavit, the United States Attorney (or his delegee) shall advise the victim that the victim may file a separate affidavit.

“(2) If no objection is raised by the defendant, the amounts attested to in the affidavit filed pursuant to subsection (1) shall be entered in the court's restitution order. If objection is raised, the court may require the victim or the United States Attorney (or his delegee) to submit further affidavits or other supporting documents, demonstrating the victim's losses.

"(3) If the court concludes, after reviewing the supporting documentation and considering the defendant's objections, that there is a substantial reason for doubting the authenticity or veracity of the records submitted, the court may require additional documentation or hear testimony on those questions. Any records filed, or testimony heard, pursuant to this section, shall be in camera in the judge's chambers. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, this section does not entitle the defendant to discovery of the contents of, or matters related to, any supporting documentation, including medical, psychological, or psychiatric records.

"(4) In the event that the victim's losses are not ascertainable 10 days prior to sentencing as provided in subsection (c)(1), the United States Attorney (or his delegate) shall so inform the court, and the court shall set a date for the final determination of the victim's losses, not to exceed 90 days after sentencing. If the victim subsequently discovers further losses, the victim shall have 60 days after discovery of those losses in which to petition the court for an amended restitution order. Such order may be granted only upon a showing of good cause for the failure to include such losses in the initial claim for restitutionary relief.

"(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section, the term 'victim' includes any person who has suffered direct physical, emotional, or pecuniary harm as a result of a commission of a crime under this chapter, including, in the case of a victim who is under 18 years of age, incompetent, incapacitated, or deceased, the legal guardian of the victim or representative of the victim's estate, another family member, or any other person appointed as suitable by the court: Provided, That in no event shall the defendant be named as such representative or guardian."

(b) TABLE OF SECTIONS.—The table of sections for chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"248. Mandatory restitution."

Subtitle B—Law Enforcement and Prosecution Grants to Reduce Violent Crimes Against Women

SEC. 121. GRANTS TO COMBAT VIOLENT CRIMES AGAINST WOMEN.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.) is amended by—

- (1) redesignating part N as part O;
- (2) redesignating section 1401 as section 1501; and

(3) adding after part M the following:

"PART N—GRANTS TO COMBAT VIOLENT CRIMES AGAINST WOMEN

"SEC. 1401. PURPOSE OF THE PROGRAM AND GRANTS.

"(a) GENERAL PROGRAM PURPOSE.—The purpose of this part is to assist States, Indian tribes, cities, and other localities to develop effective law enforcement and prosecution strategies to combat violent crimes against women and, in particular, to focus efforts on those areas with the highest rates of violent crime against women.

"(b) PURPOSES FOR WHICH GRANTS MAY BE USED.—Grants under this part shall provide additional personnel, training, technical assistance, data collection and other equipment for the more widespread apprehension, prosecution, and adjudication of persons committing violent crimes against women and specifically, for the purposes of—

"(1) training law enforcement officers and prosecutors to more effectively identify and respond to violent crimes against women, including the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence;

"(2) developing, training, or expanding units of law enforcement officers and prosecutors specifically targeting violent crimes against women, including the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence;

"(3) developing and implementing police and prosecution policies, protocols, or orders specifically devoted to identifying and responding to violent crimes against women, including the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence;

"(4) developing, installing, or expanding data collection systems, including computerized systems, linking police, prosecutors, and courts or for the purpose of identifying and tracking arrests, prosecutions, and convictions for the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence; and

"(5) developing, enlarging, or strengthening victim services programs, including sexual assault and domestic violence programs, to increase reporting and reduce attrition rates for cases involving violent crimes against women, including the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence.

"SUBPART 1—HIGH INTENSITY CRIME AREA GRANTS

"SEC. 1411. HIGH INTENSITY GRANTS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance (hereafter in this part referred to as the 'Director') shall make grants to areas of 'high intensity crime' against women.

"(b) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this part, a 'high intensity crime area' means an area with one of the 40 highest rates of violent crime against women, as determined by the Bureau of Justice Statistics pursuant to section 1412.

"SEC. 1412. HIGH INTENSITY GRANT APPLICATION.

"(a) COMPUTATION.—Within 45 days after the date of enactment of this part, the Bureau of Justice Statistics shall compile a list of the 40 areas with the highest rates of violent crime against women based on the combined female victimization rate per population for assault, sexual assault (including, but not limited to, rape), murder, robbery, and kidnapping.

"(b) USE OF DATA.—In calculating the combined female victimization rate required by subsection (a), the Bureau of Justice Statistics may rely on—

"(1) existing data collected by States, municipalities, Indian reservations or statistical metropolitan areas showing the number of police reports of the crimes listed in subsection (a); and

"(2) existing data collected by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, including data from those governmental entities already complying with the National Incident Based Reporting System, showing the number of police reports of crimes listed in subsection (a).

"(c) PUBLICATION.—After compiling the list set forth in subsection (a), the Bureau of Justice Statistics shall convey it to the Director who shall publish it in the Federal Register.

"(d) QUALIFICATION.—Upon satisfying the terms of subsection (e), any high intensity crime area shall be qualified for a grant under this subpart upon application by the chief executive officer of the governmental entities responsible for law enforcement and prosecution of criminal offenses within the area and certification that—

"(1) the funds shall be used to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women and for at least 3 of the purposes outlined in section 1401(b);

"(2) grantees and subgrantees shall develop a plan for implementation, and otherwise consult and coordinate program grants, with nongovernmental nonprofit victim services programs; and

"(3) at least 25 percent of the amount granted shall be allocated to each of the following three areas: prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services.

"(e) APPLICATION REQUIREMENTS.—The application requirements provided in section 513 of this title shall apply to grants made under this subpart. In addition, each application must provide the certifications required by subsection (d) including documentation from nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs showing their participation in developing the plan required by subsection (d)(2). Applications shall—

"(1) include documentation from the prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services programs to be assisted showing—

- "(A) need for the grant funds;
- "(B) intended use of the grant funds; and
- "(C) expected results from the use of grant funds; and

"(2) proof of compliance with the requirements for the payment of forensic medical exams provided in section 162 of this title.

"(f) DISBURSEMENT.—

"(1) No later than 60 days after the receipt of an application under this subpart, the Director shall either disburse the appropriate sums provided for under this subpart or shall inform the applicant why the application does not conform to the terms of section 513 of this title or to the requirements of this section.

"(2) In disbursing monies under this subpart, the Director shall ensure, to the extent practicable, that grantees—

"(A) equitably distribute funds on a geographic basis;

"(B) determine the amount of subgrants based on the population to be served; and

"(C) give priority to areas with the greatest showing of need.

"(g) GRANTEE REPORTING.—Upon completion of the grant period under this subpart, the grantee shall file a performance report with the Director explaining the activities carried out together with an assessment of the effectiveness of those activities in achieving the purposes of this part. The Director shall suspend funding for an approved application if an applicant fails to submit an annual performance report.

"Subpart 2—Other Grants to States to Combat Violent Crimes Against Women

"SEC. 1421. GENERAL GRANTS TO STATES.

"(a) GENERAL GRANTS.—The Director is authorized to make grants to States, for use by States, units of local government in the States, and nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs in the States, for the purposes outlined in section 1401(b), and to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women.

"(b) AMOUNTS.—From amounts appropriated, the amount of grants under subsection (a) shall be—

- "(1) $500,000 to each State; and
- "(2) that portion of the then remaining available money to each State that results from a distribution among the States on the basis of each State's population in relation to the population of all States.

"(c) QUALIFICATION.—Upon satisfying the terms of subsection (d), any State shall be qualified for funds provided under this part upon certification that—

"(1) the funds shall be used to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women and for at least 3 of the purposes outlined in section 1401(b);

"(2) grantees and subgrantees shall develop a plan for implementation, and otherwise consult and coordinate, with nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs, including sexual assault and domestic violence victim services programs;

"(3) at least 25 percent of the amount granted shall be allocated to each of the following three areas: prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services.

"(d) APPLICATION REQUIREMENTS.—The application requirements provided in section 513 of this title shall apply to grants made under this subpart. In addition, each application shall include the certifications of qualification required by subsection (c) including documentation from nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs showing their participation in developing the plan required by subsection (c)(2). Applications shall—

"(1) include documentation from the prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services programs to be assisted showing—

"(A) need for the grant funds;

"(B) intended use of the grant funds; and

"(C) expected results from the use of grant funds; and

"(2) proof of compliance with the requirements for the payment of forensic medical exams provided in section 162 of this title.

"(e) DISBURSEMENT.—(1) No later than 60 days after the receipt of an application under this subpart, the Director shall either disburse the appropriate sums provided for under this subpart or shall inform the applicant why the application does not conform to the terms of section 513 of this title or to the requirements of this section.

"(2) In disbursing monies under this subpart, the Director shall issue regulations to ensure that States will—

"(A) equitably distribute monies on a geographic basis including nonurban and rural areas, and giving priority to localities with populations under 100,000;

"(B) determine the amount of subgrants based on the population and geographic area to be served; and

"(C) give priority to areas with the greatest showing of need, as demonstrated by comparing population and geographic areas to be served to the availability of existing sexual assault and domestic violence services.

"(f) GRANTEE REPORTING.—Upon completion of the grant period under this subpart, the State grantee shall file a performance report with the Director explaining the activities carried out together with an assessment of the effectiveness of those activities in achieving the purposes of this subpart. The Director shall suspend funding for an approved application if an applicant fails to submit an annual performance report.

"SEC. 1422. GENERAL GRANTS TO TRIBES.

"(a) GENERAL GRANTS.—The Director is authorized to make grants to Indian tribes, for use by tribes, tribal organizations or nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs on Indian reservations, for the purposes outlined in section 1401(b), and to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women in Indian country.

"(b) AMOUNTS.—From amounts appropriated, the amount of grants under subsection (a) shall be awarded on a competitive basis to tribes, with minimum grants of $35,000 and maximum grants of $300,000.

"(c) QUALIFICATION.—Upon satisfying the terms of subsection (d), any tribe shall be qualified for funds provided under this part upon certification that—

"(1) the funds shall be used to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women and for at least 3 of the purposes outlined in section 1401(b); and

"(2) at least 25 percent of the grant funds shall be allocated to each of the following three areas: prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services.

"(d) APPLICATION REQUIREMENTS.—(1) Applications shall be made directly to the Director and shall contain a description of the tribes' law enforcement responsibilities for the Indian country described in the application and a description of the tribes' system of courts, including whether the tribal government operates courts of Indian offenses as defined in 25 U.S.C. 1301 or CFR courts under 25 CFR 11 et seq.

"(2) Applications shall be in such form as the Director may prescribe and shall specify the nature of the program proposed by the applicant tribe, the data and information on which the program is based, and the extent to which the program plans to use or incorporate existing services available in the Indian country where the grant will be used.

"(3) The term of any grant shall be for a minimum of 3 years.

"(e) GRANTEE REPORTING.—At the end of the first 12 months of the grant period and at the end of each year thereafter, the Indian tribal grantee shall file a performance report with the Director explaining the activities carried out together with an assessment of the effectiveness of those activities in achieving the purposes of this subpart. The Director shall suspend funding for an approved application if an applicant fails to submit an annual performance report.

"(f) DEFINITIONS.—(1) The term 'Indian tribe' means any Indian tribe, band, nation, or other organized group or community, including any Alaska Native village or regional or village corporation (as defined in, or established pursuant to, the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (43 U.S.C. 1601, et seq.)), which is recognized as eligible for the special services provided by the United States to Indians because of their status as Indians.

"(2) The term 'Indian country' has the meaning given to such term by section 1151 of title 18, United States Code.

"SUBPART 3—GENERAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS

"SEC. 1431. GENERAL DEFINITIONS.

"As used in this part—

"(1) the term 'victim services program' means any public or private nonprofit program that assists victims, including (A) nongovernmental nonprofit organizations such as rape crisis centers, battered women's shelters, or other rape or domestic violence programs, including nonprofit nongovernmental organizations assisting victims through the legal process and (B) victim/witness programs within governmental entities;

"(2) the term 'sexual assault' includes not only assaults committed by offenders who are strangers to the victim but also assaults committed by offenders who are known or related by blood or marriage to the victim; and

"(3) the term 'domestic violence' includes felony or misdemeanor offenses committed by a current or former spouse of the victim, a person with whom the victim shares a child in common, a person who is cohabitating with or has cohabitated with the victim as a spouse, or any other person similarly situated to a spouse who is protected under the domestic or family violence laws of the jurisdiction receiving grant monies.

"SEC. 1432. GENERAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.

"(a) NONMONETARY ASSISTANCE.—In addition to the assistance provided under subparts 1 or 2, the Director may direct any Federal agency, with or without reimbursement, to use its authorities and the resources granted to it under Federal law (including personnel, equipment, supplies, facilities, and managerial, technical, and advisory services) in support of State and local assistance efforts.

"(b) BUREAU REPORTING.—No later than 180 days after the end of each fiscal year for which grants are made under this part, the Director shall submit to the Judiciary Committees of the House and the Senate a report that includes, for each high intensity crime area (as provided in subpart 1) and for each State and for each grantee Indian tribe (as provided in subpart 2)—

"(1) the amount of grants made under this part;

"(2) a summary of the purposes for which those grants were provided and an evaluation of their progress; and

"(3) a copy of each grantee report filed pursuant to sections 1412(g) and 1421(f).

"(c) REGULATIONS.—No later than 45 days after the date of enactment of this part, the Director shall publish proposed regulations implementing this part. No later than 120 days after such date, the Director shall publish final regulations implementing this part.

"(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year 1992, 1993, and 1994, $100,000,000 to carry out the purposes of subpart 1, and $190,000,000 to carry out the purposes of subpart 2, and $10,000,000 to carry out the purposes of section 1422 of subpart 2."

Subtitle C—Safety for Women in Public Transit and Public Parks

SEC. 131. GRANTS FOR CAPITAL IMPROVEMENTS TO PREVENT CRIME IN PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION.

Section 24 of the Urban Mass Transportation Act of 1964 is amended to read as follows:

"GRANTS TO PREVENT CRIME IN PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION

"SEC. 24. (a) GENERAL PURPOSE.—From funds authorized under section 21, and not to exceed $10,000,000, the Secretary shall make capital grants for the prevention of crime and to increase security in existing and future public transportation systems. None of the provisions of this Act may be construed to prohibit the financing of projects under this section where law enforcement responsibilities are vested in a local public body other than the grant applicant.

"(b) GRANTS FOR LIGHTING, CAMERA SURVEILLANCE, AND SECURITY PHONES.—

"(1) From the sums authorized for expenditure under this section for crime prevention, the Secretary is authorized to make grants and loans to States and local public bodies or agencies for the purpose of increasing the safety of public transportation by—

"(A) increasing lighting within or adjacent to public transportation systems, including bus stops, subway stations, parking lots, or garages;

"(B) increasing camera surveillance of areas within and adjacent to public transportation systems, including bus stops, subway stations, parking lots, or garages;

"(C) providing emergency phone lines to contact law enforcement or security personnel in areas within or adjacent to public transportation systems, including bus stops, subway stations, parking lots, or garages; or

"(D) any other project intended to increase the security and safety of existing or planned public transportation systems.

"(2) From the sums authorized under this section, at least 75 percent shall be expended on projects of the type described in subsection (b)(1) (A) and (B).

"(c) REPORTING.—All grants under this section are contingent upon the filing of a report with the Secretary and the Department of Justice, Office of Victims of Crime, showing crime rates in or adjacent to public transportation before, and for a 1-year period after, the capital improvement. Statistics shall be broken down by type of crime, sex, race, and relationship of victim to the offender.

"(d) INCREASED FEDERAL SHARE.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the Federal share under this section for each capital improvement project which enhances the safety and security of public transportation systems and which is not required by law (including any other provision of this chapter) shall be 90 percent of the net project cost of such project.

"(e) SPECIAL GRANTS FOR PROJECTS TO STUDY INCREASING SECURITY FOR WOMEN.—From the sums authorized under this section, the Secretary shall provide grants and loans for the purpose of studying ways to reduce violent crimes against women in public transit through better design or operation of public transit systems.

"(f) GENERAL REQUIREMENTS.—All grants or loans provided under this section shall be subject to all the terms, conditions, requirements, and provisions applicable to grants and loans made under section 2(a)."

SEC. 132. GRANTS FOR CAPITAL IMPROVEMENTS TO PREVENT CRIME IN NATIONAL PARKS.

The Act of August 18, 1970, the National Park System Improvements in Administration Act (90 Stat. 1931; 16 U.S.C. 1a-1 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"SEC. 13. NATIONAL PARK SYSTEM CRIME PREVENTION ASSISTANCE.

"(a) From the sums authorized pursuant to section 7 of the Land and Water Conservation Act of 1965, and not to exceed $10,000,000, the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to provide Federal assistance to reduce the incidence of violent crime in the National Park System.

"(b) The Secretary shall direct the chief official responsible for law enforcement within the National Park Services to—

"(1) compile a list of areas within the National Park System with the highest rates of violent crime;

"(2) make recommendations concerning capital improvements, and other measures, needed within the National Park System to reduce the rates of violent crime, including the rate of sexual assault; and

"(3) publish the information required by paragraphs (1) and (2) in the Federal Register.

"(c) No later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this section, and based on the recommendations and list issued pursuant to subsection (b), the Secretary shall distribute funds throughout the National Park Service. Priority shall be given to those areas with the highest rates of sexual assault.

"(d) Funds provided under this section may be used for the following purposes—

"(1) to increase lighting within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas;

"(2) to provide emergency phone lines to contact law enforcement or security personnel in areas within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas;

"(3) to increase security or law enforcement personnel within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas; and

"(4) any other project intended to increase the security and safety of public parks and recreation areas."

SEC. 133. GRANTS FOR CAPITAL IMPROVEMENTS TO PREVENT CRIME IN PUBLIC PARKS.

Section 6 of the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1965 (78 Stat. 897; 16 U.S.C. 4601-8) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(h) CAPITAL IMPROVEMENT AND OTHER PROJECTS TO REDUCE CRIME.—In addition to assistance for planning projects, and in addition to the projects identified in subsection (e), and from amounts appropriated, the Secretary shall provide financial assistance to the States, not to exceed $15,000,000 in total, for the following types of projects or combinations thereof:

"(1) For the purpose of making capital improvements and other measures to increase safety in urban parks and recreation areas, including funds to—

"(A) increase lighting within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas;

"(B) provide emergency phone lines to contact law enforcement or security personnel in areas within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas;

"(C) increase security personnel within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas; and

"(D) any other project intended to increase the security and safety of public parks and recreation areas.

"(2) In addition to the requirements for project approval imposed by this section, eligibility for assistance under this subsection is dependent upon a showing of need. In providing funds under this subsection, the Secretary shall give priority to those projects proposed for urban parks and recreation areas with the highest rates of crime and, in particular, to urban parks and recreation areas with the highest rates of sexual assault.

"(3) Notwithstanding the terms of subsection (c), the Secretary is authorized to provide 70 percent improvement grants for projects undertaken by any State for the purposes outlined in this subsection. The remaining share of the cost shall be borne by the State."

Subtitle D—National Commission on Violent Crime Against Women

SEC. 141. ESTABLISHMENT.

There is established a commission to be known as the National Commission on Violent Crime Against Women (hereinafter referred to as "the Commission").

SEC. 142. DUTIES OF COMMISSION.

(a) GENERAL PURPOSE OF THE COMMISSION.—The Commission shall carry out activities for the purposes of promoting a national policy on violent crime against women, and for making recommendations for how to reduce violent crime against women.

(b) FUNCTIONS.—The Commission shall perform the following functions—

(1) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, current law enforcement efforts at the Federal and State levels to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women;

(2) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the responsiveness of State prosecutors and State courts to violent crimes against women;

(3) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the adequacy of current education, prevention, and protection services for women victims of violent crime;

(4) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the role of the Federal Government in reducing violent crimes against women;

(5) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, national public awareness and the public dissemination of information essential to the prevention of violent crimes against women;

(6) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, data collection and government statistics on the incidence and prevalence of violent crimes against women;

(7) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the adequacy of State and Federal laws on sexual assault and the need for a more uniform statutory response to sex offenses, including sexual assaults and other sex offenses committed by offenders who are known or related by blood or marriage to the victim;

(8) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the adequacy of State and Federal laws on domestic violence and the need for a more uniform statutory response to domestic violence; and

(9) evaluate and make recommendations regarding the feasibility of maintaining the confidentiality of addresses of domestic violence victims in voting, welfare, and public records.

SEC. 143. MEMBERSHIP.

(a) NUMBER AND APPOINTMENT.—

(1) APPOINTMENT.—The Commission shall be composed of 15 members as follows:

(A) Five members shall be appointed by the President—

(i) three of whom shall be—

(I) the Attorney General;

(II) the Secretary of Health and Human Services; and

(III) the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation,

who shall be nonvoting members, except that in the case of a tie vote by the Commission, the Attorney General shall be a voting member;

(ii) two of whom shall be selected from the general public on the basis of such individuals being specially qualified to serve on the Commission by reason of their education, training, or experience; and

(iii) at least one of whom shall be selected for their experience in providing services to women victims of sexual assault or domestic violence.

(B) Five members shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives on the joint recommendation of the Majority and Minority Leaders of the House of Representatives.

(C) Five members shall be appointed by the President pro tempore of the Senate on the joint recommendation of the Majority and Minority Leaders of the Senate.

(2) CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE RECOMMENDATIONS.—In making appointments under subparagraphs (B) and (C) of paragraph (1), the Majority and Minority Leaders of the House of Representatives and the Senate shall duly consider the recommendations of the Chairmen and Ranking Minority Members of committees with jurisdiction over laws contained in title 18 of the United States Code.

(3) REQUIREMENTS OF APPOINTMENTS.—The Majority and Minority Leaders of the Senate and the House of Representatives shall—

(A) select individuals who are specially qualified to serve on the Commission by reason of their experience in State or national efforts to fight violence against women and demonstrate experience in State or national advocacy or service organizations specializing in sexual assault and domestic violence; and

(B) engage in consultations for the purpose of ensuring that the expertise of the ten members appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the President pro tempore of the Senate shall provide as much of a balance as possible and, to the greatest extent possible, cover the fields of law enforcement, prosecution, judicial administration, legal expertise, public health, social work, victim compensation boards, and victim advocacy.

(4) TERM OF MEMBERS.—Members of the Commission (other than members appointed under paragraph (1)(A)(d)) shall serve for the life of the Commission.

(5) VACANCY.—A vacancy on the Commission shall be filled in the manner in which the original appointment was made.

(b) CHAIRMAN.—Not later than 15 days after the members of the Commission are appointed, such members shall select a Chairman from among the members of the Commission.

(c) QUORUM.—Seven members of the Commission shall constitute a quorum, but a lesser number may be authorized by the Commission to conduct hearings.

(d) MEETINGS.—The Commission shall hold its first meeting on a date specified by the Chairman, but such date shall not be later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act. After the initial meeting, the Commission shall meet at the call of the Chairman or a majority of its members, but shall meet at least six times.

(e) PAY.—Members of the Commission who are officers or employees or elected officials of a government entity shall receive no additional compensation by reason of their service on the Commission.

(f) PER DIEM.—Except as provided in subsection (e), members of the Commission shall be allowed travel and other expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, at rates authorized for employees of agencies under sections 5702 and 5703 of title 5, United States Code.

(g) DEADLINE FOR APPOINTMENT.—Not later than 45 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the members of the Commission shall be appointed.

SEC. 144. REPORTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 1 year after the date on which the Commission is fully constituted under section 143, the Commission shall prepare and submit a final report to the President and to congressional committees that have jurisdiction over legislation addressing violent crimes against women, including the crimes of domestic and sexual assault.

(b) CONTENTS.—The final report submitted under paragraph (1) shall contain a detailed statement of the activities of the Commission and of the findings and conclusions of the Commission, including such recommendations for legislation and administrative action as the Commission considers appropriate.

SEC. 145. EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR AND STAFF.

(a) EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR.—

(1) APPOINTMENT.—The Commission shall have an Executive Director who shall be appointed by the Chairman, with the approval of the Commission, not later than 30 days after the Chairman is selected.

(2) COMPENSATION.—The Executive Director shall be compensated at a rate not to exceed the maximum rate of the basic pay payable under GS-18 of the General Schedule as contained in title 5, United States Code.

(b) STAFF.—With the approval of the Commission, the Executive Director may appoint and fix the compensation of such additional personnel as the Executive Director considers necessary to carry out the duties of the Commission.

(c) APPLICABILITY OF CIVIL SERVICE LAWS.—The Executive Director and the additional personnel of the Commission appointed under subsection (b) may be appointed without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service, and may be paid without regard to the provisions of chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of such title relating to classification and General Schedule pay rates.

(d) CONSULTANTS.—Subject to such rules as may be prescribed by the Commission, the Executive Director may procure temporary or intermittent services under section 3109(b) of title 5, United States Code, at rates for individuals not to exceed $200 per day.

SEC. 146. POWERS OF COMMISSION.

(a) HEARINGS.—For the purpose of carrying out this subtitle, the Commission may conduct such hearings, sit and act at such times and places, take such testimony, and receive such evidence, as the Commission considers appropriate. The Commission may administer oaths before the Commission.

(b) DELEGATION.—Any member or employee of the Commission may, if authorized by the Commission, take any action that the Commission is authorized to take under this subtitle.

(c) ACCESS TO INFORMATION.—The Commission may request directly from any executive department or agency such information as may be necessary to enable the Commission to carry out this subtitle, on the request of the Chairman of the Commission.

(d) MAILS.—The Commission may use the United States mails in the same manner and under the same conditions as other departments and agencies of the United States.

SEC. 147. AUTHORIZATIONS OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There is authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1992, $500,000 to carry out the purposes of this subtitle.

SEC. 148. TERMINATION.

The Commission shall cease to exist 30 days after the date on which its final report is submitted under section 144. The President may extend the life of the Commission for a period of not to exceed one year.

Subtitle E—New Evidentiary Rules

SEC. 151. SEXUAL HISTORY IN ALL CRIMINAL CASES.

The Federal Rules of Evidence are amended by inserting after rule 412 the following:

“Rule 412A. Evidence of victim's past behavior in other criminal cases

“(a) REPUTATION AND OPINION EVIDENCE EXCLUDED.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in a criminal case, other than a sex offense case governed by rule 412, reputation or opinion evidence of the past sexual behavior of an alleged victim is not admissible.

“(b) ADMISSIBILITY.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in a criminal case, other than a sex offense case governed by rule 412, evidence of an alleged victim's past sexual behavior (other than reputation and opinion evidence) may be admissible if—

“(1) the evidence is admitted in accordance with the procedures specified in subdivision (c); and

“(2) the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice.

“(c) PROCEDURES.—(1) If the defendant intends to offer evidence of specific instances of the alleged victim's past sexual behavior, the defendant shall make a written motion to offer such evidence not later than 15 days before the date on which the trial in which such evidence is to be offered is scheduled to begin, except that the court may allow the motion to be made at a later date, including during trial, if the court determines either that the evidence is newly discovered and could not have been obtained earlier through the exercise of due diligence or that the issue to which such evidence relates has newly arisen in the case. Any motion made under this paragraph shall be served on all other parties and on the alleged victim.

“(2) The motion described in paragraph (1) shall be accompanied by a written offer of proof. If necessary, the court shall order a hearing in chambers to determine if such evidence is admissible. At such hearing, the parties may call witnesses, including the alleged victim and offer relevant evidence. Notwithstanding subdivision (b) of rule 104, if the relevancy of the evidence which the defendant seeks to offer in the trial depends upon the fulfillment of a condition of fact, the court, at the hearing in chambers or at a subsequent hearing in chambers scheduled for such purpose, shall accept evidence on the issue of whether such condition of fact is fulfilled and shall determine such issue.

“(3) If the court determines on the basis of the hearing described in paragraph (2), that the evidence the defendant seeks to offer is relevant, not excluded by any other evidentiary rule, and that the probative value of such evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice, such evidence shall be admissible in the trial to the extent an order made by the court specifies the evidence which may be offered and areas with respect to which the alleged victim may be examined or cross-examined. In its order, the court should consider (A) the chain of reasoning leading to its finding of relevance, and (B) why the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice given the potential of the evidence to humiliate and embarrass the alleged victim and to result in unfair or biased jury inferences.”

SEC. 152. SEXUAL HISTORY IN CIVIL CASES.

The Federal Rules of Evidence, as amended by section 151 of this Act, are amended by adding after rule 412A the following:

“Rule 412B. Evidence of past sexual behavior in civil cases

“(a) REPUTATION AND OPINION EVIDENCE EXCLUDED.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in a civil case in which a defendant is accused of actionable sexual misconduct, as defined in subdivision (d), reputation or opinion evidence of the plaintiff's past sexual behavior is not admissible.

“(b) ADMISSIBLE EVIDENCE.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in a civil case in which a defendant is accused of actionable sexual misconduct, as defined in subdivision (d), evidence of a plaintiff's past sexual behavior other than reputation or opinion evidence may be admissible if—

“(1) admitted in accordance with the procedures specified in subdivision (c); and

“(2) the probative value of such evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice.

“(c) PROCEDURES.—(1) If the defendant intends to offer evidence of specific instances of the plaintiff's past sexual behavior, the defendant shall make a written motion to offer such evidence not later than 15 days before the date on which the trial in which such evidence is to be offered is scheduled to begin, except that the court may allow the motion to be made at a later date, including during trial, if the court determines either that the evidence is newly discovered and could not have been obtained earlier through the exercise of due diligence or that the issue to which such evidence relates has newly arisen in the case. Any motion made under this paragraph shall be served on all other parties and on the plaintiff.

"(2) The motion described in paragraph (1) shall be accompanied by a written offer of proof. If necessary, the court shall order a hearing in chambers to determine if such evidence is admissible. At such hearing, the parties may call witnesses, including the plaintiff and offer relevant evidence. Notwithstanding subdivision (b) of rule 104, if the relevancy of the evidence which the defendant seeks to offer in the trial depends upon the fulfillment of a condition of fact, the court, at the hearing in chambers or at a subsequent hearing in chambers scheduled for such purpose, shall accept evidence on the issue of whether such condition of fact is fulfilled and shall determine such issue.

"(3) If the court determines on the basis of the hearing described in paragraph (2), that the evidence the defendant seeks to offer is relevant, not excluded by any other evidentiary rule, and that the probative value of such evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice, such evidence shall be admissible in the trial to the extent an order made by the court specifies evidence which may be offered and areas with respect to which the plaintiff may be examined or cross-examined. In its order, the court should consider (A) the chain of reasoning leading to its finding of relevance, and (B) why the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice given the potential of the evidence to humiliate and embarrass the alleged victim and to result in unfair or biased jury inferences.

"(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this rule, a case involving a claim of actionable sexual misconduct, includes, but is not limited to, sex harassment or discrimination claims brought pursuant to title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000(e)) and gender bias claims brought pursuant to title III of the Violence Against Women Act of 1991."

SEC. 153. AMENDMENTS TO RAPE SHIELD LAW.

Rule 412 of the Federal Rules of Evidence is amended—

(1) by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(e) INTERLOCUTORY APPEAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any evidentiary rulings made pursuant to this rule are subject to interlocutory appeal by the government or by the alleged victim.

"(f) RULE OF RELEVANCE AND PRIVILEGE.—If the prosecution seeks to offer evidence of prior sexual history, the provisions of this rule may be waived by the alleged victim."; and

(2) by adding at the end of subdivision (c)(3) the following: "In its order, the court should consider (A) the chain of reasoning leading to its finding of relevance; and (B) why the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice given the potential of the evidence to humiliate and embarrass the alleged victim and to result in unfair or biased jury inferences."

SEC. 154. EVIDENCE OF CLOTHING.

The Federal Rules of Evidence are amended by adding after rule 412 the following:

"Rule 413. Evidence of victim's clothing as inciting violence

"Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in a criminal case in which a person is accused of an offense under chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, evidence of an alleged victim's clothing is not admissible to show that the alleged victim incited or invited the offense charged."

Subtitle F—Assistance to Victims of Sexual Assault

SEC. 161. EDUCATION AND PREVENTION GRANTS TO REDUCE SEXUAL ASSAULTS AGAINST WOMEN.

Part A of title XIX of the Public Health and Health Services Act (42 U.S.C. 300w et seq.) is amended as follows:

(1) by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"§ 1910A. Use of allotments for rape prevention education

"(a) Notwithstanding the terms of section 1904(a)(1) of this title, amounts transferred by the State for use under this part may be used for rape prevention and education programs conducted by rape crisis centers or similar nongovernmental nonprofit entities, which programs may include—

"(1) educational seminars;

"(2) the operation of hotlines;

"(3) training programs for professionals;

"(4) the preparation of informational materials; and

"(5) other efforts to increase awareness of the facts about, or to help prevent, sexual assault.

"(b) States providing grant monies must assure that at least 15 percent of the monies are devoted to education programs targeted for middle school, junior high school, and high school students.

"(c) There are authorized to be appropriated under this section for each fiscal year 1992, 1993, and 1994, $65,000,000 to carry out the purposes of this section.

"(d) Funds authorized under this section may only be used for providing rape prevention and education programs.

"(e) For purposes of this section, the term 'rape prevention and education' includes education and prevention efforts directed at offenses committed by offenders who are not known to the victim as well as offenders who are known to the victim.

"(f) States shall be allotted funds under this section pursuant to the terms of sections 1902 and 1903, and subject to the conditions provided in this section and sections 1904 through 1909."

(2) striking section 1901(b); and

(3) striking section 1904(a)(1)(G).

SEC. 162. RAPE EXAM PAYMENTS.

No State or other grantee is entitled to funds under title I of the Violence Against Women Act of 1990 unless the State or other grantee incurs the full cost of forensic medical exams for victims of sexual assault. A State or other grantee does not incur the full medical cost of forensic medical exams if it chooses to reimburse the victim after the fact unless the reimbursement program waives any minimum loss or deductible requirement, provides victim reimbursement within a reasonable time (90 days), permits applications for reimbursement within one year from the date of the exam, and provides information to all subjects of forensic medical exams about how to obtain reimbursement.

TITLE II—SAFE HOMES FOR WOMEN

SEC. 201. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Safe Homes for Women Act of 1990".

Subtitle A—Interstate Enforcement

SEC. 211. INTERSTATE ENFORCEMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part 1 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after chapter 110 the following:

"Chapter 110A—Violence Against Spouses

"Sec. 2261. Traveling to commit spousal abuse.

"Sec. 2262. Interstate violation of protection orders.

"Sec. 2263. Restitution.

"Sec. 2264. Full faith and credit given to protection orders.

"Sec. 2265. Definitions for chapter.

"§ 2261. Traveling to commit spousal abuse

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Any person who travels across State lines—

"(1) and who, in the course of or as a result of such travel, commits an act that injures his or her spouse or intimate partner; or shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than 10 years but not less than 3 months, or both, in addition to any fine or term of imprisonment provided under State law.

"(b) CAUSING THE CROSSING OF STATE LINES.—Any person who causes a spouse or intimate partner to cross State lines by force, coercion, duress or fraud and, in the course or as a result of that conduct, commits an act that injures his or her spouse or intimate partner, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than 10 years but not less than 3 months, or both, in addition to any fine or term of imprisonment provided under State law.

"(c) NO STATE LAW.—If no fine or term of imprisonment is provided for under the law of the State where the injury occurs, a person violating this section shall be punished as follows:

"(1) If permanent disfigurement or life-threatening bodily injury results, by imprisonment for not more than 20 years; where serious bodily injury results, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both; where bodily injury results, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

"(2) If the offense is committed with intent to commit another felony, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both.

"(3) If the offense is committed with a dangerous weapon, with intent to do bodily harm, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

"(4) If the offense constitutes sexual abuse, as that conduct is described under chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code (without regard to whether the offense was committed in the maritime, territorial or prison jurisdiction of the United States) by fine or term of imprisonment as provided for the applicable conduct under chapter 109A.

"(d) CRIMINAL INTENT.—The criminal intent of the offender required to establish an offense under subsection (b) is the general intent to do the acts that result in injury to a spouse or intimate partner and not the specific intent to violate the law of a State.

"(e) NO PRIOR STATE CRIMINAL ACTION NECESSARY.—Nothing in this section requires a prior criminal prosecution or conviction under State law to justify Federal prosecution.

"§ 2262. Interstate violation of protection orders

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Any person against whom a valid protection order has been entered who travels across State lines—

"(1) and who, in the course of or as a result of such travel, commits an act that injures

his or her spouse or intimate partner in violation of a valid protection order issued by a State; or

"(2) for the purpose of harassing, injuring, finding, contacting, or locating a spouse or intimate partner and who, in furtherance of that purpose, commits an act that injures his or her spouse or intimate partner in violation of a valid protection order issued by a State, shall be punished as provided in subsection (c) of this section.

"(b) CAUSING THE CROSSING OF STATE LINES.—Any person who causes a spouse or intimate partner to cross State lines by force, coercion, duress, or fraud, and, in the course or as a result of that conduct, commits an act that injures his or her spouse or intimate partner in violation of a valid protection order issued by a State shall be punished as provided in subsection (c) of this section.

"(c) PENALTIES.—

"(1) If permanent disfigurement or life-threatening bodily injury results, by imprisonment for not more than 20 years; where serious bodily injury results, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both; where bodily injury results, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

"(2) If the offense is committed with intent to commit another felony, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both.

"(3) If the offense is committed with a dangerous weapon, with intent to do bodily harm, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

"(4) If the offender has previously violated any prior protection order issued against that person for the protection of the same victim, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years and not less than six months, or both.

"(5) If the offense constitutes sexual abuse, as that conduct is described under chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code (without regard to whether the conduct was committed in the special maritime, territorial or prison jurisdiction of the United States) by fine or term of imprisonment as provided for the applicable offense under chapter 109A.

"(d) CRIMINAL INTENT.—The criminal intent required to establish the offense provided in subsection (a) is the general intent to do the acts which result in injury to a spouse or intimate partner and not the specific intent to violate a protection order or State law.

(e) NO PRIOR STATE CRIMINAL ACTION NECESSARY.—Nothing in this section requires a prior criminal prosecution or conviction under State law to justify Federal prosecution.

"§ 2263. Interim protections

"In furtherance of the purposes of this chapter, and to protect against abuse of a spouse or intimate partner, any judge or magistrate before whom a criminal case under this chapter is brought, shall have the power to issue temporary orders of protection for the protection of an abused spouse or intimate partner pending final adjudication of the case, upon a showing of a likelihood of danger to the abused spouse or intimate partner.

"§ 2264. Restitution

"(a) IN GENERAL.—In addition to any fine or term of imprisonment provided under this chapter, and notwithstanding the terms of section 3663 of this title, the court shall order restitution to the victim of an offense under this chapter.

"(b) SCOPE AND NATURE OF ORDER.—(1) The order of restitution under this section shall direct that—

"(A) the defendant pay to the victim the full amount of the victim's losses as determined by the court, pursuant to subsection (3); and

"(B) the United States Attorney enforce the restitution order by all available and reasonable means.

"(2) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'full amount of the victim's losses' includes any costs incurred by the victim for—

"(A) medical services relating to physical, psychiatric, or psychological care;

"(B) physical and occupational therapy or rehabilitation; and

"(C) lost income;

"(D) attorneys' fees, plus any costs incurred in obtaining a civil protection order; and

"(E) any other losses suffered by the victim as a proximate result of the offense.

"(3) Restitution orders under this section are mandatory. A court may not decline to issue an order under this section because of—

"(A) the economic circumstances of the defendant; or

"(B) the fact that victim has, or is entitled to, receive compensation for his or her injuries from the proceeds of insurance.

"(4)(A) Notwithstanding the terms of paragraph (3), the court may take into account the economic circumstances of the defendant in determining the manner in which and the schedule according to which the restitution is to be paid, including—

"(i) the financial resources and other assets of the defendant;

"(ii) projected earnings, earning capacity, and other income of the defendant; and

"(iii) any financial obligations of the offender, including obligations to dependents.

"(B) An order under this section may direct the defendant to make a single lump-sum payment, or partial payments at specified intervals. The order shall provide that the defendant's restitutionary obligation takes priority over any criminal fine ordered.

"(C) In the event that the victim has recovered for any amount of loss through the proceeds of insurance or any other source, the order of restitution shall provide that restitution be paid to the person who provided the compensation, but that restitution shall be paid to the victim before any restitution is paid to any other provider of compensation.

"(5) Any amount paid to a victim under this section shall be set off against any amount later recovered as compensatory damages by the victim from the defendant in—

"(A) any Federal civil proceeding; and

"(B) any State civil proceeding, to the extent provided by the law of the State.

"(c) PROOF OF CLAIM.—(1) Within 60 days after conviction and, in any event, no later than 10 days prior to sentencing, the United States Attorney (or his delegate), after consulting with the victim, shall prepare and file an affidavit with the court listing the amounts subject to restitution under this section. The affidavit shall be signed by the United States Attorney (or his delegate) and the victim. Should the victim object to any of the information included in the affidavit, the United States Attorney (or his delegate) shall advise the victim that the victim may file a separate affidavit.

"(2) If no objection is raised by the defendant, the amounts attested to in the affidavit filed pursuant to subsection (1) shall be entered in the court's restitution order. If objection is raised, the court may require the victim or the United States Attorney (or his delegate) to submit further affidavits or other supporting documents, demonstrating the victim's losses.

"(3) If the court concludes, after reviewing the supporting documentation and considering the defendant's objections, that there is a substantial reason for doubting the authenticity or veracity of the records submitted, the court may require additional documentation or hear testimony on those questions. Any records filed, or testimony heard, pursuant to this section, shall be in camera in the judge's chambers. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, this section does not entitle the defendant to discovery of the contents of, or related to, any supporting documentation, including medical, psychological, or psychiatric records.

"(4) In the event that the victim's losses are not ascertainable 10 days prior to sentencing as provided in subsection (c)(1), the United States Attorney (or his delegate) shall so inform the court, and the court shall set a date for the final determination of the victim's losses, not to exceed 90 days after sentencing. If the victim subsequently discovers further losses, the victim shall have 60 days after discovery of those losses in which to petition the court for an amended restitution order. Such order may be granted only upon a showing of good cause for the failure to include such losses in the initial claim for restitutionary relief.

"(d) RESTITUTION AND CRIMINAL PENALTIES.—An award of restitution to the victim of an offense under this chapter shall not be a substitute for imposition of punishment under sections 2261 and 2262.

"(e) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section, the term 'victim' includes any person who has suffered direct physical, emotional, or pecuniary harm as a result of a commission of a crime under this chapter, including, in the case of a victim who is under 18 years of age, incompetent, incapacitated, or deceased, the legal guardian of the victim or representative of the victim's estate, another family member, or any other person appointed as suitable by the court: Provided, That in no event shall the defendant be named as such representative or guardian.

"§ 2265. Full faith and credit given to protection orders

"(a) FULL FAITH AND CREDIT.—Any protection order issued consistent with the terms of subsection (b) by the court of one State (the issuing State) shall be accorded full faith and credit by the court of another State (the enforcing State) and enforced as if it were the order of the enforcing State.

"(b) PROTECTION ORDER.—A protection order issued by a State court is consistent with the provisions of this section if—

"(1) such court has jurisdiction over the parties and matter under the law of such State; and

"(2) reasonable notice and opportunity to be heard is given to the person against whom the order is sought sufficient to protect that person's right to due process. In the case of ex parte orders, notice and opportunity to be heard must be provided within the time required by State law, and in any event within a reasonable time after the order is issued, sufficient to protect the respondent's due process rights.

"(c) CROSS OR COUNTER PETITION.—A protection order issued by a State court against one who has petitioned, filed a complaint, or otherwise filed a written pleading for protection against abuse by a spouse or intimate partner is not entitled to full faith and credit if—

“(1) no cross or counter petition, complaint, or other written pleading was filed seeking such a protection order; or

“(2) if a cross or counter petition has been filed, if the court did not make specific findings that each party was entitled to such an order.

“§2266. Definitions for chapter

“As used in this chapter—

“(1) the term ‘spouse or intimate partner’ includes—

“(A) a present or former spouse, a person who shares a child in common with the abuser, and a person who cohabits or has cohabited with the abuser as a spouse; and

“(B) any other person similarly situated to a spouse, other than a child, who is protected by the domestic or family violence laws of the State in which the injury occurred or where the victim resides;

“(2) the term ‘protection order’ includes any injunction or other order issued for the purpose of preventing violent or threatening acts by one spouse against his or her spouse or intimate partner, including temporary and final orders issued by civil and criminal courts (other than support or child custody orders) whether obtained by filing an independent action or as a pendent lite order in another proceeding so long as any civil order was issued in response to a complaint, petition or motion of an abused spouse or intimate partner;

“(3) the term ‘act that injures’ includes any act, except those done in self-defense, that results in physical injury or sexual abuse;

“(4) the term ‘State’ includes a State of the United States, the District of Columbia, and any Indian tribe, commonwealth, territory, or possession of the United States; and

“(5) the term ‘travel across State lines’ includes any such travel except travel across State lines by an Indian tribal member when that member remained at all times on tribal lands.”

(b) TABLE OF CHAPTERS.—The table of chapters for part 1 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item for chapter 110 the following:

“110A. Violence against spouses ..... 2261.”

Subtitle B—Arrest in Spousal Abuse Cases

SEC. 221. ENCOURAGING ARREST POLICIES.

The Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10400) is amended by adding after section 311 the following:

“SEC. 312. ENCOURAGING ARREST POLICIES.

“(a) PURPOSE.—To encourage States, Indian tribes and localities to treat spousal violence as a serious violation of criminal law, the Secretary is authorized to make grants to eligible States, Indian tribes, municipalities, or local government entities for the following purposes:

“(1) to implement pro-arrest programs and policies in police departments and to improve tracking of cases involving spousal abuse;

“(2) to centralize and coordinate police enforcement, prosecution, or judicial responsibility for, spousal abuse cases in one group or unit of police officers, prosecutors, or judges;

“(3) to educate judges in criminal and other courts about spousal abuse and to improve judicial handling of such cases.

“(b) ELIGIBILITY.—(1) Eligible grantees are those States, Indian tribes, municipalities or other local government entities that—

“(A) demonstrate, through arrest and conviction statistics, that their laws or policies have been effective in significantly increasing the number of arrests made of spouse abusers; and

“(B) certify that their laws or official policies—

“(i) mandate arrest of spouse abusers based on probable cause that violence has been committed or mandate arrest of spouses violating the terms of a valid and outstanding protection order; or

“(ii) permit warrantless misdemeanor arrests of spouse abusers and encourage the use of that authority;

“(C) demonstrate that their laws, policies, practices and training programs discourage ‘dual’ arrests of abused and abuser and the increase in arrest rates demonstrated pursuant to paragraph (1)(A) is not the result of increased dual arrests; and

“(D) certify that their laws, policies, and practices prohibit issuance of mutual protection orders in cases where only one spouse has sought a protective order, and require findings of mutual aggression to issue mutual protective orders in cases where both parties file a claim.

“(2) For purposes of this section, the term ‘protection order’ includes any injunction issued for the purpose of preventing violent or threatening acts of spouse abuse, including temporary and final orders issued by civil and criminal courts (other than support or child custody orders) whether obtained by filing an independent action or as a pendent lite order in another proceeding.

“(3) For purposes of this section, the term ‘spousal or spouse abuse’ includes felony or misdemeanor offenses committed by a current or former spouse of the victim, a person with whom the victim shares a child in common, a person who is cohabiting with or has cohabited with the victim as a spouse, or any other person protected under the domestic or family violence laws of the jurisdiction receiving grant monies.

“(4) The eligibility requirements provided in this section shall take effect one year after the date of enactment of this section.

“(c) DELEGATION AND AUTHORIZATION.—The Secretary shall delegate to the Attorney General of the United States the Secretary’s responsibilities for carrying out this section to the Attorney General. There are authorized to be appropriated not in excess of $25,000,000 for each fiscal year to be used for the purpose of making grants under this section.

“(d) APPLICATION.—An eligible grantee shall submit an application to the Secretary. Such application shall—

“(1) contain a certification by the chief executive officer of the State, Indian tribes, municipality, or local government entity that the conditions of subsection (b) are met;

“(2) describe the entity’s plans to further the purposes listed in subsection (a);

“(3) identify the agency or office or groups of agencies or offices responsible for carrying out the program; and

“(4) identify and include documentation showing the nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs that will be consulted in developing, and implementing, the program.

“(e) PRIORITY.—In awarding grants under this section, the Secretary shall give priority to a grantee that—

“(1) does not currently provide for centralized handling of cases involving spousal or family violence in any one of the areas listed in this subsection—police, prosecutors, and courts; and

“(2) demonstrates a commitment to strong enforcement of laws, and prosecution of cases, involving spousal or family violence.

“(f) REPORTING.—Each grantee receiving funds under this section shall submit a report to the Secretary evaluating the effectiveness of the plan described in subsection (d)(2) and containing such additional information as the Secretary may prescribe.

“(g) REGULATIONS.—No later than 45 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall publish proposed regulations implementing this section. No later than 120 days after such date, the Secretary shall publish final regulations implementing this section.”

Subtitle C—Funding for Shelters

SEC. 231. AUTHORIZATION.

Section 310 of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10409) is amended to read as follows:

“SEC. 310. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

“(a) There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out the provisions of this title, $85,000,000 for fiscal year 1992, $100,000,000, for fiscal year 1993, and $125,000,000 for fiscal year 1994.

“(b) Of the sums authorized to be appropriated under subsection (a) of this section for any fiscal year, not less than 80 percent shall be used by the Secretary for making grants under section 303.

“(c) Of the sums authorized to be appropriated under subsection (a) of this section for any fiscal year, not more than 5 percent shall be used by the Secretary for making grants under section 314.

“(d) Of the sums authorized to be appropriated under subsection (a) of this section for any fiscal year, not less than 5 percent shall be used by the Secretary for making grants under section 308A.”

Subtitle D—Family Violence Prevention and Services Act Amendments

SEC. 241. EXPANSION OF PURPOSE.

Section 302(1) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10401(1)) is amended by striking “to prevent” and inserting “to increase public awareness about and prevent” and by striking “demonstrate the effectiveness of assisting” and inserting “assist”.

SEC. 242. EXPANSION OF STATE DEMONSTRATION GRANT PROGRAM.

(a) INCREASING PUBLIC AWARENESS.—Section 303(a)(1) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10402(a)(1)) is amended by striking “to prevent” and inserting “to increase public awareness about and prevent”.

(b) EXPANSION OF PROGRAM.—Section 303(a)(2)(B)(ii) is amended by striking “alcohol and drug abuse treatment”.

SEC. 243. GRANTS FOR PUBLIC INFORMATION CAMPAIGNS.

The Family Violence Prevention and Services Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

“GRANTS FOR PUBLIC INFORMATION CAMPAIGNS

“SEC. 314. (a) The Secretary may make grants to public or private nonprofit entities to provide public information campaigns regarding domestic violence through the use of public service announcements and informative materials that are designed for print media, billboards, public transit advertising, electronic broadcast media, and other vehicles for information that shall inform the public concerning domestic violence.

“(b) No grant, contract, or cooperative agreement shall be made or entered into under this section unless an application that meets the requirements of subsection (c) has been approved by the Secretary.

“(c) An application submitted under subsection (b) shall—

"(1) provide such agreements, assurances, and information, be in such form and be submitted in such manner as the Secretary shall prescribe through notice in the Federal Register, including a description of how the proposed public information campaign will target the population at risk, including pregnant women;

"(2) include a complete description of the plan of the application for the development of a public information campaign;

"(3) identify the specific audiences that will be educated, including communities and groups with the highest prevalence of domestic violence;

"(4) identify the media to be used in the campaign and the geographic distribution of the campaign;

"(5) describe plans to test market a development plan with a relevant population group and in a relevant geographic area and give assurance that effectiveness criteria will be implemented prior to the completion of the final plan that will include an evaluation component to measure the overall effectiveness of the campaign;

"(6) describe the kind, amount, distribution, and timing of informational messages and such other information as the Secretary may require, with assurances that media organizations and other groups with which such messages are placed will not lower the current frequency of public service announcements; and

"(7) contain such other information as the Secretary may require.

"(d) A grant, contract, or agreement made or entered into under this section shall be used for the development of a public information campaign that may include public service announcements, paid educational messages for print media, public transit advertising, electronic broadcast media, and any other mode of conveying information that the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

"(e) The criteria for awarding grants shall ensure that an applicant—

"(1) will conduct activities that educate communities and groups at greatest risk;

"(2) has a record of high quality campaigns of a comparable type; and

"(3) has a record of high quality campaigns that educate the population groups identified as most at risk."

SEC. 244. FUND DISTRIBUTION TO STATES.

Section 304(a)(1) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act is amended by striking "$50,000" and inserting "$500,000".

SEC. 245. INDIAN TRIBES.

Section 303(b)(1) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10402(b)(1)) is amended by striking "is authorized" and inserting "from sums appropriated shall make no less than 10 percent available for".

SEC. 246. FUNDING LIMITATIONS.

Section 303(c) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10402(c)) is amended by—

(1) striking ", and" and all that follows through "fiscal years"; and

(2) striking "$50,000" and inserting "$75,000".

SEC. 247. GRANTS TO ENTITIES OTHER THAN STATES; LOCAL SHARE.

The first sentence of section 303(f) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10402(f)) is amended to read as follows: "No grant may be made under this section to an entity other than a State or Indian tribe unless the entity provides 35 percent of the funding of the program or project funded by the grant."

SEC. 248. SHELTER AND RELATED ASSISTANCE.

(a) CHANGE OF PERCENTAGES.—Section 303(g) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10402(g)) is amended by striking "not less than 60 percent" and inserting "not less than 75 percent".

(b) DEFINITION OF RELATED ASSISTANCE.—Section 309(5) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act is amended to read as follows:

"(5) The term 'related assistance' includes any, but does not require all, of the following—

"(A) food, shelter, medical services, and counseling with respect to family violence, including counseling by peers individually or in groups;

"(B) transportation, legal assistance, referrals for appropriate health-care services (including alcohol and drug abuse treatment), and technical assistance with respect to obtaining financial assistance under Federal and State programs;

"(C) comprehensive counseling and self-help services to abusers, preventive health (including nutrition, exercise, and prevention of substance abuse), educational services and employment training; and

"(D) child care services for children who are victims of family violence or the dependents of such victims."

SEC. 249. LAW ENFORCEMENT TRAINING AND TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE GRANTS.

Section 311 of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10410(b)) is repealed.

SEC. 250. REPORT ON RECORDKEEPING.

Not later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Government Accounting Office shall complete a study of, and shall submit to Congress a report and recommendations on, problems of record-keeping of criminal complaints involving domestic violence. The study and report shall examine efforts to date of the FBI and Justice Department to collect statistics on domestic violence and the feasibility of, including a suggested timetable for, requiring that the relationship between an offender and victim be reported in Federal and State records of crimes of assault, aggravated assault, rape, and other violent crimes.

SEC. 251. MODEL STATE LEADERSHIP INCENTIVE GRANTS FOR DOMESTIC VIOLENCE INTERVENTION.

The Family Violence Prevention Services Act, as amended by section 103 of this Act, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"MODEL STATE LEADERSHIP GRANTS FOR DOMESTIC VIOLENCE INTERVENTION

"SEC. 315. (a) The Secretary, in cooperation with the Attorney General, shall award grants to not less than 10 States to assist in becoming model demonstration States and in meeting the costs of improving State leadership concerning activities that will—

"(1) increase the number of prosecutions for domestic violence crimes;

"(2) encourage the reporting of incidences of domestic violence;

"(3) facilitate 'arrests and aggressive' prosecution policies; and

"(4) provides court advocacy for victims of domestic violence.

"(b) To be designated as a model State under subsection (a), a State shall have in effect—

"(1) a law that requires mandatory arrest of a person that police have probable cause to believe has committed an act of domestic violence or probable cause to believe has violated an outstanding civil protection order;

"(2) a law or policy that discourages * * * (B) implement model projects that include either—

"(i) a 'no-drop' prosecution policy; or

"(ii) a vertical prosecution policy; and

"(C) limit diversion to extraordinary cases, and then only after an admission before a judge of 'dual' arrests;

"(3) statewide prosecution policies that—

"(A) authorize and encourage prosecutors to pursue cases where a criminal case can be proved, including proceeding without the active involvement of the victim if necessary; and

"(B) implement model projects that include either—

"(i) a 'no-drop' prosecution policy; or

"(ii) a vertical prosecution policy; and

"(C) limit diversion to extraordinary cases, and then only after an admission before a judicial officer has been entered;

"(4) statewide laws, policies, or guidelines for judges that—

"(A) prohibit the issuance of mutual protective orders in cases where only one spouse has sought a protective order and require findings of mutual aggression to issue mutual protective orders in cases where both parties file a claim;

"(B) require that any history of child abuse be considered detrimental to the child and discourage custody or joint custody orders by spouse abusers; and

"(C) encourage the understanding of domestic violence as a serious criminal offense and not a trivial dispute;

"(5) develop and disseminate methods to improve the criminal justice system's response to domestic violence to make existing remedies as easily available as possible to victims of domestic violence, including reducing delay, eliminating court fees, and providing easily understandable court forms.

"(c)(1) In addition to the funds authorized to be appropriated under section 310, there are authorized to be appropriated to make grants under this section $25,000,000 for fiscal year 1992 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1993 and 1994.

"(2) Funds shall be distributed under this section so that no State shall receive more than $2,500,000 in each fiscal year under this section.

"(3) The Secretary shall delegate to the Attorney General the Secretary's responsibilities for carrying out this section and shall transfer to the Attorney General the funds appropriated under this section for the purpose of making grants under this section."

SEC. 252. FUNDING FOR TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE CENTERS.

The Family Violence Prevention and Services Act is amended by inserting after section 308 the following:

"SEC. 308A. TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE CENTERS.

"(a) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this section is to provide training and technical assistance to State, Indian tribal, and local domestic violence programs and to other professionals who provide services to victims of domestic violence. From the sums authorized under this title, the Secretary shall provide grants to or contract with, private nonprofit organizations, for the establishment and maintenance of one national and six special-issue resource centers serving defined geographic areas. One national resource center shall offer resource, policy, and/or training assistance to Federal, State, Indian tribal, and local government agencies on issues pertaining to domestic violence and serve a coordinating and resource-sharing function among domestic violence service providers, and maintain a central resource library. The other national resource centers shall provide information, training and technical assistance to State, tribal and local domestic violence service providers. In addition, each national center shall specialize in one of the following areas of domestic violence service, prevention or law:

"(1) criminal justice response to domestic violence, including court-mandated abuser treatment;

"(2) child custody issues in domestic violence cases;

"(3) use of the self-defense plea by domestic violence victims;

"(4) health care response and access to health care resources for domestic violence victims;

"(5) victims' access to, and quality of, effective legal assistance, including civil litigation; and

"(6) the response of child protective service agencies to battered mothers of abused children.

"(b) ELIGIBILITY.—Eligible grantees are private non-profit organizations that—

"(1) focus primarily on domestic violence;

"(2) provide documentation to the Secretary demonstrating a minimum of three years experience with issues of domestic violence, particularly in the specific area for which it is applying;

"(3) include on its advisory boards representatives from domestic violence programs who are geographically and culturally diverse; and

"(4) demonstrate strong support from domestic violence advocates for their designation as the special-issue resource center.

"(c) REPORTING.—Each grantee receiving funds under this section shall submit a report to the Secretary evaluating the effectiveness of the plan described and containing such additional information as the Secretary may prescribe.

"(d) REGULATIONS.—No later than 45 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall publish proposed regulations implementing this section."

Subtitle E—Youth Education and Domestic Violence

SEC. 261. EDUCATING YOUTH ABOUT DOMESTIC VIOLENCE.

(a) GENERAL PURPOSE.—For purposes of this section, the Secretary shall delegate his powers to the Secretary of Education, hereinafter referred to as the "Secretary". The Secretary shall select, implement and evaluate four model programs for education of young people about domestic violence and violence among intimate partners.

(b) NATURE OF PROGRAM.—The Secretary shall select, implement and evaluate separate model programs for four different audiences: primary schools, middle schools, secondary schools, and institutions of higher education. These model programs shall be selected, implemented, and evaluated with the input of educational experts, legal and psychological experts on battering, and victim advocate organizations such as battered women's shelters, State coalitions and resource centers. The participation of each of these groups or individual consultants from such groups is essential to the selection, implementation, and evaluation of programs that meet both the needs of educational institutions and the needs of the domestic violence problem.

(c) REVIEW AND DISSEMINATION.—Not later than 24 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall transmit the design and evaluation of the model programs, along with a plan and cost estimate for nationwide distribution, to the relevant committees of Congress for review.

(d) AUTHORIZATION.—There are authorized to be appropriated under this section for fiscal year 1992, $400,000 to carry out the purposes of this section.

Subtitle F—Confidentiality for Abused Persons

SEC. 271. CONFIDENTIALITY OF ABUSED PERSONS' ADDRESSES.

No later than 90 days after the enactment of this Act, the Postmaster General shall promulgate regulations to secure the confidentiality of abused persons' addresses or otherwise prohibit the disclosure of an abused person's address consistent with the following guidelines:

(1) confidentiality shall be provided upon the presentation to an appropriate postal official of an existing and valid court order for the protection of an abused spouse;

(2) disclosure of addresses to State or Federal agencies for legitimate law enforcement or other governmental purposes shall not be prohibited; and

(3) compilations of addresses existing at the time the order is presented to an appropriate postal official shall be excluded from the scope of the proposed regulations.

TITLE III—CIVIL RIGHTS

SEC. 301. CIVIL RIGHTS.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) crimes motivated by the victim's gender constitute bias crimes in violation of the victim's right to be free from discrimination on the basis of gender;

(2) current law provides a civil rights remedy for gender crimes committed in the workplace, but not for gender crimes committed on the street or in the home; and

(3) State and Federal criminal laws do not adequately protect against the bias element of gender-motivated crimes, which separates these crimes from acts of random violence, nor do those laws adequately provide victims of gender-motivated crimes the opportunity to vindicate their interests;

(4) existing bias and discrimination in the criminal justice system often deprives victims of gender-motivated crimes of equal protection of the laws and the redress to which they are entitled;

(5) gender-motivated violence has a substantial adverse effect on interstate commerce, by deterring potential victims from traveling interstate, from engaging in employment in interstate business, and from transacting with business, and in places involved, in interstate commerce;

(6) gender-motivated violence has a substantial adverse effect on interstate commerce, by diminishing national productivity, increasing medical and other costs, and decreasing the supply of and the demand for interstate products;

(7) a Federal civil rights action as specified in this section is necessary to guarantee equal protection of the laws and to reduce the substantial adverse effects of gender-motivated violence on interstate commerce; and

(8) victims of gender-motivated violence have a right to equal protection of the laws, including a system of justice that is unaffected by bias or discrimination and that, at every relevant stage, treats such crimes as seriously as other violent crimes.

(b) RIGHTS, PRIVILEGES AND IMMUNITIES.—All persons within the United States shall have the same rights, privileges and immunities in every State as is enjoyed by all other persons to be free from crimes of violence motivated by the victim's gender, as defined in subsection (d).

(c) CAUSE OF ACTION.—Any person, including a person who acts under color of any statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage of any State, who commits a crime of violence motivated by gender and thus deprives another of the rights, privileges or immunities secured by the Constitution or laws as enumerated in subsection (b) shall be liable to the party injured, in an action for the recovery of compensatory and punitive damages, injunctive and declaratory relief, and such other relief as the court may deem appropriate.

(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

(1) the term "crime of violence motivated by gender" means any crime of violence, as defined in this section, including rape, sexual assault, sexual abuse, abusive sexual contact, or any other crime of violence committed because of gender or on the basis of gender; and

(2) the term "crime of violence" means an act or series of acts that would come within the meaning of State or Federal offenses described in section 16 of title 18, United States Code, whether or not those acts have actually resulted in criminal charges, prosecution, or conviction and whether or not those acts were committed in the special maritime, territorial, or prison jurisdiction of the United States.

(e) LIMITATION AND PROCEDURES.—

(1) LIMITATION.—Nothing in this section entitles a person to a cause of action under subsection (c) for random acts of violence unrelated to gender or for acts that cannot be demonstrated, by a preponderance of the evidence, to be "motivated by gender" as defined in subsection (d).

(2) NO PRIOR CRIMINAL ACTION.—Nothing in this section requires a prior criminal complaint, prosecution, or conviction to establish the necessary elements of a cause of action under subsection (c).

SEC. 302. CONFORMING AMENDMENT.

The Civil Rights Attorney's Fees Awards Act of 1976 (42 U.S.C. 1988) is amended—

(1) in the last sentence, by striking "or" after "Public Law 92-318,"; and

(2) by adding after "1964," the following: "or title III of the Violence Against Women Act of 1991."

TITLE IV—SAFE CAMPUSES FOR WOMEN

SEC. 401. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Safe Campuses for Women Act of 1990".

SEC. 402. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) rape prevention and education programs are essential to an educational environment free of fear for students' personal safety;

(2) sexual assault on campus, whether by fellow students or not, is widespread among the Nation's higher education institutions; experts estimate that 1 in 7 of the women now in college have been raped and over half of college rape victims know their attackers;

(3) sexual assault poses a grave threat to the physical and mental well-being of students and may significantly impair the learning process; and

(4) action by schools to educate students may make substantial inroads on the incidence of rape, including the incidence of acquaintance rape on campus.

SEC. 403. GRANTS FOR CAMPUS RAPE EDUCATION.

Title X of the Higher Education Act of 1965 is amended to add at the end thereof the following:

"PART D—GRANTS FOR CAMPUS RAPE EDUCATION."

SEC. 1071. GRANTS FOR CAMPUS RAPE EDUCATION.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) The Secretary of Education is authorized to make grants to or enter into contracts with institutions of higher education for rape education and prevention programs under this section.

"(2) The Secretary shall make financial assistance available on a competitive basis under this section. An institution of higher education or consortium of such institutions which desires to receive a grant or enter into a contract under this section shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require in accordance with regulations.

"(3) The Secretary shall make every effort to ensure the equitable participation of private and public institutions of higher education and to ensure the equitable geographic participation of such institutions. In the award of grants and contracts under this section, the Secretary shall give priority to institutions who show the greatest need for the sums requested.

"(b) GENERAL RAPE PREVENTION AND EDUCATION GRANTS.—Grants under this section shall be used to educate and provide support services to student victims of rape or sexual assault. Grants may be used for the following purposes:

"(1) to provide training for campus security and college personnel, including campus disciplinary or judicial boards, that address the issues of rape, sexual assault, and other gender-motivated crimes;

"(2) to develop, disseminate, or implement campus security and student disciplinary policies to prevent and discipline rape, sexual assault and other gender-motivated crimes;

"(3) to develop, enlarge or strengthen support services programs including medical or psychological counseling to assist victims' recovery from rape, sexual assault, or other gender-motivated crimes;

"(4) to create, disseminate, or otherwise provide assistance and information about victims' options on and off campus to bring disciplinary or other legal action; and

"(5) to implement, operate, or improve rape education and prevention programs, including programs making use of peer-to-peer education.

"(c) MODEL GRANTS.—Not less than 25 percent of the funds authorized under this section shall be available for grants for model demonstration programs to be coordinated with local rape crisis centers for the development and implementation of quality rape prevention and education curricula and for local programs to provide services to student rape victims.

"(d) ELIGIBILITY.—No institution of higher education or consortium of such institutions shall be eligible for a grant under this section unless—

"(1) its student code of conduct, or other written policy governing student behavior, explicitly prohibits not only rape but all forms of sexual assault; and

"(2) it has in effect and implements a written policy requiring the disclosure to the victim of any sexual assault the outcome of any investigation by campus police or campus disciplinary proceedings brought pursuant to the victim's complaint against the alleged perpetrator of the sexual assault: Provided, That nothing in this section shall be interpreted to authorize disclosure to any person other than the victim.

"(e) APPLICATIONS.—(1) In order to be eligible to receive a grant under this section for any fiscal year, an institution of higher education, or consortium of such institutions, shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time and in such manner as the Secretary shall prescribe.

"(2) Each such application shall—

"(A) set forth the activities and programs to be carried out with funds granted under this part;

"(B) contain an estimate of the cost for the establishment and operation of such programs;

"(C) explain how the program intends to address the issue of acquaintance rape;

"(D) provide assurances that the Federal funds made available under this section shall be used to supplement and, to the extent practical, to increase the level of funds that would, in the absence of such Federal funds, be made available by the applicant for the purpose described in this part, and in no case to supplant such funds; and

"(E) include such other information and assurances as the Secretary reasonably determines to be necessary.

"(e) GRANTEE REPORTING.—Upon completion of the grant period under this section, the grantee institution or consortium of institutions shall file a performance report with the Secretary explaining the activities carried out together with an assessment of the effectiveness of those activities in achieving the purposes of this section. The Secretary shall suspend funding for an approved application if an applicant fails to submit an annual performance report.

"(f) DEFINITIONS.—(1) Except as otherwise provided, the terms used in this part shall have the meaning provided under section 2981 of this title.

"(2) For purposes of this subchapter, the following terms have the following meanings:

"(A) The term 'rape education and prevention' includes programs that provide educational seminars, peer-to-peer counseling, operation of hotlines, self-defense courses, the preparation of informational materials, and any other effort to increase campus awareness of the facts about, or to help prevent, sexual assault.

"(B) The term 'Secretary' means the Secretary of Education.

"(g) GENERAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—(1) REGULATIONS.—No later than 45 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall publish proposed regulations implementing this section. No later than 120 days after such date, the Secretary shall publish final regulations implementing this section.

"(2) No later than 180 days after the end of each fiscal year for which grants are made under this section, the Secretary shall submit to the committees of the House of Representatives and the Senate responsible for issues relating to higher education and to crime, a report that includes—

"(A) the amount of grants made under this section;

"(B) a summary of the purposes for which those grants were provided and an evaluation of their progress; and

"(C) a copy of each grantee report filed pursuant to subsection (e) of this section.

"(3) For the purpose of carrying out this subchapter, there are authorized to be appropriated $20,000,000 for the fiscal year 1992, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1993, 1994, and 1995."

SEC. 404. REQUIRED CAMPUS REPORTING OF SEXUAL ASSAULT.

Section 204(f) of the Crime Awareness and Campus Security Act of 1990 is amended to read as follows:

"(F) Statistics concerning the occurrence on campus, during the most recent school year, and during the 2 preceding school years for which data are available, of the following criminal offenses reported to campus security authorities or local police agencies—

- "(d) murder;
- "(ii) rape or sexual assault;
- "(iii) robbery;
- "(iv) aggravated assault;
- "(v) burglary; and
- "(vi) motor vehicle theft.

TITLE V—EQUAL JUSTICE FOR WOMEN IN THE COURTS ACT OF 1990

SECTION 501. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Equal Justice for Women in the Courts Act of 1991".

Subtitle A—Education and Training for Judges and Court Personnel in State Courts

SEC. 511. GRANTS AUTHORIZED.

The State Justice Institute is authorized to award grants for the purpose of developing, testing, presenting, and disseminating model programs to be used by States in training judges and court personnel in the laws of the States on rape, sexual assault, domestic violence, and other crimes of violence motivated by the victim's gender.

SEC. 512. TRAINING PROVIDED BY GRANTS.

Training provided pursuant to grants made under this subtitle may include current information, existing studies, or current data on—

(1) the nature and incidence of rape and sexual assault by strangers and nonstrangers, marital rape, and incest;

(2) the underreporting of rape, sexual assault, and child sexual abuse;

(3) the physical, psychological, and economic impact of rape and sexual assault on the victim, the costs to society, and the implications for sentencing;

(4) the psychology of sex offenders, their high rate of recidivism, and the implications for sentencing;

(5) the historical evolution of laws and attitudes on rape and sexual assault;

(6) sex stereotyping of female and male victims of rape and sexual assault, racial stereotyping of rape victims and defendants, and the impact of such stereotypes on credibility of witnesses, sentencing, and other aspects of the administration of justice;

(7) application of rape shield laws and other limits on introduction of evidence that may subject victims to improper sex stereotyping and harassment in both rape and nonrape cases, including the need for sua sponte judicial intervention in inappropriate cross-examination;

(8) the use of expert witness testimony on rape trauma syndrome, child sexual abuse accommodation syndrome, post-traumatic stress syndrome, and similar issues;

(9) the legitimate reasons why victims of rape, sexual assault, and incest may refuse to testify against a defendant;

(10) the nature and incidence of domestic violence;

(11) the physical, psychological, and economic impact of domestic violence on the victim, the costs to society, and the implications for court procedures and sentencing;

(12) the psychology and self-presentation of batterers and victims and the implications for court proceedings and credibility of witnesses;

(13) sex stereotyping of female and male victims of domestic violence, myths about presence or absence of domestic violence in certain racial, ethnic, religious, or socioeconomic groups, and their impact on the administration of justice;

(14) historical evolution of laws and attitudes on domestic violence;

(15) proper and improper interpretations of the defenses of self-defense and provocation, and the use of expert witness testimony on battered woman syndrome;

(16) the likelihood of retaliation, recidivism, and escalation of violence by batterers, and the potential impact of incarceration and other meaningful sanctions for acts of domestic violence including violations of orders of protection;

(17) economic, psychological, social and institutional reasons for victims' inability to leave the batterer, to report domestic violence or to follow through on complaints, including the influence of lack of support from police, judges, and court personnel, and the legitimate reasons why victims of domestic violence may refuse to testify against a defendant;

(18) the need for orders of protection, and the implications of mutual orders of protection, dual arrest policies, and mediation in domestic violence cases;

(19) recognition of and response to gender-motivated crimes of violence other than rape, sexual assault and domestic violence, such as mass or serial murder motivated by the gender of the victims; and

(20) current information on the impact of pornography on crimes against women, or data on other activities that tend to degrade women.

SEC. 513. COOPERATION IN DEVELOPING PROGRAMS IN MAKING GRANTS UNDER THIS TITLE.

The State Justice Institute shall ensure that model programs carried out pursuant to grants made under this subtitle are developed with the participation of law enforcement officials, public and private nonprofit victim advocates, legal experts, prosecutors, defense attorneys, and recognized experts on gender bias in the courts.

SEC. 514. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There is authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1992, $600,000 to carry out the purposes of this subtitle. Of amounts appropriated under this section, the State Justice Institute shall expend no less than 40 percent on model programs regarding domestic violence and no less than 40 percent on model programs regarding rape and sexual assault.

Subtitle B—Education and Training for Judges and Court Personnel in Federal Courts

SEC. 521. EDUCATION AND TRAINING GRANTS.

(a) STUDY.—The Federal Judicial Center shall conduct a study of the nature and extent of gender bias in the Federal courts, including in proceedings involving rape, sexual assault, domestic violence, and other crimes of violence motivated by gender. The study shall be conducted by the use of data collection techniques such as reviews of trial and appellate opinions and transcripts, public hearings, and inquiries to attorneys practicing in the Federal courts. The Federal Judicial Center shall publicly issue a final report containing a detailed description of the findings and conclusions of the study, including such recommendations for legislative, administrative, and judicial action as it considers appropriate.

(b) MODEL PROGRAMS.—(1) The Federal Judicial Center shall develop, test, present, and disseminate model programs to be used in training Federal judges and court personnel in the laws on rape, sexual assault, domestic violence, and other crimes of violence motivated by the victim's gender.

(2) The training programs developed under this subsection shall include—

(A) all of the topics listed in section 512 of subtitle A; and

(B) all procedural and substantive aspects of the legal rights and remedies for violent crime motivated by gender including such areas as the Federal penalties for sex crimes, interstate enforcement of laws against domestic violence and civil rights remedies for violent crimes motivated by gender.

SEC. 522. COOPERATION IN DEVELOPING PROGRAMS.

In implementing this subtitle, the Federal Judicial Center shall ensure that the study and model programs are developed with the participation of law enforcement officials, public and private nonprofit victim advocates, legal experts, prosecutors, defense attorneys, and recognized experts on gender bias in the courts.

SEC. 523. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There is authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1992, $400,000 to carry out the purposes of this subtitle. Of amounts appropriated under this section, no less than 25 percent and no more than 40 percent shall be expended by the Federal Judicial Center on the study required by section 521(a) of this subtitle.

SEC. 101. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Safe Streets for Women Act of 1991".

Subtitle A—Federal Penalties for Sex Crimes
SEC. 111. REPEAT OFFENDERS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

“§2247. Repeat offenders

“Any person who violates a provision of this chapter, after one or more prior convictions for an offense punishable under this chapter, or after one or more prior convictions under the laws of any State or foreign country relating to aggravated sexual abuse, sexual abuse, or abusive sexual contact, is punishable by a term of imprisonment up to twice that otherwise authorized.”

(b) TABLE OF SECTIONS.—The table of sections for chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

“2247. Repeat offenders.”

SEC. 112. FEDERAL PENALTIES.

(a) RAPE AND AGGRAVATED RAPE.—Pursuant to its authority under section 994(p) of title 28, United States Code, the United States Sentencing Commission shall amend its sentencing guidelines to provide that a defendant convicted of aggravated sexual abuse under section 2241 of title 18, United States Code, or sexual abuse under section 2242 of title 18, United States Code, shall be assigned a base offense level under chapter 2 of the sentencing guidelines that is at least 4 levels greater than the base offense level applicable to criminal sexual abuse under the guidelines in effect on November 1, 1990, or otherwise shall amend the guidelines applicable to such offenses so as to achieve a comparable minimum guideline sentence. In amending such guidelines, the Sentencing Commission shall review the appropriateness of existing specific offense characteristics or other adjustments applicable to such offenses, and make such changes as it deems appropriate, taking into account the severity of rape offenses, with or without aggravating factors; the unique nature and duration of the mental injuries inflicted on the victims of such offenses; and any other relevant factors.

(b) EFFECT OF AMENDMENT.—If the sentencing guidelines are amended after the effective date of this section, the Sentencing Commission shall implement the instructions set forth in subsection (a) so as to achieve a comparable result.

(c) STATUTORY RAPE.—

(1) Section 2243(b) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking “one year,” and inserting “two years.”

(2) Pursuant to its authority under section 994(p) of title 28, United States Code, the United States Sentencing Commission shall promulgate guidelines or amend existing guidelines to incorporate the increase in maximum penalties provided by this section for section 2243(b) of title 18, United States Code.

SEC. 113. MANDATORY RESTITUTION FOR SEX CRIMES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

“§2248. Mandatory restitution

“(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding the terms of section 3663 of this title, and in addition to any other civil or criminal penalty authorized by law, the court shall order restitution for any offense under this chapter.

“(b) SCOPE AND NATURE OF ORDER.—(1) The order of restitution under this section shall direct that—

“(A) the defendant pay to the victim the full amount of the victim’s losses as determined by the court, pursuant to paragraph (2); and

“(B) the United States Attorney enforce the restitution order by all available and reasonable means.

“(2) For purposes of this subsection, the term ‘full amount of the victim’s losses’ includes any costs incurred by the victim for—

“(A) medical services relating to physical, psychiatric, or psychological care;

“(B) physical and occupational therapy or rehabilitation;

“(C) lost income;

“(D) attorneys’ fees; and

“(E) any other losses suffered by the victim as a proximate result of the offense.

“(3) Restitution orders under this section are mandatory. A court may not decline to issue an order under this section because of—

“(A) the economic circumstances of the defendant; or

“(B) the fact that a victim has, or is entitled to, receive compensation for his or her injuries from the proceeds of insurance or any other source.

“(4)(A) Notwithstanding the terms of paragraph (3), the court may take into account the economic circumstances of the defendant in determining the manner in which and the schedule according to which the restitution is to be paid.

“(B) For purposes of this paragraph, the term ‘economic circumstances’ includes—

“(i) the financial resources and other assets of the defendant;

“(ii) projected earnings, earning capacity, and other income of the defendant; and

“(iii) any financial obligations of the defendant, including obligations to dependents.

“(C) An order under this section may direct the defendant to make a single lump-sum payment or partial payments at specified intervals. The order shall also provide that the defendant’s restitutionary obligation takes priority over any criminal fine ordered.

“(D) In the event that the victim has recovered for any amount of loss through the proceeds of insurance or any other source, the order of restitution shall provide that restitution be paid to the person who provided the compensation, but that restitution shall be paid to the victim before any restitution is paid to any other provider of compensation.

“(5) Any amount paid to a victim under this section shall be set off against any amount later recovered as compensatory damages by the victim from the defendant in—

“(A) any Federal civil proceeding; and

“(B) any State civil proceeding, to the extent provided by the law of the State.

“(c) PROOF OF CLAIM.—(1) Within 60 days after conviction and, in any event, no later than 10 days prior to sentencing, the United States Attorney (or his delegate), after consulting with the victim, shall prepare and file an affidavit with the court listing the amounts subject to restitution under this section. The affidavit shall be signed by the United States Attorney (or his delegate) and the victim. Should the victim object to any of the information included in the affidavit, the United States Attorney (or his delegate) shall advise the victim that the victim may file a separate affidavit.

“(2) If no objection is raised by the defendant, the amounts attested to in the affidavit filed pursuant to subsection (1) shall be entered in the court’s restitution order. If objection is raised, the court may require the victim or the United States Attorney (or his delegate) to submit further affidavits or other supporting documents, demonstrating the victim’s losses.

“(3) If the court concludes, after reviewing the supporting documentation and considering the defendant’s objections, that there is a substantial reason for doubting the authenticity or veracity of the records submitted, the court may require additional documentation or hear testimony on those questions. Any records filed, or testimony heard, pursuant to this section, shall be in camera in the judge’s chambers. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, this section does not entitle the defendant to discovery of the contents of, or matters related to, any supporting documentation, including medical, psychological, or psychiatric records.

“(4) In the event that the victim’s losses are not ascertainable 10 days prior to sentencing as provided in subsection (c)(1), the United States Attorney (or his delegate) shall so inform the court, and the court shall set a date for the final determination of the victim’s losses, not to exceed 90 days after sentencing. If the victim subsequently discovers further losses, the victim shall have 60 days after discovery of those losses in which to petition the court for an amended restitution order. Such order may be granted only upon a showing of good cause for the failure to include such losses in the initial claim for restitutionary relief.

“(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section, the term ‘victim’ includes any person who has suffered direct physical, emotional, or pecuniary harm as a result of a commission of a crime under this chapter, including, in the case of a victim who is under 18 years of age, incompetent, incapacitated, or deceased, the legal guardian of the victim or representative of the victim’s estate, another family member, or any other person appointed as suitable by the court: Provided, That in no event shall the defendant be named as such representative or guardian.”

(b) TABLE OF SECTIONS.—The table of sections for chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

“2248. Mandatory restitution.”

Subtitle B—Law Enforcement and Prosecution Grants to Reduce Violent Crimes Against Women

SEC. 121. GRANTS TO COMBAT VIOLENT CRIMES AGAINST WOMEN.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.) is amended by—

(1) redesignating part N as part O;

(2) redesignating section 1401 as section 1501; and

(3) adding after part M the following:

“PART N—GRANTS TO COMBAT VIOLENT CRIMES AGAINST WOMEN

“SEC. 1401. PURPOSE OF THE PROGRAM AND GRANTS.

“(a) GENERAL PROGRAM PURPOSE.—The purpose of this part is to assist States, Indian tribes, cities, and other localities to develop effective law enforcement and prosecution strategies to combat violent crimes against women and, in particular, to focus efforts on those areas with the highest rates of violent crime against women.

“(b) PURPOSES FOR WHICH GRANTS MAY BE USED.—Grants under this part shall provide additional personnel, training, technical assistance, data collection and other equipment for the more widespread apprehension, prosecution, and adjudication of persons committing violent crimes against women and specifically, for the purposes of—

"(1) training law enforcement officers and prosecutors to more effectively identify and respond to violent crimes against women, including the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence;

"(2) developing, training, or expanding units of law enforcement officers and prosecutors specifically targeting violent crimes against women, including the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence;

"(3) developing and implementing police and prosecution policies, protocols, or orders specifically devoted to identifying and responding to violent crimes against women, including the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence;

"(4) developing, installing, or expanding data collection systems, including computerized systems, linking police, prosecutors, and courts or for the purpose of identifying and tracking arrests, prosecutions, and convictions for the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence; and

"(5) developing, enlarging, or strengthening victim services programs, including sexual assault and domestic violence programs, to increase reporting and reduce attrition rates for cases involving violent crimes against women, including the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence.

"SUBPART 1—HIGH INTENSITY CRIME AREA GRANTS

"SEC. 1411. HIGH INTENSITY GRANTS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance (hereafter in this part referred to as the "Director") shall make grants to areas of "high intensity crime" against women.

"(b) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this part, a "high intensity crime area" means an area with one of the 40 highest rates of violent crime against women, as determined by the Bureau of Justice Statistics pursuant to section 1412.

"SEC. 1412. HIGH INTENSITY GRANT APPLICATION.

"(a) COMPUTATION.—Within 45 days after the date of enactment of this part, the Bureau of Justice Statistics shall compile a list of the 40 areas with the highest rates of violent crime against women based on the combined female victimization rate per population for assault, sexual assault (including, but not limited to, rape), murder, robbery, and kidnapping.

"(b) USE OF DATA.—In calculating the combined female victimization rate required by subsection (a), the Bureau of Justice Statistics may rely on—

"(1) existing data collected by States, municipalities, Indian reservations or statistical metropolitan areas showing the number of police reports of the crimes listed in subsection (a); and

"(2) existing data collected by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, including data from those governmental entities already complying with the National Incident Based Reporting System, showing the number of police reports of crimes listed in subsection (a).

"(c) PUBLICATION.—After compiling the list set forth in subsection (a), the Bureau of Justice Statistics shall convey it to the Director who shall publish it in the Federal Register.

"(d) QUALIFICATION.—Upon satisfying the terms of subsection (e), any high intensity crime area shall be qualified for a grant under this subpart upon application by the chief executive officer of the governmental entities responsible for law enforcement and prosecution of criminal offenses within the area and certification that—

"(1) the funds shall be used to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women and for at least 3 of the purposes outlined in section 1401(b);

"(2) grantees and subgrantees shall develop a plan for implementation, and otherwise consult and coordinate program grants, with nongovernmental nonprofit victim services programs; and

"(3) at least 25 percent of the amount granted shall be allocated to each of the following three areas: prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services.

"(e) APPLICATION REQUIREMENTS.—The application requirements provided in section 513 of this title shall apply to grants made under this subpart. In addition, each application must provide the certifications required by subsection (d) including documentation from nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs showing their participation in developing the plan required by subsection (d)(2). Applications shall—

"(1) include documentation from the prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services programs to be assisted showing—

"(A) need for the grant funds;

"(B) intended use of the grant funds; and

"(C) expected results from the use of grant funds; and

"(2) proof of compliance with the requirements for the payment of forensic medical exams provided in section 162 of this title.

"(f) DISBURSEMENT.

"(1) No later than 60 days after the receipt of an application under this subpart, the Director shall either disburse the appropriate sums provided for under this subpart or shall inform the applicant why the application does not conform to the terms of section 513 of this title or to the requirements of this section.

"(2) In disbursing monies under this subpart, the Director shall ensure, to the extent practicable, that grantees—

"(A) equitably distribute funds on a geographic basis;

"(B) determine the amount of subgrants based on the population to be served; and

"(C) give priority to areas with the greatest showing of need.

"(g) GRANTEE REPORTING.—Upon completion of the grant period under this subpart, the grantee shall file a performance report with the Director explaining the activities carried out together with an assessment of the effectiveness of those activities in achieving the purposes of this part. The Director shall suspend funding for an approved application if an applicant fails to submit an annual performance report.

"Subpart 2—Other Grants to States to Combat Violent Crimes Against Women

"SEC. 1421. GENERAL GRANTS TO STATES.

"(a) GENERAL GRANTS.—The Director is authorized to make grants to States, for use by States, units of local government in the States, and nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs in the States, for the purposes outlined in section 1401(b), and to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women.

"(b) AMOUNTS.—From amounts appropriated, the amount of grants under subsection (a) shall be—

"(1) $500,000 to each State; and

"(2) that portion of the then remaining available money to each State that results from a distribution among the States on the basis of each State's population in relation to the population of all States.

"(c) QUALIFICATION.—Upon satisfying the terms of subsection (d), any State shall be qualified for funds provided under this part upon certification that—

"(1) the funds shall be used to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women and for at least 3 of the purposes outlined in section 1401(b);

"(2) grantees and subgrantees shall develop a plan for implementation, and otherwise consult and coordinate, with nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs, including sexual assault and domestic violence victim services programs;

"(3) at least 25 percent of the amount granted shall be allocated to each of the following three areas: prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services.

"(d) APPLICATION REQUIREMENTS.—The application requirements provided in section 513 of this title shall apply to grants made under this subpart. In addition, each application shall include the certifications of qualification required by subsection (c) including documentation from nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs showing their participation in developing the plan required by subsection (c)(2). Applications shall—

"(1) include documentation from the prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services programs to be assisted showing—

"(A) need for the grant funds;

"(B) intended use of the grant funds; and

"(C) expected results from the use of grant funds; and

"(2) proof of compliance with the requirements for the payment of forensic medical exams provided in section 162 of this title.

"(e) DISBURSEMENT.—(1) No later than 60 days after the receipt of an application under this subpart, the Director shall either disburse the appropriate sums provided for under this subpart or shall inform the applicant why the application does not conform to the terms of section 513 of this title or to the requirements of this section.

"(2) In disbursing monies under this subpart, the Director shall issue regulations to ensure that States will—

"(A) equitably distribute monies on a geographic basis including nonurban and rural areas, and giving priority to localities with populations under 100,000;

"(B) determine the amount of subgrants based on the population and geographic area to be served; and

"(C) give priority to areas with the greatest showing of need, as demonstrated by comparing population and geographic areas to be served to the availability of existing sexual assault and domestic violence services.

"(f) GRANTEE REPORTING.—Upon completion of the grant period under this subpart, the State grantee shall file a performance report with the Director explaining the activities carried out together with an assessment of the effectiveness of those activities in achieving the purposes of this subpart. The Director shall suspend funding for an approved application if an applicant fails to submit an annual performance report.

"SEC. 1422. GENERAL GRANTS TO TRIBES.

"(a) GENERAL GRANTS.—The Director is authorized to make grants to Indian tribes, for use by tribes, tribal organizations or nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs on Indian reservations, for the purposes outlined in section 1401(b), and to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women in Indian country.

"(b) AMOUNTS.—From amounts appropriated, the amount of grants under subsection (a) shall be awarded on a competitive basis to tribes, with minimum grants of $35,000 and maximum grants of $300,000.

"(c) QUALIFICATION.—Upon satisfying the terms of subsection (d), any tribe shall be qualified for funds provided under this part upon certification that—

"(1) the funds shall be used to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women and for at least 3 of the purposes outlined in section 1401(b); and

"(2) at least 25 percent of the grant funds shall be allocated to each of the following three areas: prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services.

"(d) APPLICATION REQUIREMENTS.—(1) Applications shall be made directly to the Director and shall contain a description of the tribes' law enforcement responsibilities for the Indian country described in the application and a description of the tribes' system of courts, including whether the tribal government operates courts of Indian offenses as defined in 25 U.S.C. 1301 or CFR courts under 25 CFR 11 et seq.

"(2) Applications shall be in such form as the Director may prescribe and shall specify the nature of the program proposed by the applicant tribe, the data and information on which the program is based, and the extent to which the program plans to use or incorporate existing services available in the Indian country where the grant will be used.

"(3) The term of any grant shall be for a minimum of 3 years.

"(e) GRANTEE REPORTING.—At the end of the first 12 months of the grant period and at the end of each year thereafter, the Indian tribal grantee shall file a performance report with the Director explaining the activities carried out together with an assessment of the effectiveness of those activities in achieving the purposes of this subpart. The Director shall suspend funding for an approved application if an applicant fails to submit an annual performance report.

"(f) DEFINITIONS.—(1) The term 'Indian tribe' means any Indian tribe, band, nation, or other organized group or community, including any Alaska Native village or regional or village corporation (as defined in, or established pursuant to, the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (43 U.S.C. 1601, et seq.)), which is recognized as eligible for the special services provided by the United States to Indians because of their status as Indians.

"(2) The term 'Indian country' has the meaning given to such term by section 1151 of title 18, United States Code.

"SUBPART 3—GENERAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS

"SEC. 1431. GENERAL DEFINITIONS.

"As used in this part—

"(1) the term 'victim services program' means any public or private nonprofit program that assists victims, including (A) nongovernmental nonprofit organizations such as rape crisis centers, battered women's shelters, or other rape or domestic violence programs, including nonprofit nongovernmental organizations assisting victims through the legal process and (B) victim/witness programs within governmental entities;

"(2) the term 'sexual assault' includes not only assaults committed by offenders who are strangers to the victim but also assaults committed by offenders who are known or related by blood or marriage to the victim; and

"(3) the term 'domestic violence' includes felony or misdemeanor offenses committed by a current or former spouse of the victim, a person with whom the victim shares a child in common, a person who is cohabitating with or has cohabitated with the victim as a spouse, or any other person similarly situated to a spouse who is protected under the domestic or family violence laws of the jurisdiction receiving grant monies.

"SEC. 1432. GENERAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.

"(a) NONMONETARY ASSISTANCE.—In addition to the assistance provided under subparts 1 or 2, the Director may direct any Federal agency, with or without reimbursement, to use its authorities and the resources granted to it under Federal law (including personnel, equipment, supplies, facilities, and managerial, technical, and advisory services) in support of State and local assistance efforts.

"(b) BUREAU REPORTING.—No later than 180 days after the end of each fiscal year for which grants are made under this part, the Director shall submit to the Judiciary Committees of the House and the Senate a report that includes, for each high intensity crime area (as provided in subpart 1) and for each State and for each grantee Indian tribe (as provided in subpart 2)—

"(1) the amount of grants made under this part;

"(2) a summary of the purposes for which those grants were provided and an evaluation of their progress; and

"(3) a copy of each grantee report filed pursuant to sections 1412(g) and 1421(f).

"(c) REGULATIONS.—No later than 45 days after the date of enactment of this part, the Director shall publish proposed regulations implementing this part. No later than 120 days after such date, the Director shall publish final regulations implementing this part.

"(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year 1992, 1993, and 1994, $100,000,000 to carry out the purposes of subpart 1, and $190,000,000 to carry out the purposes of subpart 2, and $10,000,000 to carry out the purposes of section 1422 of subpart 2."

Subtitle C—Safety for Women in Public Transit and Public Parks

SEC. 131. GRANTS FOR CAPITAL IMPROVEMENTS TO PREVENT CRIME IN PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION.

Section 24 of the Urban Mass Transportation Act of 1964 is amended to read as follows:

"GRANTS TO PREVENT CRIME IN PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION

"SEC. 24. (a) GENERAL PURPOSE.—From funds authorized under section 21, and not to exceed $10,000,000, the Secretary shall make capital grants for the prevention of crime and to increase security in existing and future public transportation systems. None of the provisions of this Act may be construed to prohibit the financing of projects under this section where law enforcement responsibilities are vested in a local public body other than the grant applicant.

"(b) GRANTS FOR LIGHTING, CAMERA SURVEILLANCE, AND SECURITY PHONES.—

"(1) From the sums authorized for expenditure under this section for crime prevention, the Secretary is authorized to make grants and loans to States and local public bodies or agencies for the purpose of increasing the safety of public transportation by—

"(A) increasing lighting within or adjacent to public transportation systems, including bus stops, subway stations, parking lots, or garages;

"(B) increasing camera surveillance of areas within and adjacent to public transportation systems, including bus stops, subway stations, parking lots, or garages;

"(C) providing emergency phone lines to contact law enforcement or security personnel in areas within or adjacent to public transportation systems, including bus stops, subway stations, parking lots, or garages; or

"(D) any other project intended to increase the security and safety of existing or planned public transportation systems.

"(2) From the sums authorized under this section, at least 75 percent shall be expended on projects of the type described in subsection (b)(1) (A) and (B).

"(c) REPORTING.—All grants under this section are contingent upon the filing of a report with the Secretary and the Department of Justice, Office of Victims of Crime, showing crime rates in or adjacent to public transportation before, and for a 1-year period after, the capital improvement. Statistics shall be broken down by type of crime, sex, race, and relationship of victim to the offender.

"(d) INCREASED FEDERAL SHARE.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the Federal share under this section for each capital improvement project which enhances the safety and security of public transportation systems and which is not required by law (including any other provision of this chapter) shall be 90 percent of the net project cost of such project.

"(e) SPECIAL GRANTS FOR PROJECTS TO STUDY INCREASING SECURITY FOR WOMEN.—From the sums authorized under this section, the Secretary shall provide grants and loans for the purpose of studying ways to reduce violent crimes against women in public transit through better design or operation of public transit systems.

"(f) GENERAL REQUIREMENTS.—All grants or loans provided under this section shall be subject to all the terms, conditions, requirements, and provisions applicable to grants and loans made under section 2(a)."

SEC. 132. GRANTS FOR CAPITAL IMPROVEMENTS TO PREVENT CRIME IN NATIONAL PARKS.

The Act of August 18, 1970, the National Park System Improvements in Administration Act (90 Stat. 1931; 16 U.S.C. 1a-1 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"SEC. 13. NATIONAL PARK SYSTEM CRIME PREVENTION ASSISTANCE.

"(a) From the sums authorized pursuant to section 7 of the Land and Water Conservation Act of 1965, and not to exceed $10,000,000, the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to provide Federal assistance to reduce the incidence of violent crime in the National Park System.

"(b) The Secretary shall direct the chief official responsible for law enforcement within the National Park Services to—

"(1) compile a list of areas within the National Park System with the highest rates of violent crime;

"(2) make recommendations concerning capital improvements, and other measures, needed within the National Park System to reduce the rates of violent crime, including the rate of sexual assault; and

"(3) publish the information required by paragraphs (1) and (2) in the Federal Register.

"(c) No later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this section, and based on the recommendations and list issued pursuant to subsection (b), the Secretary shall distribute funds throughout the National Park Service. Priority shall be given to those areas with the highest rates of sexual assault.

"(d) Funds provided under this section may be used for the following purposes—

"(1) to increase lighting within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas;

"(2) to provide emergency phone lines to contact law enforcement or security personnel in areas within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas;

"(3) to increase security or law enforcement personnel within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas; and

"(4) any other project intended to increase the security and safety of public parks and recreation areas."

SEC. 133. GRANTS FOR CAPITAL IMPROVEMENTS TO PREVENT CRIME IN PUBLIC PARKS.

Section 6 of the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1965 (78 Stat. 897; 16 U.S.C. 4601-8) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(h) CAPITAL IMPROVEMENT AND OTHER PROJECTS TO REDUCE CRIME.—In addition to assistance for planning projects, and in addition to the projects identified in subsection (e), and from amounts appropriated, the Secretary shall provide financial assistance to the States, not to exceed $15,000,000 in total, for the following types of projects or combinations thereof:

"(1) For the purpose of making capital improvements and other measures to increase safety in urban parks and recreation areas, including funds to—

"(A) increase lighting within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas;

"(B) provide emergency phone lines to contact law enforcement or security personnel in areas within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas;

"(C) increase security personnel within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas; and

"(D) any other project intended to increase the security and safety of public parks and recreation areas.

"(2) In addition to the requirements for project approval imposed by this section, eligibility for assistance under this subsection is dependent upon a showing of need. In providing funds under this subsection, the Secretary shall give priority to those projects proposed for urban parks and recreation areas with the highest rates of crime and, in particular, to urban parks and recreation areas with the highest rates of sexual assault.

"(3) Notwithstanding the terms of subsection (c), the Secretary is authorized to provide 70 percent improvement grants for projects undertaken by any State for the purposes outlined in this subsection. The remaining share of the cost shall be borne by the State."

Subtitle D—National Commission on Violent Crime Against Women

SEC. 141. ESTABLISHMENT.

There is established a commission to be known as the National Commission on Violent Crime Against Women (hereinafter referred to as "the Commission").

SEC. 142. DUTIES OF COMMISSION.

(a) GENERAL PURPOSE OF THE COMMISSION.—The Commission shall carry out activities for the purposes of promoting a national policy on violent crime against women, and for making recommendations for how to reduce violent crime against women.

(b) FUNCTIONS.—The Commission shall perform the following functions—

(1) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, current law enforcement efforts at the Federal and State levels to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women;

(2) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the responsiveness of State prosecutors and State courts to violent crimes against women;

(3) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the adequacy of current education, prevention, and protection services for women victims of violent crime;

(4) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the role of the Federal Government in reducing violent crimes against women;

(5) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, national public awareness and the public dissemination of information essential to the prevention of violent crimes against women;

(6) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, data collection and government statistics on the incidence and prevalence of violent crimes against women;

(7) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the adequacy of State and Federal laws on sexual assault and the need for a more uniform statutory response to sex offenses, including sexual assaults and other sex offenses committed by offenders who are known or related by blood or marriage to the victim;

(8) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the adequacy of State and Federal laws on domestic violence and the need for a more uniform statutory response to domestic violence; and

(9) evaluate and make recommendations regarding the feasibility of maintaining the confidentiality of addresses of domestic violence victims in voting, welfare, and public records.

SEC. 143. MEMBERSHIP.

(a) NUMBER AND APPOINTMENT.—

(1) APPOINTMENT.—The Commission shall be composed of 15 members as follows:

(A) Five members shall be appointed by the President—

(i) three of whom shall be—

(I) the Attorney General;

(II) the Secretary of Health and Human Services; and

(III) the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation,

who shall be nonvoting members, except that in the case of a tie vote by the Commission, the Attorney General shall be a voting member;

(ii) two of whom shall be selected from the general public on the basis of such individuals being specially qualified to serve on the Commission by reason of their education, training, or experience; and

(iii) at least one of whom shall be selected for their experience in providing services to women victims of sexual assault or domestic violence.

(B) Five members shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives on the joint recommendation of the Majority and Minority Leaders of the House of Representatives.

(C) Five members shall be appointed by the President pro tempore of the Senate on the joint recommendation of the Majority and Minority Leaders of the Senate.

(2) CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE RECOMMENDATIONS.—In making appointments under subparagraphs (B) and (C) of paragraph (1), the Majority and Minority Leaders of the House of Representatives and the Senate shall duly consider the recommendations of the Chairmen and Ranking Minority Members of committees with jurisdiction over laws contained in title 18 of the United States Code.

(3) REQUIREMENTS OF APPOINTMENTS.—The Majority and Minority Leaders of the Senate and the House of Representatives shall—

(A) select individuals who are specially qualified to serve on the Commission by reason of their experience in State or national efforts to fight violence against women and demonstrate experience in State or national advocacy or service organizations specializing in sexual assault and domestic violence; and

(B) engage in consultations for the purpose of ensuring that the expertise of the ten members appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the President pro tempore of the Senate shall provide as much of a balance as possible and, to the greatest extent possible, cover the fields of law enforcement, prosecution, judicial administration, legal expertise, public health, social work, victim compensation boards, and victim advocacy.

(4) TERM OF MEMBERS.—Members of the Commission (other than members appointed under paragraph (1)(A)(i)) shall serve for the life of the Commission.

(5) VACANCY.—A vacancy on the Commission shall be filled in the manner in which the original appointment was made.

(b) CHAIRMAN.—Not later than 15 days after the members of the Commission are appointed, such members shall select a Chairman from among the members of the Commission.

(c) QUORUM.—Seven members of the Commission shall constitute a quorum, but a lesser number may be authorized by the Commission to conduct hearings.

(d) MEETINGS.—The Commission shall hold its first meeting on a date specified by the Chairman, but such date shall not be later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act. After the initial meeting, the Commission shall meet at the call of the Chairman or a majority of its members, but shall meet at least six times.

(e) PAY.—Members of the Commission who are officers or employees or elected officials of a government entity shall receive no additional compensation by reason of their service on the Commission.

(f) PER DIEM.—Except as provided in subsection (e), members of the Commission shall be allowed travel and other expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, at rates authorized for employees of agencies under sections 5702 and 5703 of title 5, United States Code.

(g) DEADLINE FOR APPOINTMENT.—Not later than 45 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the members of the Commission shall be appointed.

SEC. 144. REPORTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 1 year after the date on which the Commission is fully constituted under section 143, the Commission shall prepare and submit a final report to the President and to congressional committees that have jurisdiction over legislation addressing violent crimes against women, including the crimes of domestic and sexual assault.

(b) CONTENTS.—The final report submitted under paragraph (1) shall contain a detailed statement of the activities of the Commission and of the findings and conclusions of the Commission, including such recommendations for legislation and administrative action as the Commission considers appropriate.

SEC. 145. EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR AND STAFF.

(a) EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR.—

(1) APPOINTMENT.—The Commission shall have an Executive Director who shall be appointed by the Chairman, with the approval of the Commission, not later than 30 days after the Chairman is selected.

(2) COMPENSATION.—The Executive Director shall be compensated at a rate not to exceed the maximum rate of the basic pay payable under GS-18 of the General Schedule as contained in title 5, United States Code.

(b) STAFF.—With the approval of the Commission, the Executive Director may appoint and fix the compensation of such additional personnel as the Executive Director considers necessary to carry out the duties of the Commission.

(c) APPLICABILITY OF CIVIL SERVICE LAWS.—The Executive Director and the additional personnel of the Commission appointed under subsection (b) may be appointed without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service, and may be paid without regard to the provisions of chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of such title relating to classification and General Schedule pay rates.

(d) CONSULTANTS.—Subject to such rules as may be prescribed by the Commission, the Executive Director may procure temporary or intermittent services under section 3109(b) of title 5, United States Code, at rates for individuals not to exceed $200 per day.

SEC. 144. POWERS OF COMMISSION.

(a) HEARINGS.—For the purpose of carrying out this subtitle, the Commission may conduct such hearings, sit and act at such times and places, take such testimony, and receive such evidence, as the Commission considers appropriate. The Commission may administer oaths before the Commission.

(b) DELEGATION.—Any member or employee of the Commission may, if authorized by the Commission, take any action that the Commission is authorized to take under this subtitle.

(c) ACCESS TO INFORMATION.—The Commission may request directly from any executive department or agency such information as may be necessary to enable the Commission to carry out this subtitle, on the request of the Chairman of the Commission.

(d) MAILS.—The Commission may use the United States mails in the same manner and under the same conditions as other departments and agencies of the United States.

SEC. 147. AUTHORIZATIONS OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There is authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1992, $500,000 to carry out the purposes of this subtitle.

SEC. 148. TERMINATION.

The Commission shall cease to exist 30 days after the date on which its final report is submitted under section 144. The President may extend the life of the Commission for a period of not to exceed one year.

Subtitle E—New Evidentiary Rules

SEC. 151. SEXUAL HISTORY IN ALL CRIMINAL CASES.

The Federal Rules of Evidence are amended by inserting after rule 412 the following:

“Rule 412A. Evidence of victim's past behavior in other criminal cases

“(a) REPUTATION AND OPINION EVIDENCE EXCLUDED.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in a criminal case, other than a sex offense case governed by rule 412, reputation or opinion evidence of the past sexual behavior of an alleged victim is not admissible.

“(b) ADMISSIBILITY.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in a criminal case, other than a sex offense case governed by rule 412, evidence of an alleged victim's past sexual behavior (other than reputation and opinion evidence) may be admissible if—

“(1) the evidence is admitted in accordance with the procedures specified in subdivision (c); and

“(2) the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice.

“(c) PROCEDURES.—(1) If the defendant intends to offer evidence of specific instances of the alleged victim's past sexual behavior, the defendant shall make a written motion to offer such evidence not later than 15 days before the date on which the trial in which such evidence is to be offered is scheduled to begin, except that the court may allow the motion to be made at a later date, including during trial, if the court determines either that the evidence is newly discovered and could not have been obtained earlier through the exercise of due diligence or that the issue to which such evidence relates has newly arisen in the case. Any motion made under this paragraph shall be served on all other parties and on the alleged victim.

“(2) The motion described in paragraph (1) shall be accompanied by a written offer of proof. If necessary, the court shall order a hearing in chambers to determine if such evidence is admissible. At such hearing, the parties may call witnesses, including the alleged victim and offer relevant evidence. Notwithstanding subdivision (b) of rule 104, if the relevancy of the evidence which the defendant seeks to offer in the trial depends upon the fulfillment of a condition of fact, the court, at the hearing in chambers or at a subsequent hearing in chambers scheduled for such purpose, shall accept evidence on the issue of whether such condition of fact is fulfilled and shall determine such issue.

“(3) If the court determines on the basis of the hearing described in paragraph (2), that the evidence the defendant seeks to offer is relevant, not excluded by any other evidentiary rule, and that the probative value of such evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice, such evidence shall be admissible in the trial to the extent an order made by the court specifies the evidence which may be offered and areas with respect to which the alleged victim may be examined or cross-examined. In its order, the court should consider (A) the chain of reasoning leading to its finding of relevance, and (B) why the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice given the potential of the evidence to humiliate and embarrass the alleged victim and to result in unfair or biased jury inferences.”

SEC. 152. SEXUAL HISTORY IN CIVIL CASES.

The Federal Rules of Evidence, as amended by section 151 of this Act, are amended by adding after rule 412A the following:

“Rule 412B. Evidence of past sexual behavior in civil cases

“(a) REPUTATION AND OPINION EVIDENCE EXCLUDED.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in a civil case in which a defendant is accused of actionable sexual misconduct, as defined in subdivision (d), reputation or opinion evidence of the plaintiff's past sexual behavior is not admissible.

“(b) ADMISSIBLE EVIDENCE.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in a civil case in which a defendant is accused of actionable sexual misconduct, as defined in subdivision (d), evidence of a plaintiff's past sexual behavior other than reputation or opinion evidence may be admissible if—

“(1) admitted in accordance with the procedures specified in subdivision (c); and

“(2) the probative value of such evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice.

“(c) PROCEDURES.—(1) If the defendant intends to offer evidence of specific instances of the plaintiff's past sexual behavior, the defendant shall make a written motion to offer such evidence not later than 15 days before the date on which the trial in which such evidence is to be offered is scheduled to begin, except that the court may allow the motion to be made at a later date, including during trial, if the court determines either that the evidence is newly discovered and could not have been obtained earlier through the exercise of due diligence or that the issue to which such evidence relates has newly arisen in the case. Any motion made under this paragraph shall be served on all other parties and on the plaintiff.

“(2) The motion described in paragraph (1) shall be accompanied by a written offer of proof. If necessary, the court shall order a hearing in chambers to determine if such evidence is admissible. At such hearing, the parties may call witnesses, including the plaintiff and offer relevant evidence. Notwithstanding subdivision (b) of rule 104, if the relevancy of the evidence which the defendant seeks to offer in the trial depends upon the fulfillment of a condition of fact, the court, at the hearing in chambers or at a subsequent hearing in chambers scheduled for such purpose, shall accept evidence on the issue of whether such condition of fact is fulfilled and shall determine such issue.

“(3) If the court determines on the basis of the hearing described in paragraph (2), that the evidence the defendant seeks to offer is relevant, not excluded by any other evidentiary rule, and that the probative value of such evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice, such evidence shall be admissible in the trial to the extent an order made by the court specifies evidence which may be offered and areas with respect to which the plaintiff may be examined or cross-examined. In its order, the court should consider (A) the chain of reasoning leading to its finding of relevance, and (B) why the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice given the potential of the evidence to humiliate and embarrass the alleged victim and to result in unfair or biased jury inferences.

“(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this rule, a case involving a claim of actionable sexual misconduct, includes, but is not limited to, sex harassment or discrimination claims brought pursuant to title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000(e)) and gender bias claims brought pursuant to title III of the Violence Against Women Act of 1991.”

SEC. 153. AMENDMENTS TO RAPE SHIELD LAW.

Rule 412 of the Federal Rules of Evidence is amended—

(1) by adding at the end thereof the following:

“(e) INTERLOCUTORY APPEAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any evidentiary rulings made pursuant to this rule are subject to interlocutory appeal by the government or by the alleged victim.

“(f) RULE OF RELEVANCE AND PRIVILEGE.—If the prosecution seeks to offer evidence of prior sexual history, the provisions of this rule may be waived by the alleged victim.”; and

(2) by adding at the end of subdivision (c)(3) the following: “In its order, the court should consider (A) the chain of reasoning leading to its finding of relevance; and (B) why the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice given the potential of the evidence to humiliate and embarrass the alleged victim and to result in unfair or biased jury inferences.”

SEC. 154. EVIDENCE OF CLOTHING.

The Federal Rules of Evidence are amended by adding after rule 412 the following:

“Rule 413. Evidence of victim's clothing as inciting violence

“Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in a criminal case in which a person is accused of an offense under chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, evidence of an alleged victim's clothing is not admissible to show that the alleged victim incited or invited the offense charged."

Subtitle F—Assistance to Victims of Sexual Assault

SEC. 161. EDUCATION AND PREVENTION GRANTS TO REDUCE SEXUAL ASSAULTS AGAINST WOMEN.

Part A of title XIX of the Public Health and Health Services Act (42 U.S.C. 300w et seq.) is amended as follows:

(1) by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

“§1910A. Use of allotments for rape prevention education

“(a) Notwithstanding the terms of section 1904(a)(1) of this title, amounts transferred by the State for use under this part may be used for rape prevention and education programs conducted by rape crisis centers or similar nongovernmental nonprofit entities, which programs may include—

- “(1) educational seminars;
- “(2) the operation of hotlines;
- “(3) training programs for professionals;
- “(4) the preparation of informational materials; and

“(5) other efforts to increase awareness of the facts about, or to help prevent, sexual assault.

“(b) States providing grant monies must assure that at least 15 percent of the monies are devoted to education programs targeted for middle school, junior high school, and high school students.

“(c) There are authorized to be appropriated under this section for each fiscal year 1992, 1993, and 1994, $65,000,000 to carry out the purposes of this section.

“(d) Funds authorized under this section may only be used for providing rape prevention and education programs.

“(e) For purposes of this section, the term ‘rape prevention and education’ includes education and prevention efforts directed at offenses committed by offenders who are not known to the victim as well as offenders who are known to the victim.

“(f) States shall be allotted funds under this section pursuant to the terms of sections 1902 and 1903, and subject to the conditions provided in this section and sections 1904 through 1909.”

- (2) striking section 1901(b); and
- (3) striking section 1904(a)(1)(G).

SEC. 162. RAPE EXAM PAYMENTS.

No State or other grantee is entitled to funds under title I of the Violence Against Women Act of 1990 unless the State or other grantee incurs the full cost of forensic medical exams for victims of sexual assault. A State or other grantee does not incur the full medical cost of forensic medical exams if it chooses to reimburse the victim after the fact unless the reimbursement program waives any minimum loss or deductible requirement, provides victim reimbursement within a reasonable time (90 days), permits applications for reimbursement within one year from the date of the exam, and provides information to all subjects of forensic medical exams about how to obtain reimbursement.

TITLE II—SAFE HOMES FOR WOMEN

SEC. 201. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the “Safe Homes for Women Act of 1990”.

Subtitle A—Interstate Enforcement

SEC. 211. INTERSTATE ENFORCEMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part 1 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after chapter 110 the following:

“Chapter 110A—Violence Against Spouses

“Sec. 2261. Traveling to commit spousal abuse.

“Sec. 2262. Interstate violation of protection orders.

“Sec. 2263. Restitution.

“Sec. 2264. Full faith and credit given to protection orders.

“Sec. 2265. Definitions for chapter.

“§2261. Traveling to commit spousal abuse

“(a) IN GENERAL.—Any person who travels across State lines—

“(1) and who, in the course of or as a result of such travel, commits an act that injures his or her spouse or intimate partner; or

shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than 10 years but not less than 3 months, or both, in addition to any fine or term of imprisonment provided under State law.

“(b) CAUSING THE CROSSING OF STATE LINES.—Any person who causes a spouse or intimate partner to cross State lines by force, coercion, duress or fraud and, in the course or as a result of that conduct, commits an act that injures his or her spouse or intimate partner, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than 10 years but not less than 3 months, or both, in addition to any fine or term of imprisonment provided under State law.

“(c) NO STATE LAW.—If no fine or term of imprisonment is provided for under the law of the State where the injury occurs, a person violating this section shall be punished as follows:

“(1) If permanent disfigurement or life-threatening bodily injury results, by imprisonment for not more than 20 years; where serious bodily injury results, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both; where bodily injury results, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

“(2) If the offense is committed with intent to commit another felony, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both.

“(3) If the offense is committed with a dangerous weapon, with intent to do bodily harm, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

“(4) If the offense constitutes sexual abuse, as that conduct is described under chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code (without regard to whether the offense was committed in the maritime, territorial or prison jurisdiction of the United States) by fine or term of imprisonment as provided for the applicable conduct under chapter 109A.

“(d) CRIMINAL INTENT.—The criminal intent of the offender required to establish an offense under subsection (b) is the general intent to do the acts that result in injury to a spouse or intimate partner and not the specific intent to violate the law of a State.

“(e) NO PRIOR STATE CRIMINAL ACTION NECESSARY.—Nothing in this section requires a prior criminal prosecution or conviction under State law to justify Federal prosecution.

“§2262. Interstate violation of protection orders

“(a) IN GENERAL.—Any person against whom a valid protection order has been entered who travels across State lines—

“(1) and who, in the course of or as a result of such travel, commits an act that injures

his or her spouse or intimate partner in violation of a valid protection order issued by a State; or

“(2) for the purpose of harassing, injuring, finding, contacting, or locating a spouse or intimate partner and who, in furtherance of that purpose, commits an act that injures his or her spouse or intimate partner in violation of a valid protection order issued by a State, shall be punished as provided in subsection (c) of this section.

“(b) CAUSING THE CROSSING OF STATE LINES.—Any person who causes a spouse or intimate partner to cross State lines by force, coercion, duress, or fraud, and, in the course or as a result of that conduct, commits an act that injures his or her spouse or intimate partner in violation of a valid protection order issued by a State shall be punished as provided in subsection (c) of this section.

“(c) PENALTIES.—

“(1) If permanent disfigurement or life-threatening bodily injury results, by imprisonment for not more than 20 years; where serious bodily injury results, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both; where bodily injury results, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

“(2) If the offense is committed with intent to commit another felony, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both.

“(3) If the offense is committed with a dangerous weapon, with intent to do bodily harm, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

“(4) If the offender has previously violated any prior protection order issued against that person for the protection of the same victim, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years and not less than six months, or both.

“(5) If the offense constitutes sexual abuse, as that conduct is described under chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code (without regard to whether the conduct was committed in the special maritime, territorial or prison jurisdiction of the United States) by fine or term of imprisonment as provided for the applicable offense under chapter 109A.

“(d) CRIMINAL INTENT.—The criminal intent required to establish the offense provided in subsection (a) is the general intent to do the acts which result in injury to a spouse or intimate partner and not the specific intent to violate a protection order or State law.

“(e) NO PRIOR STATE CRIMINAL ACTION NECESSARY.—Nothing in this section requires a prior criminal prosecution or conviction under State law to justify Federal prosecution.

“§2263. Interim protections

“In furtherance of the purposes of this chapter, and to protect against abuse of a spouse or intimate partner, any judge or magistrate before whom a criminal case under this chapter is brought, shall have the power to issue temporary orders of protection for the protection of an abused spouse or intimate partner pending final adjudication of the case, upon a showing of a likelihood of danger to the abused spouse or intimate partner.

“§2264. Restitution

“(a) IN GENERAL.—In addition to any fine or term of imprisonment provided under this chapter, and notwithstanding the terms of section 3663 of this title, the court shall order restitution to the victim of an offense under this chapter.

"(b) SCOPE AND NATURE OF ORDER.—(1) The order of restitution under this section shall direct that—

"(A) the defendant pay to the victim the full amount of the victim's losses as determined by the court, pursuant to subsection (3); and

"(B) the United States Attorney enforce the restitution order by all available and reasonable means.

"(2) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'full amount of the victim's losses' includes any costs incurred by the victim for—

"(A) medical services relating to physical, psychiatric, or psychological care;

"(B) physical and occupational therapy or rehabilitation; and

"(C) lost income;

"(D) attorneys' fees, plus any costs incurred in obtaining a civil protection order; and

"(E) any other losses suffered by the victim as a proximate result of the offense.

"(3) Restitution orders under this section are mandatory. A court may not decline to issue an order under this section because of—

"(A) the economic circumstances of the defendant; or

"(B) the fact that victim has, or is entitled to, receive compensation for his or her injuries from the proceeds of insurance.

"(4)(A) Notwithstanding the terms of paragraph (3), the court may take into account the economic circumstances of the defendant in determining the manner in which and the schedule according to which the restitution is to be paid, including—

"(i) the financial resources and other assets of the defendant;

"(ii) projected earnings, earning capacity, and other income of the defendant; and

"(iii) any financial obligations of the offender, including obligations to dependents.

"(B) An order under this section may direct the defendant to make a single lump-sum payment, or partial payments at specified intervals. The order shall provide that the defendant's restitutionary obligation takes priority over any criminal fine ordered.

"(C) In the event that the victim has recovered for any amount of loss through the proceeds of insurance or any other source, the order of restitution shall provide that restitution be paid to the person who provided the compensation, but that restitution shall be paid to the victim before any restitution is paid to any other provider of compensation.

"(5) Any amount paid to a victim under this section shall be set off against any amount later recovered as compensatory damages by the victim from the defendant in—

"(A) any Federal civil proceeding; and

"(B) any State civil proceeding, to the extent provided by the law of the State.

"(c) PROOF OF CLAIM.—(1) Within 60 days after conviction and, in any event, no later than 10 days prior to sentencing, the United States Attorney (or his delegate), after consulting with the victim, shall prepare and file an affidavit with the court listing the amounts subject to restitution under this section. The affidavit shall be signed by the United States Attorney (or his delegate) and the victim. Should the victim object to any of the information included in the affidavit, the United States Attorney (or his delegate) shall advise the victim that the victim may file a separate affidavit.

"(2) If no objection is raised by the defendant, the amounts attested to in the affidavit filed pursuant to subsection (1) shall be entered in the court's restitution order. If objection is raised, the court may require the victim or the United States Attorney (or his delegate) to submit further affidavits or other supporting documents, demonstrating the victim's losses.

"(3) If the court concludes, after reviewing the supporting documentation and considering the defendant's objections, that there is a substantial reason for doubting the authenticity or veracity of the records submitted, the court may require additional documentation or hear testimony on those questions. Any records filed, or testimony heard, pursuant to this section, shall be in camera in the judge's chambers. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, this section does not entitle the defendant to discovery of the contents of, or related to, any supporting documentation, including medical, psychological, or psychiatric records.

"(4) In the event that the victim's losses are not ascertainable 10 days prior to sentencing as provided in subsection (c)(1), the United States Attorney (or his delegate) shall so inform the court, and the court shall set a date for the final determination of the victim's losses, not to exceed 90 days after sentencing. If the victim subsequently discovers further losses, the victim shall have 60 days after discovery of those losses in which to petition the court for an amended restitution order. Such order may be granted only upon a showing of good cause for the failure to include such losses in the initial claim for restitutionary relief.

"(d) RESTITUTION AND CRIMINAL PENALTIES.—An award of restitution to the victim of an offense under this chapter shall not be a substitute for imposition of punishment under sections 2261 and 2262.

"(e) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section, the term 'victim' includes any person who has suffered direct physical, emotional, or pecuniary harm as a result of a commission of a crime under this chapter, including, in the case of a victim who is under 18 years of age, incompetent, incapacitated, or deceased, the legal guardian of the victim or representative of the victim's estate, another family member, or any other person appointed as suitable by the court; Provided, That in no event shall the defendant be named as such representative or guardian.

"§ 2265. Full faith and credit given to protection orders

"(a) FULL FAITH AND CREDIT.—Any protection order issued consistent with the terms of subsection (b) by the court of one State (the issuing State) shall be accorded full faith and credit by the court of another State (the enforcing State) and enforced as if it were the order of the enforcing State.

"(b) PROTECTION ORDER.—A protection order issued by a State court is consistent with the provisions of this section if—

"(1) such court has jurisdiction over the parties and matter under the law of such State; and

"(2) reasonable notice and opportunity to be heard is given to the person against whom the order is sought sufficient to protect that person's right to due process. In the case of ex parte orders, notice and opportunity to be heard must be provided within the time required by State law, and in any event within a reasonable time after the order is issued, sufficient to protect the respondent's due process rights.

"(c) CROSS OR COUNTER PETITION.—A protection order issued by a State court against one who has petitioned, filed a complaint, or otherwise filed a written pleading for protection against abuse by a spouse or intimate partner is not entitled to full faith and credit if—

"(1) no cross or counter petition, complaint, or other written pleading was filed seeking such a protection order; or

"(2) if a cross or counter petition has been filed, if the court did not make specific findings that each party was entitled to such an order.

"§ 2266. Definitions for chapter

"As used in this chapter—

"(1) the term 'spouse, or intimate partner' includes—

"(A) a present or former spouse, a person who shares a child in common with the abuser, and a person who cohabits or has cohabited with the abuser as a spouse; and

"(B) any other person similarly situated to a spouse, other than a child, who is protected by the domestic or family violence laws of the State in which the injury occurred or where the victim resides;

"(2) the term 'protection order' includes any injunction or other order issued for the purpose of preventing violent or threatening acts by one spouse against his or her spouse or intimate partner, including temporary and final orders issued by civil and criminal courts (other than support or child custody orders) whether obtained by filing an independent action or as a pendente lite order in another proceeding so long as any civil order was issued in response to a complaint, petition or motion of an abused spouse or intimate partner;

"(3) the term 'act that injures' includes any act, except those done in self-defense, that results in physical injury or sexual abuse;

"(4) the term 'State' includes a State of the United States, the District of Columbia, and any Indian tribe, commonwealth, territory, or possession of the United States; and

"(5) the term 'travel across State lines' includes any such travel except travel across State lines by an Indian tribal member when that member remained at all times on tribal lands."

(b) TABLE OF CHAPTERS.—The table of chapters for part 1 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item for chapter 110 the following:

"110A. Violence against spouses ..... 2261."

Subtitle B—Arrest in Spousal Abuse Cases

SEC. 221. ENCOURAGING ARREST POLICIES.

The Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10400) is amended by adding after section 311 the following:

"SEC. 312. ENCOURAGING ARREST POLICIES.

"(a) PURPOSE.—To encourage States, Indian tribes and localities to treat spousal violence as a serious violation of criminal law, the Secretary is authorized to make grants to eligible States, Indian tribes, municipalities, or local government entities for the following purposes:

"(1) to implement pro-arrest programs and policies in police departments and to improve tracking of cases involving spousal abuse;

"(2) to centralize and coordinate police enforcement, prosecution, or judicial responsibility for, spousal abuse cases in one group or unit of police officers, prosecutors, or judges;

"(3) to educate judges in criminal and other courts about spousal abuse and to improve judicial handling of such cases.

"(b) ELIGIBILITY.—(1) Eligible grantees are those States, Indian tribes, municipalities or other local government entities that—

"(A) demonstrate, through arrest and conviction statistics, that their laws or policies have been effective in significantly increasing the number of arrests made of spouse abusers; and

“(B) certify that their laws or official policies—

“(i) mandate arrest of spouse abusers based on probable cause that violence has been committed or mandate arrest of spouses violating the terms of a valid and outstanding protection order; or

“(ii) permit warrantless misdemeanor arrests of spouse abusers and encourage the use of that authority;

“(C) demonstrate that their laws, policies, practices and training programs discourage ‘dual’ arrests of abuser and abuser and the increase in arrest rates demonstrated pursuant to paragraph (1)(A) is not the result of increased dual arrests; and

“(D) certify that their laws, policies, and practices prohibit issuance of mutual protection orders in cases where only one spouse has sought a protective order, and require findings of mutual aggression to issue mutual protective orders in cases where both parties file a claim.

“(2) For purposes of this section, the term ‘protection order’ includes any injunction issued for the purpose of preventing violent or threatening acts of spouse abuse, including temporary and final orders issued by civil and criminal courts (other than support or child custody orders) whether obtained by filing an independent action or as a pendent lite order in another proceeding.

“(3) For purposes of this section, the term ‘spousal or spouse abuse’ includes felony or misdemeanor offenses committed by a current or former spouse of the victim, a person with whom the victim shares a child in common, a person who is cohabiting with or has cohabited with the victim as a spouse, or any other person protected under the domestic or family violence laws of the jurisdiction receiving grant monies.

“(4) The eligibility requirements provided in this section shall take effect one year after the date of enactment of this section.

“(c) DELEGATION AND AUTHORIZATION.—The Secretary shall delegate to the Attorney General of the United States the Secretary’s responsibilities for carrying out this section to the Attorney General. There are authorized to be appropriated not in excess of $25,000,000 for each fiscal year to be used for the purpose of making grants under this section.

“(d) APPLICATION.—An eligible grantee shall submit an application to the Secretary. Such application shall—

“(1) contain a certification by the chief executive officer of the State, Indian tribes, municipality, or local government entity that the conditions of subsection (b) are met;

“(2) describe the entity’s plans to further the purposes listed in subsection (a);

“(3) identify the agency or office or groups of agencies or offices responsible for carrying out the program; and

“(4) identify and include documentation showing the nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs that will be consulted in developing, and implementing, the program.

“(e) PRIORITY.—In awarding grants under this section, the Secretary shall give priority to a grantee that—

“(1) does not currently provide for centralized handling of cases involving spousal or family violence in any one of the areas listed in this subsection—police, prosecutors, and courts; and

“(2) demonstrates a commitment to strong enforcement of laws, and prosecution of cases, involving spousal or family violence.

“(f) REPORTING.—Each grantee receiving funds under this section shall submit a report to the Secretary evaluating the effectiveness of the plan described in subsection (d)(2) and containing such additional information as the Secretary may prescribe.

“(g) REGULATIONS.—No later than 45 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall publish proposed regulations implementing this section. No later than 120 days after such date, the Secretary shall publish final regulations implementing this section.”

SEC. 243. GRANTS FOR PUBLIC INFORMATION CAMPAIGNS.

The Family Violence Prevention and Services Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

“GRANTS FOR PUBLIC INFORMATION CAMPAIGNS

“SEC. 314. (a) The Secretary may make grants to public or private nonprofit entities to provide public information campaigns regarding domestic violence through the use of public service announcements and informative materials that are designed for print media, billboards, public transit advertising, electronic broadcast media, and other vehicles for information that shall inform the public concerning domestic violence.

“(b) No grant, contract, or cooperative agreement shall be made or entered into under this section unless an application that meets the requirements of subsection (c) has been approved by the Secretary.

“(c) An application submitted under subsection (b) shall—

“(1) provide such agreements, assurances, and information, be in such form and be submitted in such manner as the Secretary shall prescribe through notice in the Federal Register, including a description of how the proposed public information campaign will target the population at risk, including pregnant women;

“(2) include a complete description of the plan of the application for the development of a public information campaign;

“(3) identify the specific audiences that will be educated, including communities and groups with the highest prevalence of domestic violence;

“(4) identify the media to be used in the campaign and the geographic distribution of the campaign;

“(5) describe plans to test market a development plan with a relevant population group and in a relevant geographic area and give assurance that effectiveness criteria will be implemented prior to the completion of the final plan that will include an evaluation component to measure the overall effectiveness of the campaign;

“(6) describe the kind, amount, distribution, and timing of informational messages and such other information as the Secretary may require, with assurances that media organizations and other groups with which such messages are placed will not lower the current frequency of public service announcements; and

“(7) contain such other information as the Secretary may require.

“(d) A grant, contract, or agreement made or entered into under this section shall be used for the development of a public information campaign that may include public service announcements, paid educational messages for print media, public transit advertising, electronic broadcast media, and any other mode of conveying information that the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

“(e) The criteria for awarding grants shall ensure that an applicant—

“(1) will conduct activities that educate communities and groups at greatest risk;

“(2) has a record of high quality campaigns of a comparable type; and

“(3) has a record of high quality campaigns that educate the population groups identified as most at risk.”

SEC. 244. FUND DISTRIBUTION TO STATES.

(1) striking “, and” and all that follows through “fiscal years”; and

(2) striking “$50,000” and inserting “$75,000”.

SEC. 247. GRANTS TO ENTITIES OTHER THAN STATES; LOCAL SHARE.

The first sentence of section 303(f) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10402(f)) is amended to read as follows: “No grant may be made under this section to an entity other than a State or Indian tribe unless the entity provides 35 percent of the funding of the program or project funded by the grant.”

SEC. 248. SHELTER AND RELATED ASSISTANCE.

(a) CHANGE OF PERCENTAGES.—Section 303(g) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10402(g)) is amended by striking "not less than 60 percent" and inserting "not less than 75 percent".

(b) DEFINITION OF RELATED ASSISTANCE.—Section 309(5) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act is amended to read as follows:

"(5) The term 'related assistance' includes any, but does not require all, of the following—

"(A) food, shelter, medical services, and counseling with respect to family violence, including counseling by peers individually or in groups;

"(B) transportation, legal assistance, referrals for appropriate health-care services (including alcohol and drug abuse treatment), and technical assistance with respect to obtaining financial assistance under Federal and State programs;

"(C) comprehensive counseling and self-help services to abusers, preventive health (including nutrition, exercise, and prevention of substance abuse), educational services and employment training; and

"(D) child care services for children who are victims of family violence or the dependents of such victims."

SEC. 249. LAW ENFORCEMENT TRAINING AND TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE GRANTS.

Section 311 of the Family Violence Protection and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10410(b)) is repealed.

SEC. 250. REPORT ON RECORDKEEPING.

Not later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Government Accounting Office shall complete a study of, and shall submit to Congress a report and recommendations on, problems of record-keeping of criminal complaints involving domestic violence. The study and report shall examine efforts to date of the FBI and Justice Department to collect statistics on domestic violence and the feasibility of, including a suggested timetable for, requiring that the relationship between an offender and victim be reported in Federal and State records of crimes of assault, aggravated assault, rape, and other violent crimes.

SEC. 251. MODEL STATE LEADERSHIP INCENTIVE GRANTS FOR DOMESTIC VIOLENCE INTERVENTION.

The Family Violence Prevention Services Act, as amended by section 103 of this Act, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"MODEL STATE LEADERSHIP GRANTS FOR DOMESTIC VIOLENCE INTERVENTION"

"SEC. 315. (a) The Secretary, in cooperation with the Attorney General, shall award grants to not less than 10 States to assist in becoming model demonstration States and in meeting the costs of improving State leadership concerning activities that will—

"(1) increase the number of prosecutions for domestic violence crimes;

"(2) encourage the reporting of incidences of domestic violence;

"(3) facilitate 'arrests and aggressive' prosecution policies; and

"(4) provides court advocacy for victims of domestic violence.

"(b) To be designated as a model State under subsection (a), a State shall have in effect—

"(1) a law that requires mandatory arrest of a person that police have probable cause to believe has committed an act of domestic violence or probable cause to believe has violated an outstanding civil protection order;

"(2) a law or policy that discourages * * *

"(B) implement model projects that include either—

"(i) a 'no-drop' prosecution policy; or

"(ii) a vertical prosecution policy; and

"(C) limit diversion to extraordinary cases, and then only after an admission before a judge or 'dual' arrests;

"(3) statewide prosecution policies that—

"(A) authorize and encourage prosecutors to pursue cases where a criminal case can be proved, including proceeding without the active involvement of the victim if necessary; and

"(B) implement model projects that include either—

"(i) a 'no-drop' prosecution policy; or

"(ii) a vertical prosecution policy; and

"(C) limit diversion to extraordinary cases, and then only after an admission before a judicial officer has been entered;

"(4) statewide laws, policies, or guidelines for judges that—

"(A) prohibit the issuance of mutual protective orders in cases where only one spouse has sought a protective order and require findings of mutual aggression to issue mutual protective orders in cases where both parties file a claim;

"(B) require that any history of child abuse be considered detrimental to the child and discourage custody or joint custody orders by spouse abusers; and

"(C) encourage the understanding of domestic violence as a serious criminal offense and not a trivial dispute;

"(5) develop and disseminate methods to improve the criminal justice system's response to domestic violence to make existing remedies as easily available as possible to victims of domestic violence, including reducing delay, eliminating court fees, and providing easily understandable court forms.

"(c)(1) In addition to the funds authorized to be appropriated under section 310, there are authorized to be appropriated to make grants under this section $25,000,000 for fiscal year 1992 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1993 and 1994.

"(2) Funds shall be distributed under this section so that no State shall receive more than $2,500,000 in each fiscal year under this section.

"(3) The Secretary shall delegate to the Attorney General the Secretary's responsibilities for carrying out this section and shall transfer to the Attorney General the funds appropriated under this section for the purpose of making grants under this section."

SEC. 252. FUNDING FOR TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE CENTERS.

The Family Violence Prevention and Services Act is amended by inserting after section 308 the following:

"SEC. 308A. TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE CENTERS.

"(a) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this section is to provide training and technical assistance to State, Indian tribal, and local domestic violence programs and to other professionals who provide services to victims of domestic violence. From the sums authorized under this title, the Secretary shall provide grants to or contract with, private nonprofit organizations, for the establishment and maintenance of one national and six special-issue resource centers serving defined geographic areas. One national resource center shall offer resource, policy, and/or training assistance to Federal, State, Indian tribal, and local government agencies on issues pertaining to domestic violence and serve a coordinating and resource-sharing function among domestic violence service providers, and maintain a central resource library. The other national resource centers shall provide information, training and technical assistance to State, tribal and local domestic violence service providers. In addition, each national center shall specialize in one of the following areas of domestic violence service, prevention or law:

"(1) criminal justice response to domestic violence, including court-mandated abuser treatment;

"(2) child custody issues in domestic violence cases;

"(3) use of the self-defense plea by domestic violence victims;

"(4) health care response and access to health care resources for domestic violence victims;

"(5) victims' access to, and quality of, effective legal assistance, including civil litigation; and

"(6) the response of child protective service agencies to battered mothers of abused children.

"(b) ELIGIBILITY.—Eligible grantees are private non-profit organizations that—

"(1) focus primarily on domestic violence;

"(2) provide documentation to the Secretary demonstrating a minimum of three years experience with issues of domestic violence, particularly in the specific area for which it is applying;

"(3) include on its advisory boards representatives from domestic violence programs who are geographically and culturally diverse; and

"(4) demonstrate strong support from domestic violence advocates for their designation as the special-issue resource center.

"(c) REPORTING.—Each grantee receiving funds under this section shall submit a report to the Secretary evaluating the effectiveness of the plan described and containing such additional information as the Secretary may prescribe.

"(d) REGULATIONS.—No later than 45 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall publish proposed regulations implementing this section."

Subtitle E—Youth Education and Domestic Violence*SEC. 261. EDUCATING YOUTH ABOUT DOMESTIC VIOLENCE.

(a) GENERAL PURPOSE.—For purposes of this section, the Secretary shall delegate his powers to the Secretary of Education, hereinafter referred to as the "Secretary". The Secretary shall select, implement and evaluate four model programs for education of young people about domestic violence and violence among intimate partners.

(b) NATURE OF PROGRAM.—The Secretary shall select, implement and evaluate separate model programs for four different audiences: primary schools, middle schools, secondary schools, and institutions of higher education. These model programs shall be selected, implemented, and evaluated with the input of educational experts, legal and psychological experts on battering, and victim advocate organizations such as battered women's shelters, State coalitions and resource centers. The participation of each of these groups or individual consultants from such groups is essential to the selection, implementation, and evaluation of programs that meet both the needs of educational institutions and the needs of the domestic violence problem.

(c) REVIEW AND DISSEMINATION.—Not later than 24 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall transmit the design and evaluation of the model programs, along with a plan and cost estimate for nationwide distribution, to the relevant committees of Congress for review.

(d) AUTHORIZATION.—There are authorized to be appropriated under this section for fiscal year 1992, $400,000 to carry out the purposes of this section.

Subtitle F—Confidentiality for Abused Persons

SEC. 271. CONFIDENTIALITY OF ABUSED PERSON'S ADDRESS.

No later than 90 days after the enactment of this Act, the Postmaster General shall promulgate regulations to secure the confidentiality of abused persons' addresses or otherwise prohibit the disclosure of an abused person's address consistent with the following guidelines:

(1) confidentiality shall be provided upon the presentation to an appropriate postal official of an existing and valid court order for the protection of an abused spouse;

(2) disclosure of addresses to State or Federal agencies for legitimate law enforcement or other governmental purposes shall not be prohibited; and

(3) compilations of addresses existing at the time the order is presented to an appropriate postal official shall be excluded from the scope of the proposed regulations.

TITLE III—CIVIL RIGHTS

SEC. 301. CIVIL RIGHTS.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) crimes motivated by the victim's gender constitute bias crimes in violation of the victim's right to be free from discrimination on the basis of gender;

(2) current law provides a civil rights remedy for gender crimes committed in the workplace, but not for gender crimes committed on the street or in the home; and

(3) State and Federal criminal laws do not adequately protect against the bias element of gender-motivated crimes, which separates these crimes from acts of random violence, nor do those laws adequately provide victims of gender-motivated crimes the opportunity to vindicate their interests;

(4) existing bias and discrimination in the criminal justice system often deprives victims of gender-motivated crimes of equal protection of the laws and the redress to which they are entitled;

(5) gender-motivated violence has a substantial adverse effect on interstate commerce, by deterring potential victims from traveling interstate, from engaging in employment in interstate business, and from transacting with business, and in places involved, in interstate commerce;

(6) gender-motivated violence has a substantial adverse effect on interstate commerce, by diminishing national productivity, increasing medical and other costs, and decreasing the supply of and the demand for interstate products;

(7) a Federal civil rights action as specified in this section is necessary to guarantee equal protection of the laws and to reduce the substantial adverse effects of gender-motivated violence on interstate commerce; and

(8) victims of gender-motivated violence have a right to equal protection of the laws, including a system of justice that is unaffected by bias or discrimination and that, at every relevant stage, treats such crimes as seriously as other violent crimes.

(b) RIGHTS, PRIVILEGES AND IMMUNITIES.—All persons within the United States shall have the same rights, privileges and immunities in every State as is enjoyed by all other persons to be free from crimes of violence motivated by the victim's gender, as defined in subsection (d).

(c) CAUSE OF ACTION.—Any person, including a person who acts under color of any statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage of any State, who commits a crime of violence motivated by gender and thus deprives another of the rights, privileges or immunities secured by the Constitution or laws as enumerated in subsection (b) shall be liable to the party injured, in an action for the recovery of compensatory and punitive damages, injunctive and declaratory relief, and such other relief as the court may deem appropriate.

(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

(1) the term "crime of violence motivated by gender" means any crime of violence, as defined in this section, including rape, sexual assault, sexual abuse, abusive sexual contact, or any other crime of violence committed because of gender or on the basis of gender; and

(2) the term "crime of violence" means an act or series of acts that would come within the meaning of State or Federal offenses described in section 16 of title 18, United States Code, whether or not those acts have actually resulted in criminal charges, prosecution, or conviction and whether or not those acts were committed in the special maritime, territorial, or prison jurisdiction of the United States.

(e) LIMITATION AND PROCEDURES.—

(1) LIMITATION.—Nothing in this section entitles a person to a cause of action under subsection (c) for random acts of violence unrelated to gender or for acts that cannot be demonstrated, by a preponderance of the evidence, to be "motivated by gender" as defined in subsection (d).

(2) NO PRIOR CRIMINAL ACTION.—Nothing in this section requires a prior criminal complaint, prosecution, or conviction to establish the necessary elements of a cause of action under subsection (c).

SEC. 302. CONFORMING AMENDMENT.

The Civil Rights Attorney's Fees Awards Act of 1976 (42 U.S.C. 1988) is amended—

(1) in the last sentence, by striking "or" after "Public Law 92-318,"; and

(2) by adding after "1964," the following: "or title III of the Violence Against Women Act of 1991."

TITLE IV—SAFE CAMPUSES FOR WOMEN

SEC. 401. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Safe Campuses for Women Act of 1990".

SEC. 402. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) rape prevention and education programs are essential to an educational environment free of fear for students' personal safety;

(2) sexual assault on campus, whether by fellow students or not, is widespread among the Nation's higher education institutions: experts estimate that 1 in 7 of the women now in college have been raped and over half of college rape victims know their attackers;

(3) sexual assault poses a grave threat to the physical and mental well-being of students and may significantly impair the learning process; and

(4) action by schools to educate students may make substantial inroads on the incidence of rape, including the incidence of acquaintance rape on campus.

SEC. 403. GRANTS FOR CAMPUS RAPE EDUCATION.

Title X of the Higher Education Act of 1965 is amended to add at the end thereof the following:

"PART D—GRANTS FOR CAMPUS RAPE EDUCATION."

SEC. 1071. GRANTS FOR CAMPUS RAPE EDUCATION.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) The Secretary of Education is authorized to make grants to or enter into contracts with institutions of higher education for rape education and prevention programs under this section.

"(2) The Secretary shall make financial assistance available on a competitive basis under this section. An institution of higher education or consortium of such institutions which desires to receive a grant or enter into a contract under this section shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require in accordance with regulations.

"(3) The Secretary shall make every effort to ensure the equitable participation of private and public institutions of higher education and to ensure the equitable geographic participation of such institutions. In the award of grants and contracts under this section, the Secretary shall give priority to institutions who show the greatest need for the sums requested.

"(b) GENERAL RAPE PREVENTION AND EDUCATION GRANTS.—Grants under this section shall be used to educate and provide support services to student victims of rape or sexual assault. Grants may be used for the following purposes:

"(1) to provide training for campus security and college personnel, including campus disciplinary or judicial boards, that address the issues of rape, sexual assault, and other gender-motivated crimes;

"(2) to develop, disseminate, or implement campus security and student disciplinary policies to prevent and discipline rape, sexual assault and other gender-motivated crimes;

"(3) to develop, enlarge or strengthen support services programs including medical or psychological counseling to assist victims' recovery from rape, sexual assault, or other gender-motivated crimes;

"(4) to create, disseminate, or otherwise provide assistance and information about victims' options on and off campus to bring disciplinary or other legal action; and

"(5) to implement, operate, or improve rape education and prevention programs, including programs making use of peer-to-peer education.

"(c) MODEL GRANTS.—Not less than 25 percent of the funds authorized under this section shall be available for grants for model demonstration programs to be coordinated with local rape crisis centers for the development and implementation of quality rape prevention and education curricula and for local programs to provide services to student rape victims.

"(d) ELIGIBILITY.—No institution of higher education or consortium of such institutions shall be eligible for a grant under this section unless—

"(1) its student code of conduct, or other written policy governing student behavior, explicitly prohibits not only rape but all forms of sexual assault; and

"(2) it has in effect and implements a written policy requiring the disclosure to the victim of any sexual assault the outcome of any investigation by campus police or campus disciplinary proceedings brought pursuant to the victim's complaint against the alleged perpetrator of the sexual assault: Provided, That nothing in this section shall be interpreted to authorize disclosure to any person other than the victim.

“(e) APPLICATIONS.—(1) In order to be eligible to receive a grant under this section for any fiscal year, an institution of higher education, or consortium of such institutions, shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time and in such manner as the Secretary shall prescribe.

“(2) Each such application shall—

“(A) set forth the activities and programs to be carried out with funds granted under this part;

“(B) contain an estimate of the cost for the establishment and operation of such programs;

“(C) explain how the program intends to address the issue of acquaintance rape;

“(D) provide assurances that the Federal funds made available under this section shall be used to supplement and, to the extent practical, to increase the level of funds that would, in the absence of such Federal funds, be made available by the applicant for the purpose described in this part, and in no case to supplant such funds; and

“(E) include such other information and assurances as the Secretary reasonably determines to be necessary.

“(e) GRANTEE REPORTING.—Upon completion of the grant period under this section, the grantee institution or consortium of institutions shall file a performance report with the Secretary explaining the activities carried out together with an assessment of the effectiveness of those activities in achieving the purposes of this section. The Secretary shall suspend funding for an approved application if an applicant fails to submit an annual performance report.

“(f) DEFINITIONS.—(1) Except as otherwise provided, the terms used in this part shall have the meaning provided under section 2981 of this title.

“(2) For purposes of this subchapter, the following terms have the following meanings:

“(A) The term ‘rape education and prevention’ includes programs that provide educational seminars, peer-to-peer counseling, operation of hotlines, self-defense courses, the preparation of informational materials, and any other effort to increase campus awareness of the facts about, or to help prevent, sexual assault.

“(B) The term ‘Secretary’ means the Secretary of Education.

“(g) GENERAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—(1) REGULATIONS.—No later than 45 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall publish proposed regulations implementing this section. No later than 120 days after such date, the Secretary shall publish final regulations implementing this section.

“(2) No later than 180 days after the end of each fiscal year for which grants are made under this section, the Secretary shall submit to the committees of the House of Representatives and the Senate responsible for issues relating to higher education and to crime, a report that includes—

“(A) the amount of grants made under this section;

“(B) a summary of the purposes for which those grants were provided and an evaluation of their progress; and

“(C) a copy of each grantee report filed pursuant to subsection (e) of this section.

“(3) For the purpose of carrying out this subchapter, there are authorized to be appropriated $20,000,000 for the fiscal year 1992, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1993, 1994, and 1995.”

SEC. 404. REQUIRED CAMPUS REPORTING OF SEXUAL ASSAULT.

Section 204(f) of the Crime Awareness and Campus Security Act of 1990 is amended to read as follows:

“(F) Statistics concerning the occurrence on campus, during the most recent school year, and during the 2 preceding school years for which data are available, of the following criminal offenses reported to campus security authorities or local police agencies—

- “(i) murder;
- “(ii) rape or sexual assault;
- “(iii) robbery;
- “(iv) aggravated assault;
- “(v) burglary; and
- “(vi) motor vehicle theft.

TITLE V—EQUAL JUSTICE FOR WOMEN IN THE COURTS ACT OF 1990

SECTION 501. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the “Equal Justice for Women in the Courts Act of 1991”.

Subtitle A—Education and Training for Judges and Court Personnel in State Courts

SEC. 511. GRANTS AUTHORIZED.

The State Justice Institute is authorized to award grants for the purpose of developing, testing, presenting, and disseminating model programs to be used by States in training judges and court personnel in the laws of the States on rape, sexual assault, domestic violence, and other crimes of violence motivated by the victim's gender.

SEC. 512. TRAINING PROVIDED BY GRANTS.

Training provided pursuant to grants made under this subtitle may include current information, existing studies, or current data on—

- (1) the nature and incidence of rape and sexual assault by strangers and nonstrangers, marital rape, and incest;
- (2) the underreporting of rape, sexual assault, and child sexual abuse;
- (3) the physical, psychological, and economic impact of rape and sexual assault on the victim, the costs to society, and the implications for sentencing;
- (4) the psychology of sex offenders, their high rate of recidivism, and the implications for sentencing;
- (5) the historical evolution of laws and attitudes on rape and sexual assault;
- (6) sex stereotyping of female and male victims of rape and sexual assault, racial stereotyping of rape victims and defendants, and the impact of such stereotypes on credibility of witnesses, sentencing, and other aspects of the administration of justice;
- (7) application of rape shield laws and other limits on introduction of evidence that may subject victims to improper sex stereotyping and harassment in both rape and nonrape cases, including the need for sua sponte judicial intervention in inappropriate cross-examination;
- (8) the use of expert witness testimony on rape trauma syndrome, child sexual abuse accommodation syndrome, post-traumatic stress syndrome, and similar issues;
- (9) the legitimate reasons why victims of rape, sexual assault, and incest may refuse to testify against a defendant;
- (10) the nature and incidence of domestic violence;
- (11) the physical, psychological, and economic impact of domestic violence on the victim, the costs to society, and the implications for court procedures and sentencing;
- (12) the psychology and self-presentation of batterers and victims and the implications for court proceedings and credibility of witnesses;
- (13) sex stereotyping of female and male victims of domestic violence, myths about presence or absence of domestic violence in certain racial, ethnic, religious, or socioeconomic groups, and their impact on the administration of justice;

(14) historical evolution of laws and attitudes on domestic violence;

(15) proper and improper interpretations of the defenses of self-defense and provocation, and the use of expert witness testimony on battered woman syndrome;

(16) the likelihood of retaliation, recidivism, and escalation of violence by batterers, and the potential impact of incarceration and other meaningful sanctions for acts of domestic violence including violations of orders of protection;

(17) economic, psychological, social and institutional reasons for victims' inability to leave the batterer, to report domestic violence or to follow through on complaints, including the influence of lack of support from police, judges, and court personnel, and the legitimate reasons why victims of domestic violence may refuse to testify against a defendant;

(18) the need for orders of protection, and the implications of mutual orders of protection, dual arrest policies, and mediation in domestic violence cases;

(19) recognition of and response to gender-motivated crimes of violence other than rape, sexual assault and domestic violence, such as mass or serial murder motivated by the gender of the victims; and

(20) current information on the impact of pornography on crimes against women, or data on other activities that tend to degrade women.

SEC. 513. COOPERATION IN DEVELOPING PROGRAMS IN MAKING GRANTS UNDER THIS TITLE.

The State Justice Institute shall ensure that model programs carried out pursuant to grants made under this subtitle are developed with the participation of law enforcement officials, public and private nonprofit victim advocates, legal experts, prosecutors, defense attorneys, and recognized experts on gender bias in the courts.

SEC. 514. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There is authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1992, $600,000 to carry out the purposes of this subtitle. Of amounts appropriated under this section, the State Justice Institute shall expend no less than 40 percent on model programs regarding domestic violence and no less than 40 percent on model programs regarding rape and sexual assault.

Subtitle B—Education and Training for Judges and Court Personnel in Federal Courts

SEC. 521. EDUCATION AND TRAINING GRANTS.

(a) STUDY.—The Federal Judicial Center shall conduct a study of the nature and extent of gender bias in the Federal courts, including in proceedings involving rape, sexual assault, domestic violence, and other crimes of violence motivated by gender. The study shall be conducted by the use of data collection techniques such as reviews of trial and appellate opinions and transcripts, public hearings, and inquiries to attorneys practicing in the Federal courts. The Federal Judicial Center shall publicly issue a final report containing a detailed description of the findings and conclusions of the study, including such recommendations for legislative, administrative, and judicial action as it considers appropriate.

(b) MODEL PROGRAMS.—(1) The Federal Judicial Center shall develop, test, present, and disseminate model programs to be used in training Federal judges and court personnel in the laws on rape, sexual assault, domestic violence, and other crimes of violence motivated by the victim's gender.

(2) The training programs developed under this subsection shall include—

(A) all of the topics listed in section 512 of subtitle A; and

(B) all procedural and substantive aspects of the legal rights and remedies for violent crime motivated by gender including such areas as the Federal penalties for sex crimes, interstate enforcement of laws against domestic violence and civil rights remedies for violent crimes motivated by gender.

SEC. 522. COOPERATION IN DEVELOPING PROGRAMS.

In implementing this subtitle, the Federal Judicial Center shall ensure that the study and model programs are developed with the participation of law enforcement officials, public and private nonprofit victim advocates, legal experts, prosecutors, defense attorneys, and recognized experts on gender bias in the courts.

SEC. 523. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There is authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1992, $400,000 to carry out the purposes of this subtitle. Of amounts appropriated under this section, no less than 25 percent and no more than 40 percent shall be expended by the Federal Judicial Center on the study required by section 521(a) of this subtitle.

SEC. 101. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Safe Streets for Women Act of 1991".

Subtitle A—Federal Penalties for Sex Crimes

SEC. 111. REPEAT OFFENDERS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"§ 2247. Repeat offenders

"Any person who violates a provision of this chapter, after one or more prior convictions for an offense punishable under this chapter, or after one or more prior convictions under the laws of any State or foreign country relating to aggravated sexual abuse, sexual abuse, or abusive sexual contact, is punishable by a term of imprisonment up to twice that otherwise authorized."

(b) TABLE OF SECTIONS.—The table of sections for chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"2247. Repeat offenders."

SEC. 112. FEDERAL PENALTIES.

(a) RAPE AND AGGRAVATED RAPE.—Pursuant to its authority under section 994(p) of title 28, United States Code, the United States Sentencing Commission shall amend its sentencing guidelines to provide that a defendant convicted of aggravated sexual abuse under section 2241 of title 18, United States Code, or sexual abuse under section 2242 of title 18, United States Code, shall be assigned a base offense level under chapter 2 of the sentencing guidelines that is at least 4 levels greater than the base offense level applicable to criminal sexual abuse under the guidelines in effect on November 1, 1990, or otherwise shall amend the guidelines applicable to such offenses so as to achieve a comparable minimum guideline sentence. In amending such guidelines, the Sentencing Commission shall review the appropriateness of existing specific offense characteristics or other adjustments applicable to such offenses, and make such changes as it deems appropriate, taking into account the severity of rape offenses, with or without aggravating factors; the unique nature and duration of the mental injuries inflicted on the victims of such offenses; and any other relevant factors.

(b) EFFECT OF AMENDMENT.—If the sentencing guidelines are amended after the effective date of this section, the Sentencing Commission shall implement the instructions set forth in subsection (a) so as to achieve a comparable result.

(c) STATUTORY RAPE.—

(1) Section 2243(b) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking "one year," and inserting "two years,".

(2) Pursuant to its authority under section 994(p) of title 28, United States Code, the United States Sentencing Commission shall promulgate guidelines or amend existing guidelines to incorporate the increase in maximum penalties provided by this section for section 2243(b) of title 18, United States Code.

SEC. 113. MANDATORY RESTITUTION FOR SEX CRIMES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"§ 2248. Mandatory restitution

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding the terms of section 3663 of this title, and in addition to any other civil or criminal penalty authorized by law, the court shall order restitution for any offense under this chapter.

"(b) SCOPE AND NATURE OF ORDER.—(1) The order of restitution under this section shall direct that—

“(A) the defendant pay to the victim the full amount of the victim’s losses as determined by the court, pursuant to paragraph (2); and

“(B) the United States Attorney enforce the restitution order by all available and reasonable means.

“(2) For purposes of this subsection, the term ‘full amount of the victim’s losses’ includes any costs incurred by the victim for—

“(A) medical services relating to physical, psychiatric, or psychological care;

“(B) physical and occupational therapy or rehabilitation;

“(C) lost income;

“(D) attorneys’ fees; and

“(E) any other losses suffered by the victim as a proximate result of the offense.

“(3) Restitution orders under this section are mandatory. A court may not decline to issue an order under this section because of—

“(A) the economic circumstances of the defendant; or

“(B) the fact that a victim has, or is entitled to, receive compensation for his or her injuries from the proceeds of insurance or any other source.

“(4)(A) Notwithstanding the terms of paragraph (3), the court may take into account the economic circumstances of the defendant in determining the manner in which and the schedule according to which the restitution is to be paid.

“(B) For purposes of this paragraph, the term ‘economic circumstances’ includes—

“(i) the financial resources and other assets of the defendant;

“(ii) projected earnings, earning capacity, and other income of the defendant; and

“(iii) any financial obligations of the defendant, including obligations to dependents.

“(C) An order under this section may direct the defendant to make a single lump-sum payment or partial payments at specified intervals. The order shall also provide that the defendant’s restitutionary obligation takes priority over any criminal fine ordered.

“(D) In the event that the victim has recovered for any amount of loss through the proceeds of insurance or any other source, the order of restitution shall provide that restitution be paid to the person who provided the compensation, but that restitution shall be paid to the victim before any restitution is paid to any other provider of compensation.

“(5) Any amount paid to a victim under this section shall be set off against any amount later recovered as compensatory damages by the victim from the defendant in—

“(A) any Federal civil proceeding; and

“(B) any State civil proceeding, to the extent provided by the law of the State.

“(c) PROOF OF CLAIM.—(1) Within 60 days after conviction and, in any event, no later than 10 days prior to sentencing, the United States Attorney (or his delegatee), after consulting with the victim, shall prepare and file an affidavit with the court listing the amounts subject to restitution under this section. The affidavit shall be signed by the United States Attorney (or his delegatee) and the victim. Should the victim object to any of the information included in the affidavit, the United States Attorney (or his delegatee) shall advise the victim that the victim may file a separate affidavit.

“(2) If no objection is raised by the defendant, the amounts attested to in the affidavit filed pursuant to subsection (1) shall be entered in the court’s restitution order. If objection is raised, the court may require the victim or the United States Attorney (or his delegatee) to submit further affidavits or other supporting documents, demonstrating the victim’s losses.

“(3) If the court concludes, after reviewing the supporting documentation and considering the defendant’s objections, that there is a substantial reason for doubting the authenticity or veracity of the records submitted, the court may require additional documentation or hear testimony on those questions. Any records filed, or testimony heard, pursuant to this section, shall be in camera in the judge’s chambers. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, this section does not entitle the defendant to discovery of the contents of, or matters related to, any supporting documentation, including medical, psychological, or psychiatric records.

“(4) In the event that the victim’s losses are not ascertainable 10 days prior to sentencing as provided in subsection (c)(1), the United States Attorney (or his delegatee) shall so inform the court, and the court shall set a date for the final determination of the victim’s losses, not to exceed 90 days after sentencing. If the victim subsequently discovers further losses, the victim shall have 60 days after discovery of those losses in which to petition the court for an amended restitution order. Such order may be granted only upon a showing of good cause for the failure to include such losses in the initial claim for restitutionary relief.

“(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section, the term ‘victim’ includes any person who has suffered direct physical, emotional, or pecuniary harm as a result of a commission of a crime under this chapter, including, in the case of a victim who is under 18 years of age, incompetent, incapacitated, or deceased, the legal guardian of the victim or representative of the victim’s estate, another family member, or any other person appointed as suitable by the court: Provided, That in no event shall the defendant be named as such representative or guardian.”.

(b) TABLE OF SECTIONS.—The table of sections for chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

“2248. Mandatory restitution.”.

Subtitle B—Law Enforcement and Prosecution Grants To Reduce Violent Crimes Against Women

SEC. 121. GRANTS TO COMBAT VIOLENT CRIMES AGAINST WOMEN.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.) is amended by—

(1) redesignating part N as part O;

(2) redesignating section 1401 as section 1501; and

(3) adding after part M the following:

“PART N—GRANTS TO COMBAT VIOLENT CRIMES AGAINST WOMEN

“SEC. 1401. PURPOSE OF THE PROGRAM AND GRANTS.

“(a) GENERAL PROGRAM PURPOSE.—The purpose of this part is to assist States, Indian tribes, cities, and other localities to develop effective law enforcement and prosecution strategies to combat violent crimes against women and, in particular, to focus efforts on those areas with the highest rates of violent crime against women.

“(b) PURPOSES FOR WHICH GRANTS MAY BE USED.—Grants under this part shall provide additional personnel, training, technical assistance, data collection and other equipment for the more widespread apprehension, prosecution, and adjudication of persons committing violent crimes against women and specifically, for the purposes of—

“(1) training law enforcement officers and prosecutors to more effectively identify and respond to violent crimes against women, including the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence;

“(2) developing, training, or expanding units of law enforcement officers and prosecutors specifically targeting violent crimes against women, including the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence;

“(3) developing and implementing police and prosecution policies, protocols, or orders specifically devoted to identifying and responding to violent crimes against women, including the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence;

“(4) developing, installing, or expanding data collection systems, including computerized systems, linking police, prosecutors, and courts or for the purpose of identifying and tracking arrests, prosecutions, and convictions for the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence; and

“(5) developing, enlarging, or strengthening victim services programs, including sexual assault and domestic violence programs, to increase reporting and reduce attrition rates for cases involving violent crimes against women, including the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence.

“SUBPART 1—HIGH INTENSITY CRIME AREA GRANTS

“SEC. 1411. HIGH INTENSITY GRANTS.

“(a) IN GENERAL.—The Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance (hereafter in this part referred to as the ‘Director’) shall make grants to areas of ‘high intensity crime’ against women.

“(b) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this part, a ‘high intensity crime area’ means an area with one of the 40 highest rates of violent crime against women, as determined by the Bureau of Justice Statistics pursuant to section 1412.

“SEC. 1412. HIGH INTENSITY GRANT APPLICATION.

“(a) COMPUTATION.—Within 45 days after the date of enactment of this part, the Bureau of Justice Statistics shall compile a list of the 40 areas with the highest rates of violent crime against women based on the combined female victimization rate per population for assault, sexual assault (including, but not limited to, rape), murder, robbery, and kidnapping.

“(b) USE OF DATA.—In calculating the combined female victimization rate required by subsection (a), the Bureau of Justice Statistics may rely on—

“(1) existing data collected by States, municipalities, Indian reservations or statistical metropolitan areas showing the number of police reports of the crimes listed in subsection (a); and

“(2) existing data collected by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, including data from those governmental entities already complying with the National Incident Based Reporting System, showing the number of police reports of crimes listed in subsection (a).

“(c) PUBLICATION.—After compiling the list set forth in subsection (a), the Bureau of Justice Statistics shall convey it to the Director who shall publish it in the Federal Register.

“(d) QUALIFICATION.—Upon satisfying the terms of subsection (e), any high intensity crime area shall be qualified for a grant under this subpart upon application by the chief executive officer of the governmental entities responsible for law enforcement and prosecution of criminal offenses within the area and certification that—

"(1) the funds shall be used to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women and for at least 3 of the purposes outlined in section 1401(b);

"(2) grantees and subgrantees shall develop a plan for implementation, and otherwise consult and coordinate program grants, with nongovernmental nonprofit victim services programs; and

"(3) at least 25 percent of the amount granted shall be allocated to each of the following three areas: prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services.

"(e) APPLICATION REQUIREMENTS.—The application requirements provided in section 513 of this title shall apply to grants made under this subpart. In addition, each application must provide the certifications required by subsection (d) including documentation from nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs showing their participation in developing the plan required by subsection (d)(2). Applications shall—

"(1) include documentation from the prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services programs to be assisted showing—

"(A) need for the grant funds;

"(B) intended use of the grant funds; and

"(C) expected results from the use of grant funds; and

"(2) proof of compliance with the requirements for the payment of forensic medical exams provided in section 162 of this title.

"(f) DISBURSEMENT.—

"(1) No later than 60 days after the receipt of an application under this subpart, the Director shall either disburse the appropriate sums provided for under this subpart or shall inform the applicant why the application does not conform to the terms of section 513 of this title or to the requirements of this section.

"(2) In disbursing monies under this subpart, the Director shall ensure, to the extent practicable, that grantees—

"(A) equitably distribute funds on a geographic basis;

"(B) determine the amount of subgrants based on the population to be served; and

"(C) give priority to areas with the greatest showing of need.

"(g) GRANTEE REPORTING.—Upon completion of the grant period under this subpart, the grantee shall file a performance report with the Director explaining the activities carried out together with an assessment of the effectiveness of those activities in achieving the purposes of this part. The Director shall suspend funding for an approved application if an applicant fails to submit an annual performance report.

"Subpart 2—Other Grants to States to Combat Violent Crimes Against Women

"SEC. 1421. GENERAL GRANTS TO STATES.

"(a) GENERAL GRANTS.—The Director is authorized to make grants to States, for use by States, units of local government in the States, and nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs in the States, for the purposes outlined in section 1401(b), and to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women.

"(b) AMOUNTS.—From amounts appropriated, the amount of grants under subsection (a) shall be—

"(1) $500,000 to each State; and

"(2) that portion of the then remaining available money to each State that results from a distribution among the States on the basis of each State's population in relation to the population of all States.

"(c) QUALIFICATION.—Upon satisfying the terms of subsection (d), any State shall be qualified for funds provided under this part upon certification that—

"(1) the funds shall be used to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women and for at least 3 of the purposes outlined in section 1401(b);

"(2) grantees and subgrantees shall develop a plan for implementation, and otherwise consult and coordinate, with nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs, including sexual assault and domestic violence victim services programs;

"(3) at least 25 percent of the amount granted shall be allocated to each of the following three areas: prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services.

"(d) APPLICATION REQUIREMENTS.—The application requirements provided in section 513 of this title shall apply to grants made under this subpart. In addition, each application shall include the certifications of qualification required by subsection (c) including documentation from nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs showing their participation in developing the plan required by subsection (c)(2). Applications shall—

"(1) include documentation from the prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services programs to be assisted showing—

"(A) need for the grant funds;

"(B) intended use of the grant funds; and

"(C) expected results from the use of grant funds; and

"(2) proof of compliance with the requirements for the payment of forensic medical exams provided in section 162 of this title.

"(e) DISBURSEMENT.—(1) No later than 60 days after the receipt of an application under this subpart, the Director shall either disburse the appropriate sums provided for under this subpart or shall inform the applicant why the application does not conform to the terms of section 513 of this title or to the requirements of this section.

"(2) In disbursing monies under this subpart, the Director shall issue regulations to ensure that States will—

"(A) equitably distribute monies on a geographic basis including nonurban and rural areas, and giving priority to localities with populations under 100,000;

"(B) determine the amount of subgrants based on the population and geographic area to be served; and

"(C) give priority to areas with the greatest showing of need, as demonstrated by comparing population and geographic areas to be served to the availability of existing sexual assault and domestic violence services.

"(f) GRANTEE REPORTING.—Upon completion of the grant period under this subpart, the State grantee shall file a performance report with the Director explaining the activities carried out together with an assessment of the effectiveness of those activities in achieving the purposes of this subpart. The Director shall suspend funding for an approved application if an applicant fails to submit an annual performance report.

"SEC. 1422. GENERAL GRANTS TO TRIBES.

"(a) GENERAL GRANTS.—The Director is authorized to make grants to Indian tribes, for use by tribes, tribal organizations or nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs on Indian reservations, for the purposes outlined in section 1401(b), and to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women in Indian country.

"(b) AMOUNTS.—From amounts appropriated, the amount of grants under subsection (a) shall be awarded on a competitive basis to tribes, with minimum grants of $35,000 and maximum grants of $300,000.

"(c) QUALIFICATION.—Upon satisfying the terms of subsection (d), any tribe shall be qualified for funds provided under this part upon certification that—

"(1) the funds shall be used to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women and for at least 3 of the purposes outlined in section 1401(b); and

"(2) at least 25 percent of the grant funds shall be allocated to each of the following three areas: prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services.

"(d) APPLICATION REQUIREMENTS.—(1) Applications shall be made directly to the Director and shall contain a description of the tribes' law enforcement responsibilities for the Indian country described in the application and a description of the tribes' system of courts, including whether the tribal government operates courts of Indian offenses as defined in 25 U.S.C. 1301 or CFR courts under 25 CFR 11 et seq.

"(2) Applications shall be in such form as the Director may prescribe and shall specify the nature of the program proposed by the applicant tribe, the data and information on which the program is based, and the extent to which the program plans to use or incorporate existing services available in the Indian country where the grant will be used.

"(3) The term of any grant shall be for a minimum of 3 years.

"(e) GRANTEE REPORTING.—At the end of the first 12 months of the grant period and at the end of each year thereafter, the Indian tribal grantee shall file a performance report with the Director explaining the activities carried out together with an assessment of the effectiveness of those activities in achieving the purposes of this subpart. The Director shall suspend funding for an approved application if an applicant fails to submit an annual performance report.

"(f) DEFINITIONS.—(1) The term 'Indian tribe' means any Indian tribe, band, nation, or other organized group or community, including any Alaska Native village or regional or village corporation (as defined in, or established pursuant to, the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (43 U.S.C. 1601, et seq.)), which is recognized as eligible for the special services provided by the United States to Indians because of their status as Indians.

"(2) The term 'Indian country' has the meaning given to such term by section 1851 of title 18, United States Code.

"SUBPART 3—GENERAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS

"SEC. 1431. GENERAL DEFINITIONS.

"As used in this part—

"(1) the term 'victim services program' means any public or private nonprofit program that assists victims, including (A) nongovernmental nonprofit organizations such as rape crisis centers, battered women's shelters, or other rape or domestic violence programs, including nonprofit nongovernmental organizations assisting victims through the legal process and (B) victim/witness programs within governmental entities;

"(2) the term 'sexual assault' includes not only assaults committed by offenders who are strangers to the victim but also assaults committed by offenders who are known or related by blood or marriage to the victim; and

"(3) the term 'domestic violence' includes felony or misdemeanor offenses committed by a current or former spouse of the victim, a person with whom the victim shares a child in common, a person who is cohabitating with or has cohabitated with the victim as a spouse, or any other person similarly situated to a spouse who is protected under the domestic or family violence laws of the jurisdiction receiving grant monies.

“SEC. 1432. GENERAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.

“(a) NONMONETARY ASSISTANCE.—In addition to the assistance provided under subparts 1 or 2, the Director may direct any Federal agency, with or without reimbursement, to use its authorities and the resources granted to it under Federal law (including personnel, equipment, supplies, facilities, and managerial, technical, and advisory services) in support of State and local assistance efforts.

“(b) BUREAU REPORTING.—No later than 180 days after the end of each fiscal year for which grants are made under this part, the Director shall submit to the Judiciary Committees of the House and the Senate a report that includes, for each high intensity crime area (as provided in subpart 1) and for each State and for each grantee Indian tribe (as provided in subpart 2)—

“(1) the amount of grants made under this part;

“(2) a summary of the purposes for which those grants were provided and an evaluation of their progress; and

“(3) a copy of each grantee report filed pursuant to sections 1412(g) and 1421(f).

“(c) REGULATIONS.—No later than 45 days after the date of enactment of this part, the Director shall publish proposed regulations implementing this part. No later than 120 days after such date, the Director shall publish final regulations implementing this part.

“(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year 1992, 1993, and 1994, $100,000,000 to carry out the purposes of subpart 1, and $190,000,000 to carry out the purposes of subpart 2, and $10,000,000 to carry out the purposes of section 1422 of subpart 2.”

Subtitle C—Safety for Women in Public Transit and Public Parks

SEC. 131. GRANTS FOR CAPITAL IMPROVEMENTS TO PREVENT CRIME IN PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION.

Section 24 of the Urban Mass Transportation Act of 1964 is amended to read as follows:

“GRANTS TO PREVENT CRIME IN PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION

“SEC. 24. (a) GENERAL PURPOSE.—From funds authorized under section 21, and not to exceed $10,000,000, the Secretary shall make capital grants for the prevention of crime and to increase security in existing and future public transportation systems. None of the provisions of this Act may be construed to prohibit the financing of projects under this section where law enforcement responsibilities are vested in a local public body other than the grant applicant.

“(b) GRANTS FOR LIGHTING, CAMERA SURVEILLANCE, AND SECURITY PHONES.—

“(1) From the sums authorized for expenditure under this section for crime prevention, the Secretary is authorized to make grants and loans to States and local public bodies or agencies for the purpose of increasing the safety of public transportation by—

“(A) increasing lighting within or adjacent to public transportation systems, including bus stops, subway stations, parking lots, or garages;

“(B) increasing camera surveillance of areas within and adjacent to public transportation systems, including bus stops, subway stations, parking lots, or garages;

“(C) providing emergency phone lines to contact law enforcement or security personnel in areas within or adjacent to public transportation systems, including bus stops, subway stations, parking lots, or garages; or

“(D) any other project intended to increase the security and safety of existing or planned public transportation systems.

“(2) From the sums authorized under this section, at least 75 percent shall be expended on projects of the type described in subsection (b)(1) (A) and (B).

“(c) REPORTING.—All grants under this section are contingent upon the filing of a report with the Secretary and the Department of Justice, Office of Victims of Crime, showing crime rates in or adjacent to public transportation before, and for a 1-year period after, the capital improvement. Statistics shall be broken down by type of crime, sex, race, and relationship of victim to the offender.

“(d) INCREASED FEDERAL SHARE.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the Federal share under this section for each capital improvement project which enhances the safety and security of public transportation systems and which is not required by law (including any other provision of this chapter) shall be 90 percent of the net project cost of such project.

“(e) SPECIAL GRANTS FOR PROJECTS TO STUDY INCREASING SECURITY FOR WOMEN.—From the sums authorized under this section, the Secretary shall provide grants and loans for the purpose of studying ways to reduce violent crimes against women in public transit through better design or operation of public transit systems.

“(f) GENERAL REQUIREMENTS.—All grants or loans provided under this section shall be subject to all the terms, conditions, requirements, and provisions applicable to grants and loans made under section 2(a).”

SEC. 132. GRANTS FOR CAPITAL IMPROVEMENTS TO PREVENT CRIME IN NATIONAL PARKS.

The Act of August 18, 1970, the National Park System Improvements in Administration Act (90 Stat. 1931; 16 U.S.C. 1a-1 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

“SEC. 13. NATIONAL PARK SYSTEM CRIME PREVENTION ASSISTANCE.

“(a) From the sums authorized pursuant to section 7 of the Land and Water Conservation Act of 1965, and not to exceed $10,000,000, the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to provide Federal assistance to reduce the incidence of violent crime in the National Park System.

“(b) The Secretary shall direct the chief official responsible for law enforcement within the National Park Services to—

“(1) compile a list of areas within the National Park System with the highest rates of violent crime;

“(2) make recommendations concerning capital improvements, and other measures, needed within the National Park System to reduce the rates of violent crime, including the rate of sexual assault; and

“(3) publish the information required by paragraphs (1) and (2) in the Federal Register.

“(c) No later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this section, and based on the recommendations and list issued pursuant to subsection (b), the Secretary shall distribute funds throughout the National Park Service. Priority shall be given to those areas with the highest rates of sexual assault.

“(d) Funds provided under this section may be used for the following purposes—

“(1) to increase lighting within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas;

“(2) to provide emergency phone lines to contact law enforcement or security personnel in areas within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas;

“(3) to increase security or law enforcement personnel within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas; and

“(4) any other project intended to increase the security and safety of public parks and recreation areas.”

SEC. 133. GRANTS FOR CAPITAL IMPROVEMENTS TO PREVENT CRIME IN PUBLIC PARKS.

Section 6 of the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1965 (78 Stat. 897; 16 U.S.C. 4601-8) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

“(h) CAPITAL IMPROVEMENT AND OTHER PROJECTS TO REDUCE CRIME.—In addition to assistance for planning projects, and in addition to the projects identified in subsection (e), and from amounts appropriated, the Secretary shall provide financial assistance to the States, not to exceed $15,000,000 in total, for the following types of projects or combinations thereof:

“(1) For the purpose of making capital improvements and other measures to increase safety in urban parks and recreation areas, including funds to—

“(A) increase lighting within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas;

“(B) provide emergency phone lines to contact law enforcement or security personnel in areas within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas;

“(C) increase security personnel within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas; and

“(D) any other project intended to increase the security and safety of public parks and recreation areas.

“(2) In addition to the requirements for project approval imposed by this section, eligibility for assistance under this subsection is dependent upon a showing of need. In providing funds under this subsection, the Secretary shall give priority to those projects proposed for urban parks and recreation areas with the highest rates of crime and, in particular, to urban parks and recreation areas with the highest rates of sexual assault.

“(3) Notwithstanding the terms of subsection (c), the Secretary is authorized to provide 70 percent improvement grants for projects undertaken by any State for the purposes outlined in this subsection. The remaining share of the cost shall be borne by the State.”

Subtitle D—National Commission on Violent Crime Against Women

SEC. 141. ESTABLISHMENT.

There is established a commission to be known as the National Commission on Violent Crime Against Women (hereinafter referred to as “the Commission”).

SEC. 142. DUTIES OF COMMISSION.

(a) GENERAL PURPOSE OF THE COMMISSION.—The Commission shall carry out activities for the purposes of promoting a national policy on violent crime against women, and for making recommendations for how to reduce violent crime against women.

(b) FUNCTIONS.—The Commission shall perform the following functions—

(1) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, current law enforcement efforts at the Federal and State levels to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women;

(2) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the responsiveness of State prosecutors and State courts to violent crimes against women;

(3) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the adequacy of current education, prevention, and protection services for women victims of violent crime;

(4) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the role of the Federal Government in reducing violent crimes against women;

(5) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, national public awareness and the public dissemination of information essential to the prevention of violent crimes against women;

(6) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, data collection and government statistics on the incidence and prevalence of violent crimes against women;

(7) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the adequacy of State and Federal laws on sexual assault and the need for a more uniform statutory response to sex offenses, including sexual assaults and other sex offenses committed by offenders who are known or related by blood or marriage to the victim;

(8) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the adequacy of State and Federal laws on domestic violence and the need for a more uniform statutory response to domestic violence; and

(9) evaluate and make recommendations regarding the feasibility of maintaining the confidentiality of addresses of domestic violence victims in voting, welfare, and public records.

SEC. 143. MEMBERSHIP.

(a) NUMBER AND APPOINTMENT.—

(1) APPOINTMENT.—The Commission shall be composed of 15 members as follows:

(A) Five members shall be appointed by the President—

(i) three of whom shall be—

(I) the Attorney General;

(II) the Secretary of Health and Human Services; and

(III) the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation,

who shall be nonvoting members, except that in the case of a tie vote by the Commission, the Attorney General shall be a voting member;

(ii) two of whom shall be selected from the general public on the basis of such individuals being specially qualified to serve on the Commission by reason of their education, training, or experience; and

(iii) at least one of whom shall be selected for their experience in providing services to women victims of sexual assault or domestic violence.

(B) Five members shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives on the joint recommendation of the Majority and Minority Leaders of the House of Representatives.

(C) Five members shall be appointed by the President pro tempore of the Senate on the joint recommendation of the Majority and Minority Leaders of the Senate.

(2) CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE RECOMMENDATIONS.—In making appointments under subparagraphs (B) and (C) of paragraph (1), the Majority and Minority Leaders of the House of Representatives and the Senate shall duly consider the recommendations of the Chairmen and Ranking Minority Members of committees with jurisdiction over laws contained in title 18 of the United States Code.

(3) REQUIREMENTS OF APPOINTMENTS.—The Majority and Minority Leaders of the Senate and the House of Representatives shall—

(A) select individuals who are specially qualified to serve on the Commission by reason of their experience in State or national efforts to fight violence against women and demonstrate experience in State or national advocacy or service organizations specializing in sexual assault and domestic violence; and

(B) engage in consultations for the purpose of ensuring that the expertise of the ten members appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the President pro tempore of the Senate shall provide as much of a balance as possible and, to the greatest extent possible, cover the fields of law enforcement, prosecution, judicial administration, legal expertise, public health, social work, victim compensation boards, and victim advocacy.

(4) TERM OF MEMBERS.—Members of the Commission (other than members appointed under paragraph (1)(A)(i)) shall serve for the life of the Commission.

(b) CHAIRMAN.—Not later than 15 days after the members of the Commission are appointed, such members shall select a Chairman from among the members of the Commission.

(c) QUORUM.—Seven members of the Commission shall constitute a quorum, but a lesser number may be authorized by the Commission to conduct hearings.

(d) MEETINGS.—The Commission shall hold its first meeting on a date specified by the Chairman, but such date shall not be later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act. After the initial meeting, the Commission shall meet at the call of the Chairman or a majority of its members, but shall meet at least six times.

(e) PAY.—Members of the Commission who are officers or employees or elected officials of a government entity shall receive no additional compensation by reason of their service on the Commission.

(f) PER DIEM.—Except as provided in subsection (e), members of the Commission shall be allowed travel and other expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, at rates authorized for employees of agencies under sections 5702 and 5703 of title 5, United States Code.

(g) DEADLINE FOR APPOINTMENT.—Not later than 45 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the members of the Commission shall be appointed.

SEC. 144. REPORTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 1 year after the date on which the Commission is fully constituted under section 143, the Commission shall prepare and submit a final report to the President and to congressional committees that have jurisdiction over legislation addressing violent crimes against women, including the crimes of domestic and sexual assault.

(b) CONTENTS.—The final report submitted under paragraph (1) shall contain a detailed statement of the activities of the Commission and of the findings and conclusions of the Commission, including such recommendations for legislation and administrative action as the Commission considers appropriate.

SEC. 145. EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR AND STAFF.

(a) EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR.—

(1) APPOINTMENT.—The Commission shall have an Executive Director who shall be appointed by the Chairman, with the approval of the Commission, not later than 30 days after the Chairman is selected.

(2) COMPENSATION.—The Executive Director shall be compensated at a rate not to exceed the maximum rate of the basic pay payable under GS-18 of the General Schedule as contained in title 5, United States Code.

(b) STAFF.—With the approval of the Commission, the Executive Director may appoint and fix the compensation of such additional personnel as the Executive Director considers necessary to carry out the duties of the Commission.

(c) APPLICABILITY OF CIVIL SERVICE LAWS.—The Executive Director and the additional personnel of the Commission appointed under subsection (b) may be appointed without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service, and may be paid without regard to the provisions of chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of such title relating to classification and General Schedule pay rates.

(d) CONSULTANTS.—Subject to such rules as may be prescribed by the Commission, the Executive Director may procure temporary or intermittent services under section 3109(b) of title 5, United States Code, at rates for individuals not to exceed $200 per day.

SEC. 146. POWERS OF COMMISSION.

(a) HEARINGS.—For the purpose of carrying out this subtitle, the Commission may conduct such hearings, sit and act at such times and places, take such testimony, and receive such evidence, as the Commission considers appropriate. The Commission may administer oaths before the Commission.

(b) DELEGATION.—Any member or employee of the Commission may, if authorized by the Commission, take any action that the Commission is authorized to take under this subtitle.

(c) ACCESS TO INFORMATION.—The Commission may request directly from any executive department or agency such information as may be necessary to enable the Commission to carry out this subtitle, on the request of the Chairman of the Commission.

(d) MAILS.—The Commission may use the United States mails in the same manner and under the same conditions as other departments and agencies of the United States.

SEC. 147. AUTHORIZATIONS OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There is authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1992, $500,000 to carry out the purposes of this subtitle.

SEC. 148. TERMINATION.

The Commission shall cease to exist 30 days after the date on which its final report is submitted under section 144. The President may extend the life of the Commission for a period of not to exceed one year.

Subtitle E—New Evidentiary Rules

SEC. 151. SEXUAL HISTORY IN ALL CRIMINAL CASES.

The Federal Rules of Evidence are amended by inserting after rule 412 the following: "Rule 412A. Evidence of victim's past behavior in other criminal cases

"(a) REPUTATION AND OPINION EVIDENCE EXCLUDED.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in a criminal case, other than a sex offense case governed by rule 412, reputation or opinion evidence of the past sexual behavior of an alleged victim is not admissible.

"(b) ADMISSIBILITY.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in a criminal case, other than a sex offense case governed by rule 412, evidence of an alleged victim's past sexual behavior (other than reputation and opinion evidence) may be admissible if—

"(1) the evidence is admitted in accordance with the procedures specified in subdivision (c); and

"(2) the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice.

"(c) PROCEDURES.—(1) If the defendant intends to offer evidence of specific instances of the alleged victim's past sexual behavior, the defendant shall make a written motion to offer such evidence not later than 15 days before the date on which the trial in which such evidence is to be offered is scheduled to begin, except that the court may allow the motion to be made at a later date, including during trial, if the court determines either that the evidence is newly discovered and could not have been obtained earlier through the exercise of due diligence or that the issue to which such evidence relates has newly arisen in the case. Any motion made under this paragraph shall be served on all other parties and on the alleged victim.

"(2) The motion described in paragraph (1) shall be accompanied by a written offer of proof. If necessary, the court shall order a hearing in chambers to determine if such evidence is admissible. At such hearing, the parties may call witnesses, including the alleged victim and offer relevant evidence. Notwithstanding subdivision (b) of rule 104, if the relevancy of the evidence which the defendant seeks to offer in the trial depends upon the fulfillment of a condition of fact, the court, at the hearing in chambers or at a subsequent hearing in chambers scheduled for such purpose, shall accept evidence on the issue of whether such condition of fact is fulfilled and shall determine such issue.

"(3) If the court determines on the basis of the hearing described in paragraph (2), that the evidence the defendant seeks to offer is relevant, not excluded by any other evidentiary rule, and that the probative value of such evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice, such evidence shall be admissible in the trial to the extent an order made by the court specifies the evidence which may be offered and areas with respect to which the alleged victim may be examined or cross-examined. In its order, the court should consider (A) the chain of reasoning leading to its finding of relevance, and (B) why the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice given the potential of the evidence to humiliate and embarrass the alleged victim and to result in unfair or biased jury inferences."

SEC. 152. SEXUAL HISTORY IN CIVIL CASES.

The Federal Rules of Evidence, as amended by section 151 of this Act, are amended by adding after rule 412A the following:

"Rule 412B. Evidence of past sexual behavior in civil cases

"(a) REPUTATION AND OPINION EVIDENCE EXCLUDED.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in a civil case in which a defendant is accused of actionable sexual misconduct, as defined in subdivision (d), reputation or opinion evidence of the plaintiff's past sexual behavior is not admissible.

"(b) ADMISSIBLE EVIDENCE.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in a civil case in which a defendant is accused of actionable sexual misconduct, as defined in subdivision (d), evidence of a plaintiff's past sexual behavior other than reputation or opinion evidence may be admissible if—

"(1) admitted in accordance with the procedures specified in subdivision (c); and

"(2) the probative value of such evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice.

"(c) PROCEDURES.—(1) If the defendant intends to offer evidence of specific instances of the plaintiff's past sexual behavior, the defendant shall make a written motion to offer such evidence not later than 15 days before the date on which the trial in which such evidence is to be offered is scheduled to begin, except that the court may allow the motion to be made at a later date, including during trial, if the court determines either that the evidence is newly discovered and could not have been obtained earlier through the exercise of due diligence or that the issue to which such evidence relates has newly arisen in the case. Any motion made under this paragraph shall be served on all other parties and on the plaintiff.

"(2) The motion described in paragraph (1) shall be accompanied by a written offer of proof. If necessary, the court shall order a hearing in chambers to determine if such evidence is admissible. At such hearing, the parties may call witnesses, including the plaintiff and offer relevant evidence. Notwithstanding subdivision (b) of rule 104, if the relevancy of the evidence which the defendant seeks to offer in the trial depends upon the fulfillment of a condition of fact, the court, at the hearing in chambers or at a subsequent hearing in chambers scheduled for such purpose, shall accept evidence on the issue of whether such condition of fact is fulfilled and shall determine such issue.

"(3) If the court determines on the basis of the hearing described in paragraph (2), that the evidence the defendant seeks to offer is relevant, not excluded by any other evidentiary rule, and that the probative value of such evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice, such evidence shall be admissible in the trial to the extent an order made by the court specifies evidence which may be offered and areas with respect to which the plaintiff may be examined or cross-examined. In its order, the court should consider (A) the chain of reasoning leading to its finding of relevance, and (B) why the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice given the potential of the evidence to humiliate and embarrass the alleged victim and to result in unfair or biased jury inferences.

"(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this rule, a case involving a claim of actionable sexual misconduct, includes, but is not limited to, sex harassment or discrimination claims brought pursuant to title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000(e)) and gender bias claims brought pursuant to title III of the Violence Against Women Act of 1991."

SEC. 153. AMENDMENTS TO RAPE SHIELD LAW.

Rule 412 of the Federal Rules of Evidence is amended—

(1) by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(e) INTERLOCUTORY APPEAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any evidentiary rulings made pursuant to this rule are subject to interlocutory appeal by the government or by the alleged victim.

"(f) RULE OF RELEVANCE AND PRIVILEGE.—If the prosecution seeks to offer evidence of prior sexual history, the provisions of this rule may be waived by the alleged victim."; and

(2) by adding at the end of subdivision (c)(3) the following: "In its order, the court should consider (A) the chain of reasoning leading to its finding of relevance; and (B) why the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice given the potential of the evidence to humiliate and embarrass the alleged victim and to result in unfair or biased jury inferences."

SEC. 154. EVIDENCE OF CLOTHING.

The Federal Rules of Evidence are amended by adding after rule 412 the following:

"Rule 413. Evidence of victim's clothing as inciting violence

"Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in a criminal case in which a person is accused of an offense under chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, evidence of an alleged victim's clothing is not admissible to show that the alleged victim incited or invited the offense charged."

Subtitle F—Assistance to Victims of Sexual Assault

SEC. 161. EDUCATION AND PREVENTION GRANTS TO REDUCE SEXUAL ASSAULTS AGAINST WOMEN.

Part A of title XIX of the Public Health and Health Services Act (42 U.S.C. 300w et seq.) is amended as follows:

(1) by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"§1910A. Use of allotments for rape prevention education

"(a) Notwithstanding the terms of section 1904(a)(1) of this title, amounts transferred by the State for use under this part may be used for rape prevention and education programs conducted by rape crisis centers or similar nongovernmental nonprofit entities, which programs may include—

"(1) educational seminars;

"(2) the operation of hotlines;

"(3) training programs for professionals;

"(4) the preparation of informational materials; and

"(5) other efforts to increase awareness of the facts about, or to help prevent, sexual assault.

"(b) States providing grant monies must assure that at least 15 percent of the monies are devoted to education programs targeted for middle school, junior high school, and high school students.

"(c) There are authorized to be appropriated under this section for each fiscal year 1992, 1993, and 1994, $55,000,000 to carry out the purposes of this section.

"(d) Funds authorized under this section may only be used for providing rape prevention and education programs.

"(e) For purposes of this section, the term 'rape prevention and education' includes education and prevention efforts directed at offenses committed by offenders who are not known to the victim as well as offenders who are known to the victim.

"(f) States shall be allotted funds under this section pursuant to the terms of sections 1902 and 1903, and subject to the conditions provided in this section and sections 1904 through 1909."

(2) striking section 1901(b); and

(3) striking section 1904(a)(1)(G).

SEC. 162. RAPE EXAM PAYMENTS.

No State or other grantee is entitled to funds under title I of the Violence Against Women Act of 1990 unless the State or other grantee incurs the full cost of forensic medical exams for victims of sexual assault. A State or other grantee does not incur the full medical cost of forensic medical exams if it chooses to reimburse the victim after the fact unless the reimbursement program waives any minimum loss or deductible requirement, provides victim reimbursement within a reasonable time (90 days), permits applications for reimbursement within one year from the date of the exam, and provides information to all subjects of forensic medical exams about how to obtain reimbursement.

TITLE II—SAFE HOMES FOR WOMEN

SEC. 201. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Safe Homes for Women Act of 1990".

Subtitle A—Interstate Enforcement

SEC. 211. INTERSTATE ENFORCEMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part 1 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after chapter 110 the following:

“Chapter 110A—Violence Against Spouses
“Sec. 2261. Traveling to commit spousal abuse.

“Sec. 2262. Interstate violation of protection orders.

“Sec. 2263. Restitution.

“Sec. 2264. Full faith and credit given to protection orders.

“Sec. 2265. Definitions for chapter.

“§ 2261. Traveling to commit spousal abuse

“(a) IN GENERAL.—Any person who travels across State lines—

“(1) and who, in the course of or as a result of such travel, commits an act that injures his or her spouse or intimate partner; or

shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than 10 years but not less than 3 months, or both, in addition to any fine or term of imprisonment provided under State law.

“(b) CAUSING THE CROSSING OF STATE LINES.—Any person who causes a spouse or intimate partner to cross State lines by force, coercion, duress or fraud and, in the course or as a result of that conduct, commits an act that injures his or her spouse or intimate partner, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than 10 years but not less than 3 months, or both, in addition to any fine or term of imprisonment provided under State law.

“(c) NO STATE LAW.—If no fine or term of imprisonment is provided for under the law of the State where the injury occurs, a person violating this section shall be punished as follows:

“(1) If permanent disfigurement or life-threatening bodily injury results, by imprisonment for not more than 20 years; where serious bodily injury results, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both; where bodily injury results, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

“(2) If the offense is committed with intent to commit another felony, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both.

“(3) If the offense is committed with a dangerous weapon, with intent to do bodily harm, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

“(4) If the offense constitutes sexual abuse, as that conduct is described under chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code (without regard to whether the offense was committed in the maritime, territorial or prison jurisdiction of the United States) by fine or term of imprisonment as provided for the applicable conduct under chapter 109A.

“(d) CRIMINAL INTENT.—The criminal intent of the offender required to establish an offense under subsection (b) is the general intent to do the acts that result in injury to a spouse or intimate partner and not the specific intent to violate the law of a State.

“(e) NO PRIOR STATE CRIMINAL ACTION NECESSARY.—Nothing in this section requires a prior criminal prosecution or conviction under State law to justify Federal prosecution.

“§ 2262. Interstate violation of protection orders

“(a) IN GENERAL.—Any person against whom a valid protection order has been entered who travels across State lines—

“(1) and who, in the course of or as a result of such travel, commits an act that injures

his or her spouse or intimate partner in violation of a valid protection order issued by a State; or

“(2) for the purpose of harassing, injuring, finding, contacting, or locating a spouse or intimate partner and who, in furtherance of that purpose, commits an act that injures his or her spouse or intimate partner in violation of a valid protection order issued by a State, shall be punished as provided in subsection (c) of this section.

“(b) CAUSING THE CROSSING OF STATE LINES.—Any person who causes a spouse or intimate partner to cross State lines by force, coercion, duress, or fraud, and, in the course or as a result of that conduct, commits an act that injures his or her spouse or intimate partner in violation of a valid protection order issued by a State shall be punished as provided in subsection (c) of this section.

“(c) PENALTIES.—

“(1) If permanent disfigurement or life-threatening bodily injury results, by imprisonment for not more than 20 years; where serious bodily injury results, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both; where bodily injury results, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

“(2) If the offense is committed with intent to commit another felony, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both.

“(3) If the offense is committed with a dangerous weapon, with intent to do bodily harm, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

“(4) If the offender has previously violated any prior protection order issued against that person for the protection of the same victim, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years and not less than six months, or both.

“(5) If the offense constitutes sexual abuse, as that conduct is described under chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code (without regard to whether the conduct was committed in the special maritime, territorial or prison jurisdiction of the United States) by fine or term of imprisonment as provided for the applicable offense under chapter 109A.

“(d) CRIMINAL INTENT.—The criminal intent required to establish the offense provided in subsection (a) is the general intent to do the acts which result in injury to a spouse or intimate partner and not the specific intent to violate a protection order or State law.

“(e) NO PRIOR STATE CRIMINAL ACTION NECESSARY.—Nothing in this section requires a prior criminal prosecution or conviction under State law to justify Federal prosecution.

“§ 2263. Interim protections

“In furtherance of the purposes of this chapter, and to protect against abuse of a spouse or intimate partner, any judge or magistrate before whom a criminal case under this chapter is brought, shall have the power to issue temporary orders of protection for the protection of an abused spouse or intimate partner pending final adjudication of the case, upon a showing of a likelihood of danger to the abused spouse or intimate partner.

“§ 2264. Restitution

“(a) IN GENERAL.—In addition to any fine or term of imprisonment provided under this chapter, and notwithstanding the terms of section 3663 of this title, the court shall order restitution to the victim of an offense under this chapter.

“(b) SCOPE AND NATURE OF ORDER.—(1) The order of restitution under this section shall direct that—

“(A) the defendant pay to the victim the full amount of the victim's losses as determined by the court, pursuant to subsection (3); and

“(B) the United States Attorney enforce the restitution order by all available and reasonable means.

“(2) For purposes of this subsection, the term ‘full amount of the victim's losses’ includes any costs incurred by the victim for—

“(A) medical services relating to physical, psychiatric, or psychological care;

“(B) physical and occupational therapy or rehabilitation; and

“(C) lost income;

“(D) attorneys' fees, plus any costs incurred in obtaining a civil protection order; and

“(E) any other losses suffered by the victim as a proximate result of the offense.

“(3) Restitution orders under this section are mandatory. A court may not decline to issue an order under this section because of—

“(A) the economic circumstances of the defendant; or

“(B) the fact that victim has, or is entitled to, receive compensation for his or her injuries from the proceeds of insurance.

“(4)(A) Notwithstanding the terms of paragraph (3), the court may take into account the economic circumstances of the defendant in determining the manner in which and the schedule according to which the restitution is to be paid, including—

“(i) the financial resources and other assets of the defendant;

“(ii) projected earnings, earning capacity, and other income of the defendant; and

“(iii) any financial obligations of the offender, including obligations to dependents.

“(B) An order under this section may direct the defendant to make a single lump-sum payment, or partial payments at specified intervals. The order shall provide that the defendant's restitutionary obligation takes priority over any criminal fine ordered.

“(C) In the event that the victim has recovered for any amount of loss through the proceeds of insurance or any other source, the order of restitution shall provide that restitution be paid to the person who provided the compensation, but that restitution shall be paid to the victim before any restitution is paid to any other provider of compensation.

“(5) Any amount paid to a victim under this section shall be set off against any amount later recovered as compensatory damages by the victim from the defendant in—

“(A) any Federal civil proceeding; and

“(B) any State civil proceeding, to the extent provided by the law of the State.

“(c) PROOF OF CLAIM.—(1) Within 60 days after conviction and, in any event, no later than 10 days prior to sentencing, the United States Attorney (or his delegee), after consulting with the victim, shall prepare and file an affidavit with the court listing the amounts subject to restitution under this section. The affidavit shall be signed by the United States Attorney (or his delegee) and the victim. Should the victim object to any of the information included in the affidavit, the United States Attorney (or his delegee) shall advise the victim that the victim may file a separate affidavit.

“(2) If no objection is raised by the defendant, the amounts attested to in the affidavit filed pursuant to subsection (1) shall be entered in the court's restitution order. If objection is raised, the court may require the victim or the United States Attorney (or his delegee) to submit further affidavits or other supporting documents, demonstrating the victim's losses.

"(3) If the court concludes, after reviewing the supporting documentation and considering the defendant's objections, that there is a substantial reason for doubting the authenticity or veracity of the records submitted, the court may require additional documentation or hear testimony on those questions. Any records filed, or testimony heard, pursuant to this section, shall be in camera in the judge's chambers. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, this section does not entitle the defendant to discovery of the contents of, or related to, any supporting documentation, including medical, psychological, or psychiatric records.

"(4) In the event that the victim's losses are not ascertainable 10 days prior to sentencing as provided in subsection (c)(1), the United States Attorney (or his delegee) shall so inform the court, and the court shall set a date for the final determination of the victim's losses, not to exceed 90 days after sentencing. If the victim subsequently discovers further losses, the victim shall have 60 days after discovery of those losses in which to petition the court for an amended restitution order. Such order may be granted only upon a showing of good cause for the failure to include such losses in the initial claim for restitutionary relief.

"(d) RESTITUTION AND CRIMINAL PENALTIES.—An award of restitution to the victim of an offense under this chapter shall not be a substitute for imposition of punishment under sections 2261 and 2262.

"(e) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section, the term 'victim' includes any person who has suffered direct physical, emotional, or pecuniary harm as a result of a commission of a crime under this chapter, including, in the case of a victim who is under 18 years of age, incompetent, incapacitated, or deceased, the legal guardian of the victim or representative of the victim's estate, another family member, or any other person appointed as suitable by the court: Provided, That in no event shall the defendant be named as such representative or guardian.

"§2265. Full faith and credit given to protection orders

"(a) FULL FAITH AND CREDIT.—Any protection order issued consistent with the terms of subsection (b) by the court of one State (the issuing State) shall be accorded full faith and credit by the court of another State (the enforcing State) and enforced as if it were the order of the enforcing State.

"(b) PROTECTION ORDER.—A protection order issued by a State court is consistent with the provisions of this section if—

"(1) such court has jurisdiction over the parties and matter under the law of such State; and

"(2) reasonable notice and opportunity to be heard is given to the person against whom the order is sought sufficient to protect that person's right to due process. In the case of ex parte orders, notice and opportunity to be heard must be provided within the time required by State law, and in any event within a reasonable time after the order is issued, sufficient to protect the respondent's due process rights.

"(c) CROSS OR COUNTER PETITION.—A protection order issued by a State court against one who has petitioned, filed a complaint, or otherwise filed a written pleading for protection against abuse by a spouse or intimate partner is not entitled to full faith and credit if—

"(1) no cross or counter petition, complaint, or other written pleading was filed seeking such a protection order; or

"(2) if a cross or counter petition has been filed, if the court did not make specific findings that each party was entitled to such an order.

"§2266. Definitions for chapter

"As used in this chapter—

"(1) the term 'spouse or intimate partner' includes—

"(A) a present or former spouse, a person who shares a child in common with the abuser, and a person who cohabits or has cohabited with the abuser as a spouse; and

"(B) any other person similarly situated to a spouse, other than a child, who is protected by the domestic or family violence laws of the State in which the injury occurred or where the victim resides;

"(2) the term 'protection order' includes any injunction or other order issued for the purpose of preventing violent or threatening acts by one spouse against his or her spouse or intimate partner, including temporary and final orders issued by civil and criminal courts (other than support or child custody orders) whether obtained by filing an independent action or as a pendente lite order in another proceeding so long as any civil order was issued in response to a complaint, petition or motion of an abused spouse or intimate partner;

"(3) the term 'act that injures' includes any act, except those done in self-defense, that results in physical injury or sexual abuse;

"(4) the term 'State' includes a State of the United States, the District of Columbia, and any Indian tribe, commonwealth, territory, or possession of the United States; and

"(5) the term 'travel across State lines' includes any such travel except travel across State lines by an Indian tribal member when that member remained at all times on tribal lands."

(b) TABLE OF CHAPTERS.—The table of chapters for part 1 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item for chapter 110 the following:

"110A. Violence against spouses ..... 2261."

Subtitle B—Arrest in Spousal Abuse Cases

SEC. 221. ENCOURAGING ARREST POLICIES.

The Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10400) is amended by adding after section 311 the following:

"SEC. 312. ENCOURAGING ARREST POLICIES.

"(a) PURPOSE.—To encourage States, Indian tribes and localities to treat spousal violence as a serious violation of criminal law, the Secretary is authorized to make grants to eligible States, Indian tribes, municipalities, or local government entities for the following purposes:

"(1) to implement pro-arrest programs and policies in police departments and to improve tracking of cases involving spousal abuse;

"(2) to centralize and coordinate police enforcement, prosecution, or judicial responsibility for, spousal abuse cases in one group or unit of police officers, prosecutors, or judges;

"(3) to educate judges in criminal and other courts about spousal abuse and to improve judicial handling of such cases.

"(b) ELIGIBILITY.—(1) Eligible grantees are those States, Indian tribes, municipalities or other local government entities that—

"(A) demonstrate, through arrest and conviction statistics, that their laws or policies have been effective in significantly increasing the number of arrests made of spouse abusers; and

"(B) certify that their laws or official policies—

"(i) mandate arrest of spouse abusers based on probable cause that violence has been committed or mandate arrest of spouses violating the terms of a valid and outstanding protection order; or

"(ii) permit warrantless misdemeanor arrests of spouse abusers and encourage the use of that authority;

"(C) demonstrate that their laws, policies, practices and training programs discourage 'dual' arrests of abused and abuser and the increase in arrest rates demonstrated pursuant to paragraph (1)(A) is not the result of increased dual arrests; and

"(D) certify that their laws, policies, and practices prohibit issuance of mutual protection orders in cases where only one spouse has sought a protective order, and require findings of mutual aggression to issue mutual protective orders in cases where both parties file a claim.

"(2) For purposes of this section, the term 'protection order' includes any injunction issued for the purpose of preventing violent or threatening acts of spouse abuse, including temporary and final orders issued by civil and criminal courts (other than support or child custody orders) whether obtained by filing an independent action or as a pendente lite order in another proceeding.

"(3) For purposes of this section, the term 'spousal or spouse abuse' includes felony or misdemeanor offenses committed by a current or former spouse of the victim, a person with whom the victim shares a child in common, a person who is cohabiting with or has cohabited with the victim as a spouse, or any other person protected under the domestic or family violence laws of the jurisdiction receiving grant monies.

"(4) The eligibility requirements provided in this section shall take effect one year after the date of enactment of this section.

"(c) DELEGATION AND AUTHORIZATION.—The Secretary shall delegate to the Attorney General of the United States the Secretary's responsibilities for carrying out this section to the Attorney General. There are authorized to be appropriated not in excess of $25,000,000 for each fiscal year to be used for the purpose of making grants under this section.

"(d) APPLICATION.—An eligible grantee shall submit an application to the Secretary. Such application shall—

"(1) contain a certification by the chief executive officer of the State, Indian tribes, municipality, or local government entity that the conditions of subsection (b) are met;

"(2) describe the entity's plans to further the purposes listed in subsection (a);

"(3) identify the agency or office or groups of agencies or offices responsible for carrying out the program; and

"(4) identify and include documentation showing the nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs that will be consulted in developing, and implementing, the program.

"(e) PRIORITY.—In awarding grants under this section, the Secretary shall give priority to a grantee that—

"(1) does not currently provide for centralized handling of cases involving spousal or family violence in any one of the areas listed in this subsection—police, prosecutors, and courts; and

"(2) demonstrates a commitment to strong enforcement of laws, and prosecution of cases, involving spousal or family violence.

"(f) REPORTING.—Each grantee receiving funds under this section shall submit a report to the Secretary evaluating the effectiveness of the plan described in subsection (d)(2) and containing such additional information as the Secretary may prescribe.

"(g) REGULATIONS.—No later than 45 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall publish proposed regulations implementing this section. No later than 120 days after such date, the Secretary shall publish final regulations implementing this section."

Subtitle C—Funding for Shelters

SEC. 231. AUTHORIZATION.

Section 310 of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10409) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 310. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"(a) There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out the provisions of this title, $85,000,000 for fiscal year 1992, $100,000,000, for fiscal year 1993, and $125,000,000 for fiscal year 1994.

"(b) Of the sums authorized to be appropriated under subsection (a) of this section for any fiscal year, not less than 80 percent shall be used by the Secretary for making grants under section 303.

"(c) Of the sums authorized to be appropriated under subsection (a) of this section for any fiscal year, not more than 5 percent shall be used by the Secretary for making grants under section 314.

"(d) Of the sums authorized to be appropriated under subsection (a) of this section for any fiscal year, not less than 5 percent shall be used by the Secretary for making grants under section 308A."

Subtitle D—Family Violence Prevention and Services Act Amendments

SEC. 241. EXPANSION OF PURPOSE.

(b) EXPANSION OF PROGRAM.—Section 303(a)(2)(B)(ii) is amended by striking "alcohol and drug abuse treatment".

SEC. 243. GRANTS FOR PUBLIC INFORMATION CAMPAIGNS.

The Family Violence Prevention and Services Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"GRANTS FOR PUBLIC INFORMATION CAMPAIGNS

"SEC. 314. (a) The Secretary may make grants to public or private nonprofit entities to provide public information campaigns regarding domestic violence through the use of public service announcements and informative materials that are designed for print media, billboards, public transit advertising, electronic broadcast media, and other vehicles for information that shall inform the public concerning domestic violence.

"(b) No grant, contract, or cooperative agreement shall be made or entered into under this section unless an application that meets the requirements of subsection (c) has been approved by the Secretary.

"(c) An application submitted under subsection (b) shall—

"(1) provide such agreements, assurances, and information, be in such form and be submitted in such manner as the Secretary shall prescribe through notice in the Federal Register, including a description of how the proposed public information campaign will target the population at risk, including pregnant women;

"(2) include a complete description of the plan of the application for the development of a public information campaign;

"(3) identify the specific audiences that will be educated, including communities and groups with the highest prevalence of domestic violence;

"(4) identify the media to be used in the campaign and the geographic distribution of the campaign;

"(5) describe plans to test market a development plan with a relevant population group and in a relevant geographic area and give assurance that effectiveness criteria will be implemented prior to the completion of the final plan that will include an evaluation component to measure the overall effectiveness of the campaign;

"(6) describe the kind, amount, distribution, and timing of informational messages and such other information as the Secretary may require, with assurances that media organizations and other groups with which such messages are placed will not lower the current frequency of public service announcements; and

"(7) contain such other information as the Secretary may require.

"(d) A grant, contract, or agreement made or entered into under this section shall be used for the development of a public information campaign that may include public service announcements, paid educational messages for print media, public transit advertising, electronic broadcast media, and any other mode of conveying information that the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

"(e) The criteria for awarding grants shall ensure that an applicant—

"(1) will conduct activities that educate communities and groups at greatest risk;

"(2) has a record of high quality campaigns of a comparable type; and

"(3) has a record of high quality campaigns that educate the population groups identified as most at risk."

SEC. 244. FUND DISTRIBUTION TO STATES.

Section 304(a)(1) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act is amended by striking "$50,000" and inserting "$500,000".

SEC. 245. INDIAN TRIBES.

Section 303(b)(1) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10402(b)(1)) is amended by striking "is authorized" and inserting "is authorized" and inserting "from sums appropriated shall make no less than 10 percent available for".

SEC. 246. FUNDING LIMITATIONS.

Section 303(c) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10402(c)) is amended by—

(1) striking "and" and all that follows through "fiscal years"; and

(2) striking "$50,000" and inserting "$75,000".

SEC. 247. GRANTS TO ENTITIES OTHER THAN STATES; LOCAL SHARE.

The first sentence of section 303(f) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10402(f)) is amended to read as follows: "No grant may be made under this section to an entity other than a State or Indian tribe unless the entity provides 35 percent of the funding of the program or project funded by the grant."

SEC. 248. SHELTER AND RELATED ASSISTANCE.

(a) CHANGE OF PERCENTAGES.—Section 303(g) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10402(g)) is amended by striking "not less than 60 percent" and inserting "not less than 75 percent".

(b) DEFINITION OF RELATED ASSISTANCE.—Section 309(5) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act is amended to read as follows:

"(5) The term 'related assistance' includes any, but does not require all, of the following—

"(A) food, shelter, medical services, and counseling with respect to family violence, including counseling by peers individually or in groups;

"(B) transportation, legal assistance, referrals for appropriate health-care services (including alcohol and drug abuse treatment), and technical assistance with respect to obtaining financial assistance under Federal and State programs;

"(C) comprehensive counseling and self-help services to abusers, preventive health (including nutrition, exercise, and prevention of substance abuse), educational services and employment training; and

"(D) child care services for children who are victims of family violence or the dependents of such victims."

SEC. 249. LAW ENFORCEMENT TRAINING AND TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE GRANTS.

Section 311 of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10410(b)) is repealed.

SEC. 250. REPORT ON RECORDKEEPING.

Not later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Government Accounting Office shall complete a study of, and shall submit to Congress a report and recommendations on, problems of record-keeping of criminal complaints involving domestic violence. The study and report shall examine efforts to date of the FBI and Justice Department to collect statistics on domestic violence and the feasibility of, including a suggested timetable for, requiring that the relationship between an offender and victim be reported in Federal and State records of crimes of assault, aggravated assault, rape, and other violent crimes.

SEC. 251. MODEL STATE LEADERSHIP INCENTIVE GRANTS FOR DOMESTIC VIOLENCE INTERVENTION.

The Family Violence Prevention Services Act, as amended by section 103 of this Act, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"MODEL STATE LEADERSHIP GRANTS FOR DOMESTIC VIOLENCE INTERVENTION

"SEC. 315. (a) The Secretary, in cooperation with the Attorney General, shall award grants to not less than 10 States to assist in becoming model demonstration States and in meeting the costs of improving State leadership concerning activities that will—

"(1) increase the number of prosecutions for domestic violence crimes;

"(2) encourage the reporting of incidences of domestic violence;

"(3) facilitate 'arrests and aggressive' prosecution policies; and

"(4) provides court advocacy for victims of domestic violence.

"(b) To be designated as a model State under subsection (a), a State shall have in effect—

"(1) a law that requires mandatory arrest of a person that police have probable cause to believe has committed an act of domestic violence or probable cause to believe has violated an outstanding civil protection order;

"(2) a law or policy that discourages * * *

"(B) implement model projects that include either—

"(i) a 'no-drop' prosecution policy; or
 "(ii) a vertical prosecution policy; and

"(C) limit diversion to extraordinary cases, and then only after an admission before a judge of 'dual' arrests;

"(3) statewide prosecution policies that—

"(A) authorize and encourage prosecutors to pursue cases where a criminal case can be proved, including proceeding without the active involvement of the victim if necessary; and

"(B) implement model projects that include either—

"(i) a 'no-drop' prosecution policy; or
 "(ii) a vertical prosecution policy; and

"(C) limit diversion to extraordinary cases, and then only after an admission before a judicial officer has been entered;

"(4) statewide laws, policies, or guidelines for judges that—

"(A) prohibit the issuance of mutual protective orders in cases where only one spouse has sought a protective order and require findings of mutual aggression to issue mutual protective orders in cases where both parties file a claim;

"(B) require that any history of child abuse be considered detrimental to the child and discourage custody or joint custody orders by spouse abusers; and

"(C) encourage the understanding of domestic violence as a serious criminal offense and not a trivial dispute;

"(5) develop and disseminate methods to improve the criminal justice system's response to domestic violence to make existing remedies as easily available as possible to victims of domestic violence, including reducing delay, eliminating court fees, and providing easily understandable court forms.

"(c)(1) In addition to the funds authorized to be appropriated under section 310, there are authorized to be appropriated to make grants under this section $25,000,000 for fiscal year 1992 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1993 and 1994.

"(2) Funds shall be distributed under this section so that no State shall receive more than $2,500,000 in each fiscal year under this section.

"(3) The Secretary shall delegate to the Attorney General the Secretary's responsibilities for carrying out this section and shall transfer to the Attorney General the funds appropriated under this section for the purpose of making grants under this section."

SEC. 252. FUNDING FOR TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE CENTERS.

The Family Violence Prevention and Services Act is amended by inserting after section 308 the following:

"SEC. 308A. TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE CENTERS.

"(a) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this section is to provide training and technical assistance to State, Indian tribal, and local domestic violence programs and to other professionals who provide services to victims of domestic violence. From the sums authorized under this title, the Secretary shall provide grants to or contract with, private nonprofit organizations, for the establishment and maintenance of one national and six special-issue resource centers serving defined geographic areas. One national resource center shall offer resource, policy, and/or training assistance to Federal, State, Indian tribal, and local government agencies on issues pertaining to domestic violence and serve a coordinating and resource-sharing function among domestic violence service providers, and maintain a central resource library. The other national resource centers shall provide information, training and technical assistance to State, tribal and local domestic violence service providers. In addition, each national center shall specialize in one of the following areas of domestic violence service, prevention or law:

"(1) criminal justice response to domestic violence, including court-mandated abuser treatment;

"(2) child custody issues in domestic violence cases;

"(3) use of the self-defense plea by domestic violence victims;

"(4) health care response and access to health care resources for domestic violence victims;

"(5) victims' access to, and quality of, effective legal assistance, including civil litigation; and

"(6) the response of child protective service agencies to battered mothers of abused children.

"(b) ELIGIBILITY.—Eligible grantees are private non-profit organizations that—

"(1) focus primarily on domestic violence;

"(2) provide documentation to the Secretary demonstrating a minimum of three years experience with issues of domestic violence, particularly in the specific area for which it is applying;

"(3) include on its advisory boards representatives from domestic violence programs who are geographically and culturally diverse; and

"(4) demonstrate strong support from domestic violence advocates for their designation as the special-issue resource center.

"(c) REPORTING.—Each grantee receiving funds under this section shall submit a report to the Secretary evaluating the effectiveness of the plan described and containing such additional information as the Secretary may prescribe.

"(d) REGULATIONS.—No later than 45 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall publish proposed regulations implementing this section."

Subtitle E—Youth Education and Domestic Violence

SEC. 261. EDUCATING YOUTH ABOUT DOMESTIC VIOLENCE.

(a) GENERAL PURPOSE.—For purposes of this section, the Secretary shall delegate his powers to the Secretary of Education, hereinafter referred to as the "Secretary". The Secretary shall select, implement and evaluate four model programs for education of young people about domestic violence and violence among intimate partners.

(b) NATURE OF PROGRAM.—The Secretary shall select, implement and evaluate separate model programs for four different audiences: primary schools, middle schools, secondary schools, and institutions of higher education. These model programs shall be selected, implemented, and evaluated with the input of educational experts, legal and psychological experts on battering, and victim advocate organizations such as battered women's shelters, State coalitions and resource centers. The participation of each of these groups or individual consultants from such groups is essential to the selection, implementation, and evaluation of programs that meet both the needs of educational institutions and the needs of the domestic violence program.

(c) REVIEW AND DISSEMINATION.—Not later than 24 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall transmit the design and evaluation of the model programs, along with a plan and cost estimate for nationwide distribution, to the relevant committees of Congress for review.

(d) AUTHORIZATION.—There are authorized to be appropriated under this section for fiscal year 1992, $400,000 to carry out the purposes of this section.

Subtitle F—Confidentiality for Abused Persons

SEC. 271. CONFIDENTIALITY OF ABUSED PERSON'S ADDRESS.

No later than 90 days after the enactment of this Act, the Postmaster General shall promulgate regulations to secure the confidentiality of abused persons' addresses or otherwise prohibit the disclosure of an abused person's address consistent with the following guidelines:

(1) confidentiality shall be provided upon the presentation to an appropriate postal official of an existing and valid court order for the protection of an abused spouse;

(2) disclosure of addresses to State or Federal agencies for legitimate law enforcement or other governmental purposes shall not be prohibited; and

(3) compilations of addresses existing at the time the order is presented to an appropriate postal official shall be excluded from the scope of the proposed regulations.

TITLE III—CIVIL RIGHTS

SEC. 301. CIVIL RIGHTS.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) crimes motivated by the victim's gender constitute bias crimes in violation of the victim's right to be free from discrimination on the basis of gender;

(2) current law provides a civil rights remedy for gender crimes committed in the workplace, but not for gender crimes committed on the street or in the home; and

(3) State and Federal criminal laws do not adequately protect against the bias element of gender-motivated crimes, which separates these crimes from acts of random violence, nor do those laws adequately provide victims of gender-motivated crimes the opportunity to vindicate their interests;

(4) existing bias and discrimination in the criminal justice system often deprives victims of gender-motivated crimes of equal protection of the laws and the redress to which they are entitled;

(5) gender-motivated violence has a substantial adverse effect on interstate commerce, by deterring potential victims from traveling interstate, from engaging in employment in interstate business, and from transacting with business, and in places involved, in interstate commerce;

(6) gender-motivated violence has a substantial adverse effect on interstate commerce, by diminishing national productivity, increasing medical and other costs, and decreasing the supply of and the demand for interstate products;

(7) a Federal civil rights action as specified in this section is necessary to guarantee equal protection of the laws and to reduce the substantial adverse effects of gender-motivated violence on interstate commerce; and

(8) victims of gender-motivated violence have a right to equal protection of the laws, including a system of justice that is unaffected by bias or discrimination and that, at every relevant stage, treats such crimes as seriously as other violent crimes.

(b) RIGHTS, PRIVILEGES AND IMMUNITIES.—All persons within the United States shall have the same rights, privileges and immunities in every State as is enjoyed by all other persons to be free from crimes of violence motivated by the victim's gender, as defined in subsection (d).

(c) CAUSE OF ACTION.—Any person, including a person who acts under color of any statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage of any State, who commits a crime of violence motivated by gender and thus deprives another of the rights, privileges or immunities secured by the Constitution or laws as enumerated in subsection (b) shall be liable to the party injured, in an action for the recovery of compensatory and punitive damages, injunctive and declaratory relief, and such other relief as the court may deem appropriate.

(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

(1) the term "crime of violence motivated by gender" means any crime of violence, as defined in this section, including rape, sexual assault, sexual abuse, abusive sexual contact, or any other crime of violence committed because of gender or on the basis of gender; and

(2) the term "crime of violence" means an act or series of acts that would come within the meaning of State or Federal offenses described in section 16 of title 18, United States Code, whether or not those acts have actually resulted in criminal charges, prosecution, or conviction and whether or not those acts were committed in the special maritime, territorial, or prison jurisdiction of the United States.

(e) LIMITATION AND PROCEDURES.—

(1) LIMITATION.—Nothing in this section entitles a person to a cause of action under subsection (c) for random acts of violence unrelated to gender or for acts that cannot be demonstrated, by a preponderance of the evidence, to be "motivated by gender" as defined in subsection (d).

(2) NO PRIOR CRIMINAL ACTION.—Nothing in this section requires a prior criminal complaint, prosecution, or conviction to establish the necessary elements of a cause of action under subsection (c).

SEC. 302. CONFORMING AMENDMENT.

The Civil Rights Attorney's Fees Awards Act of 1976 (42 U.S.C. 1988) is amended—

(1) in the last sentence, by striking "or" after "Public Law 92-318,"; and

(2) by adding after "1964," the following: ", or title III of the Violence Against Women Act of 1991."

TITLE IV—SAFE CAMPUSES FOR WOMEN

SEC. 401. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Safe Campuses for Women Act of 1990".

SEC. 402. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) rape prevention and education programs are essential to an educational environment free of fear for students' personal safety;

(2) sexual assault on campus, whether by fellow students or not, is widespread among the Nation's higher education institutions: experts estimate that 1 in 7 of the women now in college have been raped and over half of college rape victims know their attackers;

(3) sexual assault poses a grave threat to the physical and mental well-being of students and may significantly impair the learning process; and

(4) action by schools to educate students may make substantial inroads on the incidence of rape, including the incidence of acquaintance rape on campus.

SEC. 403. GRANTS FOR CAMPUS RAPE EDUCATION.

Title X of the Higher Education Act of 1965 is amended to add at the end thereof the following:

"PART D—GRANTS FOR CAMPUS RAPE EDUCATION."

SEC. 1071. GRANTS FOR CAMPUS RAPE EDUCATION.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) The Secretary of Education is authorized to make grants to or enter into contracts with institutions of higher education for rape education and prevention programs under this section.

"(2) The Secretary shall make financial assistance available on a competitive basis under this section. An institution of higher education or consortium of such institutions which desires to receive a grant or enter into a contract under this section shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require in accordance with regulations.

"(3) The Secretary shall make every effort to ensure the equitable participation of private and public institutions of higher education and to ensure the equitable geographic participation of such institutions. In the award of grants and contracts under this section, the Secretary shall give priority to institutions who show the greatest need for the sums requested.

"(b) GENERAL RAPE PREVENTION AND EDUCATION GRANTS.—Grants under this section shall be used to educate and provide support services to student victims of rape or sexual assault. Grants may be used for the following purposes:

"(1) to provide training for campus security and college personnel, including campus disciplinary or judicial boards, that address the issues of rape, sexual assault, and other gender-motivated crimes;

"(2) to develop, disseminate, or implement campus security and student disciplinary policies to prevent and discipline rape, sexual assault and other gender-motivated crimes;

"(3) to develop, enlarge or strengthen support services programs including medical or psychological counseling to assist victims' recovery from rape, sexual assault, or other gender-motivated crimes;

"(4) to create, disseminate, or otherwise provide assistance and information about victims' options on and off campus to bring disciplinary or other legal action; and

"(5) to implement, operate, or improve rape education and prevention programs, including programs making use of peer-to-peer education.

"(c) MODEL GRANTS.—Not less than 25 percent of the funds authorized under this section shall be available for grants for model demonstration programs to be coordinated with local rape crisis centers for the development and implementation of quality rape prevention and education curricula and for local programs to provide services to student rape victims.

"(d) ELIGIBILITY.—No institution of higher education or consortium of such institutions shall be eligible for a grant under this section unless—

"(1) its student code of conduct, or other written policy governing student behavior, explicitly prohibits not only rape but all forms of sexual assault; and

"(2) it has in effect and implements a written policy requiring the disclosure to the victim of any sexual assault the outcome of any investigation by campus police or campus disciplinary proceedings brought pursuant to the victim's complaint against the alleged perpetrator of the sexual assault: Provided, That nothing in this section shall be interpreted to authorize disclosure to any person other than the victim.

"(e) APPLICATIONS.—(1) In order to be eligible to receive a grant under this section for any fiscal year, an institution of higher education, or consortium of such institutions, shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time and in such manner as the Secretary shall prescribe.

"(2) Each such application shall—

"(A) set forth the activities and programs to be carried out with funds granted under this part;

"(B) contain an estimate of the cost for the establishment and operation of such programs;

"(C) explain how the program intends to address the issue of acquaintance rape;

"(D) provide assurances that the Federal funds made available under this section shall be used to supplement and, to the extent practical, to increase the level of funds that would, in the absence of such Federal funds, be made available by the applicant for the purpose described in this part, and in no case to supplant such funds; and

"(E) include such other information and assurances as the Secretary reasonably determines to be necessary.

"(e) GRANTEE REPORTING.—Upon completion of the grant period under this section, the grantee institution or consortium of institutions shall file a performance report with the Secretary explaining the activities carried out together with an assessment of the effectiveness of those activities in achieving the purposes of this section. The Secretary shall suspend funding for an approved application if an applicant fails to submit an annual performance report.

"(f) DEFINITIONS.—(1) Except as otherwise provided, the terms used in this part shall have the meaning provided under section 2981 of this title.

"(2) For purposes of this subchapter, the following terms have the following meanings:

"(A) The term 'rape education and prevention' includes programs that provide educational seminars, peer-to-peer counseling, operation of hotlines, self-defense courses, the preparation of informational materials, and any other effort to increase campus awareness of the facts about, or to help prevent, sexual assault.

"(B) The term 'Secretary' means the Secretary of Education.

"(g) GENERAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—(1) REGULATIONS.—No later than 45 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall publish proposed regulations implementing this section. No later than 120 days after such date, the Secretary shall publish final regulations implementing this section.

"(2) No later than 180 days after the end of each fiscal year for which grants are made under this section, the Secretary shall submit to the committees of the House of Representatives and the Senate responsible for issues relating to higher education and to crime, a report that includes—

"(A) the amount of grants made under this section;

"(B) a summary of the purposes for which those grants were provided and an evaluation of their progress; and

"(C) a copy of each grantee report filed pursuant to subsection (e) of this section.

"(3) For the purpose of carrying out this subchapter, there are authorized to be appropriated $20,000,000 for the fiscal year 1992, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1993, 1994, and 1995."

SEC. 404. REQUIRED CAMPUS REPORTING OF SEXUAL ASSAULT.

Section 204(f) of the Crime Awareness and Campus Security Act of 1990 is amended to read as follows:

"(F) Statistics concerning the occurrence on campus, during the most recent school year, and during the 2 preceding school years for which data are available, of the following criminal offenses reported to campus security authorities or local police agencies—

- "(i) murder;
- "(ii) rape or sexual assault;
- "(iii) robbery;
- "(iv) aggravated assault;
- "(v) burglary; and
- "(vi) motor vehicle theft.

TITLE V—EQUAL JUSTICE FOR WOMEN IN THE COURTS ACT OF 1990*SECTION 501. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Equal Justice for Women in the Courts Act of 1991".

Subtitle A—Education and Training for Judges and Court Personnel in State Courts*SEC. 511. GRANTS AUTHORIZED.

The State Justice Institute is authorized to award grants for the purpose of developing, testing, presenting, and disseminating model programs to be used by States in training judges and court personnel in the laws of the States on rape, sexual assault, domestic violence, and other crimes of violence motivated by the victim's gender.

SEC. 512. TRAINING PROVIDED BY GRANTS.

Training provided pursuant to grants made under this subtitle may include current information, existing studies, or current data on—

- (1) the nature and incidence of rape and sexual assault by strangers and nonstrangers, marital rape, and incest;
- (2) the underreporting of rape, sexual assault, and child sexual abuse;
- (3) the physical, psychological, and economic impact of rape and sexual assault on the victim, the costs to society, and the implications for sentencing;
- (4) the psychology of sex offenders, their high rate of recidivism, and the implications for sentencing;
- (5) the historical evolution of laws and attitudes on rape and sexual assault;
- (6) sex stereotyping of female and male victims of rape and sexual assault, racial stereotyping of rape victims and defendants, and the impact of such stereotypes on credibility of witnesses, sentencing, and other aspects of the administration of justice;
- (7) application of rape shield laws and other limits on introduction of evidence that may subject victims to improper sex stereotyping and harassment in both rape and nonrape cases, including the need for sua sponte judicial intervention in inappropriate cross-examination;
- (8) the use of expert witness testimony on rape trauma syndrome, child sexual abuse accommodation syndrome, post-traumatic stress syndrome, and similar issues;
- (9) the legitimate reasons why victims of rape, sexual assault, and incest may refuse to testify against a defendant;
- (10) the nature and incidence of domestic violence;
- (11) the physical, psychological, and economic impact of domestic violence on the victim, the costs to society, and the implications for court procedures and sentencing;
- (12) the psychology and self-presentation of batterers and victims and the implications for court proceedings and credibility of witnesses;
- (13) sex stereotyping of female and male victims of domestic violence, myths about presence or absence of domestic violence in certain racial, ethnic, religious, or socioeconomic groups, and their impact on the administration of justice;

(14) historical evolution of laws and attitudes on domestic violence;

(15) proper and improper interpretations of the defenses of self-defense and provocation, and the use of expert witness testimony on battered woman syndrome;

(16) the likelihood of retaliation, recidivism, and escalation of violence by batterers, and the potential impact of incarceration and other meaningful sanctions for acts of domestic violence including violations of orders of protection;

(17) economic, psychological, social and institutional reasons for victims' inability to leave the batterer, to report domestic violence or to follow through on complaints, including the influence of lack of support from police, judges, and court personnel, and the legitimate reasons why victims of domestic violence may refuse to testify against a defendant;

(18) the need for orders of protection, and the implications of mutual orders of protection, dual arrest policies, and mediation in domestic violence cases;

(19) recognition of and response to gender-motivated crimes of violence other than rape, sexual assault and domestic violence, such as mass or serial murder motivated by the gender of the victims; and

(20) current information on the impact of pornography on crimes against women, or data on other activities that tend to degrade women.

SEC. 513. COOPERATION IN DEVELOPING PROGRAMS IN MAKING GRANTS UNDER THIS TITLE.

The State Justice Institute shall ensure that model programs carried out pursuant to grants made under this subtitle are developed with the participation of law enforcement officials, public and private nonprofit victim advocates, legal experts, prosecutors, defense attorneys, and recognized experts on gender bias in the courts.

SEC. 514. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There is authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1992, $600,000 to carry out the purposes of this subtitle. Of amounts appropriated under this section, the State Justice Institute shall expend no less than 40 percent on model programs regarding domestic violence and no less than 40 percent on model programs regarding rape and sexual assault.

Subtitle B—Education and Training for Judges and Court Personnel in Federal Courts*SEC. 521. EDUCATION AND TRAINING GRANTS.

(a) STUDY.—The Federal Judicial Center shall conduct a study of the nature and extent of gender bias in the Federal courts, including in proceedings involving rape, sexual assault, domestic violence, and other crimes of violence motivated by gender. The study shall be conducted by the use of data collection techniques such as reviews of trial and appellate opinions and transcripts, public hearings, and inquiries to attorneys practicing in the Federal courts. The Federal Judicial Center shall publicly issue a final report containing a detailed description of the findings and conclusions of the study, including such recommendations for legislative, administrative, and judicial action as it considers appropriate.

(b) MODEL PROGRAMS.—(1) The Federal Judicial Center shall develop, test, present, and disseminate model programs to be used in training Federal judges and court personnel in the laws on rape, sexual assault, domestic violence, and other crimes of violence motivated by the victim's gender.

(2) The training programs developed under this subsection shall include—

(A) all of the topics listed in section 512 of subtitle A; and

(B) all procedural and substantive aspects of the legal rights and remedies for violent crime motivated by gender including such areas as the Federal penalties for sex crimes, interstate enforcement of laws against domestic violence and civil rights remedies for violent crimes motivated by gender.

SEC. 522. COOPERATION IN DEVELOPING PROGRAMS.

In implementing this subtitle, the Federal Judicial Center shall ensure that the study and model programs are developed with the participation of law enforcement officials, public and private nonprofit victim advocates, legal experts, prosecutors, defense attorneys, and recognized experts on gender bias in the courts.

SEC. 523. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There is authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1992, $400,000 to carry out the purposes of this subtitle. Of amounts appropriated under this section, no less than 25 percent and no more than 40 percent shall be expended by the Federal Judicial Center on the study required by section 521(a) of this subtitle.

SEC. 111. REPEAT OFFENDERS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"§ 2247. Repeat offenders

"Any person who violates a provision of this chapter, after one or more prior convictions for an offense punishable under this chapter, or after one or more prior convictions under the laws of any State or foreign country relating to aggravated sexual abuse, sexual abuse, or abusive sexual contact, is punishable by a term of imprisonment up to twice that otherwise authorized."

(b) TABLE OF SECTIONS.—The table of sections for chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"2247. Repeat offenders."

SEC. 112. FEDERAL PENALTIES.

(a) RAPE AND AGGRAVATED RAPE.—Pursuant to its authority under section 994(p) of title 28, United States Code, the United States Sentencing Commission shall amend its sentencing guidelines to provide that a defendant convicted of aggravated sexual abuse under section 2241 of title 18, United States Code, or sexual abuse under section 2242 of title 18, United States Code, shall be assigned a base offense level under chapter 2 of the sentencing guidelines that is at least 4 levels greater than the base offense level applicable to criminal sexual abuse under the guidelines in effect on November 1, 1990, or otherwise shall amend the guidelines applicable to such offenses so as to achieve a comparable minimum guideline sentence. In amending such guidelines, the Sentencing Commission shall review the appropriateness of existing specific offense characteristics or other adjustments applicable to such offenses, and make such changes as it deems appropriate, taking into account the severity of rape offenses, with or without aggravating factors; the unique nature and duration of the mental injuries inflicted on the victims of such offenses; and any other relevant factors.

(b) EFFECT OF AMENDMENT.—If the sentencing guidelines are amended after the effective date of this section, the Sentencing Commission shall implement the instructions set forth in subsection (a) so as to achieve a comparable result.

(c) STATUTORY RAPE.—

(1) Section 2243(b) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking "one year," and inserting "two years."

(2) Pursuant to its authority under section 994(p) of title 28, United States Code, the United States Sentencing Commission shall promulgate guidelines or amend existing guidelines to incorporate the increase in maximum penalties provided by this section for section 2243(b) of title 18, United States Code.

SEC. 113. MANDATORY RESTITUTION FOR SEX CRIMES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"§ 2248. Mandatory restitution

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding the terms of section 3663 of this title, and in addition to any other civil or criminal penalty authorized by law, the court shall order restitution for any offense under this chapter.

"(b) SCOPE AND NATURE OF ORDER.—(1) The order of restitution under this section shall direct that—

"(A) the defendant pay to the victim the full amount of the victim's losses as determined by the court, pursuant to paragraph (2); and

"(B) the United States Attorney enforce the restitution order by all available and reasonable means.

"(2) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'full amount of the victim's losses' includes any costs incurred by the victim for—

"(A) medical services relating to physical, psychiatric, or psychological care;

"(B) physical and occupational therapy or rehabilitation;

"(C) lost income;

"(D) attorneys' fees; and

"(E) any other losses suffered by the victim as a proximate result of the offense.

"(3) Restitution orders under this section are mandatory. A court may not decline to issue an order under this section because of—

"(A) the economic circumstances of the defendant; or

"(B) the fact that a victim has, or is entitled to, receive compensation for his or her injuries from the proceeds of insurance or any other source.

"(4)(A) Notwithstanding the terms of paragraph (3), the court may take into account the economic circumstances of the defendant in determining the manner in which and the schedule according to which the restitution is to be paid.

"(B) For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'economic circumstances' includes—

"(i) the financial resources and other assets of the defendant;

"(ii) projected earnings, earning capacity, and other income of the defendant; and

"(iii) any financial obligations of the defendant, including obligations to dependents.

"(C) An order under this section may direct the defendant to make a single lump-sum payment or partial payments at specified intervals. The order shall also provide that the defendant's restitution obligation takes priority over any criminal fine ordered.

"(D) In the event that the victim has recovered for any amount of loss through the proceeds of insurance or any other source, the order of restitution shall provide that restitution be paid to the person who provided the compensation, but that restitution shall be paid to the victim before any restitution is paid to any other provider of compensation.

"(5) Any amount paid to a victim under this section shall be set off against any amount later recovered as compensatory damages by the victim from the defendant in—

"(A) any Federal civil proceeding; and

"(B) any State civil proceeding, to the extent provided by the law of the State.

"(c) PROOF OF CLAIM.—(1) Within 60 days after conviction and, in any event, no later than 10 days prior to sentencing, the United States Attorney (or his delegatee), after consulting with the victim, shall prepare and file an affidavit with the court listing the amounts subject to restitution under this section. The affidavit shall be signed by the United States Attorney (or his delegatee) and the victim. Should the victim object to any of the information included in the affidavit, the United States Attorney (or his delegatee) shall advise the victim that the victim may file a separate affidavit.

"(2) If no objection is raised by the defendant, the amounts attested to in the affidavit filed pursuant to subsection (1) shall be entered in the court's restitution order. If objection is raised, the court may require the victim or the United States Attorney (or his delegate) to submit further affidavits or other supporting documents, demonstrating the victim's losses.

"(3) If the court concludes, after reviewing the supporting documentation and considering the defendant's objections, that there is a substantial reason for doubting the authenticity or veracity of the records submitted, the court may require additional documentation or hear testimony on those questions. Any records filed, or testimony heard, pursuant to this section, shall be in camera in the judge's chambers. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, this section does not entitle the defendant to discovery of the contents of, or matters related to, any supporting documentation, including medical, psychological, or psychiatric records.

"(4) In the event that the victim's losses are not ascertainable 10 days prior to sentencing as provided in subsection (c)(1), the United States Attorney (or his delegate) shall so inform the court, and the court shall set a date for the final determination of the victim's losses, not to exceed 90 days after sentencing. If the victim subsequently discovers further losses, the victim shall have 60 days after discovery of those losses in which to petition the court for an amended restitution order. Such order may be granted only upon a showing of good cause for the failure to include such losses in the initial claim for restitutionary relief.

"(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section, the term 'victim' includes any person who has suffered direct physical, emotional, or pecuniary harm as a result of a commission of a crime under this chapter, including, in the case of a victim who is under 18 years of age, incompetent, incapacitated, or deceased, the legal guardian of the victim or representative of the victim's estate, another family member, or any other person appointed as suitable by the court: Provided, That in no event shall the defendant be named as such representative or guardian."

(b) TABLE OF SECTIONS.—The table of sections for chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"2248. Mandatory restitution."

Subtitle B—Law Enforcement and Prosecution Grants To Reduce Violent Crimes Against Women

SEC. 121. GRANTS TO COMBAT VIOLENT CRIMES AGAINST WOMEN.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.) is amended by—

- (1) redesignating part N as part O;
- (2) redesignating section 1401 as section 1501; and

(3) adding after part M the following:

"PART N—GRANTS TO COMBAT VIOLENT CRIMES AGAINST WOMEN

"SEC. 1401. PURPOSE OF THE PROGRAM AND GRANTS.

"(a) GENERAL PROGRAM PURPOSE.—The purpose of this part is to assist States, Indian tribes, cities, and other localities to develop effective law enforcement and prosecution strategies to combat violent crimes against women and, in particular, to focus efforts on those areas with the highest rates of violent crime against women.

"(b) PURPOSES FOR WHICH GRANTS MAY BE USED.—Grants under this part shall provide additional personnel, training, technical assistance, data collection and other equipment for the more widespread apprehension, prosecution, and adjudication of persons committing violent crimes against women and specifically, for the purposes of—

"(1) training law enforcement officers and prosecutors to more effectively identify and respond to violent crimes against women, including the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence;

"(2) developing, training, or expanding units of law enforcement officers and prosecutors specifically targeting violent crimes against women, including the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence;

"(3) developing and implementing police and prosecution policies, protocols, or orders specifically devoted to identifying and responding to violent crimes against women, including the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence;

"(4) developing, installing, or expanding data collection systems, including computerized systems, linking police, prosecutors, and courts or for the purpose of identifying and tracking arrests, prosecutions, and convictions for the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence; and

"(5) developing, enlarging, or strengthening victim services programs, including sexual assault and domestic violence programs, to increase reporting and reduce attrition rates for cases involving violent crimes against women, including the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence.

"SUBPART 1—HIGH INTENSITY CRIME AREA GRANTS

"SEC. 1411. HIGH INTENSITY GRANTS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance (hereafter in this part referred to as the 'Director') shall make grants to areas of 'high intensity crime' against women.

"(b) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this part, a 'high intensity crime area' means an area with one of the 40 highest rates of violent crime against women, as determined by the Bureau of Justice Statistics pursuant to section 1412.

"SEC. 1412. HIGH INTENSITY GRANT APPLICATION.

"(a) COMPUTATION.—Within 45 days after the date of enactment of this part, the Bureau of Justice Statistics shall compile a list of the 40 areas with the highest rates of violent crime against women based on the combined female victimization rate per population for assault, sexual assault (including, but not limited to, rape), murder, robbery, and kidnapping.

"(b) USE OF DATA.—In calculating the combined female victimization rate required by subsection (a), the Bureau of Justice Statistics may rely on—

"(1) existing data collected by States, municipalities, Indian reservations or statistical metropolitan areas showing the number of police reports of the crimes listed in subsection (a); and

"(2) existing data collected by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, including data from those governmental entities already complying with the National Incident Based Reporting System, showing the number of police reports of crimes listed in subsection (a).

"(c) PUBLICATION.—After compiling the list set forth in subsection (a), the Bureau of Justice Statistics shall convey it to the Director who shall publish it in the Federal Register.

"(d) QUALIFICATION.—Upon satisfying the terms of subsection (e), any high intensity crime area shall be qualified for a grant under this subpart upon application by the chief executive officer of the governmental entities responsible for law enforcement and prosecution of criminal offenses within the area and certification that—

"(1) the funds shall be used to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women and for at least 3 of the purposes outlined in section 1401(b);

"(2) grantees and subgrantees shall develop a plan for implementation, and otherwise consult and coordinate program grants, with nongovernmental nonprofit victim services programs; and

"(3) at least 25 percent of the amount granted shall be allocated to each of the following three areas: prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services.

"(e) APPLICATION REQUIREMENTS.—The application requirements provided in section 513 of this title shall apply to grants made under this subpart. In addition, each application must provide the certifications required by subsection (d) including documentation from nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs showing their participation in developing the plan required by subsection (d)(2). Applications shall—

"(1) include documentation from the prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services programs to be assisted showing—

- "(A) need for the grant funds;
- "(B) intended use of the grant funds; and
- "(C) expected results from the use of grant funds; and

"(2) proof of compliance with the requirements for the payment of forensic medical exams provided in section 162 of this title.

"(f) DISBURSEMENT.—

"(1) No later than 60 days after the receipt of an application under this subpart, the Director shall either disburse the appropriate sums provided for under this subpart or shall inform the applicant why the application does not conform to the terms of section 513 of this title or to the requirements of this section.

"(2) In disbursing monies under this subpart, the Director shall ensure, to the extent practicable, that grantees—

"(A) equitably distribute funds on a geographic basis;

"(B) determine the amount of subgrants based on the population to be served; and

"(C) give priority to areas with the greatest showing of need.

"(g) GRANTEE REPORTING.—Upon completion of the grant period under this subpart, the grantee shall file a performance report with the Director explaining the activities carried out together with an assessment of the effectiveness of those activities in achieving the purposes of this part. The Director shall suspend funding for an approved application if an applicant fails to submit an annual performance report.

"Subpart 2—Other Grants to States to Combat Violent Crimes Against Women

"SEC. 1421. GENERAL GRANTS TO STATES.

"(a) GENERAL GRANTS.—The Director is authorized to make grants to States, for use by States, units of local government in the States, and nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs in the States, for the purposes outlined in section 1401(b), and to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women.

"(b) AMOUNTS.—From amounts appropriated, the amount of grants under subsection (a) shall be—

- "(1) $500,000 to each State; and
- "(2) that portion of the then remaining available money to each State that results from a distribution among the States on the basis of each State's population in relation to the population of all States.

"(c) QUALIFICATION.—Upon satisfying the terms of subsection (d), any State shall be qualified for funds provided under this part upon certification that—

"(1) the funds shall be used to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women and for at least 3 of the purposes outlined in section 1401(b);

"(2) grantees and subgrantees shall develop a plan for implementation, and otherwise consult and coordinate, with nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs, including sexual assault and domestic violence victim services programs;

"(3) at least 25 percent of the amount granted shall be allocated to each of the following three areas: prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services.

"(d) APPLICATION REQUIREMENTS.—The application requirements provided in section 513 of this title shall apply to grants made under this subpart. In addition, each application shall include the certifications of qualification required by subsection (c) including documentation from nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs showing their participation in developing the plan required by subsection (c)(2). Applications shall—

"(1) include documentation from the prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services programs to be assisted showing—

"(A) need for the grant funds;

"(B) intended use of the grant funds; and

"(C) expected results from the use of grant funds; and

"(2) proof of compliance with the requirements for the payment of forensic medical exams provided in section 162 of this title.

"(e) DISBURSEMENT.—(1) No later than 60 days after the receipt of an application under this subpart, the Director shall either disburse the appropriate sums provided for under this subpart or shall inform the applicant why the application does not conform to the terms of section 513 of this title or to the requirements of this section.

"(2) In disbursing monies under this subpart, the Director shall issue regulations to ensure that States will—

"(A) equitably distribute monies on a geographic basis including nonurban and rural areas, and giving priority to localities with populations under 100,000;

"(B) determine the amount of subgrants based on the population and geographic area to be served; and

"(C) give priority to areas with the greatest showing of need, as demonstrated by comparing population and geographic areas to be served to the availability of existing sexual assault and domestic violence services.

"(f) GRANTEE REPORTING.—Upon completion of the grant period under this subpart, the State grantee shall file a performance report with the Director explaining the activities carried out together with an assessment of the effectiveness of those activities in achieving the purposes of this subpart. The Director shall suspend funding for an approved application if an applicant fails to submit an annual performance report.

"SEC. 1422. GENERAL GRANTS TO TRIBES.

"(a) GENERAL GRANTS.—The Director is authorized to make grants to Indian tribes, for use by tribes, tribal organizations or nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs on Indian reservations, for the purposes outlined in section 1401(b), and to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women in Indian country.

"(b) AMOUNTS.—From amounts appropriated, the amount of grants under subsection (a) shall be awarded on a competitive basis to tribes, with minimum grants of $35,000 and maximum grants of $300,000.

"(c) QUALIFICATION.—Upon satisfying the terms of subsection (d), any tribe shall be qualified for funds provided under this part upon certification that—

"(1) the funds shall be used to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women and for at least 3 of the purposes outlined in section 1401(b); and

"(2) at least 25 percent of the grant funds shall be allocated to each of the following three areas: prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services.

"(d) APPLICATION REQUIREMENTS.—(1) Applications shall be made directly to the Director and shall contain a description of the tribes' law enforcement responsibilities for the Indian country described in the application and a description of the tribes' system of courts, including whether the tribal government operates courts of Indian offenses as defined in 25 U.S.C. 1301 or CFR courts under 25 CFR 11 et seq.

"(2) Applications shall be in such form as the Director may prescribe and shall specify the nature of the program proposed by the applicant tribe, the data and information on which the program is based, and the extent to which the program plans to use or incorporate existing services available in the Indian country where the grant will be used.

"(3) The term of any grant shall be for a minimum of 3 years.

"(e) GRANTEE REPORTING.—At the end of the first 12 months of the grant period and at the end of each year thereafter, the Indian tribal grantee shall file a performance report with the Director explaining the activities carried out together with an assessment of the effectiveness of those activities in achieving the purposes of this subpart. The Director shall suspend funding for an approved application if an applicant fails to submit an annual performance report.

"(f) DEFINITIONS.—(1) The term 'Indian tribe' means any Indian tribe, band, nation, or other organized group or community, including any Alaska Native village or regional or village corporation (as defined in, or established pursuant to, the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (43 U.S.C. 1601, et seq.)), which is recognized as eligible for the special services provided by the United States to Indians because of their status as Indians.

"(2) The term 'Indian country' has the meaning given to such term by section 1151 of title 18, United States Code.

"SUBPART 3—GENERAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS

"SEC. 1431. GENERAL DEFINITIONS.

"As used in this part—

"(1) the term 'victim services program' means any public or private nonprofit program that assists victims, including (A) nongovernmental nonprofit organizations such as rape crisis centers, battered women's shelters, or other rape or domestic violence programs, including nonprofit nongovernmental organizations assisting victims through the legal process and (B) victim/witness programs within governmental entities;

"(2) the term 'sexual assault' includes not only assaults committed by offenders who are strangers to the victim but also assaults committed by offenders who are known or related by blood or marriage to the victim; and

"(3) the term 'domestic violence' includes felony or misdemeanor offenses committed by a current or former spouse of the victim, a person with whom the victim shares a child in common, a person who is cohabitating with or has cohabitated with the victim as a spouse, or any other person similarly situated to a spouse who is protected under the domestic or family violence laws of the jurisdiction receiving grant monies.

"SEC. 1432. GENERAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.

"(a) NONMONETARY ASSISTANCE.—In addition to the assistance provided under subparts 1 or 2, the Director may direct any Federal agency, with or without reimbursement, to use its authorities and the resources granted to it under Federal law (including personnel, equipment, supplies, facilities, and managerial, technical, and advisory services) in support of State and local assistance efforts.

"(b) BUREAU REPORTING.—No later than 180 days after the end of each fiscal year for which grants are made under this part, the Director shall submit to the Judiciary Committees of the House and the Senate a report that includes, for each high intensity crime area (as provided in subpart 1) and for each State and for each grantee Indian tribe (as provided in subpart 2)—

"(1) the amount of grants made under this part;

"(2) a summary of the purposes for which those grants were provided and an evaluation of their progress; and

"(3) a copy of each grantee report filed pursuant to sections 1412(g) and 1421(f).

"(c) REGULATIONS.—No later than 45 days after the date of enactment of this part, the Director shall publish proposed regulations implementing this part. No later than 120 days after such date, the Director shall publish final regulations implementing this part.

"(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year 1992, 1993, and 1994, $100,000,000 to carry out the purposes of subpart 1, and $190,000,000 to carry out the purposes of subpart 2, and $10,000,000 to carry out the purposes of section 1422 of subpart 2."

Subtitle C—Safety for Women in Public Transit and Public Parks

SEC. 131. GRANTS FOR CAPITAL IMPROVEMENTS TO PREVENT CRIME IN PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION.

Section 24 of the Urban Mass Transportation Act of 1964 is amended to read as follows:

"GRANTS TO PREVENT CRIME IN PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION

"SEC. 24. (a) GENERAL PURPOSE.—From funds authorized under section 21, and not to exceed $10,000,000, the Secretary shall make capital grants for the prevention of crime and to increase security in existing and future public transportation systems. None of the provisions of this Act may be construed to prohibit the financing of projects under this section where law enforcement responsibilities are vested in a local public body other than the grant applicant.

"(b) GRANTS FOR LIGHTING, CAMERA SURVEILLANCE, AND SECURITY PHONES.—

"(1) From the sums authorized for expenditure under this section for crime prevention, the Secretary is authorized to make grants and loans to States and local public bodies or agencies for the purpose of increasing the safety of public transportation by—

"(A) increasing lighting within or adjacent to public transportation systems, including bus stops, subway stations, parking lots, or garages;

"(B) increasing camera surveillance of areas within and adjacent to public transportation systems, including bus stops, subway stations, parking lots, or garages;

"(C) providing emergency phone lines to contact law enforcement or security personnel in areas within or adjacent to public transportation systems, including bus stops, subway stations, parking lots, or garages; or

"(D) any other project intended to increase the security and safety of existing or planned public transportation systems.

"(2) From the sums authorized under this section, at least 75 percent shall be expended on projects of the type described in subsection (b)(1) (A) and (B).

"(c) REPORTING.—All grants under this section are contingent upon the filing of a report with the Secretary and the Department of Justice, Office of Victims of Crime, showing crime rates in or adjacent to public transportation before, and for a 1-year period after, the capital improvement. Statistics shall be broken down by type of crime, sex, race, and relationship of victim to the offender.

"(d) INCREASED FEDERAL SHARE.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the Federal share under this section for each capital improvement project which enhances the safety and security of public transportation systems and which is not required by law (including any other provision of this chapter) shall be 90 percent of the net project cost of such project.

"(e) SPECIAL GRANTS FOR PROJECTS TO STUDY INCREASING SECURITY FOR WOMEN.—From the sums authorized under this section, the Secretary shall provide grants and loans for the purpose of studying ways to reduce violent crimes against women in public transit through better design or operation of public transit systems.

"(f) GENERAL REQUIREMENTS.—All grants or loans provided under this section shall be subject to all the terms, conditions, requirements, and provisions applicable to grants and loans made under section 2(a)."

SEC. 132. GRANTS FOR CAPITAL IMPROVEMENTS TO PREVENT CRIME IN NATIONAL PARKS.

The Act of August 18, 1970, the National Park System Improvements in Administration Act (90 Stat. 1931; 16 U.S.C. 1a-1 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"SEC. 13. NATIONAL PARK SYSTEM CRIME PREVENTION ASSISTANCE.

"(a) From the sums authorized pursuant to section 7 of the Land and Water Conservation Act of 1965, and not to exceed $10,000,000, the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to provide Federal assistance to reduce the incidence of violent crime in the National Park System.

"(b) The Secretary shall direct the chief official responsible for law enforcement within the National Park Services to—

"(1) compile a list of areas within the National Park System with the highest rates of violent crime;

"(2) make recommendations concerning capital improvements, and other measures, needed within the National Park System to reduce the rates of violent crime, including the rate of sexual assault; and

"(3) publish the information required by paragraphs (1) and (2) in the Federal Register.

"(c) No later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this section, and based on the recommendations and list issued pursuant to subsection (b), the Secretary shall distribute funds throughout the National Park Service. Priority shall be given to those areas with the highest rates of sexual assault.

"(d) Funds provided under this section may be used for the following purposes—

"(1) to increase lighting within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas;

"(2) to provide emergency phone lines to contact law enforcement or security personnel in areas within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas;

"(3) to increase security or law enforcement personnel within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas; and

"(4) any other project intended to increase the security and safety of public parks and recreation areas."

SEC. 133. GRANTS FOR CAPITAL IMPROVEMENTS TO PREVENT CRIME IN PUBLIC PARKS.

Section 6 of the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1965 (78 Stat. 897; 16 U.S.C. 4601-8) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(h) CAPITAL IMPROVEMENT AND OTHER PROJECTS TO REDUCE CRIME.—In addition to assistance for planning projects, and in addition to the projects identified in subsection (e), and from amounts appropriated, the Secretary shall provide financial assistance to the States, not to exceed $15,000,000 in total, for the following types of projects or combinations thereof:

"(1) For the purpose of making capital improvements and other measures to increase safety in urban parks and recreation areas, including funds to—

"(A) increase lighting within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas;

"(B) provide emergency phone lines to contact law enforcement or security personnel in areas within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas;

"(C) increase security personnel within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas; and

"(D) any other project intended to increase the security and safety of public parks and recreation areas.

"(2) In addition to the requirements for project approval imposed by this section, eligibility for assistance under this subsection is dependent upon a showing of need. In providing funds under this subsection, the Secretary shall give priority to those projects proposed for urban parks and recreation areas with the highest rates of crime and, in particular, to urban parks and recreation areas with the highest rates of sexual assault.

"(3) Notwithstanding the terms of subsection (c), the Secretary is authorized to provide 70 percent improvement grants for projects undertaken by any State for the purposes outlined in this subsection. The remaining share of the cost shall be borne by the State."

Subtitle D—National Commission on Violent Crime Against Women

SEC. 141. ESTABLISHMENT.

There is established a commission to be known as the National Commission on Violent Crime Against Women (hereinafter referred to as "the Commission").

SEC. 142. DUTIES OF COMMISSION.

(a) GENERAL PURPOSE OF THE COMMISSION.—The Commission shall carry out activities for the purposes of promoting a national policy on violent crime against women, and for making recommendations for how to reduce violent crime against women.

(b) FUNCTIONS.—The Commission shall perform the following functions—

(1) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, current law enforcement efforts at the Federal and State levels to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women;

(2) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the responsiveness of State prosecutors and State courts to violent crimes against women;

(3) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the adequacy of current education, prevention, and protection services for women victims of violent crime;

(4) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the role of the Federal Government in reducing violent crimes against women;

(5) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, national public awareness and the public dissemination of information essential to the prevention of violent crimes against women;

(6) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, data collection and government statistics on the incidence and prevalence of violent crimes against women;

(7) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the adequacy of State and Federal laws on sexual assault and the need for a more uniform statutory response to sex offenses, including sexual assaults and other sex offenses committed by offenders who are known or related by blood or marriage to the victim;

(8) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the adequacy of State and Federal laws on domestic violence and the need for a more uniform statutory response to domestic violence; and

(9) evaluate and make recommendations regarding the feasibility of maintaining the confidentiality of addresses of domestic violence victims in voting, welfare, and public records.

SEC. 143. MEMBERSHIP.

(a) NUMBER AND APPOINTMENT.—

(1) APPOINTMENT.—The Commission shall be composed of 15 members as follows:

(A) Five members shall be appointed by the President—

(i) three of whom shall be—

(I) the Attorney General;

(II) the Secretary of Health and Human Services; and

(III) the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation,

who shall be nonvoting members, except that in the case of a tie vote by the Commission, the Attorney General shall be a voting member;

(ii) two of whom shall be selected from the general public on the basis of such individuals being specially qualified to serve on the Commission by reason of their education, training, or experience; and

(iii) at least one of whom shall be selected for their experience in providing services to women victims of sexual assault or domestic violence.

(B) Five members shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives on the joint recommendation of the Majority and Minority Leaders of the House of Representatives.

(C) Five members shall be appointed by the President pro tempore of the Senate on the joint recommendation of the Majority and Minority Leaders of the Senate.

(2) CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE RECOMMENDATIONS.—In making appointments under subparagraphs (B) and (C) of paragraph (1), the Majority and Minority Leaders of the House of Representatives and the Senate shall duly consider the recommendations of the Chairmen and Ranking Minority Members of committees with jurisdiction over laws contained in title 18 of the United States Code.

(3) REQUIREMENTS OF APPOINTMENTS.—The Majority and Minority Leaders of the Senate and the House of Representatives shall—

(A) select individuals who are specially qualified to serve on the Commission by reason of their experience in State or national efforts to fight violence against women and demonstrate experience in State or national advocacy or service organizations specializing in sexual assault and domestic violence; and

(B) engage in consultations for the purpose of ensuring that the expertise of the ten members appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the President pro tempore of the Senate shall provide as much of a balance as possible and, to the greatest extent possible, cover the fields of law enforcement, prosecution, judicial administration, legal expertise, public health, social work, victim compensation boards, and victim advocacy.

(4) TERM OF MEMBERS.—Members of the Commission (other than members appointed under paragraph 1)(A)(i) shall serve for the life of the Commission.

(5) VACANCY.—A vacancy on the Commission shall be filled in the manner in which the original appointment was made.

(b) CHAIRMAN.—Not later than 15 days after the members of the Commission are appointed, such members shall select a Chairman from among the members of the Commission.

(c) QUORUM.—Seven members of the Commission shall constitute a quorum, but a lesser number may be authorized by the Commission to conduct hearings.

(d) MEETINGS.—The Commission shall hold its first meeting on a date specified by the Chairman, but such date shall not be later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act. After the initial meeting, the Commission shall meet at the call of the Chairman or a majority of its members, but shall meet at least six times.

(e) PAY.—Members of the Commission who are officers or employees or elected officials of a government entity shall receive no additional compensation by reason of their service on the Commission.

(f) PER DIEM.—Except as provided in subsection (e), members of the Commission shall be allowed travel and other expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, at rates authorized for employees of agencies under sections 5702 and 5703 of title 5, United States Code.

(g) DEADLINE FOR APPOINTMENT.—Not later than 45 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the members of the Commission shall be appointed.

SEC. 144. REPORTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 1 year after the date on which the Commission is fully constituted under section 143, the Commission shall prepare and submit a final report to the President and to congressional committees that have jurisdiction over legislation addressing violent crimes against women, including the crimes of domestic and sexual assault.

(b) CONTENTS.—The final report submitted under paragraph (1) shall contain a detailed statement of the activities of the Commission and of the findings and conclusions of the Commission, including such recommendations for legislation and administrative action as the Commission considers appropriate.

SEC. 145. EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR AND STAFF.

(a) EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR.—

(1) APPOINTMENT.—The Commission shall have an Executive Director who shall be appointed by the Chairman, with the approval of the Commission, not later than 30 days after the Chairman is selected.

(2) COMPENSATION.—The Executive Director shall be compensated at a rate not to exceed the maximum rate of the basic pay payable under GS-18 of the General Schedule as contained in title 5, United States Code.

(b) STAFF.—With the approval of the Commission, the Executive Director may appoint and fix the compensation of such additional personnel as the Executive Director considers necessary to carry out the duties of the Commission.

(c) APPLICABILITY OF CIVIL SERVICE LAWS.—The Executive Director and the additional personnel of the Commission appointed under subsection (b) may be appointed without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service, and may be paid without regard to the provisions of chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of such title relating to classification and General Schedule pay rates.

(d) CONSULTANTS.—Subject to such rules as may be prescribed by the Commission, the Executive Director may procure temporary or intermittent services under section 3109(b) of title 5, United States Code, at rates for individuals not to exceed $200 per day.

SEC. 146. POWERS OF COMMISSION.

(a) HEARINGS.—For the purpose of carrying out this subtitle, the Commission may conduct such hearings, sit and act at such times and places, take such testimony, and receive such evidence, as the Commission considers appropriate. The Commission may administer oaths before the Commission.

(b) DELEGATION.—Any member or employee of the Commission may, if authorized by the Commission, take any action that the Commission is authorized to take under this subtitle.

(c) ACCESS TO INFORMATION.—The Commission may request directly from any executive department or agency such information as may be necessary to enable the Commission to carry out this subtitle, on the request of the Chairman of the Commission.

(d) MAILS.—The Commission may use the United States mails in the same manner and under the same conditions as other departments and agencies of the United States.

SEC. 147. AUTHORIZATIONS OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There is authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1992, $500,000 to carry out the purposes of this subtitle.

SEC. 148. TERMINATION.

The Commission shall cease to exist 30 days after the date on which its final report is submitted under section 144. The President may extend the life of the Commission for a period of not to exceed one year.

Subtitle E—New Evidentiary Rules

SEC. 151. SEXUAL HISTORY IN ALL CRIMINAL CASES.

The Federal Rules of Evidence are amended by inserting after rule 412 the following:

“Rule 412A. Evidence of victim's past behavior in other criminal cases

“(a) REPUTATION AND OPINION EVIDENCE EXCLUDED.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in a criminal case, other than a sex offense case governed by rule 412, reputation or opinion evidence of the past sexual behavior of an alleged victim is not admissible.

“(b) ADMISSIBILITY.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in a criminal case, other than a sex offense case governed by rule 412, evidence of an alleged victim's past sexual behavior (other than reputation and opinion evidence) may be admissible if—

“(1) the evidence is admitted in accordance with the procedures specified in subdivision (c); and

“(2) the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice.

“(c) PROCEDURES.—(1) If the defendant intends to offer evidence of specific instances of the alleged victim's past sexual behavior, the defendant shall make a written motion to offer such evidence not later than 15 days before the date on which the trial in which such evidence is to be offered is scheduled to begin, except that the court may allow the motion to be made at a later date, including during trial, if the court determines either that the evidence is newly discovered and could not have been obtained earlier through the exercise of due diligence or that the issue to which such evidence relates has newly arisen in the case. Any motion made under this paragraph shall be served on all other parties and on the alleged victim.

“(2) The motion described in paragraph (1) shall be accompanied by a written offer of proof. If necessary, the court shall order a hearing in chambers to determine if such evidence is admissible. At such hearing, the parties may call witnesses, including the alleged victim and offer relevant evidence. Notwithstanding subdivision (b) of rule 104, if the relevancy of the evidence which the defendant seeks to offer in the trial depends upon the fulfillment of a condition of fact, the court, at the hearing in chambers or at a subsequent hearing in chambers scheduled for such purpose, shall accept evidence on the issue of whether such condition of fact is fulfilled and shall determine such issue.

“(3) If the court determines on the basis of the hearing described in paragraph (2), that the evidence the defendant seeks to offer is relevant, not excluded by any other evidentiary rule, and that the probative value of such evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice, such evidence shall be admissible in the trial to the extent an order made by the court specifies the evidence which may be offered and areas with respect to which the alleged victim may be examined or cross-examined. In its order, the court should consider (A) the chain of reasoning leading to its finding of relevance, and (B) why the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice given the potential of the evidence to humiliate and embarrass the alleged victim and to result in unfair or biased jury inferences.”

SEC. 152. SEXUAL HISTORY IN CIVIL CASES.

The Federal Rules of Evidence, as amended by section 151 of this Act, are amended by adding after rule 412A the following:

“Rule 412B. Evidence of past sexual behavior in civil cases

“(a) REPUTATION AND OPINION EVIDENCE EXCLUDED.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in a civil case in which a defendant is accused of actionable sexual misconduct, as defined in subdivision (d), reputation or opinion evidence of the plaintiff's past sexual behavior is not admissible.

“(b) ADMISSIBLE EVIDENCE.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in a civil case in which a defendant is accused of actionable sexual misconduct, as defined in subdivision (d), evidence of a plaintiff's past sexual behavior other than reputation or opinion evidence may be admissible if—

“(1) admitted in accordance with the procedures specified in subdivision (c); and

“(2) the probative value of such evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice.

“(c) PROCEDURES.—(1) If the defendant intends to offer evidence of specific instances of the plaintiff's past sexual behavior, the defendant shall make a written motion to offer such evidence not later than 15 days before the date on which the trial in which such evidence is to be offered is scheduled to begin, except that the court may allow the motion to be made at a later date, including during trial, if the court determines either that the evidence is newly discovered and could not have been obtained earlier through the exercise of due diligence or that the issue to which such evidence relates has newly arisen in the case. Any motion made under this paragraph shall be served on all other parties and on the plaintiff.

"(2) The motion described in paragraph (1) shall be accompanied by a written offer of proof. If necessary, the court shall order a hearing in chambers to determine if such evidence is admissible. At such hearing, the parties may call witnesses, including the plaintiff and offer relevant evidence. Notwithstanding subdivision (b) of rule 104, if the relevancy of the evidence which the defendant seeks to offer in the trial depends upon the fulfillment of a condition of fact, the court, at the hearing in chambers or at a subsequent hearing in chambers scheduled for such purpose, shall accept evidence on the issue of whether such condition of fact is fulfilled and shall determine such issue.

"(3) If the court determines on the basis of the hearing described in paragraph (2), that the evidence the defendant seeks to offer is relevant, not excluded by any other evidentiary rule, and that the probative value of such evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice, such evidence shall be admissible in the trial to the extent an order made by the court specifies evidence which may be offered and areas with respect to which the plaintiff may be examined or cross-examined. In its order, the court should consider (A) the chain of reasoning leading to its finding of relevance, and (B) why the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice given the potential of the evidence to humiliate and embarrass the alleged victim and to result in unfair or biased jury inferences.

"(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this rule, a case involving a claim of actionable sexual misconduct, includes, but is not limited to, sex harassment or discrimination claims brought pursuant to title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000(e)) and gender bias claims brought pursuant to title III of the Violence Against Women Act of 1991."

SEC. 163. AMENDMENTS TO RAPE SHIELD LAW.

Rule 412 of the Federal Rules of Evidence is amended—

(1) by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(e) INTERLOCUTORY APPEAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any evidentiary rulings made pursuant to this rule are subject to interlocutory appeal by the government or by the alleged victim.

"(f) RULE OF RELEVANCE AND PRIVILEGE.—If the prosecution seeks to offer evidence of prior sexual history, the provisions of this rule may be waived by the alleged victim."; and

(2) by adding at the end of subdivision (c)(3) the following: "In its order, the court should consider (A) the chain of reasoning leading to its finding of relevance; and (B) why the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice given the potential of the evidence to humiliate and embarrass the alleged victim and to result in unfair or biased jury inferences."

SEC. 154. EVIDENCE OF CLOTHING.

The Federal Rules of Evidence are amended by adding after rule 412 the following:

"Rule 413. Evidence of victim's clothing as inciting violence

"Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in a criminal case in which a person is accused of an offense under chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, evidence of an alleged victim's clothing is not admissible to show that the alleged victim incited or invited the offense charged."

Subtitle F—Assistance to Victims of Sexual Assault

SEC. 161. EDUCATION AND PREVENTION GRANTS TO REDUCE SEXUAL ASSAULTS AGAINST WOMEN.

Part A of title XIX of the Public Health and Health Services Act (42 U.S.C. 300w et seq.) is amended as follows:

(1) by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"§1910A. Use of allotments for rape prevention education

"(a) Notwithstanding the terms of section 1904(a)(1) of this title, amounts transferred by the State for use under this part may be used for rape prevention and education programs conducted by rape crisis centers or similar nongovernmental nonprofit entities, which programs may include—

- "(1) educational seminars;
- "(2) the operation of hotlines;
- "(3) training programs for professionals;
- "(4) the preparation of informational materials; and
- "(5) other efforts to increase awareness of the facts about, or to help prevent, sexual assault.

"(b) States providing grant monies must assure that at least 15 percent of the monies are devoted to education programs targeted for middle school, junior high school, and high school students.

"(c) There are authorized to be appropriated under this section for each fiscal year 1992, 1993, and 1994, $65,000,000 to carry out the purposes of this section.

"(d) Funds authorized under this section may only be used for providing rape prevention and education programs.

"(e) For purposes of this section, the term 'rape prevention and education' includes education and prevention efforts directed at offenses committed by offenders who are not known to the victim as well as offenders who are known to the victim.

"(f) States shall be allotted funds under this section pursuant to the terms of sections 1902 and 1903, and subject to the conditions provided in this section and sections 1904 through 1909."

- (2) striking section 1901(b); and
- (3) striking section 1904(a)(1)(G).

SEC. 162. RAPE EXAM PAYMENTS.

No State or other grantee is entitled to funds under title I of the Violence Against Women Act of 1990 unless the State or other grantee incurs the full cost of forensic medical exams for victims of sexual assault. A State or other grantee does not incur the full medical cost of forensic medical exams if it chooses to reimburse the victim after the fact unless the reimbursement program waives any minimum loss or deductible requirement, provides victim reimbursement within a reasonable time (90 days), permits applications for reimbursement within one year from the date of the exam, and provides information to all subjects of forensic medical exams about how to obtain reimbursement.

TITLE II—SAFE HOMES FOR WOMEN

SEC. 201. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Safe Homes for Women Act of 1990".

Subtitle A—Interstate Enforcement

SEC. 211. INTERSTATE ENFORCEMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part 1 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after chapter 110 the following:

"Chapter 110A—Violence Against Spouses

"Sec. 2261. Traveling to commit spousal abuse.

"Sec. 2262. Interstate violation of protection orders.

"Sec. 2263. Restitution.

"Sec. 2264. Full faith and credit given to protection orders.

"Sec. 2265. Definitions for chapter.

"§2261. Traveling to commit spousal abuse

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Any person who travels across State lines—

"(1) and who, in the course of or as a result of such travel, commits an act that injures his or her spouse or intimate partner; or shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than 10 years but not less than 3 months, or both, in addition to any fine or term of imprisonment provided under State law.

"(b) CAUSING THE CROSSING OF STATE LINES.—Any person who causes a spouse or intimate partner to cross State lines by force, coercion, duress or fraud and, in the course or as a result of that conduct, commits an act that injures his or her spouse or intimate partner, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than 10 years but not less than 3 months, or both, in addition to any fine or term of imprisonment provided under State law.

"(c) NO STATE LAW.—If no fine or term of imprisonment is provided for under the law of the State where the injury occurs, a person violating this section shall be punished as follows:

"(1) If permanent disfigurement or life-threatening bodily injury results, by imprisonment for not more than 20 years; where serious bodily injury results, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both; where bodily injury results, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

"(2) If the offense is committed with intent to commit another felony, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both.

"(3) If the offense is committed with a dangerous weapon, with intent to do bodily harm, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

"(4) If the offense constitutes sexual abuse, as that conduct is described under chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code (without regard to whether the offense was committed in the maritime, territorial or prison jurisdiction of the United States) by fine or term of imprisonment as provided for the applicable conduct under chapter 109A.

"(d) CRIMINAL INTENT.—The criminal intent of the offender required to establish an offense under subsection (b) is the general intent to do the acts that result in injury to a spouse or intimate partner and not the specific intent to violate the law of a State.

"(e) NO PRIOR STATE CRIMINAL ACTION NECESSARY.—Nothing in this section requires a prior criminal prosecution or conviction under State law to justify Federal prosecution.

"§2262. Interstate violation of protection orders

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Any person against whom a valid protection order has been entered who travels across State lines—

"(1) and who, in the course of or as a result of such travel, commits an act that injures

his or her spouse or intimate partner in violation of a valid protection order issued by a State; or

"(2) for the purpose of harassing, injuring, finding, contacting, or locating a spouse or intimate partner and who, in furtherance of that purpose, commits an act that injures his or her spouse or intimate partner in violation of a valid protection order issued by a State, shall be punished as provided in subsection (c) of this section.

"(b) CAUSING THE CROSSING OF STATE LINES.—Any person who causes a spouse or intimate partner to cross State lines by force, coercion, duress, or fraud, and, in the course or as a result of that conduct, commits an act that injures his or her spouse or intimate partner in violation of a valid protection order issued by a State shall be punished as provided in subsection (c) of this section.

"(c) PENALTIES.—

"(1) If permanent disfigurement or life-threatening bodily injury results, by imprisonment for not more than 20 years; where serious bodily injury results, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both; where bodily injury results, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

"(2) If the offense is committed with intent to commit another felony, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both.

"(3) If the offense is committed with a dangerous weapon, with intent to do bodily harm, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

"(4) If the offender has previously violated any prior protection order issued against that person for the protection of the same victim, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years and not less than six months, or both.

"(5) If the offense constitutes sexual abuse, as that conduct is described under chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code (without regard to whether the conduct was committed in the special maritime, territorial or prison jurisdiction of the United States) by fine or term of imprisonment as provided for the applicable offense under chapter 109A.

"(d) CRIMINAL INTENT.—The criminal intent required to establish the offense provided in subsection (a) is the general intent to do the acts which result in injury to a spouse or intimate partner and not the specific intent to violate a protection order or State law.

(e) NO PRIOR STATE CRIMINAL ACTION NECESSARY.—Nothing in this section requires a prior criminal prosecution or conviction under State law to justify Federal prosecution.

"§ 2263. Interim protections

"In furtherance of the purposes of this chapter, and to protect against abuse of a spouse or intimate partner, any judge or magistrate before whom a criminal case under this chapter is brought, shall have the power to issue temporary orders of protection for the protection of an abused spouse or intimate partner pending final adjudication of the case, upon a showing of a likelihood of danger to the abused spouse or intimate partner.

"§ 2264. Restitution

"(a) IN GENERAL.—In addition to any fine or term of imprisonment provided under this chapter, and notwithstanding the terms of section 3663 of this title, the court shall order restitution to the victim of an offense under this chapter.

"(b) SCOPE AND NATURE OF ORDER.—(1) The order of restitution under this section shall direct that—

"(A) the defendant pay to the victim the full amount of the victim's losses as determined by the court, pursuant to subsection (3); and

"(B) the United States Attorney enforce the restitution order by all available and reasonable means.

"(2) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'full amount of the victim's losses' includes any costs incurred by the victim for—

"(A) medical services relating to physical, psychiatric, or psychological care;

"(B) physical and occupational therapy or rehabilitation; and

"(C) lost income;

"(D) attorneys' fees, plus any costs incurred in obtaining a civil protection order; and

"(E) any other losses suffered by the victim as a proximate result of the offense.

"(3) Restitution orders under this section are mandatory. A court may not decline to issue an order under this section because of—

"(A) the economic circumstances of the defendant; or

"(B) the fact that victim has, or is entitled to, receive compensation for his or her injuries from the proceeds of insurance.

"(4)(A) Notwithstanding the terms of paragraph (3), the court may take into account the economic circumstances of the defendant in determining the manner in which and the schedule according to which the restitution is to be paid, including—

"(i) the financial resources and other assets of the defendant;

"(ii) projected earnings, earning capacity, and other income of the defendant; and

"(iii) any financial obligations of the offender, including obligations to dependents.

"(B) An order under this section may direct the defendant to make a single lump-sum payment, or partial payments at specified intervals. The order shall provide that the defendant's restitutionary obligation takes priority over any criminal fine ordered.

"(C) In the event that the victim has recovered for any amount of loss through the proceeds of insurance or any other source, the order of restitution shall provide that restitution be paid to the person who provided the compensation, but that restitution shall be paid to the victim before any restitution is paid to any other provider of compensation.

"(5) Any amount paid to a victim under this section shall be set off against any amount later recovered as compensatory damages by the victim from the defendant in—

"(A) any Federal civil proceeding; and

"(B) any State civil proceeding, to the extent provided by the law of the State.

"(c) PROOF OF CLAIM.—(1) Within 60 days after conviction and, in any event, no later than 10 days prior to sentencing, the United States Attorney (or his delegee), after consulting with the victim, shall prepare and file an affidavit with the court listing the amounts subject to restitution under this section. The affidavit shall be signed by the United States Attorney (or his delegee) and the victim. Should the victim object to any of the information included in the affidavit, the United States Attorney (or his delegee) shall advise the victim that the victim may file a separate affidavit.

"(2) If no objection is raised by the defendant, the amounts attested to in the affidavit filed pursuant to subsection (1) shall be entered in the court's restitution order. If objection is raised, the court may require the victim or the United States Attorney (or his delegee) to submit further affidavits or other supporting documents, demonstrating the victim's losses.

"(3) If the court concludes, after reviewing the supporting documentation and considering the defendant's objections, that there is a substantial reason for doubting the authenticity or veracity of the records submitted, the court may require additional documentation or hear testimony on those questions. Any records filed, or testimony heard, pursuant to this section, shall be in camera in the judge's chambers. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, this section does not entitle the defendant to discovery of the contents of, or related to, any supporting documentation, including medical, psychological, or psychiatric records.

"(4) In the event that the victim's losses are not ascertainable 10 days prior to sentencing as provided in subsection (c)(1), the United States Attorney (or his delegee) shall so inform the court, and the court shall set a date for the final determination of the victim's losses, not to exceed 90 days after sentencing. If the victim subsequently discovers further losses, the victim shall have 60 days after discovery of those losses in which to petition the court for an amended restitution order. Such order may be granted only upon a showing of good cause for the failure to include such losses in the initial claim for restitutionary relief.

"(d) RESTITUTION AND CRIMINAL PENALTIES.—An award of restitution to the victim of an offense under this chapter shall not be a substitute for imposition of punishment under sections 2261 and 2262.

"(e) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section, the term 'victim' includes any person who has suffered direct physical, emotional, or pecuniary harm as a result of a commission of a crime under this chapter, including, in the case of a victim who is under 18 years of age, incompetent, incapacitated, or deceased, the legal guardian of the victim or representative of the victim's estate, another family member, or any other person appointed as suitable by the court: Provided, That in no event shall the defendant be named as such representative or guardian.

"§ 2265. Full faith and credit given to protection orders

"(a) FULL FAITH AND CREDIT.—Any protection order issued consistent with the terms of subsection (b) by the court of one State (the issuing State) shall be accorded full faith and credit by the court of another State (the enforcing State) and enforced as if it were the order of the enforcing State.

"(b) PROTECTION ORDER.—A protection order issued by a State court is consistent with the provisions of this section if—

"(1) such court has jurisdiction over the parties and matter under the law of such State; and

"(2) reasonable notice and opportunity to be heard is given to the person against whom the order is sought sufficient to protect that person's right to due process. In the case of ex parte orders, notice and opportunity to be heard must be provided within the time required by State law, and in any event within a reasonable time after the order is issued, sufficient to protect the respondent's due process rights.

"(c) CROSS OR COUNTER PETITION.—A protection order issued by a State court against one who has petitioned, filed a complaint, or otherwise filed a written pleading for protection against abuse by a spouse or intimate partner is not entitled to full faith and credit if—

"(1) no cross or counter petition, complaint, or other written pleading was filed seeking such a protection order; or

"(2) if a cross or counter petition has been filed, if the court did not make specific findings that each party was entitled to such an order.

"§ 2266. Definitions for chapter

"As used in this chapter—

"(1) the term 'spouse or intimate partner' includes—

"(A) a present or former spouse, a person who shares a child in common with the abuser, and a person who cohabits or has cohabited with the abuser as a spouse; and

"(B) any other person similarly situated to a spouse, other than a child, who is protected by the domestic or family violence laws of the State in which the injury occurred or where the victim resides;

"(2) the term 'protection order' includes any injunction or other order issued for the purpose of preventing violent or threatening acts by one spouse against his or her spouse or intimate partner, including temporary and final orders issued by civil and criminal courts (other than support or child custody orders) whether obtained by filing an independent action or as a pendente lite order in another proceeding so long as any civil order was issued in response to a complaint, petition or motion of an abused spouse or intimate partner;

"(3) the term 'act that injures' includes any act, except those done in self-defense, that results in physical injury or sexual abuse;

"(4) the term 'State' includes a State of the United States, the District of Columbia, and any Indian tribe, commonwealth, territory, or possession of the United States; and

"(5) the term 'travel across State lines' includes any such travel except travel across State lines by an Indian tribal member when that member remained at all times on tribal lands."

(b) TABLE OF CHAPTERS.—The table of chapters for part 1 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item for chapter 110 the following:

"110A. Violence against spouses ..... 2261."

Subtitle B—Arrest in Spousal Abuse Cases

SEC. 221. ENCOURAGING ARREST POLICIES.

The Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10400) is amended by adding after section 311 the following:

"SEC. 312. ENCOURAGING ARREST POLICIES.

"(a) PURPOSE.—To encourage States, Indian tribes and localities to treat spousal violence as a serious violation of criminal law, the Secretary is authorized to make grants to eligible States, Indian tribes, municipalities, or local government entities for the following purposes:

"(1) to implement pro-arrest programs and policies in police departments and to improve tracking of cases involving spousal abuse;

"(2) to centralize and coordinate police enforcement, prosecution, or judicial responsibility for, spousal abuse cases in one group or unit of police officers, prosecutors, or judges;

"(3) to educate judges in criminal and other courts about spousal abuse and to improve judicial handling of such cases.

"(b) ELIGIBILITY.—(1) Eligible grantees are those States, Indian tribes, municipalities or other local government entities that—

"(A) demonstrate, through arrest and conviction statistics, that their laws or policies have been effective in significantly increasing the number of arrests, made of spouse abusers; and

"(B) certify that their laws or official policies—

"(i) mandate arrest of spouse abusers based on probable cause that violence has been committed or mandate arrest of spouses violating the terms of a valid and outstanding protection order; or

"(ii) permit warrantless misdemeanor arrests of spouse abusers and encourage the use of that authority;

"(C) demonstrate that their laws, policies, practices and training programs discourage 'dual' arrests of abused and abuser and the increase in arrest rates demonstrated pursuant to paragraph (1)(A) is not the result of increased dual arrests; and

"(D) certify that their laws, policies, and practices prohibit issuance of mutual protection orders in cases where only one spouse has sought a protective order, and require findings of mutual aggression to issue mutual protective orders in cases where both parties file a claim.

"(2) For purposes of this section, the term 'protection order' includes any injunction issued for the purpose of preventing violent or threatening acts of spouse abuse, including temporary and final orders issued by civil and criminal courts (other than support or child custody orders) whether obtained by filing an independent action or as a pendente lite order in another proceeding.

"(3) For purposes of this section, the term 'spousal or spouse abuse' includes felony or misdemeanor offenses committed by a current or former spouse of the victim, a person with whom the victim shares a child in common, a person who is cohabiting with or has cohabited with the victim as a spouse, or any other person protected under the domestic or family violence laws of the jurisdiction receiving grant monies.

"(4) The eligibility requirements provided in this section shall take effect one year after the date of enactment of this section.

"(c) DELEGATION AND AUTHORIZATION.—The Secretary shall delegate to the Attorney General of the United States the Secretary's responsibilities for carrying out this section to the Attorney General. There are authorized to be appropriated not in excess of $25,000,000 for each fiscal year to be used for the purpose of making grants under this section.

"(d) APPLICATION.—An eligible grantee shall submit an application to the Secretary. Such application shall—

"(1) contain a certification by the chief executive officer of the State, Indian tribes, municipality, or local government entity that the conditions of subsection (b) are met;

"(2) describe the entity's plans to further the purposes listed in subsection (a);

"(3) identify the agency or office or groups of agencies or offices responsible for carrying out the program; and

"(4) identify and include documentation showing the nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs that will be consulted in developing, and implementing, the program.

"(e) PRIORITY.—In awarding grants under this section, the Secretary shall give priority to a grantee that—

"(1) does not currently provide for centralized handling of cases involving spousal or family violence in any one of the areas listed in this subsection—police, prosecutors, and courts; and

"(2) demonstrates a commitment to strong enforcement of laws, and prosecution of cases, involving spousal or family violence.

"(f) REPORTING.—Each grantee receiving funds under this section shall submit a report to the Secretary evaluating the effectiveness of the plan described in subsection (d)(2) and containing such additional information as the Secretary may prescribe.

"(g) REGULATIONS.—No later than 45 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall publish proposed regulations implementing this section. No later than 120 days after such date, the Secretary shall publish final regulations implementing this section."

Subtitle C—Funding for Shelters

SEC. 231. AUTHORIZATION.

Section 310 of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10409) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 310. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"(a) There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out the provisions of this title, $85,000,000 for fiscal year 1992, $100,000,000, for fiscal year 1993, and $125,000,000 for fiscal year 1994.

"(b) Of the sums authorized to be appropriated under subsection (a) of this section for any fiscal year, not less than 80 percent shall be used by the Secretary for making grants under section 303.

"(c) Of the sums authorized to be appropriated under subsection (a) of this section for any fiscal year, not more than 5 percent shall be used by the Secretary for making grants under section 314.

"(d) Of the sums authorized to be appropriated under subsection (a) of this section for any fiscal year, not less than 5 percent shall be used by the Secretary for making grants under section 308A."

Subtitle D—Family Violence Prevention and Services Act Amendments

SEC. 241. EXPANSION OF PURPOSE.

Section 302(1) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10401(1)) is amended by striking "to prevent" and inserting "to increase public awareness about and prevent" and by striking "demonstrate the effectiveness of assisting" and inserting "assist".

SEC. 242. EXPANSION OF STATE DEMONSTRATION GRANT PROGRAM.

(a) INCREASING PUBLIC AWARENESS.—Section 303(a)(1) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10402(a)(1)) is amended by striking "to prevent" and inserting "to increase public awareness about and prevent".

(b) EXPANSION OF PROGRAM.—Section 303(a)(2)(B)(ii) is amended by striking "alcohol and drug abuse treatment".

SEC. 243. GRANTS FOR PUBLIC INFORMATION CAMPAIGNS.

The Family Violence Prevention and Services Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"GRANTS FOR PUBLIC INFORMATION CAMPAIGNS

"SEC. 314. (a) The Secretary may make grants to public or private nonprofit entities to provide public information campaigns regarding domestic violence through the use of public service announcements and informative materials that are designed for print media, billboards, public transit advertising, electronic broadcast media, and other vehicles for information that shall inform the public concerning domestic violence.

"(b) No grant, contract, or cooperative agreement shall be made or entered into under this section unless an application that meets the requirements of subsection (c) has been approved by the Secretary.

"(c) An application submitted under subsection (b) shall—

"(1) provide such agreements, assurances, and information, be in such form and be submitted in such manner as the Secretary shall prescribe through notice in the Federal Register, including a description of how the proposed public information campaign will target the population at risk, including pregnant women;

"(2) include a complete description of the plan of the application for the development of a public information campaign;

"(3) identify the specific audiences that will be educated, including communities and groups with the highest prevalence of domestic violence;

"(4) identify the media to be used in the campaign and the geographic distribution of the campaign;

"(5) describe plans to test market a development plan with a relevant population group and in a relevant geographic area and give assurance that effectiveness criteria will be implemented prior to the completion of the final plan that will include an evaluation component to measure the overall effectiveness of the campaign;

"(6) describe the kind, amount, distribution, and timing of informational messages and such other information as the Secretary may require, with assurances that media organizations and other groups with which such messages are placed will not lower the current frequency of public service announcements; and

"(7) contain such other information as the Secretary may require.

"(d) A grant, contract, or agreement made or entered into under this section shall be used for the development of a public information campaign that may include public service announcements, paid educational messages for print media, public transit advertising, electronic broadcast media, and any other mode of conveying information that the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

"(e) The criteria for awarding grants shall ensure that an applicant—

"(1) will conduct activities that educate communities and groups at greatest risk;

"(2) has a record of high quality campaigns of a comparable type; and

"(3) has a record of high quality campaigns that educate the population groups identified as most at risk."

SEC. 244. FUND DISTRIBUTION TO STATES.

Section 304(a)(1) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act is amended by striking "$50,000" and inserting "$500,000".

SEC. 245. INDIAN TRIBES.

Section 303(b)(1) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10402(b)(1)) is amended by striking "is authorized" and inserting "from sums appropriated shall make no less than 10 percent available for".

SEC. 246. FUNDING LIMITATIONS.

Section 303(c) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10402(c)) is amended by—

(1) striking ", and" and all that follows through "fiscal years"; and

(2) striking "$50,000" and inserting "$75,000".

SEC. 247. GRANTS TO ENTITIES OTHER THAN STATES; LOCAL SHARE.

The first sentence of section 303(f) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10402(f)) is amended to read as follows: "No grant may be made under this section to an entity other than a State or Indian tribe unless the entity provides 35 percent of the funding of the program or project funded by the grant."

SEC. 248. SHELTER AND RELATED ASSISTANCE.

(a) CHANGE OF PERCENTAGES.—Section 303(g) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10402(g)) is amended by striking "not less than 60 percent" and inserting "not less than 75 percent".

(b) DEFINITION OF RELATED ASSISTANCE.—Section 309(5) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act is amended to read as follows:

"(5) The term 'related assistance' includes any, but does not require all, of the following—

"(A) food, shelter, medical services, and counseling with respect to family violence, including counseling by peers individually or in groups;

"(B) transportation, legal assistance, referrals for appropriate health-care services (including alcohol and drug abuse treatment), and technical assistance with respect to obtaining financial assistance under Federal and State programs;

"(C) comprehensive counseling and self-help services to abusers, preventive health (including nutrition, exercise, and prevention of substance abuse), educational services and employment training; and

"(D) child care services for children who are victims of family violence or the dependents of such victims."

SEC. 249. LAW ENFORCEMENT TRAINING AND TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE GRANTS.

Section 311 of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10410(b)) is repealed.

SEC. 250. REPORT ON RECORDKEEPING.

Not later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Government Accounting Office shall complete a study of, and shall submit to Congress a report and recommendations on, problems of record-keeping of criminal complaints involving domestic violence. The study and report shall examine efforts to date of the FBI and Justice Department to collect statistics on domestic violence and the feasibility of, including a suggested timetable for, requiring that the relationship between an offender and victim be reported in Federal and State records of crimes of assault, aggravated assault, rape, and other violent crimes.

SEC. 251. MODEL STATE LEADERSHIP INCENTIVE GRANTS FOR DOMESTIC VIOLENCE INTERVENTION.

The Family Violence Prevention Services Act, as amended by section 103 of this Act, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"MODEL STATE LEADERSHIP GRANTS FOR DOMESTIC VIOLENCE INTERVENTION

"Sec. 315. (a) The Secretary, in cooperation with the Attorney General, shall award grants to not less than 10 States to assist in becoming model demonstration States and in meeting the costs of improving State leadership concerning activities that will—

"(1) increase the number of prosecutions for domestic violence crimes;

"(2) encourage the reporting of incidences of domestic violence;

"(3) facilitate 'arrests and aggressive' prosecution policies; and

"(4) provides court advocacy for victims of domestic violence.

"(b) To be designated as a model State under subsection (a), a State shall have in effect—

"(1) a law that requires mandatory arrest of a person that police have probable cause to believe has committed an act of domestic violence or probable cause to believe has violated an outstanding civil protection order;

"(2) a law or policy that discourages * * *

"(B) implement model projects that include either—

"(i) a 'no-drop' prosecution policy; or

"(ii) a vertical prosecution policy; and

"(C) limit diversion to extraordinary cases, and then only after an admission before a judge of 'dual' arrests;

"(3) statewide prosecution policies that—

"(A) authorize and encourage prosecutors to pursue cases where a criminal case can be proved, including proceeding without the active involvement of the victim if necessary; and

"(B) implement model projects that include either—

"(i) a 'no-drop' prosecution policy; or

"(ii) a vertical prosecution policy; and

"(C) limit diversion to extraordinary cases, and then only after an admission before a judicial officer has been entered;

"(4) statewide laws, policies, or guidelines for judges that—

"(A) prohibit the issuance of mutual protective orders in cases where only one spouse has sought a protective order and require findings of mutual aggression to issue mutual protective orders in cases where both parties file a claim;

"(B) require that any history of child abuse be considered detrimental to the child and discourage custody or joint custody orders by spouse abusers; and

"(C) encourage the understanding of domestic violence as a serious criminal offense and not a trivial dispute;

"(5) develop and disseminate methods to improve the criminal justice system's response to domestic violence to make existing remedies as easily available as possible to victims of domestic violence, including reducing delay, eliminating court fees, and providing easily understandable court forms.

"(c)(1) In addition to the funds authorized to be appropriated under section 310, there are authorized to be appropriated to make grants under this section $25,000,000 for fiscal year 1992 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1993 and 1994.

"(2) Funds shall be distributed under this section so that no State shall receive more than $2,500,000 in each fiscal year under this section.

"(3) The Secretary shall delegate to the Attorney General the Secretary's responsibilities for carrying out this section and shall transfer to the Attorney General the funds appropriated under this section for the purpose of making grants under this section."

SEC. 252. FUNDING FOR TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE CENTERS.

The Family Violence Prevention and Services Act is amended by inserting after section 308 the following:

"SEC. 308A. TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE CENTERS.

"(a) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this section is to provide training and technical assistance to State, Indian tribal, and local domestic violence programs and to other professionals who provide services to victims of domestic violence. From the sums authorized under this title, the Secretary shall provide grants to or contract with, private nonprofit organizations, for the establishment and maintenance of one national and six special-issue resource centers serving defined geographic areas. One national resource center shall offer resource, policy, and/or training assistance to Federal, State, Indian tribal, and local government agencies on issues pertaining to domestic violence and serve a coordinating and resource-sharing function among domestic violence service providers, and maintain a central resource library. The other national resource centers shall provide information, training and technical assistance to State, tribal and local domestic violence service providers. In addition, each national center shall specialize in one of the following areas of domestic violence service, prevention or law:

"(1) criminal justice response to domestic violence, including court-mandated abuser treatment;

"(2) child custody issues in domestic violence cases;

"(3) use of the self-defense plea by domestic violence victims;

"(4) health care response and access to health care resources for domestic violence victims;

"(5) victims' access to, and quality of, effective legal assistance, including civil litigation; and

"(6) the response of child protective service agencies to battered mothers of abused children.

"(b) ELIGIBILITY.—Eligible grantees are private non-profit organizations that—

"(1) focus primarily on domestic violence;

"(2) provide documentation to the Secretary demonstrating a minimum of three years experience with issues of domestic violence, particularly in the specific area for which it is applying;

"(3) include on its advisory boards representatives from domestic violence programs who are geographically and culturally diverse; and

"(4) demonstrate strong support from domestic violence advocates for their designation as the special-issue resource center.

"(c) REPORTING.—Each grantee receiving funds under this section shall submit a report to the Secretary evaluating the effectiveness of the plan described and containing such additional information as the Secretary may prescribe.

"(d) REGULATIONS.—No later than 45 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall publish proposed regulations implementing this section."

Subtitle E—Youth Education and Domestic Violence

SEC. 261. EDUCATING YOUTH ABOUT DOMESTIC VIOLENCE.

(a) GENERAL PURPOSE.—For purposes of this section, the Secretary shall delegate his powers to the Secretary of Education, hereinafter referred to as the "Secretary". The Secretary shall select, implement and evaluate four model programs for education of young people about domestic violence and violence among intimate partners.

(b) NATURE OF PROGRAM.—The Secretary shall select, implement and evaluate separate model programs for four different audiences: primary schools, middle schools, secondary schools, and institutions of higher education. These model programs shall be selected, implemented, and evaluated with the input of educational experts, legal and psychological experts on battering, and victim advocate organizations such as battered women's shelters, State coalitions and resource centers. The participation of each of these groups or individual consultants from such groups is essential to the selection, implementation, and evaluation of programs that meet both the needs of educational institutions and the needs of the domestic violence problem.

(c) REVIEW AND DISSEMINATION.—Not later than 24 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall transmit the design and evaluation of the model programs, along with a plan and cost estimate for nationwide distribution, to the relevant committees of Congress for review.

(d) AUTHORIZATION.—There are authorized to be appropriated under this section for fiscal year 1992, $400,000 to carry out the purposes of this section.

Subtitle F—Confidentiality for Abused Persons

SEC. 271. CONFIDENTIALITY OF ABUSED PERSONS' ADDRESSES.

No later than 90 days after the enactment of this Act, the Postmaster General shall promulgate regulations to secure the confidentiality of abused persons' addresses or otherwise prohibit the disclosure of an abused person's address consistent with the following guidelines:

(1) confidentiality shall be provided upon the presentation to an appropriate postal official of an existing and valid court order for the protection of an abused spouse;

(2) disclosure of addresses to State or Federal agencies for legitimate law enforcement or other governmental purposes shall not be prohibited; and

(3) compilations of addresses existing at the time the order is presented to an appropriate postal official shall be excluded from the scope of the proposed regulations.

TITLE III—CIVIL RIGHTS

SEC. 301. CIVIL RIGHTS.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) crimes motivated by the victim's gender constitute bias crimes in violation of the victim's right to be free from discrimination on the basis of gender;

(2) current law provides a civil rights remedy for gender crimes committed in the workplace, but not for gender crimes committed on the street or in the home; and

(3) State and Federal criminal laws do not adequately protect against the bias element of gender-motivated crimes, which separates these crimes from acts of random violence, nor do those laws adequately provide victims of gender-motivated crimes the opportunity to vindicate their interests;

(4) existing bias and discrimination in the criminal justice system often deprives victims of gender-motivated crimes of equal protection of the laws and the redress to which they are entitled;

(5) gender-motivated violence has a substantial adverse effect on interstate commerce, by deterring potential victims from traveling interstate, from engaging in employment in interstate business, and from transacting with business, and in places involved, in interstate commerce;

(6) gender-motivated violence has a substantial adverse effect on interstate commerce, by diminishing national productivity, increasing medical and other costs, and decreasing the supply of and the demand for interstate products;

(7) a Federal civil rights action as specified in this section is necessary to guarantee equal protection of the laws and to reduce the substantial adverse effects of gender-motivated violence on interstate commerce; and

(8) victims of gender-motivated violence have a right to equal protection of the laws, including a system of justice that is unaffected by bias or discrimination and that, at every relevant stage, treats such crimes as seriously as other violent crimes.

(b) RIGHTS, PRIVILEGES AND IMMUNITIES.—All persons within the United States shall have the same rights, privileges and immunities in every State as is enjoyed by all other persons to be free from crimes of violence motivated by the victim's gender, as defined in subsection (d).

(c) CAUSE OF ACTION.—Any person, including a person who acts under color of any statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage of any State, who commits a crime of violence motivated by gender and thus deprives another of the rights, privileges or immunities secured by the Constitution or laws as enumerated in subsection (b) shall be liable to the party injured, in an action for the recovery of compensatory and punitive damages, injunctive and declaratory relief, and such other relief as the court may deem appropriate.

(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

(1) the term "crime of violence motivated by gender" means any crime of violence, as defined in this section, including rape, sexual assault, sexual abuse, abusive sexual contact, or any other crime of violence committed because of gender or on the basis of gender; and

(2) the term "crime of violence" means an act or series of acts that would come within the meaning of State or Federal offenses described in section 16 of title 18, United States Code, whether or not those acts have actually resulted in criminal charges, prosecution, or conviction and whether or not those acts were committed in the special maritime, territorial, or prison jurisdiction of the United States.

(e) LIMITATION AND PROCEDURES.—

(1) LIMITATION.—Nothing in this section entitles a person to a cause of action under subsection (c) for random acts of violence unrelated to gender or for acts that cannot be demonstrated, by a preponderance of the evidence, to be "motivated by gender" as defined in subsection (d).

(2) NO PRIOR CRIMINAL ACTION.—Nothing in this section requires a prior criminal complaint, prosecution, or conviction to establish the necessary elements of a cause of action under subsection (c).

SEC. 302. CONFORMING AMENDMENT.

The Civil Rights Attorney's Fees Awards Act of 1976 (42 U.S.C. 1988) is amended—

(1) in the last sentence, by striking "or" after "Public Law 92-318,"; and

(2) by adding after "1964," the following: ", or title III of the Violence Against Women Act of 1991."

TITLE IV—SAFE CAMPUSES FOR WOMEN

SEC. 401. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Safe Campuses for Women Act of 1990".

SEC. 402. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) rape prevention and education programs are essential to an educational environment free of fear for students' personal safety;

(2) sexual assault on campus, whether by fellow students or not, is widespread among the Nation's higher education institutions: experts estimate that 1 in 7 of the women now in college have been raped and over half of college rape victims know their attackers;

(3) sexual assault poses a grave threat to the physical and mental well-being of students and may significantly impair the learning process; and

(4) action by schools to educate students may make substantial inroads on the incidence of rape, including the incidence of acquaintance rape on campus.

SEC. 403. GRANTS FOR CAMPUS RAPE EDUCATION.

Title X of the Higher Education Act of 1965 is amended to add at the end thereof the following:

"PART D—GRANTS FOR CAMPUS RAPE EDUCATION."

SEC. 107L. GRANTS FOR CAMPUS RAPE EDUCATION.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) The Secretary of Education is authorized to make grants to or enter into contracts with institutions of higher education for rape education and prevention programs under this section.

"(2) The Secretary shall make financial assistance available on a competitive basis under this section. An institution of higher education or consortium of such institutions which desires to receive a grant or enter into a contract under this section shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require in accordance with regulations.

"(3) The Secretary shall make every effort to ensure the equitable participation of private and public institutions of higher education and to ensure the equitable geographic participation of such institutions. In the award of grants and contracts under this section, the Secretary shall give priority to institutions who show the greatest need for the sums requested.

"(b) GENERAL RAPE PREVENTION AND EDUCATION GRANTS.—Grants under this section shall be used to educate and provide support services to student victims of rape or sexual assault. Grants may be used for the following purposes:

"(1) to provide training for campus security and college personnel, including campus disciplinary or judicial boards, that address the issues of rape, sexual assault, and other gender-motivated crimes;

"(2) to develop, disseminate, or implement campus security and student disciplinary policies to prevent and discipline rape, sexual assault and other gender-motivated crimes;

"(3) to develop, enlarge or strengthen support services programs including medical or psychological counseling to assist victims' recovery from rape, sexual assault, or other gender-motivated crimes;

"(4) to create, disseminate, or otherwise provide assistance and information about victims' options on and off campus to bring disciplinary or other legal action; and

"(5) to implement, operate, or improve rape education and prevention programs, including programs making use of peer-to-peer education.

"(c) MODEL GRANTS.—Not less than 25 percent of the funds authorized under this section shall be available for grants for model demonstration programs to be coordinated with local rape crisis centers for the development and implementation of quality rape prevention and education curricula and for local programs to provide services to student rape victims.

"(d) ELIGIBILITY.—No institution of higher education or consortium of such institutions shall be eligible for a grant under this section unless—

"(1) its student code of conduct, or other written policy governing student behavior, explicitly prohibits not only rape but all forms of sexual assault; and

"(2) it has in effect and implements a written policy requiring the disclosure to the victim of any sexual assault the outcome of any investigation by campus police or campus disciplinary proceedings brought pursuant to the victim's complaint against the alleged perpetrator of the sexual assault: Provided, That nothing in this section shall be interpreted to authorize disclosure to any person other than the victim.

"(e) APPLICATIONS.—(1) In order to be eligible to receive a grant under this section for any fiscal year, an institution of higher education, or consortium of such institutions, shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time and in such manner as the Secretary shall prescribe.

"(2) Each such application shall—

"(A) set forth the activities and programs to be carried out with funds granted under this part;

"(B) contain an estimate of the cost for the establishment and operation of such programs;

"(C) explain how the program intends to address the issue of acquaintance rape;

"(D) provide assurances that the Federal funds made available under this section shall be used to supplement and, to the extent practical, to increase the level of funds that would, in the absence of such Federal funds, be made available by the applicant for the purpose described in this part, and in no case to supplant such funds; and

"(E) include such other information and assurances as the Secretary reasonably determines to be necessary.

"(f) GRANTEE REPORTING.—Upon completion of the grant period under this section, the grantee institution or consortium of institutions shall file a performance report with the Secretary explaining the activities carried out together with an assessment of the effectiveness of those activities in achieving the purposes of this section. The Secretary shall suspend funding for an approved application if an applicant fails to submit an annual performance report.

"(g) DEFINITIONS.—(1) Except as otherwise provided, the terms used in this part shall have the meaning provided under section 2981 of this title.

"(2) For purposes of this subchapter, the following terms have the following meanings:

"(A) The term 'rape education and prevention' includes programs that provide educational seminars, peer-to-peer counseling, operation of hotlines, self-defense courses, the preparation of informational materials, and any other effort to increase campus awareness of the facts about, or to help prevent, sexual assault.

"(B) The term 'Secretary' means the Secretary of Education.

"(g) GENERAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—(1) REGULATIONS.—No later than 45 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall publish proposed regulations implementing this section. No later than 120 days after such date, the Secretary shall publish final regulations implementing this section.

"(2) No later than 180 days after the end of each fiscal year for which grants are made under this section, the Secretary shall submit to the committees of the House of Representatives and the Senate responsible for issues relating to higher education and to crime, a report that includes—

"(A) the amount of grants made under this section;

"(B) a summary of the purposes for which those grants were provided and an evaluation of their progress; and

"(C) a copy of each grantee report filed pursuant to subsection (e) of this section.

"(3) For the purpose of carrying out this subchapter, there are authorized to be appropriated $20,000,000 for the fiscal year 1992, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1993, 1994, and 1995."

SEC. 404. REQUIRED CAMPUS REPORTING OF SEXUAL ASSAULT.

Section 204(f) of the Crime Awareness and Campus Security Act of 1990 is amended to read as follows:

"(F) Statistics concerning the occurrence on campus, during the most recent school year, and during the 2 preceding school years for which data are available, of the following criminal offenses reported to campus security authorities or local police agencies—

"(i) murder;

"(ii) rape or sexual assault;

"(iii) robbery;

"(iv) aggravated assault;

"(v) burglary; and

"(vi) motor vehicle theft.

TITLE V—EQUAL JUSTICE FOR WOMEN IN THE COURTS ACT OF 1990

SECTION 501. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Equal Justice for Women in the Courts Act of 1991".

Subtitle A—Education and Training for Judges and Court Personnel in State Courts

SEC. 511. GRANTS AUTHORIZED.

The State Justice Institute is authorized to award grants for the purpose of developing, testing, presenting, and disseminating model programs to be used by States in training judges and court personnel in the laws of the States on rape, sexual assault, domestic violence, and other crimes of violence motivated by the victim's gender.

SEC. 512. TRAINING PROVIDED BY GRANTS.

Training provided pursuant to grants made under this subtitle may include current information, existing studies, or current data on—

(1) the nature and incidence of rape and sexual assault by strangers and nonstrangers, marital rape, and incest;

(2) the underreporting of rape, sexual assault, and child sexual abuse;

(3) the physical, psychological, and economic impact of rape and sexual assault on the victim, the costs to society, and the implications for sentencing;

(4) the psychology of sex offenders, their high rate of recidivism, and the implications for sentencing;

(5) the historical evolution of laws and attitudes on rape and sexual assault;

(6) sex stereotyping of female and male victims of rape and sexual assault, racial stereotyping of rape victims and defendants, and the impact of such stereotypes on credibility of witnesses, sentencing, and other aspects of the administration of justice;

(7) application of rape shield laws and other limits on introduction of evidence that may subject victims to improper sex stereotyping and harassment in both rape and nonrape cases, including the need for sua sponte judicial intervention in inappropriate cross-examination;

(8) the use of expert witness testimony on rape trauma syndrome, child sexual abuse accommodation syndrome, post-traumatic stress syndrome, and similar issues;

(9) the legitimate reasons why victims of rape, sexual assault, and incest may refuse to testify against a defendant;

(10) the nature and incidence of domestic violence;

(11) the physical, psychological, and economic impact of domestic violence on the victim, the costs to society, and the implications for court procedures and sentencing;

(12) the psychology and self-presentation of batterers and victims and the implications for court proceedings and credibility of witnesses;

(13) sex stereotyping of female and male victims of domestic violence, myths about presence or absence of domestic violence in certain racial, ethnic, religious, or socioeconomic groups, and their impact on the administration of justice;

(14) historical evolution of laws and attitudes on domestic violence;

(15) proper and improper interpretations of the defenses of self-defense and provocation, and the use of expert witness testimony on battered woman syndrome;

(16) the likelihood of retaliation, recidivism, and escalation of violence by batterers, and the potential impact of incarceration and other meaningful sanctions for acts of domestic violence including violations of orders of protection;

(17) economic, psychological, social and institutional reasons for victims' inability to leave the batterer, to report domestic violence or to follow through on complaints, including the influence of lack of support from police, judges, and court personnel, and the legitimate reasons why victims of domestic violence may refuse to testify against a defendant;

(18) the need for orders of protection, and the implications of mutual orders of protection, dual arrest policies, and mediation in domestic violence cases;

(19) recognition of and response to gender-motivated crimes of violence other than rape, sexual assault and domestic violence, such as mass or serial murder motivated by the gender of the victims; and

(20) current information on the impact of pornography on crimes against women, or data on other activities that tend to degrade women.

SEC. 513. COOPERATION IN DEVELOPING PROGRAMS IN MAKING GRANTS UNDER THIS TITLE.

The State Justice Institute shall ensure that model programs carried out pursuant to grants made under this subtitle are developed with the participation of law enforcement officials, public and private nonprofit victim advocates, legal experts, prosecutors, defense attorneys, and recognized experts on gender bias in the courts.

SEC. 514. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There is authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1992, $600,000 to carry out the purposes of this subtitle. Of amounts appropriated under this section, the State Justice Institute shall expend no less than 40 percent on model programs regarding domestic violence and no less than 40 percent on model programs regarding rape and sexual assault. Subtitle B—Education and Training for Judges and Court Personnel in Federal Courts

SEC. 521. EDUCATION AND TRAINING GRANTS.

(a) STUDY.—The Federal Judicial Center shall conduct a study of the nature and extent of gender bias in the Federal courts, including in proceedings involving rape, sexual assault, domestic violence, and other crimes of violence motivated by gender. The study shall be conducted by the use of data collection techniques such as reviews of trial and appellate opinions and transcripts, public hearings, and inquiries to attorneys practicing in the Federal courts. The Federal Judicial Center shall publicly issue a final report containing a detailed description of the findings and conclusions of the study, including such recommendations for legislative, administrative, and judicial action as it considers appropriate.

(b) MODEL PROGRAMS.—(1) The Federal Judicial Center shall develop, test, present, and disseminate model programs to be used in training Federal judges and court personnel in the laws on rape, sexual assault, domestic violence, and other crimes of violence motivated by the victim's gender.

(2) The training programs developed under this subsection shall include—

(A) all of the topics listed in section 512 of subtitle A; and

(B) all procedural and substantive aspects of the legal rights and remedies for violent crime motivated by gender including such areas as the Federal penalties for sex crimes, interstate enforcement of laws against domestic violence and civil rights remedies for violent crimes motivated by gender.

SEC. 522. COOPERATION IN DEVELOPING PROGRAMS.

In implementing this subtitle, the Federal Judicial Center shall ensure that the study and model programs are developed with the participation of law enforcement officials, public and private nonprofit victim advocates, legal experts, prosecutors, defense attorneys, and recognized experts on gender bias in the courts.

SEC. 523. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There is authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1992, $400,000 to carry out the purposes of this subtitle. Of amounts appropriated under this section, no less than 25 percent and no more than 40 percent shall be expended by the Federal Judicial Center on the study required by section 521(a) of this subtitle.

SEC. . TESTING OF CERTAIN INDIVIDUALS CHARGED WITH CERTAIN SEXUAL OFFENSES FOR THE PRESENCE OF THE ETIOLOGIC AGENT FOR AIDS.

Victims of any offense of the type described in Chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, shall after appropriate counseling, on request, be provided with

(1) anonymous and confidential testing for the presence of the etiologic agent for acquired immune deficiency syndrome, and counseling concerning such, at no cost by appropriately trained staff operating through appropriate service providers, including rape crisis centers, community health centers, public health clinics, physicians, or other appropriate service providers; follow-up tests and counseling will be available at no cost on dates that occur three, six and twelve months following the initial test; and

(2) necessary and appropriate medical care.

(b) LIMITED TESTING OF DEFENDANTS.—

(1) COURT ORDER.—The victim of an offense of the type referred to in subsection (a) may obtain and order in the district court of the United States for the district in which charges are brought against the defendant charged with the offense, after notice to the defendant and an opportunity to be heard, requiring that the defendant be tested for the presence of the etiologic agent for acquired immune deficiency syndrome, and that the results of the test be communicated to the victim and the defendant. Any test result of the defendant given to the victim or the defendant must be accompanied by appropriate counseling.

(2) SHOWING REQUIRED.—To obtain an order under paragraph (1), the victim must demonstrate that—

(A) the defendant has been charged with the offense in a state or federal court, and if the defendant has been arrested without a warrant, a probable cause determination has been made;

(B) the test for the etiologic agent for acquired immune deficiency syndrome is requested by the victim after appropriate counseling; and

(C) the test would provide information necessary for the health of the victim of the alleged offense and the court determines that the alleged conduct of the defendant created a risk of transmission, as determined by the Centers for Disease Control, of the etiologic agent for acquired immune deficiency syndrome to the victim.

(3) FOLLOW-UP TESTING.—The court may order follow-up tests and counseling under paragraphs (b)(1) if the initial test was negative. Such follow-up tests and counseling shall be performed at the request of the victim on dates that occur six months and twelve months following the initial test.

(4) TERMINATION OF TESTING REQUIREMENTS.—An order for follow-up testing under paragraph (3) shall be terminated if the person obtains an acquittal on, or dismissal of, all charges of the type referred to in subsection (a).

(c) CONFIDENTIALITY OF TEST.—The results of any test ordered under this section shall be disclosed only to the victim or, where the court deems appropriate, to the parent or legal guardian of the victim, and to the person tested.

(d) DISCLOSURE OF TEST RESULTS.—The court shall issue an order to prohibit the disclosure of the results of any test performed under this section to anyone other than those mentioned in subsection (c). The contents of the court proceedings and test results pursuant to this section shall be sealed. The results of such test performed on the defendant under this section shall not be used as evidence in any criminal trial.

(e) CONTEMPT FOR DISCLOSURE.—Any person who discloses the results of a test in violation of this section may be held in contempt of court.

(f) PENALTIES FOR INTENTIONAL TRANSMISSION OF HIV.—Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this section, the United States Sentencing Commission shall conduct a study and prepare and submit to the appropriate Committees of Congress a report concerning recommendations for the revision of sentencing guidelines that relate to offenses in which an HIV infected individual engages in sexual activity if the individual knows that he or she is infected with HIV and intends, through such sexual activity, to expose another to HIV.

SEC. 237. PAYMENT OF COST OF HIV TESTING FOR VICTIM.

Section 503(c)(7) of the Victims' Rights and Restitution Act of 1990 is amended by inserting before the period at the end thereof the following: ", the cost of up to two tests of the victim for the human immunodeficiency virus during the twelve months following the assault, and the cost of a counseling session by a medically trained professional on the accuracy of such tests and the risk of transmission of the human immunodeficiency virus to the victim as the result of the assault".

AMENDMENT NO. 679

Strike everything after the word "Sec." and insert the following:

SEC. . TESTING OF CERTAIN INDIVIDUALS CHARGED WITH CERTAIN SEXUAL OFFENSES FOR THE PRESENCE OF THE ETIOLOGIC AGENT FOR ACQUIRED IMMUNE DEFICIENCY SYNDROME.

(a) HIV RELATED SERVICES FOR VICTIMS.—Victims of any State or Federal offense of the type described in chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, shall, on request, be provided with

(1) anonymous and confidential testing for the presence of the etiologic agent for acquired immune deficiency syndrome, and counseling concerning such, at no cost by appropriately trained staff operating through appropriate service providers, including rape crisis centers, community health centers, public health clinics, physicians, or other appropriate service providers; follow-up tests and counseling will be available at no cost on dates that occur 3, 6, and 12 months following the date of the initial test; and

(2) necessary and appropriate medical care.

(b) TESTING OF DEFENDANTS.—

(1) COURT ORDER.—The victim of an offense of the type referred to in subsection (a) may obtain an order in the district court of the United States for the district in which charges are brought against the defendant charged with the offense, after notice to the defendant and an opportunity to be heard, requiring that the defendant be tested for the presence of the etiologic agent for acquired immune deficiency syndrome, and that the results of the test be communicated to the victim and the defendant. Any test result of the defendant given to the victim must be accompanied by appropriate counseling to the victim on the risk of transmission of the virus to the victim as the result of the assault.

(2) SHOWING REQUIRED.—To obtain an order under paragraph (1), the victim must demonstrate that—

(A) the defendant has been charged with the offense in a state or federal court, and, if the defendant has been arrested without a warrant, a probable cause determination has been made.

(B) The test for the etiologic agent for acquired immune deficiency syndrome is requested by the victim; and

(C) The court determines that the alleged conduct of the defendant created a risk of transmission of the etiologic agent for acquired immune deficiency syndrome to the victim.

(3) FOLLOW-UP TESTING.—The court shall order follow-up tests and counseling under paragraph (b)(1) if the initial test was negative. Such follow-up tests and counseling shall be performed at the request of the victim on dates that occur 3, 6, and 12 months following the date of the initial test.

(4) TERMINATION OF TESTING REQUIREMENTS.—An order for follow-up testing under paragraph (3) shall be terminated if the individual to be tested obtains an acquittal on, or dismissal of, all charges against such individual.

(c) CONFIDENTIALITY OF TEST.—The results of any test ordered under this section shall be disclosed only to the victim, or, where the court deems appropriate, to the parent or legal guardian of the victim, and to the person tested.

(d) DISCLOSURE OF TEST RESULTS.—The court shall issue an order to prohibit the disclosure of the results of any test performed under this section to anyone other than those mentioned in subsection (c). The contents of the court order shall be sealed. The results of such test performed on the defendant under this section shall not be used as evidence in any criminal trial, except that testing ordered under this section shall not be a bar to testing permitted under any other law.

(e) CONTEMPT FOR DISCLOSURE.—A victim who discloses the results of a test in violation of this section may be held in contempt of court.

(f) EFFECT ON PENALTY.—The United States Sentencing Commission shall amend existing guidelines for sentences for offenses under this chapter to enhance the sentence if the offender knew or had reason to know that he was infected with the human immunodeficiency virus, except where the offender did not engage or attempt to engage in conduct creating a risk of transmission of the virus to the victim.

"(1) IN GENERAL.—To be eligible to receive a grant under this section an entity shall submit an application to the Administrator as such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Administrator shall require.

"(2) COORDINATED APPLICATIONS.—State or local agencies that are responsible for substance abuse prevention may submit coordinated grant applications on behalf of entities that are eligible for grants pursuant to subsection (b).

"(d) SPECIAL CONSIDERATION.—In awarding grants under this section the Administrator shall give priority to—

"(1) applications from community based organizations with experience serving nonmetropolitan areas;

"(2) projects that are designed to serve areas that have no available existing treatment facilities.

"(e) DURATION.—Grants awarded under this section shall be for a period not to exceed 3 years, except that the Administrator may establish a procedure for renewal of grants under subsection (a).

"(f) GEOGRAPHIC DISTRIBUTION.—To the extent practicable, the Administrator shall provide grants to fund at least 1 project in each State.

"(g) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—For the purpose of carrying out this section, there are authorized to be appropriated $25,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1992, 1993, and 1994."

SEC. 502. CLEARINGHOUSE PROGRAM.

Section 509 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 290aa-7) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (3), by striking "and" at the end thereof;

(2) in paragraph (4), by striking the period at the end thereof and inserting a semicolon; and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraphs—

"(5) gather information pertaining to rural drug abuse treatment and education projects funded by the Administrator and other such projects throughout the United States; and

"(6) disseminate such information to rural hospitals, community health centers, community mental health centers, treatment facilities, community organizations, and other interested persons."

VIOLENT CRIME CONTROL ACT

BIDEN AMENDMENT NOS. 683 AND 684

(Ordered to lie on the table.)

Mr. BIDEN submitted two amendments intended to be proposed by him to amendments to the bill S. 1241, Supra, as follows:

AMENDMENT NO. 683

Add at the appropriate place in the bill the following:

Victims of any offense of the type described in chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, shall after appropriate counseling, on request, be provided with

(1) anonymous and confidential testing for the presence of the etiologic agent for acquired immune deficiency syndrome, and counseling concerning such, at no cost by appropriately trained staff operating through appropriate service providers, including rape crisis centers, community health centers, public health clinics, physicians, or other appropriate service providers; follow-up tests and counseling will be available at no cost on dates that occur three, six and twelve months following the initial test; and

(2) necessary and appropriate medical care.

(b) LIMITED TESTING OF DEFENDANTS.—

(1) COURT ORDER.—The victim of an offense of the type referred to in subsection (a) may obtain and order in the district court of the United States for the district in which charges are brought against the defendant charged with the offense, after notice to the defendant and an opportunity to be heard, requiring that the defendant be tested for the presence of the etiologic agent for acquired immune deficiency syndrome, and that the results of the test be communicated to the victim and the defendant. Any test result of the defendant given to the victim or the defendant must be accompanied by appropriate counseling.

(2) SHOWING REQUIRED.—To obtain an order under paragraph (1), the victim must demonstrate that—

(A) the defendant has been charged with the offense in a State or Federal court, and if the defendant has been arrested without a warrant, a probable cause determination has been made;

(B) the test for the etiologic agent for acquired immune deficiency syndrome is requested by the victim after appropriate counseling; and

(C) the test would provide information necessary for the health of the victim of the alleged offense and the court determines that the alleged conduct of the defendant created a risk of transmission, as determined by the Centers for Disease Control, of the etiologic agent for acquired immune deficiency syndrome to the victim.

(3) FOLLOW-UP TESTING.—The court may order follow-up tests and counseling under paragraphs (b)(1) if the initial test was negative. Such follow-up tests and counseling shall be performed at the request of the victim on dates that occur six months and twelve months following the initial test.

(4) TERMINATION OF TESTING REQUIREMENTS.—An order for follow-up testing under paragraph (3) shall be terminated if the person obtains an acquittal on, or dismissal of, all charges of the type referred to in subsection (a).

(c) CONFIDENTIALITY OF TEST.—The results of any test ordered under this section shall be disclosed only to the victim or, where the court deems appropriate, to the parent or legal guardian of the victim, and to the person tested.

(d) DISCLOSURE OF TEST RESULTS.—The court shall issue an order to prohibit the disclosure of the results of any test performed under this section to anyone other than those mentioned in subsection (c). The contents of the court proceedings and test results pursuant to this section shall be sealed. The results of such test performed on the defendant under this section shall not be used as evidence in any criminal trial.

(e) CONTEMPT FOR DISCLOSURE.—Any person who discloses the results of a test in violation of this section may be held in contempt of court.

(F) PENALTIES FOR INTENTIONAL TRANSMISSION OF HIV.—Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this section, the United States Sentencing Commission shall conduct a study and prepare and submit to the appropriate Committees of Congress a report concerning recommendations for the revision of sentencing guidelines that relate to offenses in which an HIV infected individual engages in sexual activity if the individual knows that he or she is infected with HIV and intends, through such sexual activity, to expose another to HIV.

SEC. 237. PAYMENT OF COST OF HIV TESTING FOR VICTIM

Section 503(c)(7) of the Victims' Rights and Restitution Act of 1990 is amended by inserting before the period at the end thereof the following: "the cost of up to two tests of the victim for the human immunodeficiency virus during the twelve months following the assault, and the cost of a counseling session by a medically trained professional on the accuracy of such tests and the risk of transmission of the human immunodeficiency virus to the victim as the result of the assault."

AMENDMENT NO. 684

Add at the appropriate place in the bill the following:

(1) anonymous and confidential testing for the presence of the etiologic agent for acquired immune deficiency syndrome, and counseling concerning such, at no cost by appropriately trained staff operating through appropriate service providers, including rape crisis centers, community health centers, public health clinics, physicians, or other appropriate service providers; follow-up tests and counseling will be available at no cost on dates that occur three, six and twelve months following the initial test; and

(2) necessary and appropriate medical care.

(b) LIMITED TESTING OF DEFENDANTS.—

(1) COURT ORDER.—The victim of an offense of the type referred to in subsection (a) may obtain and order in the district court of the United States for the district in which charges are brought against the defendant charged with the offense, after notice to the defendant and an opportunity to be heard, requiring that the defendant be tested for the presence of the etiologic agent for acquired immune deficiency syndrome, and that the results of the test be communicated to the victim and the defendant. Any test result of the defendant given to the victim or the defendant must be accompanied by appropriate counseling.

(2) SHOWING REQUIRED.—To obtain an order under paragraph (1), the victim must demonstrate that—

(A) the defendant has been charged with the offense in a state or federal court, and if the defendant has been arrested without a warrant, a probable cause determination has been made;

(B) the test for the etiologic agent for acquired immune deficiency syndrome is requested by the victim after appropriate counseling; and

(C) the test would provide information necessary for the health of the victim of the alleged offense and the court determines that the alleged conduct of the defendant created a risk of transmission, as determined by the Centers for Disease Control, of the etiologic agent for acquired immune deficiency syndrome to the victim.

(3) FOLLOW-UP TESTING.—The court may order follow-up tests and counseling under paragraphs (b)(1) if the initial test was negative. Such follow-up tests and counseling shall be performed at the request of the victim on dates that occur six months and twelve months following the initial test.

(4) TERMINATION OF TESTING REQUIREMENTS.—An order for follow-up testing under paragraph (3) shall be terminated if the person obtains an acquittal on, or dismissal of, all charges of the type referred to in subsection (a).

(c) CONFIDENTIALITY OF TEST.—The results of any test ordered under this section shall be disclosed only to the victim or, where the court deems appropriate, to the parent or legal guardian of the victim, and to the person tested.

(d) DISCLOSURE OF TEST RESULTS.—The court shall issue an order to prohibit the disclosure of the results of any test performed under this section to anyone other than those mentioned in subsection (c). The contents of the court proceedings and test results pursuant to this section shall be sealed. The results of such test performed on the defendant under this section shall not be used as evidence in any criminal trial.

(e) CONTEMPT FOR DISCLOSURE.—Any person who discloses the results of a test in violation of this section may be held in contempt of court.

(f) PENALTIES FOR INTENTIONAL TRANSMISSION OF HIV.—Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this section, the United States Sentencing Commission shall conduct a study and prepare and submit to the appropriate Committees of Congress a report concerning recommendations for the revision of sentencing guidelines that relate to offenses in which an HIV infected individual engages in sexual activity if the individual knows that he or she is infected with HIV and intends, through such sexual activity, to expose another to HIV.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"§2247. Repeat offenders

"Any person who violates a provision of this chapter, after one or more prior convictions for an offense punishable under this chapter, or after one or more prior convictions under the laws of any State or foreign country relating to aggravated sexual abuse, sexual abuse, or abusive sexual contact, is punishable by a term of imprisonment up to twice that otherwise authorized."

(b) TABLE OF SECTIONS.—The table of sections for chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"2247. Repeat offenders."

SEC. 112. FEDERAL PENALTIES.

(a) RAPE AND AGGRAVATED RAPE.—Pursuant to its authority under section 994(p) of title 28, United States Code, the United States Sentencing Commission shall amend its sentencing guidelines to provide that a defendant convicted of aggravated sexual abuse under section 2241 of title 18, United States Code, or sexual abuse under section 2242 of title 18, United States Code, shall be assigned a base offense level under chapter 2 of the sentencing guidelines that is at least 4 levels greater than the base offense level applicable to criminal sexual abuse under the guidelines in effect on November 1, 1990, or otherwise shall amend the guidelines applicable to such offenses so as to achieve a comparable minimum guideline sentence. In amending such guidelines, the Sentencing Commission shall review the appropriateness of existing specific offense characteristics or other adjustments applicable to such offenses, and make such changes as it deems appropriate, taking into account the severity of rape offenses, with or without aggravating factors; the unique nature and duration of the mental injuries inflicted on the victims of such offenses; and any other relevant factors.

(b) EFFECT OF AMENDMENT.—If the sentencing guidelines are amended after the effective date of this section, the Sentencing Commission shall implement the instructions set forth in subsection (a) so as to achieve a comparable result.

(c) STATUTORY RAPE.—

(1) Section 2243(b) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking "one year," and inserting "two years."

(2) Pursuant to its authority under section 994(p) of title 28, United States Code, the United States Sentencing Commission shall promulgate guidelines or amend existing guidelines to incorporate the increase in maximum penalties provided by this section for section 2243(b) of title 18, United States Code.

SEC. 113. MANDATORY RESTITUTION FOR SEX CRIMES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"§2248. Mandatory restitution

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding the terms of section 3663 of this title, and in addition to any other civil or criminal penalty authorized by law, the court shall order restitution for any offense under this chapter.

"(b) SCOPE AND NATURE OF ORDER.—(1) The order of restitution under this section shall direct that—

"(A) the defendant pay to the victim the full amount of the victim's losses as determined by the court, pursuant to paragraph (2); and

"(B) the United States Attorney enforce the restitution order by all available and reasonable means.

"(2) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'full amount of the victim's losses' includes any costs incurred by the victim for—

"(A) medical services relating to physical, psychiatric, or psychological care;

"(B) physical and occupational therapy or rehabilitation;

"(C) lost income;

"(D) attorneys' fees; and

"(E) any other losses suffered by the victim as a proximate result of the offense.

"(3) Restitution orders under this section are mandatory. A court may not decline to issue an order under this section because of—

"(A) the economic circumstances of the defendant; or

"(B) the fact that a victim has, or is entitled to, receive compensation for his or her injuries from the proceeds of insurance or any other source.

"(4)(A) Notwithstanding the terms of paragraph (3), the court may take into account the economic circumstances of the defendant in determining the manner in which and the schedule according to which the restitution is to be paid.

"(B) For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'economic circumstances' includes—

"(i) the financial resources and other assets of the defendant;

"(ii) projected earnings, earning capacity, and other income of the defendant; and

"(iii) any financial obligations of the defendant, including obligations to dependents.

"(C) An order under this section may direct the defendant to make a single lump-sum payment or partial payments at specified intervals. The order shall also provide that the defendant's restitutionary obligation takes priority over any criminal fine ordered.

"(D) In the event that the victim has recovered for any amount of loss through the proceeds of insurance or any other source, the order of restitution shall provide that restitution be paid to the person who provided the compensation, but that restitution shall be paid to the victim before any restitution is paid to any other provider of compensation.

"(5) Any amount paid to a victim under this section shall be set off against any amount later recovered as compensatory damages by the victim from the defendant in—

"(A) any Federal civil proceeding; and

"(B) any State civil proceeding, to the extent provided by the law of the State.

"(c) PROOF OF CLAIM.—(1) Within 60 days after conviction and, in any event, no later than 10 days prior to sentencing, the United States Attorney (or his delegate), after consulting with the victim, shall prepare and file an affidavit with the court listing the amounts subject to restitution under this section. The affidavit shall be signed by the United States Attorney (or his delegate) and the victim. Should the victim object to any of the information included in the affidavit, the United States Attorney (or his delegate) shall advise the victim that the victim may file a separate affidavit.

"(2) If no objection is raised by the defendant, the amounts attested to in the affidavit filed pursuant to subsection (1) shall be entered in the court's restitution order. If objection is raised, the court may require the victim or the United States Attorney (or his delegate) to submit further affidavits or other supporting documents, demonstrating the victim's losses.

"(3) If the court concludes, after reviewing the supporting documentation and considering the defendant's objections, that there is a substantial reason for doubting the authenticity or veracity of the records submitted, the court may require additional documentation or hear testimony on those questions. Any records filed, or testimony heard, pursuant to this section, shall be in camera in the judge's chambers. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, this section does not entitle the defendant to discovery of the contents of, or matters related to, any supporting documentation, including medical, psychological, or psychiatric records.

"(4) In the event that the victim's losses are not ascertainable 10 days prior to sentencing as provided in subsection (c)(1), the United States Attorney (or his delegate) shall so inform the court, and the court shall set a date for the final determination of the victim's losses, not to exceed 90 days after sentencing. If the victim subsequently discovers further losses, the victim shall have 60 days after discovery of those losses in which to petition the court for an amended restitution order. Such order may be granted only upon a showing of good cause for the failure to include such losses in the initial claim for restitutionary relief.

"(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section, the term 'victim' includes any person who has suffered direct physical, emotional, or pecuniary harm as a result of a commission of a crime under this chapter, including, in the case of a victim who is under 18 years of age, incompetent, incapacitated, or deceased, the legal guardian of the victim or representative of the victim's estate, another family member, or any other person appointed as suitable by the court: Provided, That in no event shall the defendant be named as such representative or guardian."

(b) TABLE OF SECTIONS.—The table of sections for chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"2248. Mandatory restitution."

Subtitle B—Law Enforcement and Prosecution Grants to Reduce Violent Crimes Against Women

SEC. 121. GRANTS TO COMBAT VIOLENT CRIMES AGAINST WOMEN.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.) is amended by—

- (1) redesignating part N as part O;
- (2) redesignating section 1401 as section 1501; and
- (3) adding after part M the following:

"PART N—GRANTS TO COMBAT VIOLENT CRIMES AGAINST WOMEN

"SEC. 1401. PURPOSE OF THE PROGRAM AND GRANTS.

"(a) GENERAL PROGRAM PURPOSE.—The purpose of this part is to assist States, Indian tribes, cities, and other localities to develop effective law enforcement and prosecution strategies to combat violent crimes against women and, in particular, to focus efforts on those areas with the highest rates of violent crime against women.

"(b) PURPOSES FOR WHICH GRANTS MAY BE USED.—Grants under this part shall provide additional personnel, training, technical assistance, data collection and other equipment for the more widespread apprehension, prosecution, and adjudication of persons committing violent crimes against women and specifically, for the purposes of—

- "(1) training law enforcement officers and prosecutors to more effectively identify and respond to violent crimes against women, including the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence;
- "(2) developing, training, or expanding units of law enforcement officers and prosecutors specifically targeting violent crimes against women, including the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence;
- "(3) developing and implementing police and prosecution policies, protocols, or orders specifically devoted to identifying and responding to violent crimes against women, including the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence;
- "(4) developing, installing, or expanding data collection systems, including computerized systems, linking police, prosecutors, and courts or for the purpose of identifying and tracking arrests, prosecutions, and convictions for the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence; and
- "(5) developing, enlarging, or strengthening victim services programs, including sexual assault and domestic violence programs, to increase reporting and reduce attrition rates for cases involving violent crimes against women, including the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence.

"SUBPART 1—HIGH INTENSITY CRIME AREA GRANTS

"SEC. 1411. HIGH INTENSITY GRANTS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance (hereafter in this part referred to as the 'Director') shall make grants to areas of 'high intensity crime' against women.

"(b) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this part, a 'high intensity crime area' means an area with one of the 40 highest rates of violent crime against women, as determined by the Bureau of Justice Statistics pursuant to section 1412.

"SEC. 1412. HIGH INTENSITY GRANT APPLICATION.

"(a) COMPUTATION.—Within 45 days after the date of enactment of this part, the Bureau of Justice Statistics shall compile a list of the 40 areas with the highest rates of violent crime against women based on the combined female victimization rate per population for assault, sexual assault (including, but not limited to, rape), murder, robbery, and kidnapping.

"(b) USE OF DATA.—In calculating the combined female victimization rate required by subsection (a), the Bureau of Justice Statistics may rely on—

"(1) existing data collected by States, municipalities, Indian reservations or statistical metropolitan areas showing the number of police reports of the crimes listed in subsection (a); and

"(2) existing data collected by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, including data from those governmental entities already complying with the National Incident Based Reporting System, showing the number of police reports of crimes listed in subsection (a).

"(c) PUBLICATION.—After compiling the list set forth in subsection (a), the Bureau of Justice Statistics shall convey it to the Director who shall publish it in the Federal Register.

"(d) QUALIFICATION.—Upon satisfying the terms of subsection (e), any high intensity crime area shall be qualified for a grant under this subpart upon application by the chief executive officer of the governmental entities responsible for law enforcement and prosecution of criminal offenses within the area and certification that—

"(1) the funds shall be used to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women and for at least 3 of the purposes outlined in section 1401(b);

"(2) grantees and subgrantees shall develop a plan for implementation, and otherwise consult and coordinate program grants, with nongovernmental nonprofit victim services programs; and

"(3) at least 25 percent of the amount granted shall be allocated to each of the following three areas: prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services.

"(e) APPLICATION REQUIREMENTS.—The application requirements provided in section 513 of this title shall apply to grants made under this subpart. In addition, each application must provide the certifications required by subsection (d) including documentation from nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs showing their participation in developing the plan required by subsection (d)(2). Applications shall—

"(1) include documentation from the prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services programs to be assisted showing—

- "(A) need for the grant funds;
- "(B) intended use of the grant funds; and
- "(C) expected results from the use of grant funds; and

"(2) proof of compliance with the requirements for the payment of forensic medical exams provided in section 162 of this title.

"(f) DISBURSEMENT.—

"(1) No later than 60 days after the receipt of an application under this subpart, the Director shall either disburse the appropriate sums provided for under this subpart or shall inform the applicant why the application does not conform to the terms of section 513 of this title or to the requirements of this section.

"(2) In disbursing monies under this subpart, the Director shall ensure, to the extent practicable, that grantees—

- "(A) equitably distribute funds on a geographic basis;
- "(B) determine the amount of subgrants based on the population to be served; and
- "(C) give priority to areas with the greatest showing of need.

"(g) GRANTEE REPORTING.—Upon completion of the grant period under this subpart, the grantee shall file a performance report with the Director explaining the activities carried out together with an assessment of the effectiveness of those activities in achieving the purposes of this part. The Director shall suspend funding for an approved application if an applicant fails to submit an annual performance report.

"Subpart 2—Other Grants to States to Combat Violent Crimes Against Women

"SEC. 1421. GENERAL GRANTS TO STATES.

"(a) GENERAL GRANTS.—The Director is authorized to make grants to States, for use by States, units of local government in the States, and nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs in the States, for the purposes outlined in section 1401(b), and to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women.

"(b) AMOUNTS.—From amounts appropriated, the amount of grants under subsection (a) shall be—

- "(1) $500,000 to each State; and
- "(2) that portion of the then remaining available money to each State that results from a distribution among the States on the basis of each State's population in relation to the population of all States.

"(c) QUALIFICATION.—Upon satisfying the terms of subsection (d), any State shall be qualified for funds provided under this part upon certification that—

"(1) the funds shall be used to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women and for at least 3 of the purposes outlined in section 1401(b);

"(2) grantees and subgrantees shall develop a plan for implementation, and otherwise consult and coordinate, with nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs, including sexual assault and domestic violence victim services programs;

"(3) at least 25 percent of the amount granted shall be allocated to each of the following three areas: prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services.

"(d) APPLICATION REQUIREMENTS.—The application requirements provided in section 513 of this title shall apply to grants made under this subpart. In addition, each application shall include the certifications of qualification required by subsection (c) including documentation from nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs showing their participation in developing the plan required by subsection (c)(2). Applications shall—

"(1) include documentation from the prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services programs to be assisted showing—

- "(A) need for the grant funds;
- "(B) intended use of the grant funds; and
- "(C) expected results from the use of grant funds; and

"(2) proof of compliance with the requirements for the payment of forensic medical exams provided in section 162 of this title.

"(e) DISBURSEMENT.—(1) No later than 60 days after the receipt of an application under this subpart, the Director shall either disburse the appropriate sums provided for under this subpart or shall inform the applicant why the application does not conform to the terms of section 513 of this title or to the requirements of this section.

"(2) In disbursing monies under this subpart, the Director shall issue regulations to ensure that States will—

- "(A) equitably distribute monies on a geographic basis including nonurban and rural areas, and giving priority to localities with populations under 100,000;

“(B) determine the amount of subgrants based on the population and geographic area to be served; and

“(C) give priority to areas with the greatest showing of need, as demonstrated by comparing population and geographic areas to be served to the availability of existing sexual assault and domestic violence services.

“(F) GRANTEE REPORTING.—Upon completion of the grant period under this subpart, the State grantee shall file a performance report with the Director explaining the activities carried out together with an assessment of the effectiveness of those activities in achieving the purposes of this subpart. The Director shall suspend funding for an approved application if an applicant fails to submit an annual performance report.

“SEC. 1422. GENERAL GRANTS TO TRIBES.

“(a) GENERAL GRANTS.—The Director is authorized to make grants to Indian tribes, for use by tribes, tribal organizations or nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs on Indian reservations, for the purposes outlined in section 1401(b), and to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women in Indian country.

“(b) AMOUNTS.—From amounts appropriated, the amount of grants under subsection (a) shall be awarded on a competitive basis to tribes, with minimum grants of $35,000 and maximum grants of $300,000.

“(c) QUALIFICATION.—Upon satisfying the terms of subsection (d), any tribe shall be qualified for funds provided under this part upon certification that—

“(1) the funds shall be used to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women and for at least 3 of the purposes outlined in section 1401(b); and

“(2) at least 25 percent of the grant funds shall be allocated to each of the following three areas: prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services.

“(d) APPLICATION REQUIREMENTS.—(1) Applications shall be made directly to the Director and shall contain a description of the tribes' law enforcement responsibilities for the Indian country described in the application and a description of the tribes' system of courts, including whether the tribal government operates courts of Indian offenses as defined in 25 U.S.C. 1301 or CFR courts under 25 CFR 11 et seq.

“(2) Applications shall be in such form as the Director may prescribe and shall specify the nature of the program proposed by the applicant tribe, the data and information on which the program is based, and the extent to which the program plans to use or incorporate existing services available in the Indian country where the grant will be used.

“(3) The term of any grant shall be for a minimum of 3 years.

“(e) GRANTEE REPORTING.—At the end of the first 12 months of the grant period and at the end of each year thereafter, the Indian tribal grantee shall file a performance report with the Director explaining the activities carried out together with an assessment of the effectiveness of those activities in achieving the purposes of this subpart. The Director shall suspend funding for an approved application if an applicant fails to submit an annual performance report.

“(f) DEFINITIONS.—(1) The term ‘Indian tribe’ means any Indian tribe, band, nation, or other organized group or community, including any Alaska Native village or regional or village corporation (as defined in, or established pursuant to, the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (43 U.S.C. 1601, et seq.)), which is recognized as eligible for the special services provided by the United States to Indians because of their status as Indians.

“(2) The term ‘Indian country’ has the meaning given to such term by section 1151 of title 18, United States Code.

“SUBPART 3—GENERAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS

“SEC. 1431. GENERAL DEFINITIONS.

“As used in this part—

“(1) the term ‘victim services program’ means any public or private nonprofit program that assists victims, including (A) nongovernmental nonprofit organizations such as rape crisis centers, battered women's shelters, or other rape or domestic violence programs, including nonprofit nongovernmental organizations assisting victims through the legal process and (B) victim/witness programs within governmental entities;

“(2) the term ‘sexual assault’ includes not only assaults committed by offenders who are strangers to the victim but also assaults committed by offenders who are known or related by blood or marriage to the victim; and

“(3) the term ‘domestic violence’ includes felony or misdemeanor offenses committed by a current or former spouse of the victim, a person with whom the victim shares a child in common, a person who is cohabitating with or has cohabitated with the victim as a spouse, or any other person similarly situated to a spouse who is protected under the domestic or family violence laws of the jurisdiction receiving grant monies.

“SEC. 1432. GENERAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.

“(a) NONMONETARY ASSISTANCE.—In addition to the assistance provided under subparts 1 or 2, the Director may direct any Federal agency, with or without reimbursement, to use its authorities and the resources granted to it under Federal law (including personnel, equipment, supplies, facilities, and managerial, technical, and advisory services) in support of State and local assistance efforts.

“(b) BUREAU REPORTING.—No later than 180 days after the end of each fiscal year for which grants are made under this part, the Director shall submit to the Judiciary Committees of the House and the Senate a report that includes, for each high intensity crime area (as provided in subpart 1) and for each State and for each grantee Indian tribe (as provided in subpart 2)—

“(1) the amount of grants made under this part;

“(2) a summary of the purposes for which those grants were provided and an evaluation of their progress; and

“(3) a copy of each grantee report filed pursuant to sections 1412(g) and 1421(f).

“(c) REGULATIONS.—No later than 45 days after the date of enactment of this part, the Director shall publish proposed regulations implementing this part. No later than 120 days after such date, the Director shall publish final regulations implementing this part.

“(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year 1992, 1993, and 1994, $100,000,000 to carry out the purposes of subpart 1, and $190,000,000 to carry out the purposes of subpart 2, and $10,000,000 to carry out the purposes of section 1422 of subpart 2.”

Subtitle C—Safety for Women in Public Transit and Public Parks

SEC. 131. GRANTS FOR CAPITAL IMPROVEMENTS TO PREVENT CRIME IN PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION.

Section 24 of the Urban Mass Transportation Act of 1964 is amended to read as follows:

“GRANTS TO PREVENT CRIME IN PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION

“SEC. 24. (a) GENERAL PURPOSE.—From funds authorized under section 21, and not to exceed $10,000,000, the Secretary shall make capital grants for the prevention of crime and to increase security in existing and future public transportation systems. None of the provisions of this Act may be construed to prohibit the financing of projects under this section where law enforcement responsibilities are vested in a local public body other than the grant applicant.

“(b) GRANTS FOR LIGHTING, CAMERA SURVEILLANCE, AND SECURITY PHONES.—

“(1) From the sums authorized for expenditure under this section for crime prevention, the Secretary is authorized to make grants and loans to States and local public bodies or agencies for the purpose of increasing the safety of public transportation by—

“(A) increasing lighting within or adjacent to public transportation systems, including bus stops, subway stations, parking lots, or garages;

“(B) increasing camera surveillance of areas within and adjacent to public transportation systems, including bus stops, subway stations, parking lots, or garages;

“(C) providing emergency phone lines to contact law enforcement or security personnel in areas within or adjacent to public transportation systems, including bus stops, subway stations, parking lots, or garages; or

“(D) any other project intended to increase the security and safety of existing or planned public transportation systems.

“(2) From the sums authorized under this section, at least 75 percent shall be expended on projects of the type described in subsection (b)(1) (A) and (B).

“(c) REPORTING.—All grants under this section are contingent upon the filing of a report with the Secretary and the Department of Justice, Office of Victims of Crime, showing crime rates in or adjacent to public transportation before, and for a 1-year period after, the capital improvement. Statistics shall be broken down by type of crime, sex, race, and relationship of victim to the offender.

“(d) INCREASED FEDERAL SHARE.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the Federal share under this section for each capital improvement project which enhances the safety and security of public transportation systems and which is not required by law (including any other provision of this chapter) shall be 90 percent of the net project cost of such project.

“(e) SPECIAL GRANTS FOR PROJECTS TO STUDY INCREASING SECURITY FOR WOMEN.—From the sums authorized under this section, the Secretary shall provide grants and loans for the purpose of studying ways to reduce violent crimes against women in public transit through better design or operation of public transit systems.

“(f) GENERAL REQUIREMENTS.—All grants or loans provided under this section shall be subject to all the terms, conditions, requirements, and provisions applicable to grants and loans made under section 2(a).”

SEC. 132. GRANTS FOR CAPITAL IMPROVEMENTS TO PREVENT CRIME IN NATIONAL PARKS.

The Act of August 18, 1970, the National Park System Improvements in Administration Act (90 Stat. 1931; 16 U.S.C. 1a-1 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"SEC. 13. NATIONAL PARK SYSTEM CRIME PREVENTION ASSISTANCE.

"(a) From the sums authorized pursuant to section 7 of the Land and Water Conservation Act of 1965, and not to exceed $10,000,000, the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to provide Federal assistance to reduce the incidence of violent crime in the National Park System.

"(b) The Secretary shall direct the chief official responsible for law enforcement within the National Park Services to—

"(1) compile a list of areas within the National Park System with the highest rates of violent crime;

"(2) make recommendations concerning capital improvements, and other measures, needed within the National Park System to reduce the rates of violent crime, including the rate of sexual assault; and

"(3) publish the information required by paragraphs (1) and (2) in the Federal Register.

"(c) No later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this section, and based on the recommendations and list issued pursuant to subsection (b), the Secretary shall distribute funds throughout the National Park Service. Priority shall be given to those areas with the highest rates of sexual assault.

"(d) Funds provided under this section may be used for the following purposes—

"(1) to increase lighting within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas;

"(2) to provide emergency phone lines to contact law enforcement or security personnel in areas within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas;

"(3) to increase security or law enforcement personnel within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas; and

"(4) any other project intended to increase the security and safety of public parks and recreation areas."

SEC. 133. GRANTS FOR CAPITAL IMPROVEMENTS TO PREVENT CRIME IN PUBLIC PARKS.

Section 6 of the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1965 (78 Stat. 897; 16 U.S.C. 4601-8) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(h) CAPITAL IMPROVEMENT AND OTHER PROJECTS TO REDUCE CRIME.—In addition to assistance for planning projects, and in addition to the projects identified in subsection (e), and from amounts appropriated, the Secretary shall provide financial assistance to the States, not to exceed $15,000,000 in total, for the following types of projects or combinations thereof:

"(1) For the purpose of making capital improvements and other measures to increase safety in urban parks and recreation areas, including funds to—

"(A) increase lighting within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas;

"(B) provide emergency phone lines to contact law enforcement or security personnel in areas within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas;

"(C) increase security personnel within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas; and

"(D) any other project intended to increase the security and safety of public parks and recreation areas.

"(2) In addition to the requirements for project approval imposed by this section, eligibility for assistance under this subsection is dependent upon a showing of need. In providing funds under this subsection, the Secretary shall give priority to those projects proposed for urban parks and recreation areas with the highest rates of crime and, in particular, to urban parks and recreation areas with the highest rates of sexual assault.

"(3) Notwithstanding the terms of subsection (c), the Secretary is authorized to provide 70 percent improvement grants for projects undertaken by any State for the purposes outlined in this subsection. The remaining share of the cost shall be borne by the State."

Subtitle D—National Commission on Violent Crime Against Women*SEC. 141. ESTABLISHMENT.

There is established a commission to be known as the National Commission on Violent Crime Against Women (hereinafter referred to as "the Commission").

SEC. 142. DUTIES OF COMMISSION.

(a) GENERAL PURPOSE OF THE COMMISSION.—The Commission shall carry out activities for the purposes of promoting a national policy on violent crime against women, and for making recommendations for how to reduce violent crime against women.

(b) FUNCTIONS.—The Commission shall perform the following functions—

(1) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, current law enforcement efforts at the Federal and State levels to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women;

(2) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the responsiveness of State prosecutors and State courts to violent crimes against women;

(3) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the adequacy of current education, prevention, and protection services for women victims of violent crime;

(4) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the role of the Federal Government in reducing violent crimes against women;

(5) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, national public awareness and the public dissemination of information essential to the prevention of violent crimes against women;

(6) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, data collection and government statistics on the incidence and prevalence of violent crimes against women;

(7) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the adequacy of State and Federal laws on sexual assault and the need for a more uniform statutory response to sex offenses, including sexual assaults and other sex offenses committed by offenders who are known or related by blood or marriage to the victim;

(8) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the adequacy of State and Federal laws on domestic violence and the need for a more uniform statutory response to domestic violence; and

(9) evaluate and make recommendations regarding the feasibility of maintaining the confidentiality of addresses of domestic violence victims in voting, welfare, and public records.

SEC. 143. MEMBERSHIP.*(a) NUMBER AND APPOINTMENT.—

(1) APPOINTMENT.—The Commission shall be composed of 15 members as follows:

(A) Five members shall be appointed by the President—

(i) three of whom shall be—

(I) the Attorney General;

(II) the Secretary of Health and Human Services; and

(III) the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation,

who shall be nonvoting members, except that in the case of a tie vote by the Commission, the Attorney General shall be a voting member;

(ii) two of whom shall be selected from the general public on the basis of such individuals being specially qualified to serve on the Commission by reason of their education, training, or experience; and

(iii) at least one of whom shall be selected for their experience in providing services to women victims of sexual assault or domestic violence.

(B) Five members shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives on the joint recommendation of the Majority and Minority Leaders of the House of Representatives.

(C) Five members shall be appointed by the President pro tempore of the Senate on the joint recommendation of the Majority and Minority Leaders of the Senate.

(2) CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE RECOMMENDATIONS.—In making appointments under subparagraphs (B) and (C) of paragraph (1), the Majority and Minority Leaders of the House of Representatives and the Senate shall duly consider the recommendations of the Chairmen and Ranking Minority Members of committees with jurisdiction over laws contained in title 18 of the United States Code.

(3) REQUIREMENTS OF APPOINTMENTS.—The Majority and Minority Leaders of the Senate and the House of Representatives shall—

(A) select individuals who are specially qualified to serve on the Commission by reason of their experience in State or national efforts to fight violence against women and demonstrate experience in State or national advocacy or service organizations specializing in sexual assault and domestic violence; and

(B) engage in consultations for the purpose of ensuring that the expertise of the ten members appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the President pro tempore of the Senate shall provide as much of a balance as possible and, to the greatest extent possible, cover the fields of law enforcement, prosecution, judicial administration, legal expertise, public health, social work, victim compensation boards, and victim advocacy.

(4) TERM OF MEMBERS.—Members of the Commission (other than members appointed under paragraph (1)(A)(i)) shall serve for the life of the Commission.

(5) VACANCY.—A vacancy on the Commission shall be filled in the manner in which the original appointment was made.

(b) CHAIRMAN.—Not later than 15 days after the members of the Commission are appointed, such members shall select a Chairman from among the members of the Commission.

(c) QUORUM.—Seven members of the Commission shall constitute a quorum, but a lesser number may be authorized by the Commission to conduct hearings.
